Dr. Lud. Bruce, founded a Lecture Professorship in the University of Cambridge, and gave an hundred pounds [illegible] thereunto for ever; and Sir Thomas [illegible] Learned and worthy Citizen [illegible] time Lord Mayor of London, erected [illegible] endowed an Arabick Professorship in the same [illegible]

Oriel-Coll. in Oxford new built.

Anthony Blencow, [illegible] Provost of Oriel-College in Oxford, gave twelve hundred pounds towards the re-edifying of the Front of that College, and by his Example some other Benefactors did so largely contribute, as now build the whole College, which was a very old and decayed Building, [illegible] handsome a uniform Pile as any in that or [illegible] University in Europe.

The Queen [illegible] to this King, of her great [illegible] Love to Learning, procured of [illegible] perpetual Patronage of several [illegible] granted to [illegible] and out of his [illegible] Inhabitants of [illegible] and [illegible] gave [illegible] Fellowships in [illegible] and Pembroke College in Oxford, [illegible] natives of those Islands.

The King and Queen great Benefactors to Jesus and Queen's College in Oxford.

Sir William Paddy, [illegible] in Physick, gave two perpetual [illegible] College in Oxford, [illegible] the Chapel thereof, and endowed [illegible] Reading-Men and Chaplains, to [illegible] thereof; and William Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury, built a new Court in the same [illegible], a very elegant Fabrick, and was otherwise a good Benefactor thereunto; he also enlarged the publick University Library, and purchased to it at a great Price, many Manuscripts of the Eastern Languages; and by that Example, Sir Kenelme Digby, a Worthy and Learned Knight, gave a numerous Collection of Choice and Excellent Books to it.

A new Court in St. John's in Oxford built by Archbishop Laud.

Clare-Hall in Cambridge new built.

The ancient Hall of Clare-Hall in Cambridge, and many Lodgings there, were built at the Charges of Benedict Oley, Professor of the University, and Fellow thereof, and some other Benefactors procured chiefly by his Solicitation, for so much of it, as handsome a Building as any in England.

St. Paul's Repaired.

The King was very solicitous to repair the ancient Cathedral Church of S. Paul in London, which was much decayed with Age, and advised with Archbishop Laud, and some others of his Council, upon effectual, Pious and Noble a Purpose, which was after some time followed on, and he himself at his own Charge repaired some part thereof, and by his Encouragement Sir Paul Pindar, a Worthy and worthy Citizen and many others contributed largely thereunto, so that the Work went on very fast, and had not the Civil War made an Interruption of it, in few years all the Church would have been made the most Magnificent Structure of Europe.

Mr. John Eyre erected and endowed a Free-School in the Parish of Alton in Hampshire, which was confirmed by Act of Parliament.

A new Church built at Plymouth. The like at Edenbourgh.

The King also, by his Letters Patents, gave power to the Town of Plymouth to erect a new Church there. The Citizens of Edenburgh in Scotland also built a new Church in that City called the Trone, and covered it with Plates of Copper; and one Herial a Citizen of that City, erected an Hospital there, which is one of the most Beautiful Buildings in that Kingdom. There were many Free-Schools besides those here mentioned, and many Alms-houses erected in several parts of England and some Bridges; but we have not now sufficient Information thereof, as to make mention of them in this place, but by what has been here expressed, we may see the pious and charitable effects of the just Security and Peace of the first fifteen years of the King's Government, which is all the time he reigned freely and without opposition.

Of Casualties happening at this Time.

IN his first year, the Plague broke out in London, more dangerously than in the beginning of his Father's Reign, insomuch that the King was fain

Earthquakes! In his ſecond Year, was great Earthquakes in many parts of the Kingdom.

A Star appears at Noon a little after Prince Charles his birth. In his ſeventh Year, May the 29th. a Star appeared viſibly at Noon, the Sun ſhining clear, at what time the King rode to St. Paul's Church to give thanks for the Queen's ſafe Delivery of her ſecond Son Prince Charles.

The great Fire at London-Bridge. In his eighth Year, a Fire brake out on London-Bridge, by which moſt of the Houſes which were built upon it, (which when they were all ſtanding, made up a very beautiful Street) were burnt down to the Ground.

A ſad Accident at Dowglas in Scotland. In his ſixteenth Year, the Earl of Haddington in Scotland, having recovered ſome pieces of Ordnance which the Garriſon of Berwick had ſeized at Dunce, return'd back to Dowglas, where ſitting merry at Dinner, with about twenty Knights and Gentlemen, on a ſudden the Magazine of Powder that lay in a vaulted Room, took fire by accident, whereby the Earl and his Company were blown up.

A Pond in Cambridge blood red. The ſame Year likewiſe, a Pond in Cambridge became red as Blood, the Water whereof being taken up in Baſons, retained ſtill the ſame colour. Many Sights alſo were ſeen in the Air, as Armies fighting one againſt the other, which were looked upon as the ſad preſages of the enſuing Wars: Neither is that ſtrange Thunder and Lightning unworthy of mention which hapned at Withcombe in the County of Devon, in the fourteenth Year of his Reign, where a Ball of Fire was ſeen to come into the Church in the time of Divine Service, whereby three Perſons were killed, and threeſcore and two hurt, divers of whom had the Linings of their Cloaths burnt, though their outward Garments were not ſo much as ſinged, and moſt of the Seats were turned upſide down, and the Pillars, Steeple, and Church, more endamaged than the Expence of Three hundred Pounds could repair.

Strange Thunder at Withcombe.

Of his Wife and Children.

HE married Mary the Daughter of Henry the Fourth King of France, whoſe Marriage was ſolemnized in the Year 1625. being the firſt Year of his Reign: He had Iſſue by her, four Sons, and as many Daughters; the eldeſt Son born before the time, was baptiſed Charles, and lived not above two Hours: His ſecond Son born May the twenty ninth, 1630. was alſo named Charles, and afterwards created Prince of Wales. And in the Year 1660. Reſtor'd (after many Years ſeclusion in Forreign Countries) with the univerſal Congratulation of his Subjects, to his Father's Throne, happily bleſt with the Regal Vertues of ſo Illuſtrious a Monarch: His third Son was born Octob. the 13th. 1633 and was baptiſed James, and created Duke of York, a Prince of invincible Courage, and Heroick Valour, as his Actions in France and Flanders, yet freſh in memory, have given ſufficient Teſtimony: His Fourth and laſt Son was born the twentieth of July, 1640. and Chriſtened Henry, afterwards created Duke of Glouceſter: He, ſince his Brother's happy Reſtauration, deceaſed on the 13th of September, 1660. thereby bereaving the World of thoſe fair hopes which had been generally conceived of his Noble and Princely Endowments. His eldeſt Daughter Mary, was born November the 4th. 1631. and afterwards married to William of Naſſaw, Prince of Orange, by whom he had one Son named William, Heir and Succeſſor to his Father in his Dignities; ſhe quickly followed her Brother the Duke of Glouceſter, viz. the 24th. of December, 1660. her loſs being very much bewailed, eſpecially by any who had relation to her Service, as being a Princeſs of univerſal Goodneſs, Charity, and Bounty. His ſecond Daughter Elizabeth was born the 28th. of December, 1635. She died at Carisbrook in the Iſle of Wight, September the 8th. 1650. of meer Grief (as it is not without reaſon believ'd) for her Father's unfortunate Death: And his third Daughter Anne was born the 17th. of March, 1636. who alſo died very young. His fourth and laſt Daughter, was born June the 16th. 1644. at Exeter, from whence ſhe was brought to St. James's, but afterwards conveyed into France by her Governeſs the Lady Dalkeith; ſhe was married to the Duke of Anjou, Brother to Lewis the Fourteenth, the preſent King of France; a Princeſs ſhe was of incomparable Beauty, and Gallantry of Spirit.

Of His Death and Burial.

HIS Death was ſtrange and unparalell'd; we read of many Kings who came to violent Ends, but never any that was ſo formally and ſolemnly murdered, by a publick Trial and Execution, which was done in the manner following.

The Trial of His Majeſty. On Saturday, January the 20th. 1648. the wicked High Court of Juſtice, ſate in Weſtminſter-Hall, whereof John Bradſhaw of Grays-Inn was Preſident, he had a Mace and Sword carried before him, and twenty habited like Gentlemen for his Guard, under the Command of one Colonel Fox, (formerly a Braſier or Tinker.) When the pretended Court was ſate, and O Yes made, and ſilence commanded; the Act of the Commons for erecting the ſaid Court was read, in theſe Words:

Bradſhaw Preſident of the High Court of Juſtice.

The Commons Act for erecting the High Court of Juſtice for Trial of the King.

Whereas it is notorious, That Charles Stuart the now King of England, not content with the many incroachments which his Predeceſſors had made upon the People in their Rights and Freedom, hath had a wicked deſign to ſubvert the antient and fundamental Laws and Liberties of this Nation, and in their place to introduce an Arbitrary and Tyrannical Government, and that beſides all evil ways to bring his deſign to paſs, he hath proſecuted it with Fire and Sword, and levied and maintained a Civil War in the Land againſt the Parliament and Kingdom, whereby this Country hath been miſerably waſted, the Publick Treaſure exhauſted, Trade decayed, thouſands of People murdered, and infinite of other Miſchiefs committed; for all which high Offences, the ſaid Charles Stuart might long ſince have been brought to exemplary and condign Puniſhment: Whereas alſo the Parliament well hoping that the reſtraint and impriſonment of his Perſon, after it hath pleaſed God to deliver him into their Hands, would have quieted the Diſtempers of the Kingdom, did forbear to proceed judicially againſt him, but found by ſad Experience, that ſuch remiſſneſs ſerved only to encourage him and his Complices in the continuance of shall be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners and Judges, for the Hearing, Trying, and Judging of the said Charles Stuart; and the said Commissioners, or any Twenty or more of them shall be, and are hereby authorized and constituted an High Court of Justice, to meet at such convenient times and places as by the said Commissioners, or the Major part, or Twenty or more of them under their Hands and Seals shall be appointed and notified by publick Proclamation in the great Hall, or Palace-yard of Westminster, and adjourn from time to time, and from place to place, as the said High Court, or the Major part thereof, meeting shall hold fit, and to take order for the charging of him the said Charles Stuart with the Crimes above-mentioned, and for the receiving his personal Answer thereunto, and for examination of Witnesses upon Oath (if need be) concerning the same; and thereupon, or default of such Answer, to proceed to final Sentence, according to Justice, and the merit of the Cause, and to be executed speedily and impartially. And the said Court is hereby Authorized and required to chuse and appoint all such Officers, Attendants and other Circumstances, as they, or the Major part of them shall in any sort judge necessary or useful for the orderly and good managing of the Premisses; and Thomas Lord Fairfax the General, with all Officers of Justice, and other well-affected Persons, are hereby Authorized and required to be aiding and assisting unto the said Commissioners in the due execution of the Trust hereby committed unto them; Provided that this Act, and the Authority hereby granted, do continue for the space of one Month from the date of the making hereof, and no longer.

After the reading of the Act, the Court was called, and the Commissioners, whose Names are here inserted, appeared, and answered to their Names; there were many more nominated in the Act, but because they acted not in this infamous Court, we shall forbear to record their Names to Posterity.

Mr. King, Cryer of the Court.

The Court being thus sate and called over, the King was brought to the Bar by Colonel Hacker, with Halberdeers, the Mace of the Court conducting him to his Chair within the Bar where he sate, and then the President Bradshaw said to the King:

Charles Stuart King of England, The Commons of England assembled in Parliament being sensible of the great Calamities brought upon this Nation, and of the innocent Blood-shed (which are referred to You as the Author of it) according to that Duty which they owe to God, the Nation, and Themselves, and according to that Power and fundamental Trust reposed in them by the People, have constituted this High Court of Justice, before which you are now brought, and you are to hear your Charge, upon which the Court will proceed.

Solicitor Cook. My Lord, In behalf of the Commons of England, and of all the People thereof, I do accuse Charles Stuart here present, of High-Treason, and Misdemeanours, and I do in the Name of the Commons of England desire the Charge may be read unto him.

The King. Hold a little.

President. Sir, the Court commands the Charge to be read, afterward you may be heard.

The Charge was read as followeth:

The Charge read.

That the said Charles Stuart, being admitted King of England, and therein trusted with a limited Power to govern by, and according to the Laws of the Land, and not otherwise, and by his Trust, Oath, and Office, being obliged to use the Power committed to him, for the good and benefit of the People, and for the Preservation of their Rights and Liberties, yet nevertheless out of a wicked Design to erect and uphold in himself an unlimited and tyrannical Power, to rule according to his Will, and to overthrow the Rights and Liberties of the People; and to take away and make void the foundations thereof, and of all redress and remedy of mis-government, which by the Fundamental Constitutions of this Kingdom were reserved on the Peoples behalf, in the right and power of frequent and successive Parliaments or National Meetings in Council, He, the said Charles Stuart, for accomplishment of such Designs, and for the protecting of himself and his Adherents, in his and their wicked Practices, to the same end hath Traiterously and Maliciously levied War against the present Parliament, and the People therein Represented.

Particularly, upon or about the Thirtieth day of June, in the Year of our Lord, One thousand six hundred forty and two, at Beverly in the County of York; and upon, or about the thirtieth Day of July, in the Year aforesaid, in the County of the City of York; and upon, or about the twenty fourth day of August in the same Year, in the County of the Town of Nottingham, (when, and where he set up his Standard of War;) and also on, or about the twenty third day of October, 1648. in the same Year at Edge hill, and Keinton-field, in the County of Warwick; and upon, or about the thirtieth day of November, in the same Year, at Brainford, in the County of Middlesex; and upon, or about the thirtieth day of August, in the Year of our Lord One thousand six hundred forty and three, at Caversham-bridge, near Redding, in the County of Berks; and upon, or about the thirtieth day of October, in the Year last mentioned, at, or near the City of Gloucester; and upon, or about the thirtieth day of November, in the Year last mentioned, at Newberry, in the County of Berks; and upon, or about the One and thirtieth day of July, in the Year of our Lord, One thousand six hundred forty and four, at Cropredy-Bridge, in the County of Oxon; and upon, or about the thirtieth day of September, in the Year last mentioned, at Bodmin, and other places near adjacent, in the County of Cornwall; and upon, or about the Thirtieth day of November, in the Year last mentioned, at Newberry aforesaid; and upon, or about the Eighth day of June, in the Year of our Lord, One thousand six hundred forty and five, at the Town of Leicester; and also upon the Fourteenth day of the same Month, at Naseby field, in the County of Northampton. At which several times and places, or most of them, and at many other places in this Land, at several other times within the Years afore-mentioned: And in the Year of our Lord, One thousand six hundred forty and six, He, the said Charles Stuart, hath caused and procured many thousands of the free People of the Nation to be slain, and by Divisions, Parties, and Insurrections within this Land, by Invasions from forreign Parts, endeavoured and procured by him, and by many other evil Ways and Means; He, the said Charles Stuart, hath not only maintained and carried on the said War both by Land and Sea, during the Years before-mentioned, but also hath renewed, or caused to be renewed, the said War against the Parliament, and good People of this Nation, in this present Year, One thousand six hundred forty and eight, in the Counties of Kent, Essex, Surry, Sussex, Middlesex, and many other Counties and Places in England, and Wales, and also by Sea; and particularly, He, the said Charles Stuart, hath for that purpose given Commissions to his Son the Prince, and others, whereby, besides multitudes of other Persons, many such, as were by the Parliament intrusted and employed for the safety of the Nation, being by him or his Agents corrupted, to the betraying of their Trust, and revolting from the Parliament, have had entertainment and Commission, for the continuing and renewing of War and Hostility against the said Parliament and People, as aforesaid: By which cruel and unnatural Wars, by Him, the said Charles Stuart, levied, continued, and renewed as aforesaid, much innocent Blood of the Free People of this Nation hath been spilt, many Families have been undone, the publick Treasury wasted and exhausted, Trade obstructed and miserably decayed, vast Expence and Damage to the Nation incurred, and many parts of the Land spoiled, some of them even to desolation.

And for further prosecution of his said evil Designs, He, the said Charles Stuart, doth still continue his Commissions to the said Prince, and other Rebels and Revolters, both English and Forreigners, and to the Earl of Ormond, and to the Irish Rebels and Revolters, associated with him, from whom further Invasions upon this Land are threatned, upon the procurement, and on the behalf of the said Charles Stuart.

All

1648. All which wicked designs of War, and evil Practices of him the said Charles Stuart, have been and are carried on, for the advancing and upholding of the personal Interest of Will and Power, and pretended Prerogative to himself and his Family, against the publick Interest; common Right, Liberty, Justice, and Peace of the People of this Nation, by, and for whom He was intrusted, as aforesaid.

By all which it appeareth, That He, the said Charles Stuart hath been, and is the Occasioner, Author, and Contriver of the said unnatural, cruel, and bloody Wars, and therein guilty of all the Treasons, Murders, Rapines, Burnings, Spoils, Desolations, Damage and Mischief to this Nation, acted or committed in the said Wars, or occasioned thereby. And the said John Cook, by protestation (saving to himself on the behalf of the People of England, the liberty of exhibiting at any time hereafter any other Charge against the said Charles Stuart, and also of replying to the Answers which the said Charles Stuart shall make to the Premisses, or any of them, or any other Charge that shall be so exhibited) doth for the said Treasons and Crimes, on the behalf of the said People of England, Impeach the said Charles Stuart, as a Tyrant, Traytor, Murderer, and a publick and implacable Enemy to the Common-wealth of England: And pray, That the said Charles Stuart, King of England, may be put to Answer all and every the Premisses, that such Proceedings, Examinations, Tryals, Sentences, and Judgment may be thereupon had, as shall be agreeable to Justice.

The King smiled often during the reading of the Charge, especially these Words, Tyrant, Traytor, Murderer, and publick Enemy of the Common-wealth.

President. Sir, You have now heard your Charge. You find that in the close of it, it is prayed to the Court in behalf of the Commons of England, that you Answer to your Charge, which the Court expects.

King. I would know by what Power I am called hither; I was not long ago in the Isle of Wight, how I came there, is a longer Story than I think fit at this time for me to speak: But there I entred into a Treaty with both Houses of Parliament, with as much Faith as is possible to be had of any People in the World: I treated there with a number of Honourable Lords and Gentlemen, and Treated honestly and uprightly; I cannot say, but that they did very nobly with Me: We were upon a Conclusion of the Treaty: Now I would know by what lawful Authority (there are many unlawful Authorities, Thieves and Robbers on the High-way) I was brought from thence, and carried from place to place, (and I know not what) and when I know by what lawful Authority, I shall answer. Remember I am your King, your lawful King, and what Sins you bring upon your own Heads, and the Judgment of God upon this Land, think well upon it, I say, before you go on from one Sin to a greater; therefore let me know by what lawful Authority I am seated here, and I shall not be unwilling to Answer. In the mean time, I shall not betray my Trust: I have a Trust committed to me by God, by old and lawful Descent; I will not betray it to Answer to a new unlawful Authority.

Bradshaw, Pres. If you had been pleased to have observed what was hinted to you by the Court at your first coming hither, you would have known by what Authority: which Authority requires you in the name of the People of England, of whom you are elected King, to answer them.

King. I deny that.

Bradshaw. If you acknowledge not the Authority of the Court they must proceed.

King. I do tell them so, England was never an Elective Kingdom, but an Hereditary Kingdom, for near these Thousand Years: Therefore let me know, by what lawful Authority I am called hither, I do stand more for the Liberty of my People, than any here that come to be my pretended Judges; and therefore let me know by what lawful Authority, and I will answer, otherwise I will not answer.

Bradshaw. Sir, How really you have managed your trust, is known; your way of Answer is to interrogate the Court, which beseems not you in this Condition; you have been told of it twice or thrice.

King. Here is Lieutenant-Colonel Cobbet, ask him if he did not bring me from the Isle of Wight by Force; I do not come here as submitting to the Court; I will stand as much for the privileges of the House of Commons rightly understood, as any Man here whatsoever; I see no House of Lords here that may constitute a Parliament, and (the King too) should have been. Is this the bringing the King to his Parliament? Is this the bringing an end to the Treaty on the Publick Faith? Let me see a lawful Authority warranted by the Word of God, the Scriptures, or by the Constitutions of the Kingdom. I will not betray my Trust, nor the Liberties of the People: I am sworn to keep the Peace by that Duty I owe to God and my Country, and I will do it to the last breath in my Body. As it is a Sin to withstand lawful Authority, so it is to submit to a Tyrannical, or any otherwise unlawful Authority.

Bradshaw. The Court expects your final Answer, and will adjourn till Monday next: We are satisfied with our Authority that are your Judges, and it is upon God's Authority and the Kingdoms, and that Peace you speak of, will be kept in doing Justice, and that's our present Work.

So the Court adjourned, and the King was conducted back: They had so contrived it, that divers schismatical Soldiers and Fellows were placed round about the Court to cry Justice, Justice, when the King was remanded, thinking all the rest of the People would have bleated to the same Tune, but they (almost all) cried God bless him, and were (some of them) well cudgelled by the Soldiers, for not reviling and exclaiming after the mode of the Army; yet the Court took no notice hereof: so far was His Majesty already forejudged and condemned to Suffering.

Monday, January the 22*th.* The King was brought again to his Tryal.

The Second Day's Tryal of his Majesty.

Solicitor Cook. May it please your Lordship, I did at the last Court, in behalf of the Commons of England, exhibit, and give into this Court a Charge of High Treason, and other High Crimes against the Prisoner at the Bar, whereof I do accuse him in the name of the People of England, and the Charge was read unto him, and his Answer required. My Lord, He was not then pleased to give an Answer, but instead of answering, did dispute the Authority of this High Court: My humble Motion to this High Court in behalf 1648. behalf of the Kingdom of England is, That the Prisoner may be invited to make a positive Answer, either by way of Confession or Negation; which, if he shall refuse to do, That the matter of Charge may be taken pro confesso, and the Court may proceed accordingly to Justice.

Bradshaw. Sir, You may remember, at the last Court you were told the Occasion of your being brought hither, and you heard a Charge read against you, &c. You heard likewise what was prayed in behalf of the People, That you shall give an Answer to that Charge, and we were then required to make [illegible] the Authority of this Court, and told you [illegible] not by what Authority you were brought hither. Upon diverse times propound your Questions, and there as often answered, That it was by Authority of the Commons of England assembled in Parliament, that did think fit to call you to account for those High and Capital Misdemeanors, wherewith you then were charged. Since that, the Court hath taken into consideration what you then said, they are fully satisfied with their own Authority, and they hold it fit you should stand satisfied therewith too: And they do require, that you do give a positive and particular Answer to their Charge exhibited against you; they expect you should either confess or deny: If you deny, as is offered in the behalf of the Kingdom, it is made good against you. Their Authority they do avow to the whole World, and the whole Kingdom are to rest satisfied therein, and you are to rest satisfied in it; and therefore you are to give a positive Answer.

King. When I was here last, as true, I made that Question, and said, if it were only my own particular Case, I would have satisfied my self with the Protestation I made here the last time, against the Legality of this Court, and that a King cannot be tryed by any Superiour Jurisdiction upon Earth: but it is not my Case alone, it is the Freedom and the Liberties of the People of England, and (do you present what you will) I stand more for their Liberties than [illegible]; for if Power without Law may make Laws, and may alter the fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, I do not know what Subject he is in England that can be sure of his Life, or any thing that he calls his own: Therefore when I came hither, I did expect particular Reasons to know by what Law, what Authority you proceed against me here, and therefore I am unable to [illegible] what to say to you in this Particular, because (the Affirmative is to be proved, the Negative (often) is very hard to do); I shall tell you my Reasons as short as I can: All Proceedings against any Man whatsoever——

Bradshaw. Sir, I must interrupt you: What you do is not agreeable to the Proceedings of any Court of Justice. You are about to enter into argument and dispute concerning the Authority of this Court, before whom you appear as a Prisoner, and are charged as an High Delinquent; you may not dispute the Authority of this Court, nor will any Court give way unto it, you are to submit to it, &c.

King. Under favour, I do plead for the Liberty of the People of England more than you do; and therefore, if I should impose a Belief upon any Man without Reasons given, it were unreasonable.

Bradshaw. Sir, I must interrupt you: You may not be permitted, you speak of Law and Reason, and there is both against you: Sir, the Vote of the Commons of England assembled in Parliament, is the Reason of the Kingdom, and they are those that have given you that Law, according to which you should have Ruled and Reigned: Sir, It will be taken notice of, that you stand in contempt of the Court, and your Contempt will be recorded accordingly.

King. I do not know how a King can be a Delinquent; but by all the Laws that ever I heard, all Men may put in Demurrer against any Proceedings, as Illegal; and I do demand that: If you deny that, from any Reason.

Bradshaw. Sir, Neither you, nor any Man are permitted to dispute that Point, you are concluded: You may not demur to the Jurisdiction of the Court; if you do, I must let you know, that they over-rule your Demurrer: They sit here by the Authority of the Commons of England, and all your Predecessors, and You are responsible to them.

King. I deny that; shew me one President.

Bradshaw. Sir, You are not to interrupt while the Court is speaking to you; this Point is not to be debated by you: If you offer it by way of Demurrer to the Jurisdiction of the Court, they have considered of their Jurisdiction, they do affirm their own Jurisdiction.

King. I say, Sir, by your favour, That the Commons of England were never a Court of Judicature; I would know how they came to be so?

Bradshaw. Sir, You are not to be permitted to go on in that Speech, and these Discourses.

Then the Clerk of the Court read as followeth:

Charles Stuart, King of England, You have been accused on the Behalf of the People of England, of High Treason, and other High Crimes, the Court hath determined that you ought to answer the same.

King. I will answer the same so soon as I know by what Authority you do this.

Bradshaw. If this be all you say; then Gentlemen, you that brought the Prisoner hither, take charge of him back again.

King. I do require, that I may give my Reasons why I did not Answer; and have one time for that.

Bradshaw. Sir, It is not for Prisoners to require.

King. Prisoners, Sir, I am not an ordinary Prisoner.

Bradshaw. The Court have affirmed their Jurisdiction; if you will not answer, we shall give Order to Record your Fault.

King. You never heard my Reasons yet.

Bradshaw. Sir, Your Reasons are not to be heard against the highest Jurisdiction.

King. Shew me that Jurisdiction where Reason is not to be heard.

Bradshaw. Sir, We shew it you here: The Commons of England. And the next time you are brought, you will know more of the Pleasure of the Court, and, it may be, their final Determination.

King. Shew me where ever the House of Commons was a Court of Judicature of that kind.

Bradshaw. Serjeant, take away the Prisoner.

King. Well, Sir, Remember that the King is not suffered

Here the King was by Bradshaw interrupted.

1648. suffered to give in his Reasons for the Liberty and Freedoms of all his Subjects.

Bradshaw. Sir, You are not to have Liberty to use this Language: how great a Friend you have been to the Laws and Liberties of the People, let all England and the World judge.

King. Sir, Under favour, it was the Liberty, Freedom, and Laws of the Subject that ever I stood for. I defended my self with Arms, I never took up Arms against the People, but for the Laws.

Bradshaw. The Command of the Court must be obeyed, no Answer will be given to the Charge.

So the King was guarded forth to Sir Robert Cotton's, and the Court adjourned to the Painted Chamber, Tuesday Twelve a Clock.

The third days Trial of his Majesty.

Tuesday, January 23d. The Court sate again. Seventy Three Commissioners of those before named were present.

The King brought into the Court, sits down.

Solicitor Cook. 'May it please your Lordship, 'my Lord President, this is now the Third time 'that by the Grace and Favour of the Court, the 'Prisoner hath been brought to the Bar, before 'any Issue joyned in this Cause. My Lord, I did 'at the first Court exhibit a Charge against him, 'containing the Highest Treason that ever was 'wrought on the Theatre of England, That the 'King of England, trusted to keep the Law, that 'had taken an Oath so to do, that had Tribute 'paid him for that end, should be Guilty of a 'wicked design to subvert and destroy our Laws, 'and introduce an Arbitrary and Tyrannical Go'vernment, and in defiance of the Parliament 'and their Authority, set up his Standard for 'War against the Parliament and People: And I 'did humbly pray in behalf of the People of Eng'land, That he may speedily be required to make 'an Answer to the Charge. But, my Lord, in'stead of making any Answer, he did then dis'pute the Authority of this High Court; your 'Lordship was pleased to give him a further day 'to put in his Answer, which day being yester'day, I did humbly move, that he might be re'quired to give a direct and positive Answer, ei'ther by denying, or confessing of it; But, my 'Lord, he was pleased to demur to the Jurisdi'ction of the Court, which the Court did then 'over-rule, and command him to give a direct 'and positive Answer. My Lord, besides this 'great delay of Justice, I shall now humbly move 'your Lordship for speedy Judgment against 'him: I might press your Lordship upon the 'whole, That according to the known Rules of 'the Laws of the Land, if a Prisoner shall stand 'contumacious in contempt, and shall not put in 'an issuable Plea, Guilty or not Guilty, of the charge 'given against him, whereby he may come to a 'fair Tryal, that by an implied confession it may 'be taken pro confesso, as it hath been done to those 'who have deserved more Favour than this Pri'soner at the Bar hath done. But besides, My Lord, 'I shall humbly press your Lordship upon the 'whole Fact, That the House of Commons, the 'Supream Authority and Jurisdiction of the 'Kingdom, they have declared, That it is noto'rious, that the matter of the Charge is true, as it 'is in Truth, my Lord, as clear as Crystal, and 1648.
'as the Sun that shines at Noon-day, which, if 'your Lordship and the Court be not satisfied in, 'I have notwithstanding in the Peoples behalf, 'several Witnesses to produce, and therefore I 'do humbly pray, (and yet I confess, it is not 'so much I, as the innocent Blood as hath been 'shed: (the cry whereof is very great) for Ju'stice and Judgment) and therefore I do humbly 'pray, that speedy Judgment be pronounced a'gainst [illegible]. Sir, [illegible] that is moved by the Co[illegible] of the Kingdom against you; you [illegible] and over again, That it is not fit for any other Man to dispute the Jurisdiction of the Supream and Highest Authority of England, from which there is no Appeal, and concerning which there must be no dispute: yet you did persist in such carriage, as shews you have no manner of obedience, nor did you acknowledge any Authority in them, nor the High Court that constituted this High Court of Justice. Sir, I must let you know from the Court, that they are very sensible of these delays of yours, and that they ought not being thus authorized by the Supream Court of England) to be thus trifled withal, and that they might in Justice, and according to the Rules of Justice, take advantage by these delays, and proceed to pronounce Judgment against you; yet nevertheless they are pleased to give direction, and on their behalf, I do require you, that you make a positive Answer unto this charge that is against you, in plain Terms, (for Justice knows no respect of persons) you are to give your positive and final Answer in plain English, whether you be Guilty or not Guilty of these Treasons laid to your Charge.

King. When I was here yesterday, I did desire to speak for the Liberties of the People of England, I was interrupted, I desire to know yet, whether I may speak freely or not.

Bradshaw. Sir, You have had the Resolution of the Court upon the like Question the last day, and you were told, That having such a Charge of so high a nature against you, your Work was, that you ought to acknowledge the Jurisdiction of the Court, and to Answer to your Charge; when you have once Answered, you shall be heard at large, make the best defence you can: But Sir, I must let you know from the Court (as their Commands) That you are not to be permitted to issue out into any other Discourses, till such time as you have given a positive Answer concerning the Matter charged upon you.

King. For the Charge I value not a Rush, it is the Liberty of the People of England that I stand for, for me to acknowledge a New Court that I never heard of before, I that am your KING, that should be an Example to all the People of England, to uphold Justice, to maintain the Old Laws, indeed, I do not know how to do it: you spoke well the first day that I came here, (on Saturday) of the Obligations that I had laid upon me by God, to the maintenance of the Liberties of my People; the same Obligation you speak of, I do acknowledge to God, that I owe to him and to my People, to defend as much as in me lies, the Ancient Laws of the Kingdom, therefore until that I may know that this is not against the Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, I can put in no particular

Answer,

1648. Answer; if you will give me time, I will shew you my Reasons, and this ———

Here the King was interrupted.

Here being interrupted, The King said again, By your favour, you ought not to interrupt me: How I came here, I know not: there's no Law for it to make your King your Prisoner. I was in a Treaty upon the Publick Faith of the Kingdom, made to me by the Two Houses of the Parliament, that was the Representative of the Kingdom, and I had almost made an end of the Treaty when I was hurried away, and brought hither, and therefore ———

And here again.

Bradshaw. Sir, You must know the pleasure of the Court.

King. By your favour, Sir.

Bradshaw. Nay Sir, By your favour, you may not be permitted to fall into those Discourses; You appear as a Delinquent, You have not acknowledged the Authority of the Court, the Court craves it not of you, but once more they Command you to give your positive Answer.

Clerk. Do your Duty.

King. Duty Sir!

The Clerk then reads.

'Charles Stuart, King of England, you are accused in behalf of the Commons of England, of 'divers High Crimes and Treasons, which Charge 'hath been read unto you; The Court now re-'quires you to give your positive and final An-'swer by way of Confession or Denial of the 'Charge.

King. Sir, I say again to you, so that I may give satisfaction to the People of England of the clearness of my Proceedings, not by way of Answer, not in this way, but to satisfie them that I have done nothing against that Trust that hath been committed to me, I would do it; but to acknowledge a New Court against their Priviledges, to alter the Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom, Sir, you must excuse me.

Bradshaw. Sir, This is the Third time that you have publickly disavowed this Court, and put an affront upon it, how far you have preserved the Priviledges of the People, your actions have spoken; but truly, Sir, mens intentions ought to be known by their Actions, you have written your meaning in bloody Characters throughout the whole Kingdom: But, Sir, you understand the pleasure of the Court. Clerk, Record the default; and Gentlemen, you that took charge of the Prisoner, take him back again. So the King went forth with his Guards, and the Court adjourned to the Painted Chamber, the Cryer (as at other times) crying, God bless the Kingdom of England.

The 4th. and last days Tryal of His Majesty.

Saturday, 27th. of January, 1648. The Court sat again in Westminster-Hall, the President was in his Scarlet Robes, after him 67 Commissioners answered to their Names; the King came in, in his wonted posture with his Hat on, a company of Soldiers and seditious Persons were placed about the Court to cry for Justice, Judgment, and Execution; the people not daring to cry, God bless Him, for fear of being again beaten by the Soldiers.

Bradshaw. Gentlemen, It is well known to all or most of you here present, that the Prisoner at the Bar hath been several times convented and brought before this Court to make Answer to a Charge of High Treason, and other Crimes exhibited against him in the Name of the People of England, to which Charge being required to Answer, He hath been so far from Obeying the Commands of the Court, by submitting to their Justice, as he began to take upon him Reasoning, and debated unto the Authority of the Court, and to the Highest Court that appointed them to Try and Judge him; but being over-ruled in that, and required to make his Answer, he still continued contumacious, and refused to submit to Answer. Hereupon the Court (that they may not be wanting to themselves, nor the Trust reposed in them, nor that any mans wilfulness prevent Justice) they have considered of the Charge and of the Contumacy, and of that Confession which in Law doth arise on that Contumacy. They have likewise consider'd the notoriety of the Fact charged upon this Prisoner, and upon the whole Matter, they are resolved, and have agreed upon a Sentence to be pronounced against him; but in respect he doth desire to be heard before the Sentence be read and pronounced, the Court hath resolved to hear him: Yet, Sir, thus much I must tell you before-hand (which you have been minded of at other Courts) that if that which you have to say, be to offer any debate concerning the Jurisdiction, you are not to be heard in it, you have offered it formerly, and you have struck at the Root, that is, the Power and Supream Authority of the Commons of England, which this Court will not admit a debate of, and which indeed is an irrational thing in them to do, being a Court that acts upon Authority derived from them. But, Sir, if you have any thing to say in Defence of your self concerning the Matter charged, the Court hath given me in command to hear you.

King. Since I see that you will not hear any thing of debate, concerning that which I confess I thought most material for the Peace of the Kingdom, and for the Liberty of the Subject, I shall wave it, but only I must tell you, that this many a day all things have been taken away from me, but that that I call dearer to me than my Life, which is my Conscience and mine Honour: And if I had respect to my Life more than the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Liberty of the Subject, certainly I should have made a particular defence for my Life, for by that, at least wise, I might have delayed an ugly Sentence, which I believe will pass upon me; therefore certainly, Sir, as a Man that hath some understanding, some knowledge of the world (if that true zeal to my Country had not over-born the care that I have for my own preservation) I should have gone another way to work than that I have done. Now Sir, I conceive that a hasty Sentence once passed, may sooner be repented of, than recalled; and truly, the self same desire that I have for the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Liberty of the Subject, more than my own particular ends, makes me now at last desire, that I having something to say that concerns both, I desire before Sentence be given, that I may be heard in the Painted Chamber before the Lords and Commons, this delay cannot be prejudicial to you; whatsoever I say, if that I say be no Reason, those that hear me must be Judges, I cannot be Judge of that that I have to say. If it be Reason, and really for the welfare of the Kingdom, and the Liberty of the Subject, I am sure it is very well worth the hearing;

1648. therefore I do conjure you, as you love that which you pretend (I hope it's real) the Liberty of the Subject, and Peace of the Kingdom, that you will grant me this hearing before any Sentence passeth; but if I cannot get this Liberty, I do protest that your fair shews of Liberty and Peace are pure shews, and that you will not hear your King.

The President said, This was a declining the Jurisdiction of the Court, and delay: yet the Court withdrew for half an Hour, advised upon it, and sat again.

Bradshaw said to the King, That the Court had considered what he had moved, and also their own Authority.

The return from the Court, said he, is this, That they have been too much delayed by you already, and they are Judges appointed by the Highest Authority, and Judges are no more to delay, than they are to deny Justice, and notwithstanding what you have offered, they are resolved to proceed to Sentence, and to Judgment, that is their Unanimous Resolution.

The King pressed again and again, that he might be heard by the Lords and Commons in the Painted Chamber, with great earnestness, and was as often denied by Bradshaw: at last the King desired that this Motion of his, might be entered.

Bradshaw began in a long Speech to declare the Grounds of the Sentence, much aggravating the King's Offences, and misapplying both Law and History to his present purpose.

When Bradshaw had done speaking, Broughton the Clerk read the Sentence drawn up in Parchment to this effect.

The Sentence against his Majesty.

'That whereas the Commons of England in 'Parliament had appointed them an High Court 'of Justice, for the Tryal of Charles Stuart King of 'England, before whom he had been three times 'convened, and at the first time a Charge of High 'Treason and other high Crimes and Misdemeanors was read in behalf of the Kingdom of England, &c. which Charge being read unto him, 'as aforesaid, He the said Charles Stuart was required to give his Answer, but he refused so to 'do, and so expressed the several passages at his 'Tryal in refusing to Answer; for all which 'Treasons and Crimes, this Court doth adjudge, 'That he the said Charles Stuart, as a Tyrant, 'Traytor, Murderer, and publick Enemy, shall 'be put to death, by severing of his Head from 'his Body.

After the Sentence read, the President said, This Sentence now read and published, it is the Act, Sentence, Judgement and Resolution of the whole Court.

Here the whole Court stood up, as assenting to what the President said.

King. Will you hear me a Word, Sir?

Bradshaw. Sir, You are not to be heard after the sentence.

King. No Sir?

Bradshaw. No Sir, by your favour, Sir. Guard, withdraw your Prisoner. 1648.

King. I am not suffered to speak, expect what Justice other people will have.

The King not being admitted to reply, was taken by his Guards to Sir Robert Cotton's House and the Court rose; as he passed down the stairs the Soldiers scoffed at him, and cast the smoak of their Tobacco (a thing very distastful to him) in his face, and strewed the Pipes in his way, and one more insolent than the rest, spit in his face, which he in great patience took no further notice of, than to wipe the spittle away; and as he passed further, hearing some of them by the instigation of their Officers cry out Justice, Justice and Execution, he said, Alas poor Souls! for a piece of Money they would do so for their Commanders.

A Committee is appointed to consider the time and place for the King's Execution.

The Court after the Judgment given, went into the Painted-Chamber, and appointed Sir Hardress Waller, Ireton, Harrison, Dean and Okey to be a Committee to consider of the time and place for the Execution: the King hearing thereof, requested an Officer of the Army to go to them, to desire that he might see his Children before his death, and that Doctor Juxon, the Bishop of London, might be admitted to assist him in his private devotion, and receiving the Sacrament; both which were granted to him upon a motion to the Parliament.

The King at his Tryal (as you have read) pressed earnestly to have his Reasons heard against the Jurisdiction of the Court, but was often denied; but that the weight of them may not be suppress, for a further manifestation of the impiety of his Unjust Judges, we shall here insert them faithfully Transcribed out of the Original Copy under the King's own hand.

The Reasons the King intended to have given at his Tryal against the proceedings of the Court.

Having already made my Protestations not only against the illegality of this pretended Court, but also that no earthly Power can justly call me (who am your King) in Question as a Delinquent, I would not any more open my mouth upon this occasion more than to refer my self to what I have spoken, were I alone in this case concerned: but the Duty I owe to God, in the preservation of the true Liberty of my people, will not suffer me at this time to be silent: for how can any free-born Subject of England call life, or any thing he possesseth, his own, If Power without right daily maketh new, and abrogate the old Fundamental Law of the Land, which is now to be the present case; wherefore when I came hither, I expected that you would have endeavoured to have satisfied me concerning these grounds, which hinder me to answer to your pretended Impeachment; but since I see that nothing I can say will move you to it (though Negatives are not so naturally proved as Affirmatives) yet I will shew you the Reason why I am confident you cannot judge me, nor indeed the meanest man in England, for I will not (like you) without shewing a Reason seek to impose a belief upon my Subjects.

There is no Proceeding just against any man but what is warranted either by God's Laws, or the Municipal Laws of the Countrey where he lives. Now I am most confident, that this days proceeding cannot be warranted by God's Law; for 1648. for on the contrary, the Authority of Obedience unto Kings, is clearly warranted, and ſtrictly Commanded both in the Old and New Teſtament, which if denied, I am ready inſtantly to prove, and for the Queſtion now in hand, there it is ſaid, That where the word of a King is, there is Power, and who can ſay unto him, what doſt thou? Eccleſ. 8.4. Then for the Laws of the Land, I am no leſs confident, that no Learned Lawyer will affirm, that an Impeachment can lie againſt the King, they all going in his Name: and one of their Maxims is, That the King can do no wrong. Beſides, the Law upon which you ground your Proceedings, muſt either be old or new, if old, ſhew it; if new, tell what Authority warranted by the Fundamental Laws of the Land hath made it, and when: but how the Houſe of Commons can ereſt a Court of Judicature, which was never one it ſelf, (as is well known to all Lawyers) I leave to God and the World to judge: And it were full as ſtrange, that they ſhould pretend to make Laws without King or Houſe of Lords, to any that have heard ſpeak of the Laws of England.

And admitting, but not granting, that the People of England's Commiſſion could grant your pretended Power, I ſee nothing you can ſhew for that; for certainly you never asked the queſtion of the tenth man of the Kingdom, and in this way you manifeſtly wrong even the pooreſt Plowman, if you demand not his free conſent, nor can you pretend any colour for this your pretended Commiſſion without the conſent at leaſt of the major part of every man in England, of whatſoever quality or condition, which I am ſure you never went about to ſeek, ſo far are you from having it. Thus you ſee, that I ſpeak not for my own Right alone, as I am your King, but alſo for the true Liberty of all my Subjects, which conſiſts not in ſharing the power of Government, but living under ſuch Laws, and ſuch Government as may give themſelves the beſt aſſurance of their Lives and Propriety of their Goods. Nor in this caſe, do I forget the Privileges of both Houſes of Parliament, which this days proceeding doth not only violate, but likewiſe occaſion the greateſt breach of their publick Faith (I believe) that ever was heard of, with which I am far from charging the two Houſes; for all the pretended Crimes laid againſt me, bare Date long before the late Treaty at Newport, in which I having concluded as much as in Me lay, and hopefully expecting the two Houſes agreement thereunto, I was ſuddenly ſurprized, and hurried from thence as a Priſoner, upon which account I am againſt my will brought hither, where ſince I am come, I cannot but to my power defend the ancient Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom, together with my own juſt Right; but for any thing I can ſee, the Higher Houſe is totally excluded.

And for the Houſe of Commons, it is too well known, that the major part of them are detained or deterred from ſitting, ſo as if I had no other, this were ſufficient for me to proteſt againſt the lawfulneſs of your pretended Court.

Beſides all this, the Peace of the Kingdom is not the leaſt in my thoughts; and what hopes of Settlement is there ſo long as Power Reigns without Rule of Law, changing the whole Frame of that Government under which the Kingdom hath flouriſhed for many hundred years (nor will I ſay what will fall out in caſe this lawleſs, unjuſt proceeding againſt Me do go on) and believe it, the Commons of England will not thank you for this Change; for they will remember how happy they have been of late years under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the King my Father, and my Self, unto the beginning of theſe unhappy Troubles, and will have cauſe to doubt, that they ſhall never be ſo happy under any new. And by this time it will be too ſenſibly evident, that the Arms I took up, were only to defend the Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, againſt thoſe who have ſuppoſed my power hath totally changed the Ancient Government. 1648.

Thus having ſhewed you briefly the Reaſons why I cannot ſubmit to your pretended Authority without violating the Truſt which I have from God, for the Welfare and Liberty of my People; I expect from you either clear Reaſons to convince my Judgment, ſhewing me that I am in an Error; (and then truly I will readily anſwer) or that you will withdraw your Proceedings.

The Report from the Perſons before-named to conſider of the Time and Place of the Executing the Sentence againſt the King, was on Monday the 29*th*. of January delivered in the Painted Chamber to the Commiſſioners then preſent in theſe words, That it is the Opinion of the Committee, that the open Street before White-Hall is a fit place, and that the King be there Executed to morrow.

The Court approved of this Report, and Ordered a Warrant to be drawn for that purpoſe, which was preſently Ingroſſed, and Signed, and Sealed by all the Commiſſioners preſent, in theſe words, (viz.)

At the High Court of Juſtice for Trying, and Judging Charles Stuart King of England, January the 29*th*. 1648.

The Title of the VVarrant for Executing the King.

Whereas Charles Stuart King of England is, and ſtandeth Convicted, Attainted, and Condemned of High Treaſon, and other High Crimes, and Sentence upon Saturday laſt was Pronounced againſt him by this Court to be put to Death by ſevering his Head from his Body; of which Sentence, Execution yet remains to be done. Theſe are therefore to will and require you, to ſee the ſaid Sentence Executed in the open Street before White-Hall, upon the morrow being the 30*th*. day of this inſtant Month of January, between the hours of ten in the Morning, and five in the Afternoon of the ſame day, with full Effect, and for your ſo doing, this ſhall be your ſufficient Warrant. And theſe are to require all Officers and Soldiers, and other the good People of this Nation of England, to be aſſiſting unto you in this Service: Given under our Hands and Seals, &c.

John Bradſhaw, &c.

To Col. Francis Hacker.
Col. Hunks, and Lieutenant-Colonel Phayer.

This was Signed and Sealed by all the Commiſſioners whoſe names are before expreſſed, except ſuch of them who are mark'd with this note. (†)

But of thoſe that Signed and Sealed the Warrant, it muſt be remembred, that Colonel Richard Ingoldsby's Hand and Seal was againſt his conſent put to it by Oliver Cromwell; but his early diſ-

1648. claiming of the Fact, and his active and successful endeavours for the Restoration of King Charles the Second to his Crown and Kingdoms, not only obtained his Pardon, but the King's Favour with it, and the Dignity of Knight of the Bath, which was conferred on him at the ensuing Coronation.

Col. John Hutchinson also for his Conjunction with General Monk to reduce this Kingdom to its ancient Government, and his hearty Repentance for what he had done in consenting to, and and acting in this impious Sentence, obtained his Pardon for it.

The same day that the Warrant was Signed and Sealed, the Duke of Gloucester and the Lady Elizabeth were brought to the King, whom he most joyfully received, and giving his Blessing to the Princess, He bid her remember to tell her Brother James, when ever she should see him, that he should look no more upon Charles as his Elder Brother only, but be obedient to him as his Sovereign: And that they should love one another, and forgive their Father's Enemies: And then said unto her, Sweetheart, you will forget this; No, said she, I shall never forget it while I live: and pouring forth abundance of Tears, promised him to write down the particulars.

Then the King taking the Duke of Gloucester upon his Knee, said, Sweetheart, now they will cut off thy Father's Head (upon which words the Child looked very wishfully on him) Mark Child what I say, They will cut off my Head, and perhaps make thee a King; But, mark what I say, you must not be a King, so long as your Brothers, Charles and James does live; for they will cut off your Brothers Heads (when they can catch them) and cut thy Head off too at last; and therefore I charge you do not be made a King by them. At which the Child sighing said, I will be torn in pieces first ——— which falling so unexpectedly from one so young, it made the King rejoyce exceedingly.

What the King said to me the 29th. of January last, being the last time I had the happiness to see him, 'He told me He was glad I was come, and 'although he had not time to say much, yet somewhat he had to say to me, which he had not 'to another, or leave in Writing; because he 'feared their Cruelty was such, as that they 'would not have permitted him to write to 'me. He wished me not to grieve and torment my 'self for him, for that would be a glorious Death 'that he should die, it being for the Laws and Li- 'berties of the Land. He bid me read Bishop Andrews's Sermons, Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity; 'and Bishop Laud's Book against Fisher, which 'would ground me against Popery. He told me 'he had forgiven all his Enemies, and hoped God 'would forgive them also, and commanded us, &c 'to forgive them. He bad me tell my Mother, 'that his thoughts had never strayed from her, 'and that his Love would be the same to his last 'wicheh. He commanded me and my Brother to 'be Obedient to her; and bad me lend his Bles- 'sing to the rest of my Brothers and Sisters, with 'commendation to all his Friends. So, after he 'had given me his Blessing, I took my Leave.

'Further, he commanded us all to forgive those 1648.
'People, but never to trust them; for they had 'been most false to him, and to those that gave 'them Power, and he feared also, to their own 'Souls. And desired me not to grieve for him, 'for he should die a Martyr, and that he doubted 'not but that the Lord would settle his Throne 'upon his Son, and that we should all be happier 'than we could have expected to have been if he 'had lived. With many other things which at present I cannot remember.'

On Tuesday the 30th. of January, which was the Fatal day on which the King was put to Death, the Bishop of London did in the Morning read Divine Service in his Presence; to which Duty the xxvii. Chapter of St. Matthew, being the History of our Saviour's Passion, was appointed by the Church-Calendar for the second Lesson: but, he supposing it to have been selected on purpose, thanked him afterwards for his seasonable choice. But the Bishop modestly declining those undue thanks, told him that it came by course to be read on that day, which very much comforted his Majesty, who proceeded to the remaining Duties of receiving from the Bishop the Holy Sacrament, and the other preparations for his approaching Passion.

His Devotions being ended, about ten a clock he was brought from St. James's to White-Hall by a Regiment of Foot, with Colours flying, and Drums beating (through the Park) part marching before, and part behind, with a private Guard of Partisans about him, the Bishop on the one hand, and Col. Tomlinson (who had the charge of him) on the other, bareheaded. The Guards marching a slow pace, as on a solemn and sad occasion to their ill-tuned Drums. He bid them go faster, (after his usual manner of walking was) saying, That he now went before them to prepare for an Heavenly Crown, with less solicitude than he had often encouraged his Soldiers to fight for an Earthly Diadem.

Being come to the end of the Park, he went up the Stairs leading to the Long Gallery in White-Hall, where he used formerly to Lodge. There finding an unexpected delay in being brought upon the Scaffold, which they had begun but that Morning, He past the most of that time (having received a Letter from the Prince in the interim by Mr. Seymour) in Prayer.

About Two of a Clock His Majesty (refusing to Dine) eat only a bit of Bread, and drank a glass of Claret; and about an hour after, Col. Hacker, with other Officers and Soldiers, brought him with the Bishop and Colonel Tomlinson, through the Banquetting-House to the Scaffold, whereto the Passage was made through a Window. A strong Guard of several Regiments of Horse and Foot were placed on all sides, which hindred the near approach of his miserable and distracted Subjects (who for manifesting their Sorrow, were most barbarously used) and the King from speaking what he had designed to their Ears: Whereupon finding himself disappointed, he omitted much of his intended Speech, but having viewed the Scaffold (which had been driven hast to serve him

1648. him down to the Block by Ropes, if that he should have resisted) and the Ax (of whose edge he was very careful) having minded one present, of touching it with his Cloak.

Being upon the Scaffold, he looked very earnestly upon the Block, and asked Colonel Hacker if it could be no higher: and then spoke thus, (directing his Speech chiefly to the Bishop and Colonel Tomlinson.)

The King's Speech upon the Scaffold.

I Shall be very little heard of any body else, I shall therefore speak a word to you here. Indeed I could have held my Peace very well, if I did not think, that holding my Peace would make some men think, that I did submit to the Guilt, as well as to the Punishment. But I think it is my Duty to God first, and then to my Country, to clear my self both as an honest man, a good King, and a good Christian. I shall begin first with my Innocency, and in truth, I think it not very needful for me to insist long upon this; For all the World knows that I did never begin a War with the Two Houses of Parliament, and I call God to Witness, unto whom I must shortly make an Account, that I did never intend to encroach upon their Privileges; They began upon me, it is the Militia they began upon: they confessed the Militia was mine, but they thought it fit to have it from me. And to be short, if any body will look to the Dates of Commissions, of their Commissions and mine, and likewise to the Declaration, he will see clearly that they began these unhappy Troubles, not I. So as for the guilt of these enormous Crimes that are laid against me, I hope that God will clear me. I will not (for I am in Charity) and God forbid that I should lay it upon the Two Houses of Parliament, there is no necessity of either, I hope they are free of this Guilt; but I believe that ill Instruments between them and me, have been the cause of all this Bloud-shed: so that as I find my self clear of this, I hope (and pray God) that they may too; yet for all this, God forbid I should be so ill a Christian, as not to say Gods Judgments are just upon me: Many times he doth pay Justice by an unjust Sentence, that is ordinary: I will say this, That unjust Sentence that I suffered to take effect, is punished by an unjust Sentence upon me: So far I have said, to shew you that I am an innocent Man. Now to shew you that I am a good Christian, I hope there is a good man that will bear me witness that I have forgiven all the World, and even those in particular that have been the chief cause of my Death, who they are, God knows, I do not desire to know, I pray God forgive them. But this is not all, my Charity must go further, I wish that they may repent, for indeed they have committed a great Sin in that particular, I pray God, with St. Stephen, that this be not laid to their Charge; and withal, that they may take the way to the Peace of this Kingdom, for my Charity commands me, not only to forgive particular men, but to endeavour to the last Gasp, the Peace of the Kingdom. So, Sirs, I do wish with all my Soul, (†I see there are some here that will carry it further) that they endeavour the Peace of the Kingdom. Sirs, I must shew you, both how you are out of the way, and put you in the way. First, you are out of the way, for certainly all the ways you ever had yet, as far as I could find by any thing, of no Conquest, certainly this is an ill way for Conquest, in my Opinion, it never just cause, and a good and just cause, either for Matter of Money, or a just Title, and there it is beyond the first Quarrel, that makes that unjust at the end, that was just at first: for if there be only matter of Conquest, then it is a great Robbery; as a Pyrate said to Alexander, That he was a great Robber, himself was but a petty Robber. And so, Sirs, I think, for the way that you are in, you are much out of the way. Now, Sirs, to put you in the way, believe it, you shall never go right, nor God will never prosper you, until you give God his due, the King his due, (that is, my Successor) and the People their due, I am as much for them as any of you. You must give God his due, by regulating rightly his Church, according to Scripture (which is now out of Order.) And to set you in a way particularly, now I cannot, but only this, a National Synod freely called, freely debating among themselves, must settle this, when every Opinion is freely heard. For the King, indeed I will not, the Laws of the Land will clearly instruct you for that; therefore, because it concerns my own particular, I only give you a touch of it. For the People, truly I desire their Liberty and Freedom as much as any body whomsoever: But I must tell you, that their Liberty and Freedom consists in having Government under those Laws, by which their Lives and their Goods may be most their own; it is not in having a share in the Government, that is nothing pertaining to them: A Subject and a Sovereign are clear different things; and therefore until you do that, I mean that you put the People into that Liberty, as I say, they will never enjoy themselves.

Sirs, it was for this that now I am come hither, for if I would have given way to an Arbitrary way for to have all Laws changed according to the Power of the Sword, I need not to have come here; and therefore I tell you (and I pray to God it be not laid to your charge) that I am the Martyr of the People. In truth Sirs, I shall not hold you any longer, I will only say this to you, that I could have desired some little time longer, because I would have a little better disgested this than I have said, and therefore I hope you will excuse me; I have delivered my Conscience, I pray God you take those courses, that are the best for the good of the Kingdom, and your Salvation.

Bishop. (Tho' your Majesties Affections may be very well known to Religion) yet it may be expected that you should say somewhat thereof for the World's satisfaction.

King. I thank you very heartily, my Lord, for that I had almost forgotten it; in truth, Sirs, my Conscience in Religion I think is very well known to all the World, and therefore I declare before you all that I die a Christian, according to the Profession of the Church of England, as I found it left me by my Father, and this honest man I think will witness it.

Then speaking to the Executioner, he said, I shall say but very short Prayers, and when I thrust out my hands ——— let that be your Sign. ———

Then he called to the Bishop for his Night-Cap, and having put it on, he said to the Executioner, Does my Hair trouble you? who desired him to put it all under his Cap, which the King did accordingly by the help of the Executioner and the Bishop: Then the King turning to the Bishop, said, I have a good Cause and a Gracious God on my side.

Bishop. There is but one Stage more, this Stage is Turbulent and Troublesome, it is a short one: but you may consider it will soon carry you a very great way: It will carry you from Earth to Heaven;

*Pointing to the Bishop.

† Observing one to write.

1648. Heaven; and there you will find a great deal of cordial joy and comfort.

King. I go from a corruptible to an incorruptible Crown, where no disturbance can be, no disturbance in the World.

Bishop. You are exchanged from a Temporary, to an Eternal Crown, a good Exchange.

The King then said to the Executioner, Is my Hair well, and took off his Cloak and his George, giving his George to the Bishop, saying, Remember.

Then he put off his Doublet, and being in his Vast-coat, he put his Cloak on again; then looking upon the Block, he said to the Executioner, You must set it fast.

Executioner. It is fast, Sir.

King. When I put my hands out this way, stretching them out—— —— Then do your Work.

After that, having said two or three words (as he stood) to himself, with hands and eyes lift up, immediately stooping down, he laid his neck upon the Block: and then the Executioner again putting his Hair under his Cap, the King (thinking he had been going to strike) said, Stay for the Sign.

Executioner. Yes, I will, and it please your Majesty.

And after a very little pause, the King stretching forth his hands, the Executioner at one blow, severed his Head from his Body; the Head being off, the Executioner held it up, and shewed it to the People, which done, it was with the Body put in a Coffin covered with black Velvet for that purpose, and conveyed into his Lodgings at White-Hall; and from thence it was carried to his House at St. James's, where his Body was Embalmed and put in a Coffin of Lead, and laid there a fortnight to be seen by the People: and on Wednesday seven-night after, his Corps Embalmed and Coffined in Lead, was delivered chiefly to the Care of four of his Servants, viz. Mr. Herbert, Capt. Anthony Mildmay, his Sewers, Capt. Preston, and John Joyner (formerly Cook to his Majesty,) who with others in Mourning, accompanied the Herse that night to Windsor, and placed it in that which was formerly the King's Bed-Chamber: whence it was next day removed into the Dean's Hall, and from thence by the Duke of Richmond, the Marquis of Hertford, the Marquis of Dorchester, and the Earl of Lindsey, conveyed to S. George's Chapel, and the Corps there Interred in the Vault, (as is supposed) of King Henry the VIII. and Queen Jane, with this Inscription upon the Coffin,

CHARLES KING OF ENGLAND,
MDCXLVIII.

Of his Personage and Disposition.

THis Unfortunate Prince was of a comely Person, a firm and vigorous Health, a Body indefatigable. He was a great Lover, and as great a Master of all Manly Exercises; and yet withal no less skilled in the Graces and Entertainments of a Court. So Temperate in his Pleasures, that he was never known guilty of any Excess. In his Devotions, Constant, Regular, and Intent. His Love to the Order, and to the Religion of the Church of England, was so eminent, that he Seal'd and Confirm'd it with his Blood; and at the same time, what he could not support with his Arms, he asserted with his Pen, beyond all contradiction. His presence of mind, in all Extremities, was seen both in the Field, and upon the Scaffold. He was the best of Husbands, and (perchance) the best of Men. His general Insight in Arts and Sciences, both Liberal and Mechanical, was wonderful; nor was any Prince better instructed in the Principles of Government. His unhappiness was, that sometimes he trusted to other mens Counsels rather than his own; and put so much power into his Enemies hands, in hope of gaining them, that he was no longer in condition to defend himself. In effect, He was too Good a Man to be a Happy Prince; and rather betrayed by his own tenderness, than subdu'd by the force of his Adversaries, as appear'd by the ill use which was made of it in several Treaties, Councils, and Battels. The Rebellion was in it self Barbarous; but the Formalities of proceeding against him, by Arraignment, Trial, Sentence and Execution, fill'd all Christendom with Indignation and Horror; and his Blood cries yet aloud for Vengeance upon the Promoters, as well as the Instruments of that Execrable Murder.

Of Persons of Note in his Time.

FOr the first Fifteen years of this King's Reign, there was little Employment for Military men at home; but there were great numbers of his Majesties Subjects in the Service of Foreign Princes and States: as Sir Charles Morgan, Sir John Burroughs, Ruthen, Lesly, Fleetwood, Douglas, Hamilton, and many other Commanders of great Renown. In the following Troubles, among several thousands of the Nobility and Gentry, that Eminently served the Crown, there were the Marquisses of Newcastle and Montross; the Earls of Lindsey, Rochester, Northampton, Bristol, Carnarvan, Lichfield; the Lords Francis Villars, Aspley, Capel, Goring, Hopton, Bellasis, Gerrard, Langdale: Sir Henry Gage, Sir Richard and Sir Bevil Grenvil, Sir Charles Lucas, Sir George Lisle; Colonel Charles Cavendish, Major-General Harry, &c. whose Names and Actions are already honourably Recorded in the Memorials of those Times. There was also Thomas Earl of Strafford, who (tho' unduely and most invidiously cut off) was not yet inferiour unto any Man of his time, either for his Faith to his Prince, or Abilities both Military and Civil. He left the Inheritance of his Vertues, as well as of his Honour and Fortune, unto his Son William, who doubled his Paternal Glories and his own, by Marrying (the worthy Daughter of two incomparable Parents) Henrietta Maria, the Daughter of James Earl of Derby, and Charlotte the Daughter of Claude Duc de la Tremoille, and Charlotte of Nassau, Daughter to William of Nassau, Prince of Orange; an Illustrious Couple; and of whom we shall speak the more in this place, because the Story hath said little of them elsewhere.

James Earl of Derby, was one of the first with his Majesty at York, after the London-Tumults; from whence he was ordered back again into Lancashire, to prepare for the King's Reception; upon a Resolution taken for the setting up of the Standard

1648. Standard Royal at Warrington. Immediately upon his return he muſter'd the County, on the Three Heaths, by Berry, Ormskirk and Preſton; where he had an appearance of at leaſt 20000. Men on each Field; intending the ſame courſe likewiſe in Cheſhire and North-Wales, (by vertue of his Commiſſion of Lieutenancy.) But in this interim, the place was changed from Warrington to Nottingham, to the great diſappointment of the King's Friends in thoſe parts; and the no leſs encouragement of his Enemies, (to ſay nothing of ſeveral Indignities (put more particularly) upon the Earl himſelf, by the contrivance and ill Will of ſome Great Ones deeply intereſſed in this Affair.) The Standard being now ſet up at Nottingham, and the Countries not coming in ſo frankly as was expected, the King by an Expreſs deſired his Lordſhip forthwith to raiſe what Men he could, and come up to him: whoſe Anſwer was, That he would do his beſt, but that the Caſe was much altered of late, a great part of the Country being reſolved now to ſtand Neuter, and others joyning with the Rebels, had already ſeized upon Manchester. This notwithſtanding, his Lordſhip, among his own Tenants, Dependents, and private Friends, raiſed three Regiments of Foot, and three Troops of Horſe, cloathed and armed them at his own charge; and then poſted to the King at Shrewsbury, for his Majeſties Orders how to diſpoſe of them. The King commanded him to return, and preſently make tryal of one ſmart aſſault upon Manchester, and whether he maſter'd the Town or no, to march up then to the Camp. Hereupon the Earl repaired to his Troops, drew up before the Town, and ſummoned it; and upon their refuſal to treat, directed an Aſſault at Four next Morning, not doubting to carry it. But that very Night he was commanded away, and in two days brought up his Three Regiments, and Three Troops to his Majeſty; which being diſpoſed of to other Officers, his Lordſhip was deſired to haſten back, and take the beſt care he could of the Country. Upon his Return, the Parliament did (now a Second time) offer his Lordſhip the largeſt terms imaginable, if he would either joyn with them, or quit the King's Service; but his Anſwer was to this effect, When I turn Traytor, I may hearken to theſe Propoſitions, but till then, let me have no more of theſe Papers, at the peril of him that brings them. By this time the Enemy had Garriſon'd Lancaſter and Preſton, and in a manner commanded the whole Country; when his Lordſhip bethought himſelf of defending his own houſe at Latham, and, altho' diveſted of his Arms and Magazine, did yet make a ſhift (with the aſſiſtance of his Friends) to cut off Three Companies at Houghton-Common, and after that, to take in Lancaſter and Preſton by ſtorm: in the former, leading on his Men himſelf with a half Pike in his hand (after one Repulſe) to the Second Aſſault, that did the Buſineſs: and Manchester had in probability followed, if both his Auxiliaries and his own Forces too, had not been call'd away in the very nick of time when he was ready for the Attempt. Soon after this, upon information that the Enemy had a deſign upon the Iſle of Man, he was ordered thither for the ſecurity of that place. And thither he went, having firſt made ſome neceſſary proviſions of Men, Monies and Ammunition, for the protection and defence of his incomparable Lady, to whoſe charge he committed his Children, and his other Engliſh Concerns: and moſt particularly, the care of his Honour, in defending the Houſe till his Majeſty might ſend Relief, which he hoped would not be long firſt. 1648.

The Counteſs of Derby being left alone in the Houſe, not as yet fortified, the Enemy look'd upon it now as their own already, little expecting from a Woman, a Stranger, and a Place ſo unprovided (as they ſuppoſed that to be) any conſiderable reſiſtance. So that a Commiſſion was preſently obtained for the reducing of it: which being made known to the Lady, ſhe furniſhed her ſelf with Men, Arms and Ammunition, with all the diligence and ſecrecy poſſible. The men being generally raw and unexperienced, ſhe cauſed them to be Liſted, and Trained under Six Captains; viz. Capt. Farrington, Charnock, Chiſenhall, Rawſthorne, Ogles, and Molineux Radcliffe, who were to receive Orders from Capt. Farmer, (as Major of the Garriſon) and he from her Ladyſhip. Matters were carried ſo private, that the Enemy was advanced within Two miles of the Houſe, not ſo much as dreaming of any other oppoſition than from her own Servants. Febr. 28th. 1644. there came to the Lady from Sir Thomas Fairfax a Trumpet, and with him a perſon of Quality, to deſire a Conference. To which the Counteſs agreed, and immediately Sir Tho. Fairfax, and ſome Gentlemen with him were admitted; the Soldiers being firſt diſpoſed of in ſuch manner as might beſt advance the appearance and opinion of their Number and Diſcipline. Their Commiſſion was to demand the delivery of the Houſe; upon which condition they offered her an honourable and ſafe Remove, with her Children, Servants, and Goods, (Arms and Cannon only excepted) to her own Houſe at Knowſley, and a Protection there, from any further moleſtation; and the one Moiety of her Lord's Eſtate in England, for the ſupport of her Self and Children. To which the Counteſs Anſwered, That ſhe was under a double Truſt; of Faith to her Husband, and Allegiance to her Soveraign; that without their leave ſhe could not give it up, and therefore deſired a Months time for her Anſwer; which being denied, her Ladyſhip told them, that ſhe hoped, they would excuſe her, if ſhe preſerved her Honour and Obedience, though in her own Ruine. Hereupon Sir Thomas Fairfax departed; and upon the Queſtion whether they ſhould proceed by Storm or Siege, he gave his opinion for the latter: Which Advice was much promoted by an Artifice of one of the Earl of Derby's Chaplains, (the Reverend and Ingenious Dr. Brideokes, now Dean of Salisbury,) whoſe Integrity and Prudence was of ſingular Service to that Heroical Lady in all her Extremities. Some Fourteen days after the former Conference, there came a peremptory Summons for a preſent ſurrender, and the Trumpet was diſpatched away with this ſhort Anſwer; That the Counteſs had not as yet forgotten what ſhe ow'd to the Church of England, to her Prince, and to her Lord; and that till ſhe had loſt either her Honour, or her Life, ſhe would defend the place. Upon this, Sir Tho. Fairfax gave order for 1648. for a formal Siege, and being himself commanded away to other service, left the management of it to Colonel Peter Egerton, and Major Morgan: the Countess on the other side, giving express Order not to fire a Gun upon the Enemy, nor to do any other Act of Hostility, until they should have made Four or Five shot at the House. 1648.

The House stands upon a Flat, being a boggy, spumous Ground. It was encompassed with a Wall of Two yards thick; without the Wall, a Mote Eight yards wide, and Two yards deep. Upon the Wall were Nine Towers, flanking one another; on each Tower six pieces of Ordnance, that play'd Three one way, and Three the other. Besides these, there was in the middle of the House a high Tower, called the Eagle Tower; and the Gate-house was also a strong and lofty Building, in the entrance to the first Court. Upon the tops of these Towers were placed the choicest Marksmen, as Deer-men, Keepers, Fowlers, and the like, who shrewdly gall'd the Enemy, and cut off several of their Officers in the Trenches.

Upon Fairfax his departure, the Enemy fell presently to work upon a Line of Circumvallation: but to disturb them in their Approaches, the Lady order'd a Sally of 200 men, commanded by Major Farmer, who, March 12. 1644. beat the Enemy from their Trenches, up to their Main-guard kill'd about 60 of them, and took some Prisoners, with the loss only of two men. Upon this, they doubled their Guards, and drew their Line at a great distance, but they were so plyed with Sallies, that it was Fourteen weeks time before they could finish it. After this, they ran a deep Trench near the Mote, where they raised a strong Battery, and planted upon it a Mortar-piece, that cast Stones and Granadoes of sixteen Inches Diameter. The first Granado fell close to the Table where the Lady, her Children, and the Officers were all at Dinner; shiver'd the Room, but no body hurt. The apprehension of these terrible Fire-balls, made them resolve upon a Sally, to attempt the taking of the Mortar-piece. Molineux Radcliffe had the Forlorn, Chisenhall the Body, and Farmer commanded the Reserve; who after half an hours sharp dispute, possess'd themselves of all their Works, nail'd and overturn'd all their Cannon, or roul'd them into the Mote, and carried off the Mortar-piece into the House, continuing Masters of their Works and Trenches that whole day; which, with their utmost pains and diligence, they laboured to fill up and destroy. During this Combat, the Countess was at her Devotions, (no less eminent for her Piety than for her Resolution) it being her constant practise to begin all these Actions with publick Prayers, and to close them with Thanksgivings. This was April 26th. the very day appointed for an Assault, and with Orders to put every Creature to the sword. It took the Enemy Five or Six days time to repair their Works; in which space they were thrice dislodged, and scattered by vigorous Sallies. These disasters gave Colonel Rigby (a malicious Enemy of the Earl of Derby's) a pretence of laying the fault upon Colonel Peter Egerton, by which means he got a Commission himself to command in Chief; and for a proof of his Generosity, he would not suffer so much as a Midwife to pass into the House to a Gentlewoman in travail. For a matter of a Fortnight he carried on his Works without much trouble, for want of Powder in the Garrison; but that defect being supplied by a Sally, the Countess proposed a fresh Assault of all their Trenches, which was accordingly agreed upon; and Rawsthorn had the Forlorn, Farmer the Battle, and Chisenhall the Reserve; who, behaving themselves with their wonted Bravery, beat the Enemy from their Works, cleared their Trenches, nailed their great Guns, and kill'd 120 men, with the loss only of Three Soldiers, and Five or Six wounded. After a Four Months Siege, and the loss of above 2000 Men, (by their own confession) Rigby sent the Countess a huffing Summons, to which she returned an Answer becoming her Dignity and Vertue.

The Earl of Derby being in the Isle of Man, and alarmed with his Ladies distress in Latham, hasted forthwith to his Majesty, to beg Relief; who gave way, that Prince Rupert should take Lancashire in his way to York, whither he was then designed. His Highness entred Lancashire at Stopford-bridge, and Rigby hearing that he had forced the Pass, rais'd the Siege from Latham, May 27th. 1644. and march'd to Bolton, (a strong Garrison of the Enemies;) where, with the addition of other Forces to 2000 of his own, he made up a Body of 2500 Foot and 500 Horse. The Prince understanding that Rigby had quitted Latham, and was fortified in Bolton, marched directly thither, and gave Order for an Assault; which his people very gallantly attempted, but were yet forced to give it off the first bout, with the loss of 200 Men, the Enemy killing the Soldiers they took upon the Walls, in cold blood, before the Princes eyes. Upon a second Assault, the Earl of Derby desired of his Highness the Command of two Companies of his own old Foot, and the Honour of the Forlorn; which, upon his importunity, was granted him. All things being ready for a general Assault, the Town was, in less than half an hour, entred upon each Quarter; the Earl of Derby himself being the first man that entred it. This was May 28th. 1644. Rigby made his escape, but left 2000 of his men behind him, and was himself laid aside. There was one Bootle a Captain in the Town, and formerly a Porter in Latham, who upon leaving the House, sware voluntarily, That he would never bear Arms against the King. This Fellow being in the heat of the Storm encompassed with Soldiers, and seeing his Lord, begg'd Quarter of him; who gave him this Answer, I will not kill thee my self, and I cannot save thee from others. This mans death was afterwards falsly and villainously charged upon the Earl of Derby, by Bradshaw (Brother to the President) and Rigby at his Tryal. The Colours that were taken, the Prince sent to the Countess of Derby, by Sir Richard Crane, who received them as a singular Honour, and caused them to be hung up, as happy Remembrances of God's Mercy, and his Highness's Generosity towards her.

The Prince's next work was the reducing of Liverpool, and from thence he went to Latham, where he refreshed himself and his men for three or four days, and was entertained by the Lord and Lady of the place, answerably to his Illustrious Quality and Merit. The Prince, before his departure, give directions for the repairing and fortifying 1648. tifying of the Houſe, and at the requeſt of the Counteſs of Derby, gave the Government of it to Captain Rawſthorn, whom he made Colonel of a Foot Regiment, and two Troops of Horſe, for its defence, by whom the Place was bravely defended full two Years in a ſecond Siege; and, at length, by the King's Order delivered up; having coſt the Enemy at leaſt 6000 Men, and the Garriſon about 400, being one of the laſt places that held out for his Majeſty in England.

After all theſe great things done and ſuffer'd by the Noble Earl, and his admirable Lady, who were at this time in the Iſle of Man, the ſaddeſt, and moſt glorious part of their Story is yet behind: When their Children were perfidiouſly ſeized, and made cloſe Priſoners, and the Earl tempted with the promiſe of a peaceable Enjoyment of his Family, and Freedom at his own Houſe, and the one Moiety of his whole Eſtate, if he would deliver up the Iſle of Man; what could be more Honourable than his magnanimous Refuſal (even when the Cauſe it ſelf was given for loſt,) ſaying, That he would never redeem his Children by his Diſloyalty. When he came afterwards from the Iſle of Man, into Lancaſhire, by command to attend the King, (Charles the Second,) then on his march from Scotland to Worceſter, upon Aſſurance that the Presbyterians would joyn with the Royaliſts, in order to his Majeſties Reſtauration; and when he found their Miniſters obſtinately to oppoſe any Conjunction, unleſs he would take the Covenant; what could be more brave or pertinent, than his final Determination, which he delivered to them in theſe Terms, If I periſh, I periſh; but if my Maſter periſh, the Blood of another Prince, and all the enſuing Miſeries of this Nation will lie at your Doors.

This perfidious diſappointment of theirs, was it that put him upon his next Misfortune, his Engagement in Wigan-Lane, where with 600 Horſe he maintained a Fight for two Hours againſt 3000 Horſe and Foot, in a place of much diſadvantage, in which Encounter he received ſeven Shot on his Breſt-Plate, thirteen Cuts upon his Bever over a Steel-Cap, five or ſix Wounds upon his Arms and Shoulders, and had two Horſes killed under him. And yet through all theſe Difficulties he made out his way to the King at Worceſter, and took his part too of that unhappy Battel. Upon the Rout he was taken Priſoner by Major Edge, upon Condition of Quarter; and afterwards murdered by a pretended Court of Juſtice, contrary to the Laws of Arms and Nations. All theſe Outrages and Wrongs, he ſuffer'd with a moſt Religious Conſtancy of Mind, and his deportment ſtill the ſame; even upon the very Scaffold, and at the Block it ſelf. Die I muſt (ſays he) and I thank God I am ready for it. Death would now be my Choice, had I the whole World in competition with it. I leave nothing behind me, which I care much for, but my King, my Wife, Children, and Friends, whom (I truſt) the Never-failing Mercies of my God will provide for. I beſeech God ſhew mercy to thoſe who neither had Mercy nor Juſtice for me.

This upon the Scaffold; and then a while after, juſt before he made his Addreſs to the Block; (riſing from his Prayers) My Soul (ſays he) is now at reſt, and ſo ſhall my Body be immediately. The Lord bleſs my King, and Reſtore him to his Rights in this Kingdom; and the Lord bleſs this Kingdom, and reſtore them to their Rights in their King———

———I die for the King, the Laws of the Land, and the Proteſtant Religion, &c. In fine, never any Man had a more generous mixture in him of the Courage of a Roman, with the Faith and Reſignation of a Chriſtian. 1648.

Theſe Calamities joyned with the Infinite Affection of his ſurviving Lady, would have broken any other Heart than hers, that was ſupported by a matchleſs, and in Truth, by a miraculous Vertue. But ſhe (it ſeems) was ſtill reſerved for further Tryals, both of her Honour and Patience. Upon the Parliament's demand of the Iſle of Man; ſhe refuſed to deliver it without Licenſe from his Majeſty; And that very Night, a Wretch that had eaten of her Lord's Bread from a Child, and been employed as a ſervant in places of great Truſt and Advantage, having corrupted and prepared the Iſlanders for the Deſign, ſeizes his Lady and her Children, (together with the Iſland) and ſhe was kept a Priſoner without any other Relief, than what came from the Charity of her impoveriſhed Friends. And yet againſt theſe Sufferings too, ſhe ſtill held out, until ſhe ſaw the happy and much deſired Reſtauration of his Sacred Majeſty Charles the Second; and afterwards died March 22, 1664. in her Joyncure-Houſe, at Knowſley in Lancaſhire.

The moſt Famous Men of the Clergy for Learning in his time, were Davenport Biſhop of Saliſbury, Andrews Biſhop of Winchester, Morton Biſhop of Durham, Laud Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Hall Biſhop of Norwich, Prideaux Biſhop of Worceſter, Uſher Archbiſhop of Armagh, and his Succeſſor Bramhall, Sanderſon Biſhop of Lincoln, Mr. Chillingworth of Trinity College in Oxford, and Dr. Hammond one of the Canons of Chriſt-Church in the ſame Univerſity, and Mr. Mead of Chriſt's College in Cambridge, and Mr. Hales of Eaton. But others there were of great Eminence; as Lucius Lord Faulkland, Secretary of State, a great Maſter of all ſorts of Learning; Sir Henry Spelman, Sir Edward Coke likewiſe, that famous Common Lawyer, and Mr. John Selden of the ſame Profeſſion, a moſt renowned Antiquary, and Thomas Hobbs of Malmsbury, that excellent Mathematician and Philoſopher, all flouriſhed in his Reign.

Nor may we omit the Poets then famous, which excell'd or equall'd all that went before, and ſhall come after; ſuch as were Mr. Benjamin Johnſon, Mr. Edmund Waller, Mr. Thomas Carew, Sir John Suckling, Mr. Thomas Randolph, Mr. Thomas Carwright, Mr. Abraham Cowley, and Sir William Davenant. The firſt whereof by his profound Learning and Judgment, ſhewed a Poet was to be as well made as born: And the latter, tho' he wanted Learning, made as high and noble Flights as Fancy could advance without it.

THE

The First Thirteen YEARS OF THE REIGN OF King Charles the II.

1648. KING Charles the First being deprived of Life on the Thirtieth of January One thousand six hundred forty and eight, in the manner before mentioned, his Eldest Son Prince CHARLES, by unquestionable Right Succeeded to the Crowns of England, Scotland, and Ireland, in the Eighteenth Year of his Age. Proclamation and Coronation the usual Ceremonies attending Royal Successions could not now have their due course, nor are they in this Kingdom necessary Circumstances of the Monarchy; for by our Law (which admits of no Interregnum,) the Successor to the Crown has all the Royal Power from the First moment after the Death of his Predecessor. The Ruling part of the House of Commons who Usurped the Government with Violence on the Person of the late King (as hath been related) knew they could not be secure if they retired there; so that immediately thereupon they published an Act even against Kingly Government it self, expelling therein,

An Act against proclaiming the King.

That whereas several protests might be made in this Crown, and Title to the Kingly Office, to the great hazard of the Publick Peace. Be it Enacted and Ordained by this present Parliament, and by the Authority of the same, that no person whatsoever do presume to Proclaim, Declare, Publish, or any way to promote Charles Stuart (Son of the late King CHARLES) commonly called the Prince of WALES, or any other Person to be King, or Chief Magistrate of England, or Ireland, or of any Dominions belonging to them, by colour of Inheritance, Succession, Election, or any other Title whatsoever, without the free Consent of the People in Parliament first had and signified by a particular Act or Ordinance for that purpose, any Law, Statute, Usage, or Custome to the contrary notwithstanding; and whosoever shall contrary to this Act Proclaim, &c. the said Charles Stuart, shall be deemed and adjudged a Traytor, and suffer accordingly. 1648.

Yet this Inhibition did not deter many Loyal Subjects from doing their Duty; and on the Second of February this year, the following Proclamation was Printed and scattered about the Streets of London.

A Proclamation proclaiming Prince Charles to be King of England.

We the Noblemen, Judges, Knights, Lawyers, Gentlemen, Free-holders, Marchants, Citizens, Yeomen, Seamen, and other Freemen of England, do according to our Allegiance and Covenant by these presents, heartily, joyfully, and unanimously acknowledge and Proclaim the Illustrious CHARLES Prince of WALES, next Heir of the Blood Royal to his Father King CHARLES (whose late Wicked and Traiterous Murder we do from our Souls abominate, and all Parties and Consenters thereunto) unto by Hereditary Birth-right, and lawful Succession, rightful, and undoubted King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging, and that we will faithfully, constantly, and entirely on our several Places and Callings, Defend and Maintain his Royal Person, Crown and Dignity, with our Estates, Lives, and last drop of our Blood, against all Opposers thereof, whom we do hereby declare to be Traytors and Enemies to his Majesty and his Kingdoms. In Testimony whereof, we have caused these to be published and proclaimed throughout all Counties and Corporations of this Realm, the First day of February, in the First year of His Majesty's Reign.

God save King Charles the Second.

Coronation which is the next Solemnity, the exclusion of the King by the malice of his Enemies made impossible at this time to be celebrated. The Army had been before modelled 1648. suitable to these Designs of changing the Monarchy of England and Ireland to a Common-wealth; (for neither this alteration, nor the death of the late King could have been effected without a Military assistance) which was first discovered when Colonel Pride secluded, or terrified from sitting, near Two hundred of the Members of the Commons House of Parliament, being those who had on the Fifth of December before, by Vote approved of the late King's Concessions for a Peace at the Isle of Wight, and those that remained after this violation, complied so far with the Army herein, that after a seeming dislike of their Proceedings, they resolved and decreed, never to readmit them, and such others who had given their Negatives to the said Concessions, were likewise Ordered not to sit in Parliament, till they had entred their dissent to them.

Monarchy and the House of Lords declared useless by the Commons

The House of Peers continued yet sitting, and in regard the Commissions of the Judges were determined by the King's Death, they sent to the Commons for a Conference about that and other matters relating to the setling of the Government, but they without returning an Answer, declared the Kingly Office to be unnecessary and burthensome, and that the Lords House was dangerous and useless, and therefore to be laid aside; but that they might not be totally excluded from Government, they declared that they might be capable of Elections into the House of Commons, of which afterwards Three of them only accepted, namely the Earls of Pembroke and Salisbury, and the Lord Howard of Escrick; but the Peers in general very much resented these Indignities put upon them by a small part of the House of Commons, and in a Protestation by them published in the name of all the Peers and Barons of the Realm,

The Protestation of the House of Lords against the Proceedings of the Commons.

'They asserted their own Privileges, and the 'Fundamental Laws of the Nation, and disclaimed and protested against all Acts, Votes, Orders or Ordinances of the said Members of the 'Commons-House, for erecting of new Courts 'of Justice, to Try or Execute the King, or any 'Peer or Subject of this Realm, for altering the 'Government, Laws, Great Seal, Ancient Forms 'of Writs, or legal Process, raising new Forces, 'and imposing new Taxes, or Oaths, granting 'Commissions, or making Officers; as likewise 'against the Traiterous Murdering of the late 'King, and the dis-inheriting of his Son the 'Prince of Wales, and particularly against that 'Insolent and Frantick Vote (as they called it) of 'February the Sixth, concerning their abolishing 'the House of Peers as useless and dangerous, all 'which Acts, Votes, and Orders, they declared 'to be not only illegal, and therefore void, but 'likewise detestable and destructive to the Rights 'and Beings of Parliaments, the Fundamental 'Laws of the Realm, and the Lives, Liberties, 'and Properties of the People.

This made little Impression upon the Commons, and to prevent the assembling of the Lords, the Army by their appointment or connivance, set a Guard upon the Doors of their House; and in further prosecution of their former Votes against Monarchy, they formed and passed an Act for the Exheredation of the Royal Line, the Abolishment of Monarchy in this Kingdom, and the setting up of a Common-wealth; which they ordered to be Published and proclaimed in all parts of the Kingdom.

1648. An Act for the abolishing of Kingly Government.

Alderman Reynardson, the then Lord Mayor of London, a person of great Integrity and Loyalty, refused to publish this Act in London, and was therefore discharged from his Office, and with Three of the Aldermen that were of his Judgment committed Prisoners to the Tower of London, and one Andrews was by a Common-Hall chosen in his place, who with Pennington, Atkins, Wollaston, Ireton, Edmonds, and Pack, then Aldermen of London, and some others, Proclaimed this exorbitant Act in several places of the City. But this great Alteration so much amused the generality of the People, that the Parliament thought fit to give them some satisfaction, which was endeavoured by a Declaration, to shew the Reasons of their Proceedings; wherein many plausible Pretences were exhibited, the chiefest whereof imported, A Promise of deliverance from the Bondage introduced by the Norman Conquests, and of maintaining the Ancient Laws (which they extolled for their Excellency and Equality) adding, That they might well consist with the present Government of a Republick upon some easie alterations of Form only, leaving the substance entire, and reforming the abuses thereof. They promised likewise, The establishment of a firm and safe Peace, the advancement of the true Protestant Religion, and the liberal maintenance of a Godly Ministery; the setling of Treaties and Alliances with Forreign Princes and States, the encouragement of Manufactures for the increase and flourishing of Trade, and the maintenance of the Poor in all parts of the Land.

Alderman Reynardson the then Lord Mayor committed to the Tower. Andrews chosen in his place.

A Declaration for justifying their proceedings.

About the time of publishing this Declaration, to compleat the Model of their Government, they abolished all the Ancient Forms of Soveraignty, in the Style and Title of Writs, Commissions, and other publick Instruments, and ordered for the future all of them to be issued, In the Names of the Keepers of the Liberties of England by Authority of Parliament; and likewise they caused the Old Great Seal to be broken, and a New one to be made, having on one side a Red Cross and Harp, as the Arms of England and Ireland, with this Inscription, THE GREAT SEAL OF ENGLAND, and on the other the Picture of the House of Commons with these words, viz. IN THE FIRST YEAR OF FREEDOM BY GOD'S BLESSING RESTORED, 1648. And at another Ensign of their Dominion, they appointed that all the Money which from that time was to be coyned, should, instead of the King's Impression, bear the Cross and Harp, with this Motto, GOD WITH US; Those Clauses in the First of Queen Elizabeth, and the Third of King James, which adjoyned the taking the Oaths of Supremacy and allegiance to the Kings and their Successors, were repealed by them, and a New Oath was framed to be tendered to all that were to be put into a place of publick Trust, or made Freemen of Corporations; the Ancient Judicial and Legislative Power of the King, and both Houses of Parliament,

The Style of publick Writings, the Great Seal and the Stamp of Coyn altered.

1648. A Council of State Erected.

ment, they assumed to themselves; but the Executive part of Government, they committed to a Council of State erected by Act of Parliament, which consisted of Forty Persons of the Chiefs of the Army, and others of desperate Fortunes of the most Active in these Alterations.

The Parliament of Scotland did by their Commissioners protest against these Actings in England, and particularly they disclaimed the proceedings against the late King, but the New English States resolutely answer'd,

That they of Scotland were at liberty to act in their own affairs, but were not to limit or impose upon others, with many extravagant expressions to justifie their Actings; but in the close they invited them to a resemblance with themselves, saying, That if Scotland thought fit to vindicate their own Freedom and Liberty, they should be ready to afford them all neighbourly assistance.

Before this Answer could arrive in Scotland, the Scots had taken other Resolutions; for on the Third of February in this year, the King was proclaimed at the Cross at Edenburgh; The Chancellor of Scotland dictating to Lyon King at Arms, the Words of the Proclamation as followeth:

The Proclamation for proclaiming the King in Scotland.

The Estates of Parliament presently convented in this Second Session of this Second Triennial Parliament, by vertue of an Act of the Committee of Estates, who had Power and Authority from the last Parliament, for convening the Parliament, Considering, that forasmuch as the King's Majesty, who lately Reigned, is contrary to the Dissent and Protestation of this Kingdom, removed by a violent Death; and that by the Lord's Blessing, there is left unto us a Righteous Heir and Lawful Successor, Charles, Prince of Scotland and Wales, now King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland; We the Estates of the Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland, do therefore most unanimously and cheerfully in recognition and acknowledgement of his just Right, Title and Succession to the Crown of these Kingdoms, hereby proclaim and declare to all the World, That the said Lord and Prince Charles, is by the Providence of God, and by the lawful Right of undoubted Succession, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, whom all the Subjects of this Kingdom are bound humbly and faithfully to obey, maintain and defend, according to the National Covenant, and the solemn League and Covenant betwixt the Two Kingdoms, with their Lives and Goods against all deadly Enemies, as their only Righteous Sovereign Lord and King. And because his Majesty is bound by the Laws of God, and the Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, to Rule in Righteousness and Equity, to the Honour of God, the Good of Religion, and the Wealth of his People: It is hereby declared, That before he be admitted to the Exercise of his Royal Power, he shall give satisfaction to the Kingdom in those things that concern the Security of Religion, the Union betwixt the Kingdoms, and the Good and Peace of this Kingdom, according to the National Covenant, and the Solemn League and Covenant; for which end we are resolved with all possible expedition, to make our humble and earnest addresses to his Majesty; for the Testification of all which, We the Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland, publish this our Acknowledgement of his just Rights, Title and Succession to the Crown of these Kingdoms, at the Market-Cross at Edenburgh, with all usual Solemnities in like cases; and ordain his Royal Name, Portraict and Seal to be used in the publick Writings and Judicatories of this Kingdom, and in the Mint House, as was usually done to his Royal Predecessors; and command this Act to be proclaimed at all the Market-Crosses of the Royal Burghs, and to be Printed, that none may pretend Ignorance.

The Scotch Commissioners here, were about this time call'd home, but just at their departure, they sent an Expostulatory Declaration to the sitting Members of our Parliament, wherein they put them in mind of all their Vows, Oaths, and Protestations for the maintenance of the King's Person and just Rights; and upbraided to them their shameful abjuration and infringement of them by what they had lately acted.

The Scots Commissioners send the Parliament an Expostulatory Declaration.

This was so ill received by the Parliament, that they imprisoned the Messenger that brought it, and voted the Paper scandalous and seditious, and all such Persons Traytors as should joyn with, or adhere to the Subscribers; they also sent after the Commissioners, and secured them till a Copy of the Paper was sent into Scotland, to know if the Parliament and Estates there would own the same, upon which a Messenger was sent from Scotland to our States to justifie what their Commissioners had done, and to complain of the Imprisonment of them, as a thing contrary to the Law of Nations, and thereupon the Commissioners were released and returned home: but these Proceedings on either side increased the Distrust and Jealousies of each other.

They are stop'd in their journey home, and secur'd.

They are justified by a Message sent from the Estates of Scotland.

They are released.

In the Summer of this year, several Loyal Persons insuccessfully in many places attempted by Arms to free the last King from great oppression and imminent danger, under which he then lay, as was shewed in the History of that time; of which number the Duke of Hamilton, the Earls of Holland and Norwich, the Lord Capel, and Sir John Owen were about the latter end of February, or the beginning of March following, tried and condemned by a High Court of Justice erected for that purpose, (a Copy of that fatal Original made for the destruction of the late King) of which the Duke of Hamilton, and the Earl of Holland, and the Lord Capel were Executed the 9th of March; but the Earl of Norwich and Sir John Owen were pardoned: The Earl of Norwich upon an equal division of the House of Parliament in a Vote for his Life, was saved by the casting Voice of Lenthal the Speaker; but Sir John Owen had on his behalf the suffrage of many more Voices than those against him, which was reported to be done at that time in a kind of popular generosity; for that the Noblemen had all great intercession made for them by those of their Allies (in favour with some Grandees in power;) but Sir John Owen a Commoner coming from a remote part, had none that interceeded on his behalf.

Duke Hamilton, Earl of Holland, Lord Capel, are tried by a High Court of Justice.

The Earl of Norwich and Sir John Owen Pardoned.

Duke

1648. The Substance of Duke Hamilton's Speech before his Execution.

Duke Hamilton who firſt came upon the Scaffold, in his Speech declared his Affection to this Kingdom, and the Reaſon of his coming into England with an Army, that is to ſay, his being commanded thereunto, by the peremptory Commands of the Parliament of his own Country, which he had diſobeyed, he had ſuffered the ſame penalty he was to ſuffer here for obeying. He ſaid many things for the vindication of himſelf from the imputation of having been inconſtant in his Religion, or falſe and unfaithful in his Actions towards the King his Maſter; he ſeemed alſo to indicate a readineſs to ſerve them in what they ſo much deſired of him: namely, the diſcovery of thoſe who were the Inviters of him in, ſo that his Life might have been ſpared; with other things which concerned his condition as a dying man.

Of the Earl of Holland.

The next that came after him was the Earl of Holland, who touch'd upon the Honour of his Family, and the Nobleneſs of his Education, profeſt his ſincere and conſtant adherence to the true Proteſtant Religion, juſtified himſelf as to the matter for which he was condemned, alledging his defection from the Parliament, not to have been out of any ill deſign againſt the State or Kingdom, or any abjuration from his firſt Principles, which led him faithfully to ſerve the Parliament, whoſe Service he ſhould not have deſerted, had not the Changes and Alterations among them carried them beyond what was Reaſonable, or what perhaps they themſelves at firſt intended. He prayed God to bleſs this Kingdom, and to ſettle it in the Ancient way of Government by the King, Lords, and Commons, and wiſh'd the preſent Change might not bring confuſion upon it; he wiſh'd that the King's Poſterity might be look'd upon, and owned by the People, and re-eſtabliſht in their Native Rights without Blood-ſhed, that his Blood might be the laſt that might be ſpilt, and concluded, as he was Chancellor of Cambridge, with his Prayers to God for a Bleſſing upon that Univerſity.

The Subſtance of the Lord Capel's Speech.

The Laſt of the Three that ſuffered, was the Lord Capel, who having made a very able and ſubſtantial defence for himſelf, both from the ancient Laws and Privileges of the Nation, and from their own Acts and Conſults, (though all in vain) behaved himſelf at his death, like what he had ſhewed himſelf all along to be, in his reſolute acting for the King's Service, a Perſon of a high Spirit, and Heroick Fortitude, and delivered what he had to ſay, with a fearleſs and undaunted Deportment, wherein after an ample Account of his Religion, profeſſing his hearty Zeal and Devotion to the true Proteſtant Religion, as it was eſtabliſhed in the Church of England, he took the liberty to urge the unjuſtneſs of his Execution, as contrary to the Law of Arms, to Honour, and the word given him at his rendering of himſelf, againſt the Juſtice of the known Laws of the Land, and for no other cauſe, than his maintaining the Fifth Commandment: he expreſt much trouble and repentance, for having been one of thoſe that gave their Vote to the Bill of Attainder againſt the Earl of Strafford, and manifeſted to the World the high Opinion, and venerable Remembrance he had of the late King's Tranſcendent Vertue, Nobleneſs of Mind, and Ability of Parts: Next he prayed heartily for the King that now is, for his [illegible] reſtauration, long Life, and continued [illegible] recommending to the People the hopes [illegible] ſo certain in him of a moſt accompliſht [illegible] and moſt excellent Prince, from the ſeveral [illegible] experience he had of the greatneſs of his [illegible] Senſe and Underſtanding, the Honour of his Nature, and the Generoſity of his Inclinations; and ſo ſhut up all which what they, all Three [illegible] were condemned to, viz. a chearful readineſs to forgive his Enemies, and thoſe that had been the occaſion of bringing him to that place.

Several others tried and executed.

The Blood of theſe Noblemen did not ſatiate [illegible] that called the Execution of it; for ſome others were cut off about the ſame time for the like offences though not by the ſame manner of Tryal, as Lieutenant-Colonel Morrice, and Colonel Blackborne, who was hanged and quartered at York by a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer for the ſurprizing of Pomfret; one Beaumont a Miniſter was hanged at Pontfract, by Sentence of a Court Marſhal; and Major Munday was ſhot to death at Lancaſter by the like Sentence. Colonel Lanborn, Peyer, and Powel, Three worthy endeavourers in the King's Service in Wales, were alſo by a Court Marſhal ſentenced to caſt Lots for their Lives, and the fatal chance falling on Peyer, he was ſhot to death in Covent-Garden.

Judge [illegible] and Sir J. Stowel tried at the King's Bench Bar.

Sir John Stowel, and Mr. Daniel Jenkins (a Judge formerly in Wales) had better fortune for being both Arraigned at the King's Bench Bar as Traytors againſt the Government, for their Loyalty to the King, though they never owned the Juriſdiction of the Court, the Judges would not give Sentence againſt them, nevertheleſs their Eſtates were ſeized, and the latter of the Two was long Impriſoned.

The Meſſengers ſent from the Scots to the King at the Hague, are driven back by Storm.

The Parliament of Scotland had ſent Two Gentlemen to acquaint the King, being then at the Hague in Holland, with their proceedings on his behalf, who, after being long at Sea, were beaten back by contrary Winds, ſo that he had no publick notification of what was done there, though he wanted not private advertiſement of it: they reſolved to invite him to that Kingdom, and were in preparation of Propoſitions to be ſent to him in order thereunto, but they were ſo much diverted by ſeveral diſorders in the Country, that the Progreſs in them was very ſlow.

A riſing for the King in the North of Scotland.

Middleton and Monro, two Major-Generals together with the Lord Kinnaird, Gordon, and thoſe of the Clan of Makenzy, being jealous that the Covenanters (for ſo they called the Scots Parliament) would impoſe ſo much upon the King, that he could not with honour and ſafety yield to them, drew many Forces together in the North of Scotland, and ſeized on the Town of Inverneſs in the King's name, expecting many others to come in to them, intending ſo to moderate the Counſels of the Eſtates at Edenburgh, that the King might be admitted to his Government without any prejudicious conditions. This riſing in the North was not ſo privately managed, but the South Parliament had Advice of it ſome time before it was put in Execution, and they thereupon made Levies of about 6000 Horſe and Foot upon other pretences, but upon the firſt Alarm, they diſpatch'd a good part towards 1648. wards them under the Colonels Ker and Straughan, who marched with ſo much expedition, that they prevented any conſiderable conjunction of Forces, and diſperſed thoſe that they had got together.

They are ſuppreſt by Ker and Straughan.

This breach in Scotland, and the ſuppreſſion of it, made the Governors at Weſtminſter believe it not unſeaſonable to make ſome Overtures to the Eſtates at Edenburgh, to tempt them to a breach with the King, with an Offer of their utmoſt aſſiſtance againſt him and all his Adherents; but they could not prevail.

The Reigning Faction in England tempt the Scots to a breach with the King.

1649. The King being now at the Hague, had intelligence from time to time of the Counſels of Scotland, and reſolved to go into France, that from thence he might more eaſily paſs to ſome part of his own Dominions to receive their Commiſſioners: In proſecution of which Intentions he left Holland, and came to St. Germains near Paris, where the Queen his Mother then was, and all the way as he paſſed both through the Cities of the United Provinces, and the Spaniſh Netherlands, he was very ſplendidly entertained. The Duke of Lorain met him on the Frontiers of France, and at Campeigne the King of France received him, and accompanied him to Paris, and from thence to St. Germains, where he ſtaid a few Months together with the Duke of York, who repaired to him out of Holland.

The King removes from Holland into France.

In the midſt of this proſperous Fortune of the eſtabliſh'd new Common-wealth, there was ſo great a diſturbance made by a Party in the Army, called Levellers, that if it had not been ſuppreſſed, all their Buildings had been tumbled down. For the better underſtanding whereof, we ſhall ſhew how this Name came to be applyed to them, and then briefly ſet down the Diſorders that happened.

The Original of the Levellers diſperſion and with their defeature.

They were formed out of thoſe Agitators mentioned in the Reign of the late King, and were termed Levellers upon a pretended Principle which they eſpouſed, to endeavour to obtain ſuch an equal Righteous diſtribution of Juſtice in Government to all degrees of People, that it ſhould not be in the Power of the higheſt to oppreſs their inferiors; nor ſhould the meaneſt of the People be out of capacity to arrive at the greateſt Office and Dignity in the State. This was very pleaſing to the Inferior Officers of the Army and Soldiers, but thoſe that influenced them were a more conſiderable ſort of Perſons, who to gain Power and Authority to themſelves, found out Means by heightning this Diſtemper, to arraign and diſgrace the Adminiſtration of others, and to be pleaſed with nothing that was done by the Parliament, or the Chiefs of the Army, and now the Infection was ſpread among ſome of the Superior Rank of Officers, who in a jealouſie of the aſpiring Greatneſs of Cromwel and Ireton (tho' they appeared not openly themſelves) ſpirited the private Soldiers to begin a defection in the Army upon theſe Levelling Principles.

Theſe, to countenance their Proceedings, inſinuated, that there appeared a general ſelf-ſeeking in the Magiſtrates, and chief Officers of the Army, whereby that Reformation for which they contended, was not throughly purſued as it ought, either in Spirituals or Civils. Cromwel endeavoured to ſuppreſs this in the beginning, and cauſed Orders to be iſſued to forbid their private Meetings; but not ſucceeding herein, ſeveral of the Soldiers were ſeized on, and tried and condemn'd at a Court Martial, and one Lockier a buſie Actor in the buſineſs, was ſhot to Death, and 11 Regiments were immediately by Lot drawn out to be ſent into Ireland. But this did rather incenſe then allay the heat; for many of the Soldiers were ſo practiſed with, as to be much diſcontented with their being allotted to the Iriſh Service; alledging, It was a contrivance to divide them; That they were not Mercenaries, but Perſons that took Arms upon Righteous Principles of Reformation of Government, and that till they ſaw ſuch a ſettlement eſtabliſhed as might anſwer the ends of their firſt Engagements, they would not divide. And hereupon many Regiments revolted from their Officers, and if ſome Great Ones that ſeemed to approve their Actions, had not betrayed them, the Parliaments Authority then, and the following Greatneſs of Cromwel had been ſubverted and prevented. 1649.

At Burford five thouſand Horſe and Foot of theſe Diſſenters were drawn together, and ſtaid there as they pretended, in order to a Treaty under the Faith of Cromwel's Word, that no part of the Army ſhould draw nearer to them, than the diſtance of ten Miles, whereby they were leſs vigilant; and in this their ſecurity, Colonel Reynolds (one accuſed by them to have diſcovered their Counſels) fell in upon them with a greater Body than they had, and quickly routed them, taking Nine hundred Horſe, and Four hundred Foot Priſoners, whereof one Thompſon, and two or three principal Leaders were immediately ſhot to Death, and the reſt by Cromwel's freeneſs or mediation, Pardoned. And after this, great Preparations were made to be ſent into Ireland.

But theſe Commotions gave the Marquis of Ormond, and thoſe that acted for the King under his Lieutenancy in that Kingdom, a fair opportunity of reducing it to the Obedience of the Crown, wherein he was ſo proſperous, that the King had ſome thoughts of going thither, and a Peace was made with the moſt conſiderable of the Confederate Iriſh; but contrary to their Faith and Promiſe, the Pope's Nuncio by the interpoſitions of ſome of the Popiſh Clergy, prevailed with the Ulſter-Iriſh, under Owen Roe Oneal; to refuſe to come under the King's Authority.

The Marquis of Ormond's diligent acting for the King's Service in Ireland.

Nevertheleſs, the Lord-Lieutenant with the conjunction of the ſeveral Forces under the Marquis of Clanrickard, Preſident of Connaught, the Earl of Caſtlehaven, the Lord Inchequin, Preſident of Munſter, the Lord Moor, Colonel Mark Trevor, Sir Thomas Armſtrong, the Lord Taaf, and General Preſton, had made up a very powerful Army, and had reduced to the King's Authority, all the Cities and Towns in the Kingdom, except Dublin and London-derry; and London-derry was beſieged by Sir Robert Steward, and Colonel Audley Mervin, with a good Brigade; and Owen Roe, likewiſe was by Colonel Trevor with his Army a little before defeated. The Lord-Lieutenant being thus ſtrengthened, determined with the whole or the greateſt part of his Army to march before Dublin, and came before the middle of June, to a Village called Finglaſs, about two 1649. two Miles distant from it on the North-side of the River.

Dublin besieged by the Marquis of Ormond.

Colonel Michael Jones was Governour of this City of Dublin, a Man of Courage, but bred to the Laws; and as he was a Person of great Capacity, (by the Experience he had gained in the active Wars of Ireland) he acquired a very good Knowledge and Conduct in Matters of War. The Lord-Lieutenant attempted by all fair Means he could to gain him to a compliance with the King's Affairs, but could not effect it. After a day or two, Skirmishes were very frequent between the Dublin Horse, and those of the Army; in which those of the City always prevailed, whereby they were much encouraged, and in one of those Skirmishes Sir Walter Dungar a valiant Commander of the Army was taken Prisoner, whilst they lay at Finglas: But the Lord-Lieutenant perceiving the station of the Army, as it then lay, inconvenient for a close Siege, drew it over the River (which was every where fordable above the Bridge) to a place called Ramines, and whilst he lay there, it was resolved at a Council of War, to raise some Fortifications at a place called Baggetrath, near the College of Dublin (where there was an old Castle moted) thereby to prevent any Relief to the besieged by Sea. This Design much alarm'd those in the City, and the Governour was resolved to do what he could to hinder the Fortification, and for that purpose he resolved to give Orders for some Companies to sally out to beat them from the place. The Garrison had been reinforced a little before with a Regiment of Horse, under Colonel Reynolds, and two Regiments of Foot, under the Colonels Venables and Hunks, and many other Parties of Horse and Foot, from the Garrisons that surrendred in several Parts of the Realm, which additional Forces, were to the number in all of Three thousand or thereabouts; besides that, with those from England, good store of Provisions of all sorts were put into the City, so that the Soldiers were in good Heart: The Governour was very private in his Design of the Sally, which was in this manner performed.

The Night before, he appointed all the Horse and Foot, except such as were employed on the necessary Guards, (which were to the number of 5000.) to be drawn together very early in the Morning, in the College-Green and Grounds adjacent, within the Works, without sound of Trumpet, or beat of Drum, and with their Colours and Arms trailed; and the Ports were not to be opened till the Forces were all at their Rendezvous, and Centinels were set all along the Line to prevent the going over of any to give Intelligence. After all things were thus set in Order, about Eight in the Morning, the Forlorn-Hope march'd out to Baggetrath, consisting of an Hundred Fire-locks, and after these, a Party of Horse followed, commanded by Colonel Theophilus Jones (the Governor's Brother) and Major Meredeth, and all the rest of the Troops and Companies went after, as fast as they could march with Order and Convenience. There was a Ditch made cross the High-way, betwixt the Town and the Castle to interrupt the Passage to it, which was guarded by a Party of Soldiers, but these were presently dispersed by the Forlorn-Hope of Fire-locks, who march'd immediately up to the Castle, and took it by Storm, putting all that were in it to the Sword. Encouraged by this Success, and some more force being come up, they advanced towards the main Camp, betwixt which, and the Castle at Baggetrath, they were met with by Sir William Vaughan, with a Party of Horse, who made some considerable resistance (and indeed all that was made;) but he was slain, and all his Party routed; and from thence they followed on to the main Camp, which was by this time in so much confusion, that they made no resistance but were discomfited, notwithstanding that the Forces from Dublin marched only in single Troops and Companies, having not time to draw together in Battalia. My Lord-Lieutenant endeavoured to make a stand, but being not able to prevail, he with most of the Horse retreated, and march'd off; some of the Foot that were got within the Walls of Ramines, made Conditions for their Lives, and had Quarter.

The Siege raised by Jones, with the utter defeat of the Marquis's Army.

This easie Victory was much admired, but the occasion thereof was said to proceed from the great Animosities amongst the English and Irish, in the Lieutenant's Army, whereby ensued a manifest carelessness and indifferency amongst many of them; and partly by a Consternation among the common Soldiers. Moreover, Inchiquin marched from them, a Fortnight after they came before the place, with a great Body of the English to secure the Province of Munster, where Cromwel (lately made Lieutenant of Ireland by the Parliament) was designed to land with his Army, consisting of seven Regiments of Foot, and four of Horse, and one of Dragoons.

Cromwel Lieutenant of Ireland for the Parliament, sent thither with an Army.

About the time that this happened, or shortly after, in the like manner Sir Robert Steward and Colonel Mervin were beaten from the Siege of London-Derry, by a resolute Sally out of the Town, made by Sir Charles Coot the Governor thereof for the Parliament. Upon the News of this good Fortune in Ireland, Cromwel with his Son-in-law Ireton, (next to him in Chief Command of the Irish Army,) altered their purpose of landing in Munster, and with all imaginable haste transported their Forces to Dublin, near to which City in a short time after the Victory they landed; and after a little stay to refresh the Soldiers, Cromwel marched the Army to the Town of Drogedah, which a little after the defeat near Dublin, had been strengthned with an Addition of Five and twenty hundred Foot, and Three hundred Horse, with many stout and resolute Officers, Sir Arthur Ashton, heretofore Governor of Reading and Oxford, for the late King, was Governor of the place, a Person in whose Courage and Conduct great confidence was plac'd. As soon as Cromwel came in sight of the Town, he sent a Summons, which being refused, he immediately began his Approaches, and was very active at the Siege, making many furious onsets on the Town, with great loss to his Army; but at last he carried it by storm, and to strike a terror in the other Towns, and the rest of the Forces that held for the King, all that were found in Arms were put to the Sword; amongst which, the Governor himself and Cromwel takes Drogedah by storm, and puts all in it to the Sword.

1649. and Sir Edmund Varney, and the Colonels Warren Temple, and Fenwick, with many other Commanders of Note, were slain; and though the Orders of Cromwel were limited to such as were in Arms, yet the Rage of the Soldiers were so great, that many of the Inhabitants were slain in the heat of the Fight, without respect to either Age, Sex, or Condition.

Ireland subdued to the Parliament.

After the taking of Drogheda, in less than a Year, most of the Cities and Towns in Ireland were taken, and that whole Kingdom in a manner subdued to the Power of the Commonwealth of England, and the Marquis of Ormond, and all those that opposed their Authority were withdrawn.

The King removes from France to the Isle of Jersey.

The King, with the Duke of York, about the beginning of September, repaired to the Isle of Jersey, where in a few Days they safely landed with about 200 Persons in their Retinue. Upon his first Arrival, he was very solemnly proclaimed King; and after he had settled the Affairs of that Island, he had an Eye upon the Reducing the Island of Guernsey, which was then under the Parliaments Power: but Castle Cornet the chiefest Fort thereof, was under his Authority.

A very gracious Declaration, after several Instructions, was sent into the Island, but it proved ineffectual; for Russel, the Governour for the English Commonwealth, had got 200 fresh Men into it; and with as bad Success, Sir John Berkley, Colonel Slingsby, and some others, attempted to raise Forces for the King in the Western Parts, from whence Intelligence came to Jersey, that Dartmouth, and several other Places would be put into their Hands, and a part of the Army join with them; but the watchfulness of their Adversaries prevented all these Designs, and Sir John and the Colonel, as they lay privately in Sir Charles Trevannion's House in Cornwall, were by a Country Fellow discovered to the Committees of that County, and by their Command apprehended, and sent Prisoners to Truro.

Sir John Berkley and Colonel Slingsby apprehended in Cornwall.

Mr. Windram sent with a Message to the King at Jersey from the Estates of Scotland.

During these Transactions, the Committee of Estates of Scotland had been convened at St. Johnstons, and sate some time, where they resolved upon a Message to be sent to Jersey to the King, in preparation to a Treaty to be had at Breda; for they were unwilling (in regard of the distance and hazard of the way,) to treat in that Island: Mr. George Windram of Liberton, was on the 25th. Day of September dispatched with an Express to him on this Errand. But so long was he on his Journey, and the King not advised of his coming, that he became very doubtful of their Counsels in Scotland, and had given the Marquis of Montrose a Commission to make some Levies of Men to land in that Kingdom, with Orders to draw together his Friends, hoping thereby the Committee of Estates would be induced the sooner, and with more moderation, to a Treaty with him.

Mr. Windram landed not at Jersey in many Weeks after his Departure from Scotland; but when he came thither, the King received him very well. The Substance of his Message was:

1649. That the King would be pleased to acknowledge for lawful, their Parliament, and particularly the two last Sessions of that Assembly; which being obtained, they offered to Treat of the Means to re-establish Peace and Obedience to his Authority in that Kingdom. The Substance of Windram's Message to the King.

This Overture admitted of great Debate in the King's Council, for as yet the desperate Condition of his Affairs in Ireland, and other Parts, was not known to him; some that had no good Opinion of the Scots, from their Experience of their Dealing with the late King, expected very small Fruits of a Treaty with them, and rather advised to rely upon the Endeavours of Montrose, and the other Confederates; but others reasoned, That these in Scotland, now in Power, being the most prevalent Party of that Kingdom, and having with them the Conjunction of the Kirk (by which the People of Scotland are always much influenced) were more likely to assist him in the obtaining the Crown of England (if he agreed with them) than any others, whose Designs were full of hazard and uncertainty.

The Result was, That Mr. Windram should return into Scotland with a Letter to the Committee of Estates, in the Words following:

CHARLES R.

The King's Letter to the Committee of Estates in Scotland.

We have received your Letters lately presented unto Us by Mr. Windram of Liberton, and We accept graciously all the Expressions of Affection and Fidelity therein contained towards Us, with your tender Resentment of Our present Condition, and the just Indignation which you profess to have against the execrable Murther of our Father: And we believe that your Intentions are as full of Candor towards us, as we are, and always really have been desirous to settle a clear and right Intelligence between us and our Subjects of our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, which may be an assured Foundation of their Happiness and Peace for the time to come, and an effectual means to root out all the Seeds of Animosities and Divisions caused by these late Troubles, and also to re-unite the Hearts and Affections of our Subjects one to another, and of them all to Us their King and lawful Sovereign; to the end that by their Obedience to Our Royal and Just Authority, we may be put into a condition to maintain them in Peace and Prosperity, and to protect them in their Religion and Liberty, as it appertains to Us, according to our Charge and Office of a King. And as we have always resolved to contribute whatever is to be done by us to obtain these good Effects, and for the just Satisfaction of all Our Subjects in this Kingdom, We have now thought fit, upon the Return of Mr. Windram, to command and desire you to send unto us Commissioners sufficiently Authorized, to Treat and Agree with Us, both in relation to the Interest and Just Satisfaction, of Our Subjects there: As also concerning the Aid and Assistance, which in reason we may expect from them, to bring and reduce the Murtherers of Our late most Dear Father of happy Memory to condign Punishment, and to Recover Our Just Rights in all Our Kingdoms. And We will that they attend Us on the Fifteenth Day of the Month of March, at the Town of Breda, where We intend to be in order thereunto. And in Confidence of a Treaty, as also to make known to you, and to all the World, that We desire to be agreed, We have resolved to address these unto you, under 1649. the Name and Title of a Committee of Estates of our Kingdom of Scotland; and will and expect that you use this Grace no otherwise for any advantage to the prejudice of Us, or our Affairs, beyond what We have given this Qualification and Title for, namely, only for the Treaty, and in order to it; although We have consideration sufficient, and very important to dissuade, and oblige us to do nothing in this kind antecedently at this time. Also We hope the Confidence which we declare to have in your clear and candid Intentions towards Us, will furnish you with strong Arguments to frame in your selves a mutual Confidence in Us, which, by the Blessing of God Almighty, by your just and prudent Moderation, and by that great Desire that we have to oblige all our Subjects of that Kingdom, and by the Means of the Treaty which we attend and hope for, may be a good Foundation of a full and happy Peace, and an assured Security to this Nation for the time to come; which We assure you is wished of Us with passion; and We shall endeavour by all Means in Our Power to Effect.

To the same effect also was a Letter to the Committee of the Kirk.

Montrose solicits Foreign Princes to send the King Aid.

Montrose in the mean time was very busie, soliciting the King of Denmark, the Queen of Sweden, and other Princes, for Money, Arms, and Men, to be employed in the King's Service; but yet he was so generous, as to write to the King, To make an Agreement with the Estates of Scotland, so that he might be Honourably and with Safety restored to his Rights and Dignities; and rather than break off with them, to give consent to have him banished the Kingdom, that so he might receive no Prejudice for his Consideration.

The King informs Montrose of what had passed between him and the Estates in order to a Treaty.

But the King would by no means yield to his Requests herein, declaring, That he had found him so faithful all along, and to have performed such eminent Services, both to his Father and to himself, that he could not in Justice or in Honour leave him: And by a Letter which he sent to him on the Thirtieth of January, he gave him a full Account of the Address to him from Scotland, and the Progress made towards the Treaty, according to the Tenor of his Letters, by Windram, wherein he informed him:

That he licensed the Authority of the Committee of Estates for this Treaty only, and that both for their own proper Satisfaction, and to make known to all the World, that he desired to bring back his Subjects to their Duty, rather by way of Sweetness and Amity, than by the rigour of Arms (if their obstinacy and the injustice of their Demands should constrain him to recover it by force) adding nevertheless, That he gave him full power to proceed very vigorously in his Entertrizes, not doubting but all his loyal Subjects of Scotland would join themselves with him, and by that means, those that were otherwise disposed, would submit themselves to Reason in the Treaty which he now accepted, or should be forced to it by Arms.

The Parliament forces the King to leave Jersey and go into France.

The Parliament of England, not willing to let the King be at quiet in Jersey, sent a considerable part of the English Fleet at Portsmouth, with Store of Provision, in order to the Attacking of that Island, which put the King upon a speedy Remove from thence to France; where he resided till the time appointed for the Treaty at Breda, drew nearly and then he repaired thither. 1649.

Sir John Winram made all the haste he could to Scotland; and as soon as the Committee of Estates, and Assembly of the Kirk, who sate apart, were met, he delivered his Message, and Letters to them from the King.

The Committee of Estates upon perusing the Letter, chose out of themselves a Sub-Committee of Nine Lords and Burgesses, to consider what was most expedient to be done therein, and to present their Opinion thereupon to the Committee of Estates, which was done; and thereupon they prepared a State of the Matters, and reported it to the Parliament in their first Meeting, which was in a while after; and the Parliament upon that Report chose a Committee of the Estates to meet with a Committee of the Kirk, to consider of all Matters in order to the Treaty, and to nominate Commissioners for it; where, after some Consultations, a Report was agreed on to be made by one part to the Committee of Estates, and by the other to the Assembly of the Kirk, and immediately the Commissioners were chosen. Those for the Estates were the Earls of Cassils and Lothian, and the Lord Burly, and Sir John Hope of Craighall, Lord Justice Clerk; and those from the Kirk were Mr. John Creighton, Mr. Samuel Rutherford, and Mr. Brandy, who were with all convenient haste dispatched to Breda, where they arrived a Day before the King; and the next Day after, they went to meet him at Bergben op Zoom, and they came thence together to Breda on the Sixteenth Day of March, where the Commissioners, after Two or Three Days of Rest to compose themselves, and receive their Visits from their Friends, were conducted to their first Audience in the Presence-Chamber by my Lord Wentworth, Captain of the King's Guards, who was sent with the King's Coach to receive them. The Earl of Cassils addressed himself to the King, in the Name of the Commissioners of Parliament, in a short Speech to this effect.

The Commissioners to treat with the King at Breda.

The Earl of Cassils's Speech to the King, in behalf of the Commissioners of Parliament.

"That the Kingdom of Scotland upon his late "Message, together with the consideration of all "former Overtures with him, have now again "sent to him these Propositions, which they humbly tender to His Majesty; not that they have "thought to force him to a Compliance through "his Necessity, to his prejudice, or weary him by "Importunities; but by making their humble "Submission, in which their Desires, they hope, "will appear so reasonable and just, that he will "soon condescend unto them, which they humbly beg at his Hands. Assuring him, that by "that means he will be most powerful in the advancing and establishing his Throne; it being "the nature of his Loyal Subjects, and all truly "Noble Minds to be soonest overcome with such "Allurements. That in these humble Addresses "they did manifest to the World their Loyalty "and Constancy to him; neither was it their "purpose to flatter, but to be faithful and free; "that if he would please to condescend to what "was propounded by the Kingdom of Scotland, "it would make him happy, and give them "some Hopes to live at Peace under the Shadow "of the Wings of his Government.

And

1649. Mr. Leviſton's Speech for thoſe of the Kirk.

And as ſoon as he had ended, the Commiſſioners of the Kirk having preſented themſelves to him, Mr. John Leviſton made a Speech, wherein, He preſt His Majeſty to hearken to the joynt deſires of the Eſtates and Kirk of Scotland, that ſo he might enjoy the Bleſſing of God, and be received by his People in Comfort and Peace, to promote the work of the Lord, and make them happy.

After theſe Speeches, they produced their Commiſſions, and delivered their Letters, together with the Propoſitions from the Eſtates and Kirk of Scotland.

The Propoſitions were immediately read, which were as followeth:

Propoſitions from the Eſtates and Kirk of Scotland to the King.

1. "That all thoſe who have been and continue excommunicate by the Kirk of Scotland, "may be removed from having any acceſs to the "Court.

2. "That he would be pleaſed to declare, that he "would by ſolemn Oath under his Hand and Seal, "allow the National Covenant of Scotland, and "the ſolemn League and Covenant of Scotland, "England and Ireland, and that he would proſe-"cure the ends thereof in his Royal Station.

3. "That he would ratifie and approve all Acts "of Parliament, enjoyning the ſolemn League "and Covenant, and eſtabliſhing Presbyterian "Government, the Directory of Worſhip, the "Confeſſion of Faith and Catechiſm in the King-"dom of Scotland, as they are already approved "by the general Aſſembly of the Kirk, and by "the Parliament of that Kingdom. And that he "would give his Royal Aſſent to the Acts of Par-"liament, enjoyning the ſame in the reſt of his "Dominions; and that he would obſerve the "ſame in his own Practice and Family, and ne-"ver make oppoſition therein, or endeavour a-"ny change thereof.

4. "That he would conſent and agree, That "all matters civil might be determined by the "preſent and ſubſequent Parliaments of the "Kingdom of Scotland, and all matters Eccleſi-"aſtical, by the enſuing general Aſſemblies of "the Kirk, as was formerly condeſcended and "agreed to by his late Father. After the King had "heard them, he demanded whether theſe Papers, "they had delivered to him, contained all parti-"culars which they had to propound or deſire; "whether they had power to recede from any "particular propoſed, or to be propoſed, alſo if "they had any thing to offer for the carrying on "of his Service againſt England.

To which they anſwered, That they had acquainted him with the utmoſt of their Power and Inſtructions.

A few Days after, the Treaty began, wherein the King found many difficulties in every Article; for though that which related to the prohibiting all whom the Kirk had excommunicated from acceſs to the Court, would deprive him of the Service and Attendance of the Earl of Montroſs, and many other of the Loyal Nobility and Gentry of that Kingdom, he thought not fit to break with them for that, not doubting when he ſhould have obtained the Kingdom, he might by degrees make them ſenſible of their miſtaken Zeal in their acting towards ſuch Perſons, and win them to a relaxion of their Rigour of that Injunction: But that which moſt preſt him, was the cauſe of Religion expreſſed in the ſeverity of thoſe Propoſitions which were required of him by ſolemn Oath, under his Hand and Seal to allow the Covenant, and to eſtabliſh the Presbyterian Government, wherein they inſiſted ſo much as to deny him the uſe of the Liturgy to his own Perſon: The King urged; That there was no reaſon why he ſhould relinquiſh the Religion for which his Father had died a Martyr, and that whilſt he was willing to permit to his Subjects Liberty of Conſcience, it would be very inconſiſtent with their ſo earneſtly pretended Deſires of Peace and Agreement, to deny him the ſame Privilege which he was ſo ready to give them. That the Covenant by them tendred, is the Subjects Covenant to bind them to him, and not for him to take, to ſwear to himſelf, ſo that he thought it ſufficient to paſs an Act for his People to take it. He likewiſe offered to confirm the Presbyterian Government in Scotland; provided that he himſelf might have always Three Chaplains with him of his own Election.

1650. The Earl of Canworth, and Mr. Murray, arrive at Breda, with further Inſtructions to the Scots Commiſſioners. Montroſs lands with Forces in Scotland.

During this Treaty, the Earl of Canworth, and Mr. Murray, arrived at Breda with new Inſtructions to the Commiſſioners concerning the Militia, which put a further demur to the concluſion of it; and indeed it was ſaid, The King was willing to admit of a little delay, in expectation of what he might obtain from the Endeavours of the Marquis of Montroſs, who was after many diſcouragements (of which ſome mention ſhall be hereafter made) about this time embarked for Scotland, and about the midſt of April, landed in the Iſles of Orkney, accompanied with the Lord Trenbraught, the Maſter of Pitſfodder, Sir John Urry, Henry Graham (his natural Brother) Colonel Johnſon, George Drummond of Ballach, and other Perſons his Friends and Confederates, with two Ships and a ſmall Frigat of 14 Guns, 1500 Arms, and 500 German Soldiers; Colonel King had promiſed to come up to him with ſome Horſe from Sweden, but did not do it; Colonel Ogleby, and Colonel Cochrain, who were truſted with certain Summs of Money for the raiſing of Men and Arms, (the one in Amſterdam, and the other in Poland) fail'd in their Duty, and converted the Money to their own uſe; and two of four Ships which he had, (wherein were about 200 German Soldiers, and many Implements of War) were caſt away upon the Rocks a little before his landing; but theſe Diſaſters which might have ſhaken a great Reſolution, abated nothing of his Courage and Magnanimity.

The Eſtates of Scotland had no Forces in any of theſe Iſlands, whereby he had a good opportunity to raiſe Men to form a little Army for his landing on the Main: the People were raw and undiſciplin'd, much fallen from that Courage for which the ancient Inhabitants of theſe Iſles have been fam'd; but nevertheleſs, he was forc'd to make as good a ſhift as he could with them; and whilſt he was buſied here in his Levies, the Laird of Pluſcardy endeavoured to raiſe two thouſand Men for his aſſiſtance in the Earl of Seaforth's Territories.

1649. And now having got together as many Soldiers as he desired of this sort, he left Colonel Johnson and Henry Graham, to keep Kirkwall in Pomona, the chief Isle of the Orcades, and transplanted all the rest of his Men to Cathnes, which is the utmost point of Land in the Northwest part of Scotland; here he hoped to meet Pluscardy, with the Two thousand Men he promised to raise, but they came not; for the Parliament of Scotland was so vigilant, that they sent into most places where they thought he had any correspondence, to prevent the getting Men together for him; and very suddenly after the News of his arrival was known, an Army of Seven thousand Foot, and Thirty Troops of Horse, was sent to oppose him. The Horse were commanded by David Lesley, and the Foot by Major-General Holborn, of these they sent Three hundred in the Van, under the command of Colonel Straughan, consisting of his own Troop, and Three Troops more, commanded by Colonel Montgomery, Colonel Ker, and Lieutenant-Colonel Hacket, and indeed there needed no other Army; for all that Montrose was able to do at that time towards the strengthning himself, was little or nothing more than the taking of Dunbeth-House, which was soon surrendred to Colonel Urry upon demand, the Lord thereof being fled to Edenburgh: The Earl of Sunderland was a sore Remora in his way; for though he had not force enough to encounter the Marquis, yet the power and sway he bore in all those adjacent Parts about where Montrose had to do, both kept back the Country from coming in to him, and hindred several of the Gentry from appearing, who otherwise were inclinable enough to have given their assistance; so that Straughan surprizing the Montrosians, with the speed and unexpectedness of his appearance, and finding them much disorder'd and tir'd with seeking to recover a certain Pass, (which they fail'd of obtaining,) improved his Advantage, and after some repulse at first, redoubled with such fury upon them, that the unseason'd Orkney Men immediately yielded themselves, and in a short time (though not without much resolution shewn in their resistance) the Germans also. Thus was Montrose his vigorous and loyal undertaking for his Soveraign's Service, the labour of much Time, and carried on with incredible pains, difficulty, and danger, dissipated in a moment by a Party far inferior in number, and doubtless no whit superior in skilful and valiant Leaders (not to mention Montrose, who was accounted, and worthily, the greatest Captain of his Age:) such was the misfortune of this at least bravely attempted Enterprize, occasioned chiefly from the great disadvantage wherein Montrose his Men were set upon; and their necessities and despair of Succours and Supplies in a Country surrounded with Enemies, or perhaps from a kind of surprisal or pannick Fear, among the generality of the common Soldiers, upon an apprehension that Lesley's great Army had been come up against them: However it were, so great was the defeat, that of the whole Body of the Montrossians, who engaged in this Battle, there escaped not above an hundred from being either taken or slain: Among the Prisoners were Sir John Urry, Major-General of Montrose his Army, the Lord Trendraught, Sir Francis Hay of Delgetie, Colonel Hay of Nougbton, Colonel Grey, Lieutenant Colonel Stuart, with other considerable Officers: Montrose himself made a shift to escape for the present, by quitting his Horse, together with his Belt and his Coat with the Star, and shifting himself into an ordinary Highlanders Apparel. In this Fight the Royal Standard was taken, upon which was portraicted the Head of the late King lying a bleeding, and severed from the Body, and this following Motto, Judge and revenge my Cause, O Lord. And the Lord Pitsodder's Son who was Standard bearer was slain, Colonel Straughan received a shot upon his Belly, but in regard it lighted upon the double of his Belt and Buff-Coat, he had no harm thereby. 1649.

Montrose defeated by Straughan.

So welcome was the News of this Victory to the State and Kirk of Scotland, that they bestowed as a reward upon Straughan, a Thousand Pounds Sterling, and a Chain of Gold: Upon Lieutenant-Colonel Hacket, a Thousand Marks Sterling. But that which crowned this Victory to them with the highest joy and satisfaction, was the getting of Montrose his Person into their Power: as indeed it was impossible for him to make his escape, so narrowly was he way-laid all the Country round, and so strict a search and enquiry was ordered to be sent after him, besides a large Reward promised to whomsoever should be his apprehender: yet for the space of three or four days he kept himself undiscovered, by wandring up and down in the open Fields with one Associate only in his Misery, till being very near famished with Hunger, it was his fortune in the end to fall into the Hands of the Laird of Aston, a Person who had formerly adhered to the Marquis, and had been befriended by him, and of whom upon that consideration, he doubtless hoped for the favour of not being discovered by him, if not of assistance towards his concealment: But Aston, for fear of what he must have suffered if he had been known to have concealed him, or for want of opportunity, in regard of his Followers that attended him, or setting his thoughts upon the proposed Reward (as the regard of Gain, for the most part out-ballances that of Friendship) was not to be perswaded or induced by any respect of old Friendship or Relation to suffer him to escape; so that being seized and secured by a strong Guard, (and having in vain supplicated for Death by the Hands of those that took him) he was presently sent and delivered up to the Custody of David Lesly, and by him hurried away with all speed to Edenburgh, much insulted over in the several places he came through, only the People of Dundee, (though none more endamaged by his Soldiers in the former War) were very civil to him, furnish'd him with all things necessary, and were so far from insulting, that they very much commiserated his Condition: the chief favour he obtained in his Journey, was the permission to call in, as he came along, at the House of his Father-in-law, the Earl of Southesk, to see two Children of his that were there. At Leith he was met by the Magistrates of Edenburgh, in a kind of fatal Pomp; and as it were to welcome him to the satisfaction of their revenge, he had the reproachful Honour, while the rest of the Prisoners went by him on Foot, to be mounted on a Cart-horse (for the better advantage of exposing him to the gazing and scorn of the People) till

He is taken Prisoner.

Brought to Edenburgh.

1650. till he came to the end of the Cannon-Gate-Street, where the Executioner in his Livery-Coat, and several other Officers, attended with a Cart, having a high Chair placed in it like a sella Curulis, wherein (though he himself the Captive fast bound and bare-headed, while the Executioner had his Bonnet on) he Rode as in a Triumphal Chariot, the Disgrace which his Enemies intended him, turning to his Honour, by presenting the Heroick Magnanimity of his Nature, which could not chuse but Triumph in the midst of Captivity. In this manner Reproached of many, (as it is usual when men are in Adversity,) pitied of others, even some of them who were engaged in the general enmity against his Designs, whom yet the Majesty of his Presence, and the undisturbed Patience and Constancy wherewith he demeaned himself, melted into a sensibility of the misery of his Condition. He was conveyed to the Tolbooth the place of his Imprisonment, where the next day being Sunday the nineteenth of May, he received new matter for the tryal of his Patience by the troublesome Visits of divers of the Ministry and Parliament, who, while they began to persecute him with their pretended Exhortations, which served but to aggravate the sense of his Affliction, he told them, that whereas they thought they had affronted him the day before by carrying him in a Cart, he esteemed it the most Honourable and joyful Cavalcade that ever he made; God having all the while most comfortably manifested his Presence to him, and furnished him with resolution to overlook the Reproaches of men, and to behold him for whose Cause he Suffered. The next day being Summoned to appear before the Lords, Barons, and Burgesses Assembled in Parliament, he came into the House Apparelled in a very rich Suit, thick overlaid with costly Lace, and over it a Scarlet Rocket, and on his Head a Beaver-Hat with a very rich Hat band upon it, with Carnation Silk Stockings, Gartets, and Roses, with other Habiliments suitable, all which he had caused to be made for him immediately upon his coming to Edenburgh, as if he had been going rather about some Festival than Tragical Affair. As soon as he was brought to the Bar of the House, the Lord Chancellor (who according to the Custom of that Kingdom is always Speaker) told him first, That he must kneel at the Bar. Whereunto he answered, My Lord, I shall with all my heart observe any Posture you shall appoint me to appear before you in, whereby I may manifest to you, that I freely Submit to the Authority of Parliament, and to this present Parliament in a more especial manner, because you have concluded so near a Conjunction with his present Majesty, my Master, in the late Treaty. Then the Chancellor made a Speech to him, the substance whereof was this.

Montross is brought to his Tryal in Parliament.

The Lord Chancellor his Speech to him.

SIR,

I am commanded to mind you of the last Judgment of God befallen you for your perfidious breaking of the Covenant, which might justly provoke God thus to divert your Counsels and Affairs, for having been so eminent an Author and Actor of Mischief against this Nation; you abandoned the Covenant, and despised the Oath of God, and did invade your Native Country, and with most inhumane and Barbarous Cruelty did Burn and Waste divers parts thereof, and have spilt much Blood of his Majesties good Subjects, taking advantage of that time, when the Prime Commanders and Forces thereof were employed elsewhere. For these Crimes you were Excommunicated by the Church, and fore-faulted by the Parliament of this Kingdom, and yet still continued in the highest Contempt against God, under that fearful Sentence of Excommunication; and to this day have you remained without the smallest shew of Repentance. And God by his Providence hath now justly brought you hither to receive the Sentence of your Condemnation. 1650.

Hereupon Montross humbly desiring to know of his Lordship, whether it were the Parliaments pleasure that he might be permitted to speak what he had to say for himself, and humbly craving that liberty from them, he was told by the Chancellor, that the Estates in Parliament did give him free liberty to speak what he could say for himself: Then Montross,

My Lord, said he,

His Answer.

'I am glad that I may have liberty to answer 'for my self, tho' I am here your Prisoner, yet 'my Cause is good; nor is there any breach of 'the Covenant on my part, in which I Swore to 'be true to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors. 'Concerning what I have acted in relation to 'the Wars and Affairs of this Kingdom, I had not 'only a general Commission, but particular Orders for what I have done from his Majesty, 'which I was engaged to obey by the said Covenant. And concerning my coming over now, 'I was ascertained that you had professed to 'comply with his Majesty in the present Affairs, 'in which he hath employed me; and upon that 'account it was that I have Acted. I desire to refer my self and to submit unto this present Parliament and the Authority thereof, to be my 'Judges in this Case, whom I own as a true Parliament by Authority from his Majesty, and I 'shall be content, however it shall please God to 'deal with me. As for my Life, if you take it away by this Authority, it is well known unto 'all the World, that I regard it not: Death is a 'Debt which all owe, and must once be paid by 'every one: and I shall be willing and much rejoyce to go the same way which my Master 'went before me, and it is the joy of my heart 'not only to do, but also to suffer for him.

Moreover, he added to this effect, 'That he 'appeared before them with so much the greater 'Respect and Reverence, by reason of the Agreement he heard they had made with his Majesty; 'that he was never engaged in the League and 'Covenant, and therefore was not justly to be 'Condemned for opposing it, since he was sensible of how sad consequence it had proved to 'these Distressed Kingdoms, and the welfare of 'his late Majesty, against whom those that rose 'up in Arms in England were plainly assisted 'and upheld by a Faction of this Kingdom; that 'as he had never been the occasion of shedding 'Blood but in Battel, and by the necessity of 'War, so he had been ever careful to prevent all 'Disorders as much as could be, and to save as 'many lives as possibly lay in his power. That what 1650. 'whatever he had Acted formerly againſt them 'to make a Diverſion of thoſe Forces that were 'going from thence againſt his late Majeſty, was 'meerly in Obedience and Zeal to his Majeſties 'Service at whoſe Command he as readily ſub- 'mitted to lay down his Arms and Retreat, as he 'had before chearfully taken them up in his Ma- 'jeſties Defence. That as for his coming in at 'that time, it was in order to the accelerating of 'the Treaty betwixt his preſent Majeſty and 'them, to the end that his Majeſty being not 'driven to relie wholly upon their Aſſiſtance, 'might be enabled to make the better Conditions 'with them. That ſince he had done nothing 'but what became a good Chriſtian, a good Sub- 'ject, and a good Neighbour, he deſired them 'not to be Raſh and Partial in their Judgment, but 'to Judge him according to the Laws of God, of 'Nature, of Nations, and of the Land, as they 'would anſwer the contrary to the Righteous 'Judge of the World.

After he had been thus Examined and Tried, he was commanded to withdraw; the Parliament were not very long debating the matter, e'er they unanimouſly reſolved to proceed to Sentence of Condemnation; which, (he being called in again) was denounced againſt him in this Form.

The Sentence pronounced againſt him by the Parliament.

You are to be carried back to the place from whence you came, and from thence you are to morrow, being the One and twentieth day of May, 1650. to be carried to Edenburgh Croſs, and there to be hanged upon a Gallows thirty foot high, for the ſpace of three Hours, and then to be taken down, and your Head to be cut off upon the Scaffold, and hanged on Edenburgh Tolbooth, and your Legs and Arms to be hanged up in other publick Towns in this Kingdom, and your Body to be buried at the place where you ſhall be Executed, except the Kirk ſhall take off your Excommunication, then your Body ſhall be buried at the common place of Burial.

After the denouncing of the Sentence, at which he altered not his Countenance, or ſeemed in the leaſt manner to be moved, he was again Guarded back to Priſon, where being again haunted and importuned by the Miniſters, he expreſſed how much he was beholding to the Parliament for the Honour they had put upon him; for that he accounted it a greater Honour to have his Head ſtand upon the Priſon-Gate, for this Quarrel, than to have his Picture in the King's Bed Chamber; and leaſt his Loyalty ſhould be forgotten, they had highly honoured him in deſigning laſting Monuments to four of the chiefeſt Cities to bear up his Memorial to all Poſterity, wiſhing he had had Fleſh enough to have ſent a piece to every City in Chriſtendom to witneſs his Loyalty to his King and Countrey.

He is brought to Execution and hanged upon a Gallows 30 Foot high.

The next day being the One and twentieth day of May, the day appointed for his Tragedy, he was led forth to his Execution, at which time, ſo winning was his Deportment, and his Speeches ſo powerful, that they made a very great impreſſion upon the Spirits of the People, inſomuch as ſome who obſerved the paſſages of his Death, were of Opinion, That he had drawn away more more from the Kirk-Party by his manner of dying, than he could have Vanquiſht in the Field by Force of Arms. 1650.

Upon the Scaffold he delivered his mind to the People in this following Speech.

His Speech.

'I am ſorry if this manner of my Death be 'Scandalous to any good Chriſtian. Doth it not 'often happen to the Righteous according to the 'ways of the Wicked, and to the Wicked accor- 'ding to the ways of the Righteous? doth not 'ſometimes a juſt man periſh in his Righteouſ- 'neſs, and a wicked man proſper in his Malice? 'they who know me, ſhould not diſeſteem me 'for this; many greater than I have been deal- 'with in this kind, yet I muſt not ſay, but that 'all Gods Judgments are juſt; for my private 'Sins I acknowledge this to be juſt with God, I 'ſubmit my ſelf to him; but in regard of man, I 'may ſay they are but Inſtruments: God for- 'give them, I forgive them; they have oppreſſed 'the Poor, and violently perverted Judgment 'and Juſtice; but he that is higher than they, 'will reward them. What I did in this Kingdom 'was in Obedience to the moſt juſt Commands of 'my Sovereign, for his Defence in the day of his 'Diſtreſs againſt thoſe that roſe up againſt him. 'I acknowledge nothing, but fear God, and ho- 'nour the King, according to the Command- 'ments of God, and the Law of Nature and Na- 'tions; and I have not ſinned againſt man, but a- 'gainſt God, and with him there is mercy, which 'is the ground of my drawing near to him. It is 'objected againſt me by many, even good Peo- 'ple, that I am under the Cenſure of the Church, 'this is not my fault, ſince it is only for doing 'my Duty, by Obeying my Prince's moſt juſt 'Commands, for Religion, his Perſon and Autho- 'rity; yet am I ſorry they did Excommuni- 'cate me, and in that which is according to Gods 'Laws, without wronging my Conſcience or Al- 'legiance, I deſire to be relaxed; if they will not, 'I appeal to God, who is the Righteous Judge of 'the World, and who muſt and will, I hope, be 'my Judge and Saviour. It is ſpoken of me, that 'I ſhould blame the King, God forbid; for the 'late King, he lived a Saint, and died a Martyr; 'I pray God I may ſo end as he did: If ever I 'ſhould wiſh my Soul in another Man's ſtead, it 'ſhould be in his. For his Majeſty now living, 'never People, I believe, might be more happy 'in a King, his Commands to me were moſt 'juſt, in nothing that he promiſeth will he fail, 'he dealeth juſtly with all Men, I pray God he 'be ſo dealt withal, that he be not betrayed un- 'der truſt as his Father was. I deſire not to be 'miſtaken, as if my Carriage to you at this time, 'in relation to your ways, were ſtubborn; I do but 'follow the light of my own Conſcience, which 'is ſeconded by the working of the good Spirit 'of God that is within me. I thank him, I go 'to Heavens Throne with joy, if he enable me 'againſt the fear of Death, and furniſh me with 'Courage and Confidence to embrace it, even in 'its moſt ugly ſhape, let God be glorified in my 'End, tho it were in my Condemnation; yet 'I ſay not this out of any fear or diſtruſt, but out 'of my Duty to God, and love to his People. I 'have no more to ſay, but that I deſire your cha- 'rity 1650. "rity and Prayers, I ſhall pray for you all. I "leave my Soul to God, my Service to my "Prince, my Good-will to my Friends, and "my Name and Charity to you all. And thus "briefly I have exonerated my Conſcience.

Having concluded his Speech, and afterwards with cloſed Eyes and lifted up Hands ſpent a good while in private, in pouring forth his Soul to God, and recommending his Spirit into his Hands, who was pleaſed (as he ſaid) to give him a full aſſurance of his Mercy in Jeſus Chriſt. He received from the Executioner a certain Cord, by which hung his Declaration and Hiſtory, to hang about his Neck; affirming, That he thought not himſelf more honoured by the Garter, which honourable Order his preſent Majeſty had been pleaſed to confer upon him, than by that Cord and Book, which he would embrace about his Neck with as much Joy and Content as ever he did the Garter, or a Chain of Gold; adding, That if they had any more Diſhonour (as they conceived it) to put upon him, he was ready to accept it. And then preſently, with a chearful Reſignation, ſubmitted himſelf to the Execution of the Sentence.

Thus was this famous, but unfortunate Man, ſacrificed to the Revenge of his Enemies after a moſt ſhameful and deſpightful manner, even at that very time when they were treating with the King, whom they knew full well to have a very great Regard and Affection for him. Together with Montroſs, though not in ſo diſgraceful a way, were executed Sir Joby Urry, and Colonel Spotſwood, Laird of Darcy, (who had both the Favour to be beheaded) with ſome others of Note that came with the Marquis into Scotland.

The Treaty was now near a Concluſion; for whatever the King's juſt Reſentments were, his Council perſwaded him to comply and accord with the Kirk in the exigence of his preſent Condition: And as for the Militia, he offered to confirm it in the Hands of the Eſtates for Five Years. But whilſt Matters were in this nearneſs of compoſure, News was brought of the Defeat and Execution of Montroſs, which much ſurprized the King, conſidering the time of doing it; and though he omitted not in an Expreſs by Mr. Murray, to manifeſt his great Diſlike of the Action (for he was much afflicted at it;) yet he was prevail'd on with much regret not to urge it ſo far as to a Rupture: He told them in his Letter,

That he was very ſorrowful and grieved to hear a Report which came to him by credible Perſons, that notwithſtanding thoſe hopeful Overtures lately made between him and them, tending to their Peace; yet that there hath been ſome Blood ſhed of his good Subjects of the Kingdom of Scotland, and that the manner and reſult thereof, according to the Report he had heard of it, did very much trouble him: But that he might know the Particulars more certainly, he deſired to underſtand the Buſineſs fully from themſelves; of whom he required an Account.

A while after, the Treaty being ended to the ſatisfaction of the Eſtates, they ſent a ſolemn Meſſage to invite him to Scotland, and in anſwer to what he writ about Montroſs; they beſought him Not to ſtumble at it, aſſuring him, that there was nothing in what they did, but to accompliſh his Ends, and to ſerve his Intereſts to the beſt Advantage. They likewiſe requeſted him, To make all poſſible ſpeed in coming to them, proteſting they would with their Lives and Fortunes aſſiſt to Eſtabliſh him in the Throne of his Kingdoms.

1650. The Treaty at Breda concluded. A Meſſage of the Scots to invite the King, with their Anſwer to the King's Letter.

The rigorous Proſecution of Montroſs in that violent manner, was chiefly from the Inſtigation of the Kirk, who at that time had great Authority, and did ſo much influence the People, that it was almoſt impoſſible to appeaſe the Storm they raiſed againſt him. He had been excommunicated long before; and in that Church, Excommunication is ſo terrible, that few will have any manner of converſation with a Perſon excommunicated; and the generality of the People, when they ſee a Man whom their Miniſters declare to be excluded from Heaven, are eaſily induced to think him unworthy to live on Earth. Many, if not the greater part of thoſe that purſued his Life, were earneſt for the Admiſſion of the King; but ſo much did their Zeal exceed their Diſcretion, and ſo ſtrongly were they intoxicated with the Covenant, and ſeduced by the Inventors and Aſſertors of it, that they believed neither their Laws nor Religion in ſafety whilſt he lived.

The King, upon the Meſſage ſent to him, prepared for his Journey to Scotland, and about the beginning of June took Shipping at Sheveling in Holland, and after a happy evaſion of double Danger that threatened him in his Voyage, one from a ſudden Storm which aroſe and caſt him upon certain Daniſh Iſlands, (yet without any Loſs or Shipwrack, but on the other ſide much reſpect and civil uſage from the Inhabitants;) the other, from a Fleet of Parliament-Veſſels, which were ſent out under Popham to intercept his Paſſage, he landed ſafe at a Place called the Spey in the North of Scotland. The Eſtates and Parliament of Scotland in the mean time employed their Conſultations about the forming of an Army for the Service of the King, as they pretended, and an Act was publiſhed for the Rating of every Fourth Man through the Kingdom, who was capable to bear Arms: The Earl of Leven was made General of the Foot, and Holborn Major-General, David Leſly Lieutenant-General of the Horſe, and Montgomery Major-General, the ſupreme Command of the whole Army being reſerved for the King himſelf, whom at his firſt Arrival they entertained with high Complements, and much Acclamation, and ſeemed to congratulate his coming with great Demonſtrations of Joy and Affection. And on the 15th. of July, they again ſolemnly proclaim'd him King at Edenburgh Croſs, and had deſign'd (had not certain Obſtacles come in the way) to have crowned him the following Month: But he had not been long among them, e're they began to diſcover their native Rigour, imperiouſly to take upon them, according to their uſual manner of Kirk-Authority and Diſcipline, and to obtrude upon the King ſuch curbing Conditions, as but very ill ſuited with Regal Dignity.

He is Proclaimed King at Edenburgh Croſs.

And

1650. And not long after, when the City of Aberdeen presented him with 500 Pounds Sterling, the Committee of Estates seemed displeased thereat; and least other Cities and Towns should in the like manner testifie their Duties to him, they declared, That what Money or Plate any had a purpose to bestow on the King, should be brought into the Publick Treasury: And in conformity to this dealing towards him, they proceeded to Reform (as they called it) his Retinue, interdicting all whom they styled Malignants (which were most of his faithfullest Servants) from all Imployment both about his Person and in the Army.

The Commonwealth of England send an Army against Scotland.

The Commonwealth of England had sufficient Intelligence from the beginning of all these Occurrences, and of the Engagement of the Scots to establish the King in the Thrones of all his Dominions, and that they might not be surprized by them, they drew many Troops and Regiments together, and formed an Army, which they sent to the Borders of Scotland.

Fairfax, who was to command this Army, refused to accept the Charge, notwithstanding that they offered him a Commission with larger power than that by which he had formerly commanded their Armies, excusing his Refusal by reason of great Indisposition of Health occasioned by his Wounds, and other Incommodities of the late War. Upon this, Cromwel, who was newly returned from Ireland (where he had been very victorious,) had the Chief Command of the Army conferred upon him, which he (after some little formal shew of denial) accepted of, and about the latter end of June he marched towards Berwick in order to his advance into Scotland. The Scots whilst this Preparation was making, sent many expostulatory Letters to Sir Arthur Hazlerig then at Newcastle, urging the Breach of Covenant and the Union between the two Nations, which availed nothing; yet they did not neglect the Raising an Army for their Defence; for Matters were at this time grown to a greater height than to be decided by the Pen.

Cromwel is made General of the Parliaments Forces instead of Fairfax.

The Scots raise an Army.

Cromwel, upon repair to the Borders, published a Declaration in the Name of the Parliament of England to justifie their Proceedings in this manner towards the Scots, and to reproach a perverted part of them for that Breach of the Union betwixt the two Nations, which they imputed to the English, (for they would not lay the Blame of their Imputations on the whole Nation;) but so great was the Affection of the generality of the People of Scotland towards the King, that this Declaration made little Impression on them, tho' some privately kept Intelligence with Cromwel, to the Ruine of themselves and their Country.

About the end of July, the English Army, to the number of 16000 effective Officers and Soldiers, marched into Scotland, and came after little Resistance (in the defence of some Passages) to Mordington; most of the Scots who inhabited the Borders had left their Habitations, which put the Army in more streights for subsistance than they expected; but a Fleet of English Ships waited on their Motions on the Coasts of Scotland; yet Cromwel pretending to commiserate the Condition of the Scotch People, set forth a Declaration, promising Protection of their Persons and Goods to all that would return to their Dwellings, with a strict Prohibition on pain of death to any of the Soldiers to molest or do them any harm, or take from them any Victuals or other Necessaries, without full Recompence in Money for the same. 1650.

From Mordington the English Army marched to Haddington, and the Scotch Army lay encamped betwixt Edenburgh and Leith, consisting of 6000 Horse and Dragoons, and 15000 Foot: Cromwel marched from Haddington, and came in view of the Scotch Army, where he observed them to be too strongly entrenched to be forced; and after he had fac'd them a Day and a Night without being able to draw them from their Entrenchments, he marched away towards Musselburgh. The Scots upon this Retreat drew out all their Horse, and fell into the Rear of the English Army, which was commanded by Lambert, and made so brisk a Charge, that Lambert himself was wounded, and like to have been taken Prisoner; but Cromwel came to his Relief, and drove them back to their Camp, not without some Loss. The next Day, betwixt 3 and 4 in the Morning, 15 Cornets of the Scotch Horse, commanded by Major-General Montgomery and Col. Straughan, came out of their Line with a design to beat up the Quarters of the English about Musselburgh, they surprized the Out-Guards, and routed the first Regiment that appeared to oppose them, and advanced to another Body, which was drawn together to succour the others; but there they met with so great Resistance, that Montgomery was wounded, and the whole Party put to great disorder and confusion, and pursued to their Army, and the Camp had been in danger of surprizal, had not the King himself (appearing unexpectedly amongst them) opposed the Hazard of his Person, and the Authority of his Name against their precipitated flight. Of the Scots, in this Engagement, 74 were taken Prisoners, and many slain; and Straughan himself was once taken, but got off again.

The Scots routed at Musselburgh.

The pretended Parliament at Westminster were no less active there than Cromwel was in Scotland, to carry on the Designs and Interest of the Republick, proceeding with all imaginable rigour against all Persons that they could discover in any manner acting against their tyrannous Usurpation. And about this time, one Levens, a Doctor of the Civil Law, being apprehended with some Commissions of the King's, which he had Intention to disperse for his Service, was therefore arraigned at a Court Marshal, and condemned and executed by hanging by the Neck till he died, on the 13th. Day of July, over-against the Royal Exchange in London.

Dr. Levens hanged over against the Royal Exchange, for his Loyalty.

But in further manifestation of their Impiety, they were not contented to have inhumanely murthered the King, and seized on, and disposed of all his Goods and Revennes, but they insulted over those Statues which his Vertues had caused to be set up in the Royal Exchange, and the West end of St Paul's Church: The first of these they ridiculously (in imitation of their barbarous Cruelty,) decollated, and ordered it to be taken out of the Nich, and under the Basis thereof these Words words were written, Exit Tyrannus Regum ultimus, Anno Libertatis Angliæ restitutæ prima, Annoque Domini 1648. which remained many years a teſtimony of their guilt, and a memorial to ſtrangers of their bold-fac'd Treaſon, which gave not only Truth, but even Time it ſelf the lye: for never was there ſuch a thing as the firſt year of the peoples Liberty under their Anarchical uſurpation. The other Statue of the King being thrown from the place where it ſtood, fell upon its feet, which was then taken by many as a preſage that his glorious Memory, Fame, and Poſterity ſhould recover and continue, maugre all the deſigns and contrivements of his and their implacable Enemies.

In Ireland the Kings affairs proſpered very ill, inſomuch that in five or ſix weeks time the Parliamentarians had taken Waterford, Dungarvan, Catherlo, and Charlemont, and had great hopes of a plenary Conqueſt of that Country.

The Scotch and Engliſh Armies lying near one another without Engagement (becauſe of the advantagious poſture in which the Scots Troops were placed, having a great Hill for their ſecurity on one ſide, and a River and the City of Edenburgh on the other) Cromwel's Army began to be diſtreſſed by ſcarcity of proviſions, which made him retreat to Pentland Hills, and thence with ſome difficulty (by reaſon of bad weather) to Muſſelburgh to be near the Sea to have ſupply of Victuals from the Engliſh Fleet that attended him: and after a few days ſtay there, he marched to Dunbar on Sunday the firſt of September with intention to ſhip his Foot much wearied by ſickneſs and long marches, and march away with his Horſe into England; but the Scotch having intelligence thereof, preſſed ſo hard upon him with their Army that he could not effect his purpoſe; and the ſame day at night that he arrived at Dunbar, the Scots being cloſe at his Heels, drew up their whole Army (conſiſting of between twenty and four and twenty thouſand men) upon a high Hill, within a mile of the Town; the Engliſh exceeding not the number of twelve thouſand, drew out in Battalia in a Corn-field near adjoyning having a neck of Land to encamp on, whoſe breadth was not a mile and a half from Sea to Sea. The next morning being the Second of September, early in the morning David Leſly Lieutenant General of the Scotch Army drew down his men to the Foot of the Hill, and about four in the afternoon his Train of Artillery, followed to the ſide of a great Ditch, which divided the two Armies. The Engliſh that Evening ranged themſelves cloſe to the Ditch, and placed their Field-pieces in the moſt uſeful manner they could, to be ready to ſecure their Regiments, and annoy the Enemy if they ſhould aſſail them in the night, and finding the Paſs at Copperſpath between Dunbar and Berwick very neceſſary to them both for the ſecurity of their march homeward, and their more eaſie advance to the Scotch. On Tueſday at four in the morning they attempted with three Regiments of Horſe and two of Foot to poſſeſs themſelves thereof; this gave the Scots an hot Alarm, and a fierce diſpute happed, ſo that both Armies became engaged. The Engliſh word was, The Lord of Hoſts; Theirs, The Covenant.

The Scotch Right Wing of Horſe which were moſt of them Launceers, made a very bold charge and put the Engliſh Horſe to a little confuſion, but they immediately rallied, and were ſo ſeconded by their foot, that by ſix in the morning the Right Wing of the Scotch Horſe was routed, and the left without ſtriking a ſtroke ran away, and the Foot ſeeing this rout and flight of their horſe, and not able in any order by reaſon thereof to engage, (without any reſiſtance) threw down their Arms and fled, giving the Engliſh the full purſuit of them eight miles beyond Haddington. The Scots were ſo preſumptuous the day before as to ſend to Edenburgh to aſſure their friends of a certain Victory over the Engliſh, and it was reported that ſome of the Miniſters declared it in their Sermons as the mind of God to have them delivered up into their hands; but in the midſt of this confidence they found themſelves miſerably fruſtrated, and their diſpairing and deſpiſed Enemy a Conqueror. The number of the Scotch ſlain in this Battle were reckoned to be four thouſand, and nine thouſand were taken Priſoners with all their Ammunition, Bag and Baggage, and ten thouſand Arms. The Officers and Priſoners of moſt note were Sir James Lowſdilly, next Commander in Chief to David Leſly, the Laird of Libberton, Adjutant General Bibberton, Scout-Maſter-General Campbel, Sir William Douglaſs, and Colonel Gunridge, twelve Lieutenant-Colonels, ſix Majors, ſeventy two Captains, ſeventy five Lieutenants, ſeventeen Cornets, two Quarter-Maſters, an hundred and ten Enſign-bearers, and two hundred Horſe and Foot colours, with ſeven and twenty great Guns; and all this obtained with the loſs of not above three hundred Engliſh Souldiers, and one Officer (Major Rooksby) who ſurvived the battel, but died afterwards of his wounds.

The Scots Army defeated by Cromwel.

The Scots after this days loſs quitted Leith and Edenburgh, whereof the next day Cromwel took poſſeſſion, and the King retired to St. Johnſtoun, where the Committee of Eſtates were aſſembled. The defeat of the Scotch Army produced not thoſe effects as the King expected upon the Ruling part of the Nobility and Clergy of the Kingdom; for inſtead of enlarging their intereſt, by taking into their conjunction thoſe whoſe help they had before rejected for their affection to their King, they aſcribed the overthrow of the Army to the admitting of him into Scotland before he had given full ſatisfaction to the Kirk in what they required of him, and in proſecution of theſe Counſels, they began very much to impoſe upon him, and remove from his perſon the moſt faithful and Loyal of his ſervants.

The King could not brook this inſolent carriage toward him, and therefore reſolved at any hazard to free himſelf from the trouble of it, and by advice of ſome few of his beſt and moſt truſty friends, he took Horſe one morning, with three of them in his company, pretending to ride out a little way a Hawking, and rode directly to the Lord Dudups houſe near Dundee, where he was receiv'd by ſome of his Loyal Subjects and Servants, with whom he kept intelligence, and from hence he intended to have gone further North, where he heard the Marqueſs of Huntly, the Earls of Athol and Seaforth, and the Lord Ogleby and

The King departs from St. Johnſtons in diſcontent.

1650. Nenburgh, and Major General Middleton, with the Gordons and the Men of Athall, were ready to appear for him with no contemptible force, but he ſtaid till by an expreſs ſent to them he ſhould be inform'd of the certainty of their condition.

This ſecret and ſudden departure of the King did much perplex the Committee of Eſtates, who were very apprehenſive of the conſequence of his joyning with the Gordons and the Athol Men, and hearing he was gone to the Lord Dedups Houſe, they reſolved to ſend Major General Montgomery with a party of Horſe to perſwade his return to them (many of the Chiefs of the Noblemen and Miniſters being by this time ſenſible that theſe breaches and diviſions would but give the Engliſh (then in the Bowels of their Country) greater advantage againſt them, and that nothing could ſave the whole from ruine, but a general uniting of all parties under the King againſt the common Enemy.) Montgomery arriving at the Houſe, ſent in to the King to acquaint him that he came thither by order of the Committee of Eſtates, humbly to entreat him to come back to St. Johnſtons, and being admitted to his preſence, he fell at his feet, beſeeching him to forget what ever had been hitherto committed derogatory to his Royal Authority, aſſuring him that he ſhould hereafter be obſerved with all imaginable duty and reſpect. The King having heard this Meſſage, conſidered with his friends what to do thereupon, and though he could not eaſily forget the impoſitions and reſtraints he had ſo lately endured, being perſwaded by their advice, that his return might be a means to unite all intereſts to him, and being aſſured by Montgomery of the reality of thoſe at St. Johnſtons to his ſervice, he condeſcended to return with him thither, to the general joy of the moderate of all parties as well Covenanters as Royaliſts; yet he wanted not at the ſame time an aſſurance from the Gordons and the reſt in the North, to ſecure him againſt the Kirk and all their adherents that ſhould oppoſe his Authority.

The Eſtates at St. Johnſtons ſend Major General Montgomery to fetch the King back.

The King returns back with Montgomery to St. Johnſtons

The Committee of Eſtates were much more compliant with the King at his return than before, and having ſummoned a general meeting to be held at St. Johnſtons conſiſting of the King, Lords, Barons and Burgeſſes, to conſult for the good of the Kirk, King and Kingdom; together with the Commiſſioners of the Kirk then at Sterlin to adjourn their ſitting thither; They applied themſelves to compoſe all differences amongſt diſſenters, of which the moſt formidable were, Huntly, Middleton, and thoſe in the North; but after a while, by the prudence of this Aſſembly, and the good advice of the moderate Clergy, all was concluded, and the Duke of Hamilton, the Marquels of Huntly, and the Earls of Lythgow, Lauderdale, Calendar, and Crafurd, Lyndſey, and the Lords Buchein, Dedup, and Middleton of the Scots, with many others were received into favour and promiſe of imployment in the Army; and of the Engliſh, the Earl of Cleveland the Lord Wentworth, the Lord Wilmot, and ſome few other Royaliſts were continued about the King; for before, none of that Nation but the Duke of Buckingham, Maſſey, Graves and Tyrrel, were permitted near his Perſon.

Divers of the Royal Nobility received into the favour of this Aſſembly.

Whilſt theſe matters were agitated betwixt the King and the Committee of Eſtates at St. Johnſtons, Cromwel was not idle, he had begun to fortifie Leith, and laid a cloſe ſiege to Edinburgh Caſtle, and on the fourteenth of September he marched to Lythgow, and from thence to Falkirk within a mile of Sterlin, (near which place the main of the King's Army lay) and ſent a ſummons to the Town, but was reſolutely denied by the Governour, and he returned back to Lythgow, where General Deane came to him from England with recruits of men and ſupplies of all ſorts of proviſions. But ſince he could not effect any thing againſt Sterlin, he reſolved to try what might be done in the Weſt of Scotland, and in October he marched to Glaſgow, upon intelligence that Major General Montgomery was ordered by the King to march into thoſe parts, to ſecure that Country which was then wavering in their allegiance. In this expedition he hoped to prevail very much either by ſubduing Ker and Straughan (who lay in thoſe parts) to his power, or gaining them to his party; which was a deſign he had long before projected, and ſo far by his inſinuations proceeded in it, that Mr. John Guthry Mr. Patrick Gillaſpy, and Mr. Rutherford Miniſters, with many others of that order withdrew from the Aſſembly at St. Johnſtons, and in print remonſtrated in the name of themſelves and the Weſtern Churches againſt the preſent proceedings, and the admiſſion of Malignants (ſuch they call'd the Kings beſt Subjects) to power and imployment. And with theſe Ker, Straughan, the Laird of Warriſton, Sir John Chiſly, and Sir James Stuart, and others confederated.

The diſſatisfied Miniſters remonſtrate againſt the proceedings of the Eſtates at St. Johnſtons.

The Eſtates and Commiſſioners of the Kirk at St. Johnſtons reſented much this Remonſtrance and the defection of the Miniſters, but no means they could then uſe was of force to reconcile them; Inſomuch, that the diviſion of publick Reſolutioners and Remonſtrators (for by thoſe names they were diſtinguiſhed) continued in that Kingdom with much animoſity till the year 1660. that the King was reſtored to the full exerciſe of his Authority, though the cauſe thereof (which was the joyning all intereſt to oppoſe the invaſion of a foreign Army) had long ceaſed, but by that occaſion Cromwel's Conqueſt was made very eaſie, and his fomenting that rent in their Church, made their ſubjection to his authority more laſting than otherwiſe it would have been.

The King was deſirous to compoſe their diſorder, or at leaſt to prevent the dividing ſo great a force as was under Ker and Straughan from his ſervice; and to that end, the Earl of Caſſels and the Lord Brody, and Mr. Robert Douglaſs the Miniſter, were ſent to treat with them; but they were ſomewhat averſe to a compoſure, yet they declared againſt any conjunction with Cromwel, profeſſing equally againſt Malignants and Sectaries: nevertheleſs, Ker, upon information that Straughan held intelligence with Cromwel, was at length ſo far induced to comply, that he took him 1650. him Prisoner, and sent him to Dunbarton-Castle, from whence he was afterwards removed to Cathnes; but after a while, by the negligence or connivence of his Keepers, he escaped to Edenburgh to the English.

Cromwel, whilst he was at Gloscow, had intelligence that the King's Army intended to relieve Edenburgh-Castle, which made him return thither, and leave Major Gen. Lambert with a good Brigade to make impression in the Western parts. He after some inquiry, discover'd a Ford over Hamilton River, over which, on the last of November, he Marched his Souldiers; Ker had intelligence of this; and, at a Town of that Name, he resolutely fell into Lambert's Quarters, but the English Horse had so soon the Alarm, that they drew together, and so well receiv'd his Charge, that a Hundred of the Scots were kill'd, and the rest routed and pursued as far as Ayr, and Ker himself (having his right-hand almost cut off) was taken Prisoner.

Col. Ker defeated, and taken Prisoner by Major-General Lambert.

Lambert left Colonel Whally with some Troops at Ayr, to Command in those Western parts, and return'd himself to the Gross of the Army.

In England some attempts were made for the King's service, but without success, and particularly in Norfolk, many Gentlemen and others were drawn together, but before they could be form'd into Troops, they were surprised and suppressed by Two Troops from Lyn, and some Forces of the Militia of the County joyned with them, and Twenty of them being afterward found guilty by an Illegal High-Court of Justice, were Sentenced to Death, and Executed thereupon.

The rising in Norfolk for the King suppressed.

Edenburgh Castle had been Besieg'd some Months, with little loss on either side, and Derbyshire Miners were brought out of England to undermine it, who carry'd on the Work Sixty Foot, but the Rock was so hard, they could work no further.

The Governour was one Dundass, a Son-in-Law of old Leven, who was so practis'd on by Cromwel, that he surrendred the Castle on the 24th of December upon the ensuing Conditions.

1. The Castle be surrendred to Cromwel, with all the Ordnance, Arms, Magazine and Furniture of War.

Edenburgh Castle surrendred to Cromwel.

2. The Governour and all the Officers and Souldiers to March out with Colours displayed, Drum beating, Match lighted, and Bullet in Mouth, and to be conveyed to what place they should desire, and every Souldier to have what Baggage he could carry.

3. The Publick Moveables, Records, Writs and Evidences to be removed to Sterlin, or to Fife.

4. Proclamation to be made, that all that had Goods in the Castle, might come or send to own and receive them.

5. All sick or wounded Officers and Souldiers to have liberty to stay in Edenburgh.

6. Horses and Waggons, or other Carriage to be by the English provided for the Governour and the Officers for their convenience of Travel. 1650.

7. Hostages to be given mutually for the performances of the Conditions.

The King and the Committee of Estates were much troubled at the News of this loss, and the more, because thereby they perceived, that what the force of their Enemies could not gain from them, their own Divisions, and the Perfidious Treachery of False Friends would deprive them of. There were found in the Castle 5 French Cannon, 9 Dutch Demi-Cannon, 2 Culverins, 2 Demi-Culverins, 2 Minions, 2 Faulcons, Eight and Twenty Brass Drakes, Two Petards, Eight thousand Arms, near Eighty Barrels of Powder, and a proportionable store of Cannon-shot, with good store of Oatmeal, Butter, fresh-Water, Beef and Pork.

The Master-gunner reported, that when the Guns were drawing to the Batteries, he had so planted his Pieces, that those of the Enemy could not have been planted but with great loss of Men in the action; but when he prepared to give fire, he was forbidden so to do by the Governour, on pain of Death.

Abernethy his Confident went often out of the Castle, on pretence to get intelligence, but the business was, to make a Bargain with Cromwel for the Castle, and when it was surrendred, he staid at Edenburgh, and was ever after a promoter of the Designs of the English for the Conquest and Enslaving of his Native Countrey.

After the loss of Edenburgh-Castle, all the Forts on this side of Sterlin were taken by the English, so that those of the Scots that were Loyal to the King, applied themselves with all diligence to raise what Forces they could to compleat an Army; and that his Authority might have the greater strength and reverence of the People, they immediately proceeded to his Coronation; which was on the First of January solemnized at Scoon, a few Miles distant from St. Johnstons (the Accustomed place for Coronation of the Kings of Scotland) the King being the Forty eighth Monarch of that Kingdom there Crowned.

The King Solemnly Crowned at Scoon.

It was Celebrated with loud Acclamations, Bonefires, Shooting off of Guns, and with as much Pomp and Ceremony as the present state of things would permit. The Nobility, Barons and Burgesses went from St. Johnstons to Scoon in their Robes, bringing thither with them the Crown, Sword, and Scepter; (the whole Scotch Army, which stood all the way as a Guard between those two places, making a Lane for them as they went along. In the Presence-Chamber (where the Lord of Angus attended as Lord Chamberlain for that day) was plac'd a Chair of State, where the King sate with all his Lords and Attendants about him; after a Low Obeysance made to him by all the Company, the Marquess of Argyle made a Speech.

1650. Wherein he declared the Affections of the Parliament, Assembly, and People to him, and of their hopes of good from him, to make them happy, in bringing England and all their Enemies in subjection to him and them. Moreover he added, That the Parliament of Scotland were come to present His Majesty with the Crown, Sword and Scepter.

Then he was attended by all his Train marching in Order before him to the Kirk of Scoon, where, in the midst of a large Stage of four and twenty Foot square, a plat-form was erected with an ascent of two Steps, and on the top thereof a Chair of State was plac'd for the King to sit on; the Canopy of Crimson-Velvet, under which the King went, was supported by the Lords Drummond, Carnegie, Ramsey, Johnston, Brechin and Yester; his Train by four other Earls Sons, the Lord Erefkin, Montgomery, Newbottle, Machlene; the Supporters of the Canopy being likewise supported by six others, the Sons of Noblemen. On the King's right hand went the Lord Great Constable; on his left, the Lord Great Marshal: the Honours were carried before him by the chiefest of the Nobility in this order: Immediately before him went the Earl of Argyle carrying the Crown, next before him the Scepter was carried by the Earl of Craford Lindsey, the Sword by the Earl of Rothes, the Spurs by the Earl of Eglington; As soon as they were entered into the Kirk, and the King seated in his Throne, he took the usual Oath which his Predecessors the Kings of Scotland were wont to take at their Coronation. One of each of the Three Estates of Scotland, namely, the Marquess of Argyle (as being of the Nobles) one Baron, and one Burgess holding the Crown among them; then they delivered it to three Ministers of the Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland, who were appointed by the Estates in Parliament to present it unto them. At the presentation of the Crown to the King by the three Ministers, one of them made his Address in this form:

SIR,

I do present unto you, King Charles, the Crown and Dignity of this Realm.

Then turning his Face towards the People, he said,

Are you willing to have Him for your King, and to become subject to Him?

Whereupon the King turning himself to them, the People cried out with a loud Voice, God save King Charles the Second. Then after he had been Anointed by the three Ministers with the Regal Unction, the Crown was set upon His Head by the Marquess of Argyle, the Scepter was also given into his Hand by the Earl of Lindsey, and the Sword carried before him by the Earl of Rothes. As soon as the Crown was put upon his Head, he made this short Speech to the People,

I do esteem the Affections of my good People more than the Crowns of many Kingdoms; and shall be ready, by God's Assistance, to bestow my Life for your defence, wishing to live no longer than I may see Religion and this Kingdom to flourish in all Happiness.

Adding many other Expressions of his Love and Affection to the People, and afterwards Mr. Robert Douglass made an Hortatory Oration, or Sermon, to His Majesty. 1650.

The Ceremonies of the Coronation ended, and a plentiful Entertainment prepared, the King sate at one Table, and the Lords at another, there passing many Caresses and Testimonies of Joy all Dinner time between them; after which they all returned to St. Johnstons, in the same Order and Pomp they came from thence to Scoon.

After the Coronation, the King intended to March Northwards to hasten the Levies there made, by his Presence; but the Nobility and Gentry of the High-lands, promising to compleat their Numbers with all expedition, He went no farther than Aberdeen; in the mean time, that those Scots that opposed his Authority might be less able to seduce others, Straughan, Swinton, Colonel Dundass (the late Governour of Edenburgh) Major Abernethy, Captain Giffan, and Andrews, were on the Fourteenth day of January Excommunicated for complying with the English.

The King having visited Aberdeen, Dundee, and several other good Towns, returned to St. Johnstons to be present at the Assembling of the Parliament, which met there on the Second of March, and the Duke of Hamilton and many of the Lords that were reconciled to the Kirk, were admitted to their Seats therein. The Parliament applied themselves with all imaginable care for the raising of Souldiers, and proscribed and sequestred the Persons and Estates of all that held correspondence with the English, and that the Levies might be better made, they adjourned the Parliament to the 17th of April, and sent Middleton into the North to Raise Forces there, and others of Authority in other parts, to imploy their Interests to draw Souldiers together, and till they should again be Convened, a Council of State and Committee of War were appointed, of Select Persons, out of each of the Three Estates.

Great care was taken for the Fortifying of the Town of Sterlin, the King himself going often to view the Works, and encourage the expediting thereof. In the mean time on the 15th of April, in a Mist, the Lord Montgomery, Son to the Earl of Eglinton, and the Lord Cranston, with 500 Horse and Dragoons, March'd from Sterlin, and resolutely fell into Lithgow, whence having taken what Prisoners they could in hast meet with, they retreated; yet before they could get to Sterlin, Major Sydenham the Governour of Lithgow, with a good Party pursued, overtook and charged them, but were so well received by the Scots, that 60 of the English were slain, and Sydenham himself so wounded, that he died shortly after. This good Fortune of the Scotch did not long continue; for a while after the Earl of Eglington, the Father of this Lord Montgomery, with one of his Brothers, were taken at Dunbarton by one Captain Crook of Colonel Berry's Regiment. 1651.

Cromwel being at Edenburgh, having notice how the King's Army lay Encamped at Sterlin, and that abun-

1651. abundance of Provision was brought in daily in order to an intended March into England; and that he might be in readiness to prevent it, he drew all his Forces together, and Encamped near Edenburgh.

The Parliament of Scotland were about this time again Assembled at St. Johnstons, and very busie in consultation about their Militia, and providing for the Peace and Security of the Kingdom. Middleton's Northern Levies amounted to near Eight thousand; and it was much controverted, whether those Forces should make a distinct Army, or joyn with the Southern Army; but at last a conjunction of all was agreed; but because there was some Emulation betwixt Lesley and Middleton about Chief Command of the Army, the King resolved to take it himself to prevent all Discontents therein.

The Kings Birth-day celebrated by the Scots.

The 29th of May, being the Kings Birth-day, was celebrated in Scotland with great Solemnity and Feasting, and there was a Muster of all the Troops and Companies, and at night all the Streets blazed with Bon-fires, and the Cannons were shot off from Sterling, Brunt-Island, and the rest of the Scotch Garrisons; but not any place shewed their affection to the King in so particular a manner as the Town of Dundee, from which a large contribution of Money was collected towards his Assistance, and the Citizens presented to him a Rich and Stately Tent, and 6 Pieces of Ordnance, and raised a Regiment of Horse at their own charge.

About the beginning of June the Parliament of Scotland ended, having before their Dissolution, given large Commissions and Instructions for the Pressing of Men in all parts of the Kingdom beyond Fife, and in the Western parts for a New Army, which was to consist of Fifteen thousand Foot, and Three thousand Horse and Dragoons.

An Act of Oblivion in Scotland.

They concluded in a very calm and admirable temper, having passed an Act of Oblivion for all things done thitherto, inviting thereby all Parties to joyn in carrying on the Service of the King, and a new Engagement, with the Sacrament, was taken by all the Nobility, and Officers, and Souldiers of the Army to adhere to him; whereby all Faction and Division seemed in a great measure, to be Obliterated, and Warreston, and those with him, that were Treacherous, or Dissenters, not before Summoned, were on the Penalty of Excommunication to appear at the Assembly at Sterlin by a Limited time.

Cromwel was very vigilant all this while, and waited greedily for any opportunity to draw the Scotch Army to an Engagement, and for that purpose he Marched to Newbridge, and from thence to Lithgow, where from the Battlements of the Castle he discerned the Tents of the Scotch Army encamped in Torwood, about 4 Miles on this side Sterlin, having cast up a regular and well-fortified Line, with Bulwarks and Guns Mounted for their Defence; and having a River behind them, over which they might at pleasure pass.

The King did not think the Force he should raise in Scotland able to fight Cromwel and invade England, without some preparations there for his assistance, to divide the English Forces at home, to which end he kept intelligence with several of his Friends in London, Lancashire, and other parts. And it was contrived that the Duke of Buckingham, the Lord Wilmor, and Major General Massey, should with a Body of Horse March into England, to joyn with a Party in Lancashire, who were, by a prefixt time to be in Arms: but in the midst of these endeavours all their hopes were blasted by the taking of a Ship at Ayre in Scotland, which had been bound to the Earl of Derby in the Isle of Man, and the seizing of Mr. Berkenhead an Agent in the business, by whose Letters all was detected; and thereupon were apprehended Mr. Thomas Cook of Grays-Inne, Mr. Gibbons a Taylor, and Mr. Potter an Apothecary, together with Mr. Love, Mr. Jenkins and Dr. Drake, and several other Presbyterian Ministers, who were brought before a High Court of Justice, and Tried for their Lives, and about the latter end of July, Gibbons, Potter, and Love were sentenced to death, and a while after Gibbons and Love were executed: for at this time the English Parliament thought it necessary to shew some severity to the Presbyterian Party, to deter them from joyning with the Scots upon their coming with the King into England, which was daily expected.

The intended Rising in Lancashire unfortunately disappointed.

Mr. Love and others Tried for their lives.

Love and Gibbons executed.

Cromwel finding his Provision begin to be scarce, Marched on the Third of July close to the Scotch Trenches, and drew up his Army in Battalia, to provoke them to Battel; whereupon they in the night planted most of their Cannon on the brow of the Hill, and the next Morning saluted the English with Fifty Great Shot, which made Cromwel draw back, and give over a Resolution he had to force the Trenches; but since he could not effect any thing here, he made it his next work to land some of his Forces on Fife side; and for that Service Colonel Overton was sent with 1600 Foot, and Four Troops of Horse, who at Queens-ferry, without much difficulty, forced his Landing, and Cromwel at the same time Marched up with his whole Army close to the Scots, with an intent to have fallen upon their Rear, in case they should have moved that way to disturb the Enterprize. Yet to drive the English out of Fife, 4000 Horse and Foot were appointed to March against them, under the Command of Sir John Brown; which was not done so privately, but Cromwel had notice of it, and he sent Major General Lambert and Colonel Okey with 2 Regiments of Horse and 2 of Foot, who were Transported over the Water, and being united with the rest, they engaged Sir John Brown, and gave him an Overthrow, and took himself and Colonel Buchanan, and 1400 more Prisoners, and slew about 2000; by which Victory the English gained so firm a footing in Fife, that they were not easily to be repelled: and soon after Burnt-Island, and a strong Castle upon the River, called Inchgarvie were taken by surrender. And now the King and his Army were necessitated to take that course which long since had been designed, to March directly for England. Cromwel, that he might make himself Master of the Pass at Sterlin, resolved first to set upon St. Johnstons, which, after one days Siege was gained. And the King, as soon as he had knowledge of this loss, March-ed with his Army with all haste Southwards: this departure of the King alter'd Cromwel's Designs upon Sterlin, and he drew his Forces back again over the Frith, making what expedition he could to overtake his Majesty; but the Scots were many days march before him. Major General Harrison, with about Three thousand Horse and Dragoons that lay neerest England, had Orders to March to attend the King's Motions, and Major General Lambert, with about as many more, was appointed, by Advice of a Council of War, to speed after them, and endeavour to fall upon their Rear: and Cromwel himself began his March from Leith with a Thousand Horse and Foot, the very same day the Royal Army entred upon English ground, by the way of Carlisle, which was on the Sixth of August. Upon the expectation of the King's coming into England, a Party in North Wales began to Rise, intending to have joyned with the Earl of Derby, who was to come from the Isle of Man; but this Design vanish'd to nothing.

St. Johnston's taken by Cromwel's Forces.

The King enters England with his Army.

By that time the King was come with his Army as far as Lancashire, he was somewhat hard beset, both by the Forces that followed him out of Scotland, and those that in a short time were raised in England against him. He had in his Rear General Cromwel, (who had left General Monk Commander in Chief in his Absence, with a small dis-joynted Force to carry on the Work in Scotland:) In His Van were the Two Major Generals, Lambert and Harrison, who, by long Marches, got before him, unto whom there came up Two thousand of the Countrey-Militia out of Staffordshire, and Four thousand under the Command of Colonel Birch out of Lancashire, Cheshire, and other parts: and to Flank him, the Lord Fairfax in Yorkshire appeared in the Field with many Troops. Moreover, the City of London poured out a good part of its Militia, and the adjacent Counties, were, by strict Order of the Parliament enjoyn'd to set out Men and Horses at their own charges: nor (which was the worst presage) did the Scotch Army it self keep entire, being curtailed off about Five thousand Men, which dropt away by degrees, there remaining not compleat, as was generally supposed, by that time they came to Worcester, Thirteen thousand Men. The King's hopes also failed him of the general coming in of the Countrey; for the most considerable supply that came to Him, was only one Troop of Horse commanded by Captain Cicil Howard, Son of the Lord Howard of Estrich. Nor is it much wondered at, since the Parliaments Forces had so powerfully over-spread the Countrey, that none could well have the opportunity to stir in behalf of the King; so that before the deciding Blow was given, they appeared to be in a very lost and hopeless posture: but the condition of the Scotch Army at this time is best discovered in some intercepted Letters of the Earl of Lauderdale and others. In one of the Earls, he writes thus:

The great Opposition that he meets with.

The Earl of Lauderdale's Intercepted Letters.

Never Men (saith he in one of them) were more hearty, for all their toyl, and seriously you would not know this Army; a natural Purge is wholsome, (speaking of those that withdrew themselves) and I hope ours is so, since the ill humours are gone. The Country is kind, and we might have Men enough. His Majesty receiv'd the Lord Howard's Son graciously, and Knighted him; he is the first, but I have no reason to believe he will be the last that will return to his Duty.

And in another he hath to this effect;

His Majesty is advanced into England as far as Perith with a very good Army, able (by the blessing of God) to do his business. They are, I dare say, near double the number of those with which the * King of Sweden entred Germany. Never was any Army so regular as we have been since we came into England; I dare say we have not taken the worth of Six pence; and what you hear of our misfortune in Kise, or whatever our Enemies Print or Write, trust none; this is the best Scotch Army that ever I saw, and I hope shall prove best. All those that were unwilling to hazard all in this cause with their King, have, upon a specious pretence, most of them left us. This is a Natural Purge, and will do us much good.

* 6000 Men were all with which the King of Sweden first entred German.

And my Lord Wentworth, in a Letter to my Lord Crofts, writes thus: By God's Grace we are come as far as Perith in Cumberland, with a good Army of Fourteen or Fifteen thousand Foot, and Six thousand Horse, all absolutely at the Kings Command, as much as any Army that ever I saw under the Command of his Father.

The Lord Wentworth his Letter to the L. Crofts.

But in one of Duke Hamiltons to the same Lord, things appear not so well as those Relations describe; his Letter says thus:

We are now laughing all at the ridiculousness of our present State: We have quit Scotland, being scarce able to maintain it, and yet we grasp at all, and nothing but all will satisfie us, or to lose all. I confess, I cannot tell you whether our hopes or fears are greatest; but we have one stout Argument, Despair; for we must now either stoutly fight, or die; all the Rogues have left us. I shall not say, whether for fear or disloyalty; but all now with his Majesty are such, as will not dispute his Commands.

Duke Hamilton's to the same.

The King, at His first entrance upon English ground, was Proclaimed King of Great Britain, at the Head of the Army, with great Acclamations, and Shooting off the Cannon, he being then at Perith in Cumberland, and so afterwards at every Market-Town through which he Marcht. He met no considerable resistance till he came to Warrington-Bridge, where Lambert endeavoured to impede his passage, but the King made his way through with loss to his opposer; and the Parliament at London began to apprehend the Prosperity of his Fortune; but his wearied Forces could not, it seems, hold out a March of that length, so that he came on the 22d of August to Worcester, where, after one or two Repulses by the Forces that kept that City, he quickly entred, through the ready assistance of the Inhabitants, who not only not opposed, but also helpt to beat the Parliament Souldiers out of the Town. Advice came to the King of the distracted condition of those in London, which occasion'd a Debate in Council there-

1651. thereupon for his repair thither; but upon the result, it was resolved on, as a thing most agreeable to their present condition, to stay where they were, and to make good all the Passes that were thereabouts for their better security. On the 27th of August they kept a Solemn Fast, and the next day had a general Rendezvouz, at which the Countrey came in far more considerably than at any time before, since their arrival in England. The King, as he was in his March to Worcester, dispatched away Messages and Invitations unto several Governours of Towns and Castles, to deliver up unto his use those places which they had of his in their possession, and principally to Sir Thomas Middleton Governour of Chirk Castle in Shropshire, and to Colonel Mackworth Governour of Shrewsbury. To the first the Earl of Derby also Writ, and the Letters were sent by one Simkins, whom Sir Thomas caused to be seized and sent to Wrexham: To the Governour of Shrewsbury, both a Letter and a Summons were sent by a Trumpeter, which we think remarkable enough to be here inserted, together with his Answer, to shew the Temper of those then in Authority.

The King's Letter and Summons to Colonel Mackworth Governour of Shrewsbury.

Colonel Mackworth:

Having sent you herewith a Summons to render into my hands my Town, with the Castle of Shrewsbury, I cannot but perswade my self you will do it, when I consider you a Gentleman of an Ancient House, and of very different Principles (as I am informed) from those with whom your employment leads you at present. If you shall peaceably deliver them unto me, I will not onely pardon you what is past, and protect you and yours in your Persons, and all that belongs to you, but reward so eminent and seasonable a Testimony of your Loyalty with future trust and favour, and do leave it to your self to propose the Particular, being upon that condition ready to grant you presently any thing you shall reasonably desire, and to approve my self

Your Friend

C. R.

The Summons was in these words:

Colonel Mackworth:

Being desirous to attempt all fair ways for recovering our own, before we proceed to force and extremity, and (where the Controversie is with Subjects) accounting that a double Victory, which is obtained without effusion of Blood, whereby the hearts that of right belong to us, are gained as well as their strengths: We do hereby Summon you to surrender unto us our Town, with the Castle of Shrewsbury, as in Duty and Allegiance by the Laws of God and the Land you are bound to doe, thereby not onely preventing the mischiefs which you may otherwise draw upon your self and that place, but also opening the first door to peace and quietness, and the enjoyment of every one both King and People, of that which appertains to them, under certain and known Laws, the end for which we are come. Given at our Camp at Tong-Norton, this 20th of August.

Unto this Letter and Summons the Governour returned this Answer.

For the Commander in Chief of the Scottish Army.

SIR,

Col. Mackworth's Answer.

By your Trumpet I received two Papers, the one containing a Proposition, the other a direct Summons for the Rendition of the Town and Castle of Shrewsbury, the Custody whereof I have received by Authority of Parliament; and if you believe me a Gentleman (as you say you do) you may believe I will be faithful to my Trust; to the violation whereof, neither Allurements can perswade me, nor Threatnings of Force, especially when but Paper ones, compel me. What Principles I am judged to be of, I know not, but I hope they are such as shall ever declare me honest, and no way differing herein (as I know) from those engaged in the same Employment with you, who, should they desert their cause they are entrusted in, I resolve to be found, as I am in- deed, the Faithful Servant of the Commonwealth of England.

H. Mackworth.

The Earl of Derby comes with Forces to the King.

About two or three days before the King's arrival at Worcester, the Earl of Derby having landed at Weyder in Lancashire, came to him with Two hundred and Fifty Foot, and Sixty Horse, which he brought with him out of the Isle of Man; and immediately returning back into Lancashire to raise a more considerable force, he soon gathered about 1200 Men, and so much was he beloved in those parts, that a little more time had made him formidable; with these he was Marching upon a Design to fall upon Cromwel's own Regiment then quarter'd at Lancaster in their March towards him; but news came to him of Colonel Lilburn's approach towards him with ten Troops of Horse (which were order'd out of Yorkshire on purpose to hinder his Levies) and Two Regiments of Cheshire Foot. The Earl nothing dismayed at this Force, resolved to engage Lilburn and his party, before the other Troops could come to him, and accordingly he charged them so furiously, that he routed the first Troops, and had made an Impression so far into their Body, that they begun to be disorder'd, till the accession of fresh Reserves, both of Horse and Foot so overpower'd his numbers, that they were totally vanquished: most of the King's Party were Horse, and the fight was in Lanes, where they were much annoyed by the Enemies Musquetiers. There were taken Prisoners of Quality, the Lord Widdrington, Sir Thomas Tidersley, Colonel Matthew Boynton, Sir Francis Gamul, Major Trollop, Sir William Throgmorton, Colonel Richard Legg, Colonel Ratliff, Gerard, and some others, whose Names we know not, and many of these named died of their wounds. The Earl of Derby (having lost his George and Garter) fled with about thirty Horse towards Worcester, having sheltered himself one night in his way in a House called Boscobel, which Heaven by this means had prepared for the King's retreat and preservation.

The Earl of Derby routed by Col. Lilburn.

Cromwel surrounds Worcester.

By this time Cromwel had surrounded Worcester with his spreading Host, in as near a compass as the Rivers and Passes would suffer him, the King's Army as yet lying out of the Town a Mile in the fields. The first Pass endeavoured to be taken was Upton-Bridge on Fleetwood's side, which Major General Lambert attempted with Five hundred Horse and Dragoons, and after a brisk dispute, wrested from Colonel Massey, who in defence thereof received a wound in his hand.

The Scots having thus abandoned the place where they were, it was presently possest by a strong party of Horse and Foot, in order to the present advance of the rest of the Army.

The King's Army was drawn up very near to Worcester, and made many excursions, breaking down two or three Bridges over the River Team, betwixt the Enemy and them, and shewing a well order'd and govern'd courage; but September the Third, that Ominous day being arrived, Cromwel resolved to venture the event upon its former Assicia, and to that purpose, having his Boats in readiness, he passed over his Men in the Afternoon of that day, and drew them all into a Fighting posture, and having given the Signal to the whole Army to fall on, the Fight was begun in this manner.

Worcester Fight.

Cromwel himself in Person (about Four of the Clock) with his Life-Guard, and Colonel Hacker's Regiment of Horse, with part of his own Foot Regiment, with the intire Regiments of Colonel Ingoldsby and Colonel Fairfax, Marched directly towards the City, and after him Lieutenant-General Fleetwood advanced with Colonel Goff's and Major-General Deans Regiments; the King's Forces encountring them at the Hedges betwixt the City and them, and disputing every Field with them, in such Order, and with such Gallantry, that those already engaged (lest they should be wholly discouraged with the hotness of this service), were relieved by Reserves, and they by others, no considerable progress was yet made, the Highlanders proving excellent Fire-men, and coming to the butt-end of Musquet, till wearied with continual action, and their Ammunition spent, the King being then upon the place) commanded them in some haste into the City, and hastned himself to the other side, where Colonel Hayns his Regiment with Cobbets stood about Powick-Bridge, and were entertained with no less Manhood and slaughter, than those on the other side; and though one Colonel Mathews was the Reserve to these two Regiments, yet did the Scotch Foot fairly drive them from their Ground, till at last being harassed out, and no Seconds or Supplies to be expected, in a careless regard of the Enemy, as if they feared not to make which way they pleased, they drew likewise into the Town, as did another Brigade which opposed the Regiments of the Lord Gray and Colonel Gibbons joyned with two others on another part. The King's Army was drawn very close together, and sent out several Bodies, who charged very briskly on the General's side, where the Fight was hottest, (He having brought on the Militia Forces to relieve his other Troops.) In the Head of one of these Bodies the King himself charged with marvellous Gallantry and Conduct, and press'd so hard upon Cromwel's Life-Guard, that the Troop was very much disordered, and the Captain very dangerously wounded; and in another Charge Duke Hamilton, (who behaved himself with undaunted Courage and Resolution) received a Shot on his Thigh, whereof presently after he died.

Duke Hamilton slain at this Fight.

The Militia Regiments of Essex, Surry, and Cheshire, were much annoyed by the Scots, and many of their Men slain; but Cromwel drew on fresh and intire Brigades and Regiments, which were in Reserve, of the Veterane Bands, by which the Royalists were so over-power'd, that they were forced to retreat into the City, which they could not do with such Order, but many of the Cromwellians got in with them. Lesly, with Two thousand Horse (upon what account not known) not stirring out of the Town to relieve his Party, when the Enemy entred. The King retired to his Quarters for a while, and about Seven at Night the Enemy gained the Fort Royal; at which time His Majesty left the City, passing out at Saint Martins Gate, accompanied with about Sixty Horse of the chiefest and most confident of His Retinue (though many more pressed to bear him company) and it was reported, that Cobbet very narrowly miss'd of him as he left his Lodging.

The King defeated at Worcester, but made his escape.

Worcester miserably Plundered.

The Enemies Foot was now got into the Town, and, according to their Order, fell a Plundering the Inhabitants in a most Barbarous manner, giving no Quarter to any that they found in the Streets; and through this their greediness of Spoil, they kept the Gates shut, and the Horse out, lest they should have shared the better part, and thereby favoured (as God would have it) the King's escape. Some Scots who had got into one of the Churches held out till next Morning, when they obtained Quarter for Life; by which time there was not an Inhabitant in Worcester, Friend or Foe, left worth a Shilling of what they had in the Town, but the Royal Inhabitants lost least by the Ravage, being supplied with fresh Wares, to their desires, by the honest Citizens of London, without any scruple of Credit or Payment, and their Debts were forborn till such time as God should enable them to pay, which the Gentry and Inhabitants round about them endeavour'd to bring to pass, by their more than ordinary resort to that Market for all Necessaries, and upon all Occasions. The Major (who was Knighted by the King) and all the Aldermen were committed to Prison, and the Wife of one Guyes (whose Husband for betraying the Designs of the King in that Garrison, was hanged) was rewarded by the Parliament with Two hundred pounds per Annum, and Two hundred pounds in Money.

There were slain in the Field, in the Town, and in pursuit some 2000, and about 8000 were taken Prisoners in several places: most of the English Common-men escaping by their Shibboleth; but at Newport, in the pursuit, were taken the Earl of Lauderdale, Earl of Rothes, Earl of Carnworth, Earl of Kelly, Earl of Derby, Earl of Cleveland, Sir John Packington, Lord Syme, Sir Ralph Clare, Sir Charles Cunningham, Colonel Graves, Mr. Richard Fanshaw, Secretary to the King, many also whose names we have not, (viz.) 6 Colonels of Horse, 13 of Foot, 9 Lieutenant-Colonels of Horse, 8 Lieutenant-Colonels of Foot, 6 Majors of Horse, 13 Majors of Foot, 37 Captains of Horse, 72 Captains of Foot, 55 Quarter-Masters, 89 Lieutenants; there were taken also some General Officers, with 76 Cornets of Horse, 90 Ensigns of Foot, 90 Quarter-Masters, 80 of the King's Servants, with the King's 1651. Kings Standard which he had ſet up when he ſummoned the Country, the Kings Coach and Horſes, and Collar of SS's, but the Kings Perſon they had no power to touch, which recompenſed all the other loſs.

He (as was ſaid before) departed in the dusk, leaving Colonel Careloſs, in the Rear, to keep the Enemy in diſpute, while he was ſomething forward on his way, and the approaching night might favour his eſcape. To which end, all Perſons about him were commanded to ſpeak French, and a preſent Conſultation was held which courſe they ſhould ſteer, and it was reſolved by my Lord of Derby, that they ſhould make what ſpeed they could, and recover a place called Whiteladies before morning, which was ſome 25 miles from Worceſter; and thereupon one Maſter Giffard then in the company, was called for his guidance thither; and one Walker (that had been formerly a Scoutmaſter in the Kings Army) was his aſſiſtant, yet the way was miſtaken as they paſſed a Heath, but by good providence ſoon recovered.

The King deliberates whither to fly.

Betwixt three and four a clock the King reached this place, and Maſter Giffard (after ſome knocking at the door,) called up one George Pendrill, a Servant in the Houſe, who hearing and knowing his voice, ran down in his ſhirt and opened the door, and the King and his Retinue entred; where after a little debate about the ſecurity of his perſon, the ſaid Earl having called thither William Pendrill the Houſe-keeper of Boſcobel, and diſpatch'd another towards Tong to ſee if the Coaſt was yet clear; His Majeſty in the mean while had his hair cut off, and his Buff doublet and Linnen breeches buried, and he was diſguiſed in Countrey habit, with adjuration of the fidelity of the Pendrills (who were now with their Brother-in-Law Francis Yates in number five) committed and entruſted by the Earl of Derby to their fidelity, which they moſt ſolemnly and dutifully promiſed. Then the Earl and the reſt of the Lords, viz. the Duke of Buckingham and that Train, with tears took their leave (Derby would have ſtaid, but there was no probability of ſecrecy for two) and my Lord Wilmot with John Pendrill withdrew himſelf from that company to another retreat; the reſt (except the Duke who lay concealed in other friends houſes about that Country) were taken as aforeſaid at Nempnet by Lilburns Horſe, the ſame who had defeated the Earl of Derby, who now rendred himſelf a Priſoner to one Captain Edge of Lancaſhire, on promiſe for quarter for life.

The Lords leave him at Whiteladies.

Aſſoon as the King was thus left by his Company, with a Wood-bill in his hand, he was conducted into a Wood or Coppice near adjoyning, taking the name of William Jones a Wood-cutter, newly come thither for work, and was accordingly inſtructed in his Tongue and Behaviour: That day proved very wet, ſo that Yates his Wife brought him a blanket to cover him, and a diſh of Milk and Apples for his refreſhment; and at night againſt his coming home (where the Mother of the Pendrills at her Son Richard's houſe moſt joyfully welcom'd him) and provided an ordinary Country Supper; which ended, the King with Richard his guide reſolved for Wales, and went to one Maſter Wolfes of Madely, where for fear of ſearch, he was fain to take up his Quarters in the Barn, where Maſter Wolfe and his Wife attended on him. Here his Majeſty underſtood that the Paſſes over the Water, and the River Why, where ſo guarded, that it was unſeaſonable for him to adventure into Wales; ſo that on Friday night he retreated in his woolen accoutrements about his legs (in which he had lain in that hard lodging in great pain and ſoreneſs) to Boſcobel, where he found Colonel Careloſs (who had alſo betaken himſelf thither for ſhelter;) and by his direction, that Saturday the King went into the Wood, (from the pleaſantneſs whereof the houſe took its name) and aſcended into the top of that moſt celebrated Oak, which being thick with branches ſtretching and ſhadowing fore-right, was altogether impervious to the ſight: and here the Colonel bore him company while he laid his head, and ſlept upon a pillow in his lap. At night they both deſcended, and came into the houſe and refreſh'd themſelves, and the King perceiving the ſecrecy of the place, was not willing to keep longer abroad. He paſt away the Sunday in a kind of Arbour or Banqueting-houſe at the end of the Garden, and there John Pendrill, came to him from my Lord Wilmot, to conduct him to Mr. Whitgraves houſe at Moſeley; whither with much difficulty and danger he himſelf had arrived, but the ſafety there anſwered all. The King approved of my Lord Wilmots advice, and on Monday night (with the guard of the five brethren) and the help of the Millers horſe, he came to Mr. Whitgraves, where he was gladly received by my Lord and that Gentleman, and conveyed into a ſecret place; and there it was conſidered what courſe to take for a further progreſſion in the Kings eſcape; and to this purpoſe one Colonel Lane of Bently was made acquainted with it, and by them it was agreed, that Miſtreſs Jane Lane upon pretence of aſſiſting at the Child-bed of her Siſter, ſhould ride to Briſtol, and the King as her Servant ride before her, with one Mr. Laſſels and his wife behind him, and a Paſs for their more ſecurity in travel was procured.

He quarters in a Barn at Madely.

Comes to Boſcobel, where Col. Careloſs directs him to the Oak.

To Maſter Whitegraves at Moſely.

Mrs. Jane Lane undertakes to convey him to Briſtol.

On their way thither, my Lord Wilmot (as of chance) met with them, having a Hawk on his fiſt, and ſo they journeyed together to Bromſgrave, where the Kings Horſe loſing a ſhooe, He was forc'd to carry his Horſe to a Farrier, who inquiring of News of the King, and being anſwered by his Majeſty, that he believed the King was eſcaped into Scotland, he replyed, that no doubt the King was ſecretly ſomewhere in England, and wiſh'd he knew where; for that he could get a 1000 l. by taking of him. The King departing from thence, comes to Eveſham, where adviſing how to avoid Troopers then grazing their Horſes in the Meadows adjoyning, they lighted upon them in a near Village as they rode, but they civilly let them paſs on their way to Cirencester to the Crown, where they lodged that night, and went the next day towards Briſtol within three Miles of the City, to the Houſe of Mr. Norton of Leigh, the deſigned journeys end. Here the King feigned himſelf ſick, and took his Chamber 1651. by the order and care of Mrs. Lane; but the next morning coming into the Celler, he was taken notice of by the Butler, one John Pope, a Souldier formerly in the late Kings Army, who upon an intent look discerned him, and in all dutiful manner discovered himself to him, with such assurance of fidelity, that he gained his Majesties belief so far, as to be employed by him in getting a Ship for his transportation: thence the King was conducted by my Lord Wilmot to one Colonel Windhams House at Trent in Dorsetshire, where he continued almost three weeks in expectation of a passage from Lime; Soon after his arrival here, Mrs. Jane Lane with Mr. Lassels parted, being openly entertained as Kinsfolk, and came in safety back again to Staffordshire.

The occurrences that happed here, we cannot certainly relate, only the King was disappointed of a passage which a Merchant had procured for him at Lime (by my Lord Wilmot and Colonel Windhams means;) and though the fault was not in the Merchant, but the dejected spirit of the Master of the Bark; yet this disappointment had like to have proved the King's ruine, by the shooing of my Lord Wilmot's Horse, (there was one Mr. Henry Peters that attended him for his Guide.) The Hostler and the Smith discovered by the shooes, that they were come somewhere from the Northern parts by their manner of nailing, and presently raised a rumour of the Kings being there abouts; and whilst the Smith went to advise with a Minister of the matter, my Lord was got away by providence, and the King came to Bridport, where as 'tis since reported, he had like to have been known by an Hostler, as he was setting up the Horses, who welcom'd him as having formerly seen him at Exeter, but did not distinguish who he was, and the King with a proffer of drinking with him when he was more at leisure, withdrew himself from any further discovery. That night they touched at Broad-Windsor, where again the King met with some disturbance by Souldiers then filling those places, in order to their shipping for Jersey. But after all these surprizing adventures, he got again to Colonel Windhams, with the Lord Wilmot, who had overtaken them, and passed by them at Bridport as was agreed, and thence (for it could not be safe to continue longer in that place) he was sent to Salisbury to look out for another Sanctuary, and to confer to that purpose with Master Coventry, who agreed to bring him to Mrs. Hides house at a Village called Heal. The King in his way to Salisbury came to a Town called Mere to the George, an acquaintance of the Colonels, where drinking in the Cellar, the Host seeing the King stand off as a servant, said, Thou lookest like an honest Fellow, Here's an Health to the King; who unreadily answering it, made the man expostulate with the Colonel what Fellow he had brought. The King from Mere went to the House of Mrs. Hide, and was joyfully there received, and introduced to a secret place in the House, and here Colonel Robert Philips came to him, and Colonel Windham took his leave of his Majesty, and returned; and Dr. Hinchman after made Bishop of London, had the honour to be made acquainted with his condition; and Philips was presently dispatch'd to procure some shipping at Southampton, where the Barks being all taken up, and employed by the Parliament, he returned with his labour lost, but meeting with Colonel Gunter, he (being informed of the business) undertook to provide a Bark at Brighthemstead in Sussex, which he effected, and thither the King (and my Lord Wilmot) having taken leave of this Noble Matron and the Doctor, accompanied with Collonel Phillips, (passing by night neat Portsmouth,) came in two days to an Inn at Brighthemstead, where Colonel Gunter and one Master Maunsel the Merchant, who at Gunters request hired the Ship, and the Ship-master Tetersha (now a Captain in his Majesties Navy) met him, and at Supper they set down together with his Majesty, when the Master presently discovered him, having formerly seen him in the Downs, when he obtained the release of his Ship loaden from Newcastle; whereupon the King conferr'd with the Master, who (being wrought upon by promises and money paid down, and his own Loyalty) agreed to transport him to France, and departed to call up his Mariners then on shore (pretending his Ship half-laden with coals was a drift;) but coming home for a bottle of Aqua-vitæ, his Wife by the unseasonableness of the night suspecting the truth, encouraged him to the undertaking, not caring (as she said) if she and her little ones begged their bread, so the King were in safety. About five of the clock in the dark of the morning on the 20*th* of October the King embarqued, with my Lord Wilmot, and keeping the shore all that day, in the evening croft over, and at dark night landed neer Diep in France. In their passage, the King sitting upon the Deck, and directing the course, as they call it, conning the Ship one of the Mariners blowing Tobacco in his face, the Master bid him go further off the Gentleman, who murmuring, unwittingly replied, That a Can might but upon a King. At Rouen the King had his cloaths changed by two English Merchants reiding there, and was there saluted (though at first hardly known) by Dr. Earls late Bishop of Salisbury, and upon notice of his arrival, the Queen-Mother and the Duke of Orleans, and that whole Court went out to meet him, and congratulate his wonderful deliverance: a providence indeed not paralell'd in History, and able to have convinced his Rebels, if their rage had not blinded them; but it chear'd the minds and hopes of his Subjects, by this Pledge of their deliverance from thraldom, in this marvellous protection of Gods Anointed (no less then two and fifty persons being privy to his Escape.)

My Lord Wilmot and he prevailed with a Merchant to procure a Pass, but were disappointed.

He is receiv'd by Mrs. Hide at Heal.

He is safely transported into France by *Tetersha*ll.

He is met by the Queen, Mother and Court of France.

Very few of the Nobles and Officers that came in with him from Scotland escaped, David Lesley and Lieutenant General Middleton were taken in Lancashire, and carried Prisoners to Chester, from whence with the Earl of Lauderdale, Kelly, Rhothes, and others they were committed to the Tower, from whence my Lord Middleton happily escaped, the rest were not long after sent to Windsor Castle, where they continued till the Restitution of the King to his Government.

Most of the Scots taken Prisoners.

On the 23*d* of September, Cromwel came to London,

1651.

1651. London, and was met about Acton with the Speaker and the Members of Parliament, and the Lord Mayor of London and Recorder Steel, who in a set speech congratulated his great successes, and like a false Prophet, by a mistaken Prolepsis applied to him these words of the Psalmist, To bind their Kings in Chains, and their Nobles in Fetters of Iron, in an arrogant exaltation of his Atchievement: next day the Common Prisoners (being driven like a herd of Swine) were brought through Westminster into Tuthil fields (a sadder spectacle was never seen, except the miserable place of their defeat) and there sold to several Merchants, and sent to the Barbadoes; the Colours taken were likewise hanged up in Westminster-Hall, with those taken before at Preston and Dunbar.

Cromwel comes with his Prisoners to London.

We have hitherto without any digression related the fortune of the King from the time of his quitting Scotland to his safe arrival in France; but we shall now briefly describe the transactions that passed in Scotland at that time: Cromwel, when he left the King constituted (as is hinted) General Monk Commander in Chief of the English Army there; which was an Action that carried great envy with it from those of his own party, because Monk had but lately engaged with them; and it was objected, that he had been heard to say he will never draw a Sword in England against the King or his Interest, and therefore they could not expect faithful service from him in Scotland against the same Party; but it is said, he gave such assurance to Cromwel of his fidelity in that station against the people, (who were the first raisers of those unhappy storms that overspread our Nation with the miseries of War and Sedition) that he would not be perswaded to alter his choice.

The English Army left with the General exceeded not six thousand men, and many of these were sick and weak by long marches, but they had by several successful encounters gained a great reputation, and the Scots were much dispirited thereby, so that whilst he found part of his forces were in good heart and his enemies dejected, he immediately march'd to Sterlin, and came thither by that time Cromwel got into England.

Sterlin was at that time governed by Colonel Cuningham, who was so surprized at the suddain approach of the English Army, (believing them to be of much greater number then they really were) that after a short siege he surrendred the Town and Castle upon Articles on the 14*th* of August; where the Kings Royal Robes, the Cloath of State, and all the Scotch Records were found and seized, together with five thousand Arms and forty piece of Ordnance, and great store of Ammunition; but all the goods of private persons there deposited, were delivered to such as would own them: over the door of the Chappel that belongs to the Castle this Motto in the time of King James was written, J. C. R. Nobis hæc invicta miserunt Centum sex Proavi 1617. which shews that that place had remained unconquered during the Reigns of an hundred and six Kings, and so continued all his time and his Sons.

Sterlin with the Castle surrendered to General Monk.

The next place to which the General marched after the taking of Sterlin was Dundee, to which Town the chief of the Inhabitants of Edenburgh and many other Towns and places had conveyed the best part of their Moveables, as a secure depository, so that there was great riches in it. 1651.

Major Lumsdale was Governour of the Town, who had therein eight hundred Soldiers, besides some Companies of armed Inhabitants, whereby he thought himself in so good a condition, that when the General drew near the place, and sent a summons to him, he returned a very slighting answer, hereupon he environed the Town with his Army; but at his first coming thither, hearing that old General Lesly and several of the Lords of Scotland were met at Elliot (about fourteen miles from Dundee) to raise Soldiers, he sent Colonel Alured and Colonel Morgan with a thousand Horse and Dragoons to disturb the Levies, leaving privately the chief conduct and care of the design to his Confident, Colonel Morgan, the other (though the elder Colonel) being not very competent for such a service. These, as soon as they had their Orders, marched in the night and took Scotch Guides to shew them the way to the Town, and by the help of some few Scotch Soldiers, who had revolted to the English, they so dissembled their march, that the Countrey took them for part of their own forces going to Elliot, so that they were got undiscovered beyond the Town about three of the clock in the morning, and then they marched into it with little or no resistance, and took 300 Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Ministers, with about 70 of their Servants, the one of which was General Lesly (who was found hid in a close Cupboard-bed) the Earls Marshal, Crawford, Lindsey, and Keith, and the Lords Ogilby, Burgenny, Hume and Lee, with many other Knights and Gentlemen of note; these were all shipt for, London, but old Lesly putting in at Newcastle, was by the favour of Sir Arthur Haslerig (then Governour thereof) permitted to stay in Northumberland with one De la Val his Son-in-law, upon promise to be a true Prisoner.

Old General Lesly and divers other Scotch Nobles surprized at Elliot.

The General by this means had prevented all possibility of disturbance in his Siege, and seeing he could not by fair means prevail with the Governour to yield up the Town, though he knew by the surprize of Elliot all hope of relief failed, on the first of September he took it by storm, putting all to the Sword that were found in Arms. The Governour with some few for a while saved themselves in a Steeple, but were smothered out by the burning of wet straw, and then they yielded on mercy to one Captain Kelly of Colonel Morgan's Regiment, who was carrying him to the General with purpose to intercede for his life, because of the gallantry of his behaviour in defence of the Town, but as he was going with him, one Major Butler barbarously shot him dead. The Soldiers had very rich booty in this Garrison, for it was at this time the richest Town in Scotland, and there were sixty sail of Ships in the Harbour. After this taking of Dundee, St. Andrews, Aberdeen, with other Towns, Castles and strong places either voluntarily submitted or rendred upon Summons.

Dundee taken by storm.

These successes did not mitigate the severity of the Rulers at Westminster, who about the end of September appointed a Court-Martial to sit at Chester, for the Tryal of the Earl of Derby, and 1651. several other Prisoners taken after the Battel at Worcester, or some little before.

The Earl of Derby beheaded at Bolton in Lancashire.

The Earl upon his Tryal pleaded the Quarter given him by Captain Edge that took him prisoner, which was over-ruled by the Court, and he was sentenced to be beheaded, and on the 15*th.* of October, that rigorous Sentence was executed on him at Bolton in Lancashire; and for the same cause of Loyalty to their Soveraign, and by the same Court, Sir Timothy Fetherstonhaugh, Captain Benbow, and Captain Symptins were sentenced to death, and executed.

Several Royalists taken and imprisoned in the Tower.

This sad occasion obliges us to a further account of those English Royalists who were taken in, and after the same Battel of Worcester, among whom were (besides others mentioned) the Lord Grandison, Sir John Packington, Colonel Blagge, Colonel Edward Broughton, and Major General Massey; these were all except Massey presently imprisoned in the Tower; but he being much wounded, and tired with ridings as he endeavoured to escape, delivered himself up to the Countess of Stamford, who secured him in her house till he was cured of his wounds, upon his engagement to be a true Prisoner; and when he was recovered, he was also sent to the Tower, from whence by a disguise not long after he made his escape. Colonel Wogan was much sought after by the pursuers, but he got safe to the High-lands in Scotland, being resolved to prosecute the Kings Quarrel where Nature had fixt her Non Ultra.

The Isles of Man and Jersey, &c. surrendered to the Parliament.

There remained nothing in England of the antient Dominions and Territories thereof unsubdued to the Power of the Parliament, except the Isle of Man, and the Island of Jersey, and Castle Cornet in the Isle of Guernsey, which were all about this time surrendred to the Authority of the English Common-wealth, and not only these adjacent Islands, but what was in America appertaining to the Crown of England came quickly into their Jurisdiction, as did the Island of Barbadoes (whereof the Lord Willoughby of Parham was Governour for the King) which was yielded up upon Articles to Sir George Ascough about the beginning of January. The Articles were very favourable both to the Governour and Inhabitants, the first having liberty of returning to England, with freedom to his person and estate, and the latter being indemnified for what ever they had done in hostility against the Parliament. It is said, the gaining of this Island was much facilitated by one Colonel Muddyford then in difference with the Governour, whom Sir George had drawn to his party, and by whose power and influence in the Island it was easily obtained. Hereupon the Islands of Nevis and St. Christopher thought it in vain to stand out, but both submitted to Sir George Ayscough.

Barbadoes yielded up to Sir Geo. Ascough.

Popham and Ireton yielded to Fate.

Towards the End of this year two eminent Commanders of the English Common-wealth were taken away by death, viz. General Edward Popham, one of the Generals at Sea; and Ireton, Son-in-law to Cromwel, and Deputy of Ireland, who died of a contagious feaver contracted at the Siege of the City of Limerick in Ireland, which (after an obstinate resistance) he had newly gained. His Corps was transported to England, and brought to London, and interred in Henry the Sevenths Chappel in Westminster with a magnificent funeral pomp and state. He was no doubt a man of much dispatch, of dextrous and able parts, had they been employed in honester designs; and was thought to have been a greater contriver and prompter in the chiefest of his Father-in-laws stratagems. For a time after his decease, Lieutenant General Edmund Ludlow executed his Office, till Colonel Charles Fleetwood who had succeded him in his wife, was thereby preferred to succeed him in the Deputiship of Ireland.

Col. Fleetwood succeeds Ireton in the Deputiship of Ireland.

The English Common-wealth having in some measure quieted things at home, and thinking themselves in a fair way to calm of Peace and Tranquility, took upon them now to give Laws to their subjected Dominions, as also to make Acts of Grace to encourage their Subjects quietly to submit to them: The first related to Scotland, which being in a short time totally brought under, (for besides the gaining of Dunbarton Castle, which was delivered up by Sir Charles Erskin, and Dumotter Castle which was taken by Colonel Morgan, and the Isles of Orkney, the Hebrides, and even Schetland, which is sought by some to be the same that the Antients called Ultima Thule, could not escape their Conquest, which was the work of Colonel Overton) they take into consideration a project, which however it being attempted in former times, could be brought to no effect, they resolved to go through with; namely, an Union of England and Scotland, and Incorporating of both Nations into one Common-wealth. This was mainly opposed and remonstrated against by the Scotch Kirk, though in vain; for the Parliament of England, (as they called themselves) had resolved upon an Act for the Union of Scotland, and the abolishing of Kingly Government in that Nation, intending that the Shires or Burghs should chuse their Deputies to represent them in Parliament, in such a proportionable number as the Parliament should think fit. And Commissioners were sent from hence in behalf of the Common-wealth of England, to treat concerning this Union with the Natives, whom they found but very cold entertainers of their Proffer, besides the tough opposition of the Clergy. These Commissioners were Oliver St. Johns, Sir Henry Vane, Major General Dean, Major Salmon, Colonel Fenwick, and Alderman Tichburn: And not long after were sent down as Itinerant Judges to hear, determine, and make inspection into all things belonging to the Government of that Nation, Mr. George Smith, Mr. John March, Mr. Edward Moseby, and Mr. William Lockart a Scotchman: But these Judges were several times altered at pleasure. But to the Commissioners there came in and submitted divers of the Scotch Nobility; as the Marquess of Huntly, the Earls of Weems, Angus, and Calender, and the Lord Belcarris, and others; but of all that came in of the Nobility, the Marquess of Argyle was he that most complied and adhered to the Common-wealth Interest, notwithstanding all the professions and shew he made when the King was in Scotland, and of the Lairds that acted amongst the

The Parliaments Act of Oblivion.

The next Act of Grace was to England, and was an Act of Oblivion, wherein they publiſhed it to be their intention to forget all injuries, and pardon all hoſtilities hitherto committed againſt them, upon condition of taking an Engagement, which they impoſed upon all People, wherein they were to promiſe, To be true and faithful to the Commonwealth of England as then eſtabliſh'd, without King or Houſe of Lords; out of which nevertheleſs were excepted the Lord Goring and his Sons, Sir John Webſter of Amſterdam, the Executors of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the ſlayers of Doriſlaus and Aſcham.

The occaſion of the War with Holland.

Scarce were theſe and ſome other little tranſactions finiſht at home, when there began to be in preparation new Matter for the exerciſe of their Arms abroad, in reſpect of a ſecret grudge which had lain a pretty while ſmothering between them and their Brother States of Holland, which was probably in a great part occaſion'd through the ſlight and indifferent reckoning of Doriſlaus (whoſe Aſſaſſination they thought, perhaps, not ſufficiently enquired into;) and afterwards of their Embaſſadors Oliver St. Johns, and Walter Strickland, who being affronted by the Common People in Holland, thought themſelves not ſufficiently vindicated by the States, nor reſpected according to the Dignity of their Maſters, and therefore came away in diſcontent; and though the States ſent hither afterwards, as their Agent, Myn Heer Joachim, with ſeveral Complements and Excuſes, with Commiſſion to treat about a fair Correſpondence and Commerce with England; yet our States at Weſtminſter were now reſolved they ſhould not have their Friendſhip on ſuch eaſie terms as before they offered by their Embaſſadors, ſince they then made no more account of it: ſo that they diſmiſſt Joachim after a preſixt time, beyond which he was not to ſtay, and then proceeded to make an Act, For the Encouragement of Navigation; wherein they prohibited the importing of any Foreign Commodities except upon Engliſh Bottoms, or ſuch as were of the Country whence the Commodities came; beginning withal to ſtand high upon claims of Dues and Reparations for the prejudice done us in our Trading; upon which, occaſion was taken oftentimes to ſearch the Dutch Ships, and ſometimes to make prize of them. To complain of theſe damages, but more eſpecially, if it were poſſible, to obtain a ſuppreſſion of the ſaid Act ſo prejudicial to their Trade, they ſent over into England their Embaſſadors, Myn Heeren Catz, Van de Peere, Sharp and Newport; theſe Men however coming as moſt zealous Advocates for a ſpeedy pacification, and relying much upon the favourable reception they ſhould meet with here, were nevertheleſs at their very firſt Audience accoſted with ſuch high Demands about the Herring-fiſhing, the buſineſs of Amboyna, and a free Trade in the Schelde, from Middleburgh to Antwerp, that they were able to give but a cold account to their Maſters in the Affair they came about: and though ſome Meſſages for a while paſt to and fro for the Vindication of each others actions, the Dutch all the while making great Proteſtations of their ſincere and real intentions towards this Commonwealth) yet ſtill preparations for War were privately made on both ſides. 1651.

Lilburn Baniſh'd.

This year ended with an Act for the Baniſhment of John Lilburn, who being a perſon of a turbulent nature, had, with wreſtleſs impatience oppugned all Government, in ſo much that it was ſaid merrily of him, If all the World were diſpeopled to him alone, John will be againſt Lilburn, and Lilburn againſt John. It was provided in this Act, that if ever he returned without leave from the State, he ſhould ſuffer as a Felon. That which cauſed this ſeverity againſt him at this time was his violent oppoſition of Sir Arthur Hazlerig, a leading Member of the Parliament about a Coal-pit in his poſſeſſion, claimed by one Primate: wherein he did not only lay many oppreſſions and ſcandals to the charge of Hazlerig, but in the publication thereof arraigned the Juſtice of the whole Commonwealth.

The Hollanders ſet forth a great Fleet.

The States of Holland ſet out a very great Fleet for the ſecurity of their Trade for this year, and in their Inſtructions to Martin Harpez Van Trump their Admiral, they directed him not to ſtrike his Flag to the Engliſh Admiral, and the ſame Orders were given to every of the Ships of War, if occaſionally they met any ſingle Ships of England, or others, that were not too numerous for their oppoſition.

The Engliſh on the other ſide they knew would not eaſily loſe the Dominion of the Sea, which, in all Ages they exerciſed without controul; ſo that Van Trump coming into Dover-road on the 17*th* of May with Two and forty Sail, lay there at Anchor, as to dare them to oppoſition, and notice thereof being given to Blake the Engliſh Admiral, he made haſt to play up towards him with about 15 Ships and Frigots; but when Trump deſcried the Engliſh Fleet, he weighed his Anchor, and ſtood away by a wind Eaſtward, intending (as Blake ſuppoſed) to leave them to avoid the diſpute of the Flag; but about two hours after they altered their Courſe, and bore directly with the Engliſh Fleet, and Van Trump was head-moſt, whereupon the Engliſh lay by, and put themſelves into a fighting poſture, judging, the Dutch had a reſolution to engage. Being come within Muſquet-ſhot, Blake gave Order to fire at his Flag, which was done thrice, and after the third ſhot, Trump let fly a Broad-ſide, and it was well returned by the Engliſh Admiral; and after the Exchange of Broad-ſides, Major Bourn came in to Blake's aſſiſtance with Eight good Ships, and then both the Fleets engaged from Four in the Afternoon till it was dark, and though there were not leſs than Two thouſand Shot of Cannon exchanged on one ſide and the other, the loſs of Men was not great, and the greateſt was of the Hollanders, of whom one Ship was ſunk, and another taken, and about an Hundred and fifty Men ſlain; the Engliſh had not any Ship diſabled, and very few Men killed. Van Trump drew his Fleet in the Night to the back of Goodwin Sands, and the next Morning ſailed away for Zealand.

The firſt Sea-fight between the Dutch and Engliſh.

The Dutch came off with loſs.

The Holland Embaſſadors at London, by their Memorials, endeavoured all they could to perſwade

1652. swade the Parliament, that this Action of Trumps was without the privity or consent of their Masters, and thereupon demanded a restitution of the Ship taken by Blake in the Fight; but the People at London were so inflamed with the News of the Fight and Trumps carriage in it, that they insisted not on that demand, and the Parliament was necessitated to appoint a Troop of Horse to Guard the Embassadors from the rage and fury of the Multitude.

The States apprehended this business might cause a Rupture betwixt them and the English, and therefore they dispatched the Heer Paw to England in the Quality of an Embassador Extraordinary, who was so very well received at his arrival at London, that he believed he should not only extinguish the flame already kindled, but perfect that Negotiation formerly treated on by the other Embassadors. But in this he was much deceived, for when he and the other Embassadors had joyntly presented a Paper to the Parliament to excuse the late enterprize of Trump, they returned an answer that did not at all content them, for they peremptorily required, To be paid and satisfied for all the Charges and Damages they had been put to and sustained by the preparations of the States General, and other attempts this Summer, before they would treat on any other proposition. The States of the United Provinces being advertised of this proceeding, immediately recalled their Embassadors and thereupon the War was vigorously prosecuted on both parts, and in a very little time Van Trump was again at Sea with an Hundred and twenty sail of Men of War; but he got not out soon enough to prevent General Blakes sailing Northward with Seventy sail of Ships of War, to interrupt the Dutch Fishing-Trade, and look for Five Dutch East-India Ships, which were at that time expected to return home that way.

Trump out again at Sea with an 120 Sail.

In the mean time, about the 6th of June, Sir George Ascough arrived in the Downs with the Barbadoes Fleet, consisting of 15 Men of War, having taken in his way Ten Dutch Merchant Ships and Four Men of War, one whereof was a Ship of Advice, to give notice to their Merchant-Ships of their present differences.

The Parliament, upon his arrival, sent Orders to him to stay there, till a Fleet then providing in the Thames should be made ready to joyn with him.

Trump having intelligence thereof, about the beginning of July clapt in with a part of his Fleet between Sir George and the River, and sent the other part Westward to prevent his going that way, resolving either to surprize those coming out of the Thames, or to sink and disperse those with Sir George Ascough; but the Governour of Dover gave so speedy advice of the posture of the Enemy, that the Navy in the River moved not, and then Trump on the Eighth of July made towards Sir George to assail the Fleet, but the wind failing, they came to an Anchor a League off, and before the next Ebb, the Militia of that Country was ready upon the Coast, and Sir George his ships well re-inforced with Men, and a Platform was cast up betwixt the Castles of Deal and Sandown, whereon good store of Cannon were planted to receive them, but at the next Ebb, whilst they were under sail, the Wind came about South-West, and blew so directly in their teeth, that they could not possibly make in to them. 1652.

Trump, upon this disappointment, returned to Holland, to convey several Merchant-men for the Northern and Eastern Trade, that lay ready for him; with which he sailed toward the Sound, and in his way he receiv'd Advice, that Blake had spoiled and dispersed their Herring-Fishing, and taken twelve Men of War that guarded them, and was with his Fleet in Harbour about the Isles of Orkney, wherefore he sent part of his Ships to guard the Merchant-men on their Voyage, and with the rest he sailed to find out Blake, having met in his way the Five East-India Ships, but when he came near those Northern Islands, such a storm arose, that he was forced to put to Sea, and his Fleet was so scattered, that he came home but with Two and forty sail, and three of the East-India Ships, but shortly after the other two East-India Ships, and all the Fleet, except six, came home in safety; and Blake came safe to Yarmouth with all his Fleet and six of Trumps Frigots, which he had met with, and Nine hundred Prisoners.

In this time Sir George Ascough had got a Fleet together of about Forty sail, with which he sailed to Plymouth to secure our Merchant-ships homeward bound, where there safely arrived five Ships from the East-Indies, and two from the Streights; Whilst Sir George lay there, De Ruyter was passing that way with a Fleet of Fifty Men of War to convey about the like number of Merchant-ships that way: about two in the afternoon, on the 16th of August, the English Fleet got sight of the Enemy, and De Ruyter sent away his Merchant-ships, and made ready for the fight; and about four, Sir George, with Nine of his head-most Ships, charged through the Dutch Fleet, and got the Weather-gage of them, and charged them again, but the rest of his Fleet being Merchant-men, and not coming up, and the Night being already entred, both Fleets drew off from each other; the Dutch into one of the French Ports, and Sir George to Plymouth, to mend and repair the damages of the Fleet; Captain Peck, his Rear-Admiral, lost his Leg and soon after died, and several other Captains were wounded, but not one Ship lost; what loss of Men the Dutch sustained, was not known, but none of their Ships were disabled.

Sir George Ascough and De Ruyters Engagement at Plymouth, being the second Combate with the Dutch.

Van Trump was at this time very much discontented upon some rumours spread of his failure of conduct in the last expedition, so that he desired the States that he might leave his charge and retire; the States seemed very unwilling to comply with his request, but at last they consented to it, and Wit Wittens was appointed in his place, to whom De Ruyter was joyned in Commission. These two Commanders made what speed they could to get their Fleet to Sea, and in October they made their stations on the side of the North-Foreland; Blake, assoon as he had notice thereof, hastned with his Fleet towards them, having been on the Western Coast to Convey some Merchant-ships homewards, and taken in his way five Dutch West-India ships of great value, and six Streights-men, valued at Two hundred thousand pounds.

He

1652. He divided his Fleet into three Squadrons, one commanded by himself, the other by Penne the Vice-Admiral, and the third by Rear-Admiral Bourn, and the 28th of October the Fight was begun by Bourn, and seconded immediately by the whole Fleet, wherein great Courage was shown on both sides, the Rear-Admiral of the Dutch was boarded and taken, and two more of their Ships were sunk, and one blown up, so that Wit Wittens was glad to give over the conflict, and to ply his Sails to get off, being pursued by the English Fleet within Twelve Leagues East South-East of the Maze, and he with the remainder of his torn and much shattered Ships, came into Goree. The English preserved all their Ships, though many of them were much battered, and Blake came in Triumph into the Downs.

De Wit worsted by Blake, being the Third Engagement with the Dutch.

The Dutch were much troubled at the loss of this Combat, which was by Wittens imputed to the Cowardize of some of his Commanders, and the advantage of the English Ships over them in number and strength.

But nevertheless the States thought it not convenient to hazard another Combat till they had a more sufficient Fleet than before, both in the goodness and strength of their Ships, and the number also.

Both they and the English in the first beginning of the War, had sent to the Swedes and Danes to invite them to their Party, because the Materials for shipping came from the Seas where these Princes had the chief Dominion; the Swedes were very favourable to us, and at last would be Neuters, if not Partakers with us, and the Queen sent hither Monsieur Spiering her Embassador, who died shortly after his arrival at London, and after his death Monsieur Appleboom succeeded: but the Danes declared for the States of the United Provinces against us. And about this time their King sent a Message to them, that he was ready to succour them with Twenty good Ships of War, provided they would re-establish Trump in his late Employment as Admiral. The States were very willing to comply with this Proposition, and Trump was again prevailed with to re-assume his former charge.

The Danes sides with the Dutch.

In the Levant Captain Badily with four or five English Frigots was set upon by Van Galen, who commanded a Fleet of 16 Sail of Dutch Men of War in those Seas, in which encounter the Phœnix was taken by the Dutch, and the rest of our Ships were forc'd to retire under the Protection of the Port of Longone; but Van Galen bought his Victory with the loss of his Life, and the Phœnix was on the Twentieth of November regain'd by the valour of Captain Cox a former Lieutenant to the same Ship.

The Eng. lish come off with loss in the Levant.

Van Trump being restored to the Office of Admiral, was very industrious to give a proof of his courage in some valiant Enterprize; and to that purpose, having got together Eighty Men of War, and Ten Fire-ships, he sailed directly to the back-side of the Goodwin, near the place where the former Battel was fought. Blake was in the Downs with few more than Forty Sail, but was nevertheless resolved not to refuse an Engagement, and for that purpose he hoysed his sailes to find out Trump and sent out seven Ships to discover his Fleet, which were met by nine of the Dutch Ships sent out on the same Errand. These began the Fight with their Cannon, and immediately the two Admirals advanced at the Head of their Squadrons, and the Fight was very furious, and lasted from Two in the Morning on the Twenty ninth of November, Old Style, till six in the Evening. The Triumph, wherein Blake himself was, with the Victory and Vantguard, bore most of the stress, being engaged at one time with Twenty of the best Dutch Ships, and though it was long doubted on which side the fortune of the day would turn, yet at last the numbers of the Dutch drew it to that side, with the loss of the Garland and Bonaventure which were taken, and of one that was burnt, and three sunk; and indeed had not the Night been favourable to our retreat, the whole Fleet might have been in much danger. But the Dutch could not much boast of this Victory; for they lost many Men, and one of their Flag-ships was blown up, and all the Mariners and Souldiers therein lost, except two; and the Ships of Van Trum and De Ruyter were much damaged.

1652. The fourth combate with the Dutch.

Blake defeated in the Downs.

Blake, after this defeat, drew his shatter'd Fleet into the River of Thames to be repaired, and it is said, Trump triumphantly sailed through the Channel with a Broom on his Main Topmast, pretending to sweep the Channel of all English Shipping; and having sent home all his disabled Ships, after some little stay about Guernsey and the Western Parts, he arrived at the Isle of Rhe, to stay there for a Fleet of Merchants Ships, which were to be convoy'd homewards. In the mean time all possible care was used by the English States to equippe a Fleet to meet him as he return'd, and General Monk was added to the number of the Generals at Sea; and General Dean being newly arriv'd from Scotland, was order'd to go to Sea with Blake and Monk; so that under the joynt Command and Conduct of these three Generals, the War at Sea was to be managed.

The expence of this War made this Parliament contrive all ways they could to husband their Treasure, and because they thought the entertainment of the Duke of Glocester (whom since the Murder of the late King they had kept at the Isle of Wight) too great an expence, they resolved to send him abroad, and about the beginning of February they sent him with two Servants to Dunkirk, promising to allow him a small Exhibition for his Maintenance, if he would not come near his Brother, nor any of his Relations.

The Duke of Glocester sent away to Dunkirk.

But as soon as he came on that side of the Water, he was received according to his Birth and Quality, and from Bruxels, he was attended to the Princess of Orange at Breda, where he safely arrived, to the great joy of her and all the Royal Family, who had been in continual fear, that his life would be taken away by those that spared not the life of his Royal Father.

He is conveyed to Breda.

After he had been a while at Breda, he was conducted from thence by the Earl of Lauderdale to Paris to the King his Brother, to whom as also

From whence he is conducted to Paris to the King his Brother.

1652. also to his Mother the Queen, and his other Relations, he was welcomed as one risen from the dead, and was very civilly treated by the King and Queen-Mother of France, and that whole Court.

The King of Denmark's Confederacy with the States of Holland made the Parliament very solicitous to draw the Queen of Sweden to their interest, but she continued in a resolution of Neutrality, and offered her Mediation for a Peace betwixt the two States, which yet took no effect; but the Dutch, to strengthen their Party, were very earnest with the French, by their Ambassadour Bourcel at Paris, to conclude a League Offensive and Defensive with that Crown, and herein they doubted not to succeed, because the English were in a kind of Hostility at this time with the French. For, about the latter end of August in this year, some of the Parliaments Frigots had taken seven of the King of France his Ships which were going to the relief of Dunkirk, then besieged by the Arms of Spain, by which means that Town came into the hands of the Spaniards: but the reputation of the English Common-wealth was at this time so great, that Cardinal Mazarine, who then managed the Affairs of France, endeavoured rather an Accommodation with them than otherwise; so that the Dutch missed of their purposes in that Negotiation, and about the Month of December Monsieur De Bourdeaux was dispatched as Agent from the King of France, to acknowledge the English State. This Action of the French at this time was looked on with much reflection by those that were Friends to the Crown of England: for our King had, by his excellent wisdom and address, newly composed the Civil Commotions of that Kingdom, wherein the Princes of the Blood had possessed themselves of Paris, and begun and formed a great Party against the King, demanding to have the Cardinal banish'd, and several real or pretended Grievances redressed, and so formidable were they grown, that the Cardinal withdrew himself to Colon for fear of them, and the Duke of Lorrain was on their behalf entred into the Bowels of France with an Army, whereby a great effusion of Blood had ensued if His Majesties Mediation had not prevented it; by which the Crown of France was not only raised to a great lustre, but the Cardinal, whose Fortune was by most Men judged desperate, was with the Peace restored to his former Authority and Greatness.

The Parliament solicits the Queen of Sweden to espouse their interest.

Monsieur Bourdeaux sent Agent from the French King to the English States.

The King reconciles the differences between the King and Princes of France.

The States of Holland having advice that the Parliament was equipping a Fleet to be put to Sea under their three Generals, sent an express to Trump (then at Rhe) to hasten away with what Merchant-men were ready, and to block up the River of Thames to prevent their going out; Trump, upon receiving this Order, made what hast he could; but contrary to the expectation of the States, and even to their amazement, on the eighth of February, the English Generals set sail from Queenborough with Sixty Sail of Men of War, to which, on the Eleventh of the same Month, Twenty Sail more joyned from Portsmouth, and with this Fleet they sailed over against Portland, where they lay cross the Channel, half Seas over, to discover the Dutch Fleet; on Friday, the Eighteenth of February, by break of day, the Souther-most Ships of the English descried the Dutch, consisting (as their own Prints reported) of Seventy six Men of War, who had the charge of Three hundred Merchants Ships to Convey homewards. 1652.

The English Fleet made what Sail they could towards the Enemy, and Van Trump having recollected his Ships of War, prepared to receive them; and about Eight in the Morning, the Triumph, wherein Blake and Dean were, with Twelve Ships more (for the rest of the Fleet could not get up) engaged Board and Board with the grois of the Dutch Fleet, and the Triumph was hardly put to it, having received Seven hundred Cannon-shot in her Hull, but was gallantly relieved by Lawson Commander of the Fairfax. By this time the whole English Navy came up, and a furious Fight ensued betwixt the two Fleets, which continued till the Night parted them.

The Two Fleets Engage near Portland. The Fifth time.

The Ship wherein General Monk commanded, being a slow sayler, could not perform so much as he desired, but she lost many Men, and had as great a share in the Fight as any of her condition. The Triumph and Fairfax being enclosed by the greatest of the Holland Ships, had in each an Hundred killed and wounded, and Blake received a hurt in his Thigh with a piece of Iron which a Shot had driven out, and Ball the Captain thereof was slain, together with Sparrow the Secretary. The Prosperous, a Ship of Four and forty Guns, was boarded by the Dutch, but recovered by the Merlin Frigot, Captain Mildmay of the Vanguard was killed; the English lost not a Ship in this Fight, but had many disabled: but Six Men of War of the Dutch were taken and sunk, whereof one was a Flag-ship, and it is said, that most of the Officers in Trump's Ship were killed or wounded, and many of the Mariners. Such of the English Fleet as were disabled got into Portsmouth, and the wounded Men were set on shore, and on on Saturday Morning the Dutch Fleet was again discerned seven Leagues off Weymouth, and over against Dungennes, whither the English plied; and in the Afternoon both Fleets engaged with so much fury, that they were quickly environed with flame and smoke. Trump had put his Merchant-men before him, and after the first shock, he drew off and fought retreating towards Bulloign, and in his way thither the English Frigots at large took many of his Merchants ships, and Lawson boarded a Dutch Man of War, and brought her off. The next day early in the Morning the Fight was renewed, which continued very fierce till Four in the Afternoon, but the Wind being cross to the English at North North-East, Trump got to Calice Sands, and there Anchored, and thence Tided it home.

The Dutch Beaten in this Fight.

The Dutch lost in these three days Fight eleven Men of War, and thirty Merchants Ships, and by the calculation of their own Prisoners, they had no less than Fifteen hundred Men kill'd; but of the English, though many Ships were shatter'd, there was but one sunk named the Sampson, but Captain Button the Commander thereof (though much wounded) and most of the Men were saved. The number of the English slain is not reported, but by the best conjecture that could be made, they were not much less than those of their Enemies.

This

1652. This Year died the Lady Eleanor Davys, whose Prediction concerning the late Duke of Buckingham's Death was thought remarkable enough to be commemorated by several Writers of the History of those Times, amongst the Presages that threatned the untimely end of that Great Man: And this coming from a Person of her Quality, was so much the more subject of Critical Discourse and Censure among the Wits of those Times; and whence, perhaps, some later Observers have taken Aim: but, since common Fame in these cases is ever apt to take things upon trust, and for want of due examination, to fix reproach as soon upon the best as the worst, it may much conduce to the rectifying of misinformed Judgments, and the vindicating of the Memory of so Vertuous a Lady from the injurious reflections of unweary Writers, to give this faithful account of her:

1652. This Year died the Lady Eleanor Davys.

She was the fifth Daughter of the Lord George Audley Earl of Castlehaven, and was married to Sir John Davys the Kings first Serjeant at Law in England, and sometime Attorney General in Ireland (whose Worth his own Learned Writings, and the known Credit he had with his Prince, sufficiently speak) by whom she was the Mother of one only Daughter, Lucy, who was married to Ferdinando late Earl of Huntingdon, and (by her) Grand-mother to the present Earl. As for her Character, there needs little more to be said (since nothing can be more advantagiously) than to repeat what hath been delivered of her by the Elegant Pen of the Learned Doctor Du Moulin: She was (saith he) Erudita supra sexum, Meris infra sortem: Learned above her Sex, Humble below her Fortune, having a Mind so great and Noble, that Prosperity could not make it remiss, nor her deepest Adversity cause her to shrink or discover the least pusillanimity, or dejection of Spirit; for being full of the Love of God to that fulness, the smiling World could not add, nor the frowning from it detract. Hence as from a Living Spring, flowed a full Stream of Christian Graces, redounding to the benefit of many, as well as to her own Comfort. She had a fineness of Wit, but so temper'd with Prudence and Consultation, that she early addicted her self to serious Speculation, and the Study of Divine Truths. Wherefore, since our Saviour bids us examine (especially in these Cases) the Tree by the Fruit, we recommend it to the consideration of the Judicious, whether a Person so qualified and so addicted, might not with most equity be judg'd on this occasion, to have been favoured with some beam of a Divine Knowledge of future things: Certain it is, that not only in the above mentioned, but in divers other Events both of private and publick Concernment, her Predictions proved undoubtedly true. In the most flourishing condition of the Nation, she foretold its unparallel'd Troubles, and in the depth of those Troubles she foretold that happy Restauration to Peace and Settlement which we at this day (through the Mercy of God) enjoy under our most Gracious Sovereign, and in every one she long before prefix'd the time of their accomplishment.

This busie Year ended with the safe arrival of Prince Rupert with the Swallow, and a prize laden with Tobacco, and a little Frigot at Nantes in Britany, from the Carib Islands. He had been sometime in those Seas with Seven or eight Ships, and his Brother Prince Maurice with him, endeavouring to give what annoyance he could to the Enemies of the Crown of England in those parts, till some serviceable occasion might render him more favourable elsewhere; but the said strokes of adverse Fortune, which yet eclipsed the Royal Throne of England, did even in those distant parts pursue this Illustrious Pair of Princes, and by the violence of a Hurricane, the life of one of them (the vallant Prince Maurice) was taken away; a person who in our unhappy Civil Wars gave eminent proof of as much courage and generosity as any one man could be Master of, than whom death has left few worthier behind, to dignifie the World with Actions of Glory and Renown. Prince Rupert at his first arrival fell sick, but upon his recovery he was invited to Paris, and complemented by the King of France, and cordially welcomed by the King our Soveraign, where now almost the whole Royal Family were met together.

1652. Prince Rupert arrives in Britany from the Carib Islands.

Prince Maurice drown'd in the West Indies.

It is commonly observed, that it is easier much to obtain a Conquest than secure it; and in nothing was this more visible than in the present posture of Affairs in England, where the New Common-wealth now advanced to as great prosperity and security as their ambitious hopes could aim at, having, together with the death of the late King, as much as in them lay, even buried and eradicated Monarchy it self, began to sink under its own weight, and by intestine divisions at home, to meet that ruine, which all the strength and power of their Enemies abroad, and their Confederates could not reach to.

The Officers of the Army who effected this change, had met in Council some Months before in meditation of altering the Government; and these being of two Parties, and of different interests, it was scarce believed they could agree in the design. Harrison, who was one of the Heads of that Party at this time, known by the name of the Sect of the Fifth Monarchy, had gained a great part of the Inferiour Officers, and these were so much intoxicated with that Notion, that they never could approve of any Government, but where (as they said) Christ was to Rule, which, as they explained, (was a Dominion to be exercised by Saints under him) Men of such Holy and Sanctified Lives, that nothing but Plenty and Happiness could be expected from their Government, and to such, all Officers of Trust and Power, Military and Civil were to be committed, and of this sort they resolved to chuse by nomination a new Representative. Cromwel mingled with these Zealots in this projection, knowing the inconsistency of their intentions, and that the Ruins of Power would be by them managed (as the poets feigned Phaeton's conduct of the Chariot of the Sun) to set the World in a flame, and introduce such confusion as would necessitate his taking to himself the Government to relieve his party from destruction.

The Officers of the Army consult about a change of Government.

1653. The Parliament were very ſenſible of theſe actings, but knew not how to prevent their progreſs, yet that they might not be wanting to their own ſecurity, they had many Conferences with theſe Officers, wherein they repreſented to them the Inconveniences of their proceedings, telling them, as the temper of the Nation now ſtood, no ſafety could be adminiſtred to the Government, but by filling up the Houſe with Elections by the Country, of perſons qualified, and when they were by that method arrived to a full Repreſentative of the Nation, their Acts would be received with greater Authority, and by the concurrent Advice of ſo great a Body of intereſted perſons, their cauſe would be ſtrengthned, and the good they would do in reforming the Law and all Abuſes, and adminiſtring Juſtice impartially, and ſetling a due Liberty to the People in Civil and Spiritual things, would make the Government in a few years ſo acceptable, that there would be no need of an Army to ſupport it.

To this anſwer was made by the Officers, That they could not expect any good Fruits to the People of God from this Parliament, wherein there was ſo great a Party of Carnal Men of corrupt Principles, that the perſons by their Authority to be choſen would be of the like temper and ſpirit as they are, and joyn with them in perpetuating themſelves in the Supreme Government: Concluding, That the People of the Land, who were diſtinguiſhable from the people of God, were not yet to be truſted with the choice of their own Repreſentatives: But they (they ſaid) would take care to devolve the Supreme Authority upon known perſons fearing God, and of approved integrity. This reaſoning on both ſides tended to ſpake the breach wider, but the Parliament, in the mean time went on according to their own purpoſe, and prepared an Act for the ſetling of Qualifications of Members to fill up their Houſe, wherein ſuch ſpeed was made, that on the twentieth of April the Queſtion was ready to be put to paſs it into a Law, when Cromwel, Lambert, Harriſon, and ſome eight Officers more of the Army, by intelligence with ſome of their Members, entred the Houſe, and after a ſhort Speech ſpoken by Cromwel, ſhewing ſome reaſons for the neceſſity of their Diſſolution, he declared them diſſolved, and required them to depart, but the Speaker would not leave the Chair, till by Harriſon taken out by the Arm, and Cromwel commanded the Mace to be taken away, and not any more to be carried before him, and then they cauſed the Doors of the Parliament Houſe to be locked, and placed a good guard thereon to prevent the aſſembling of the Members.

The manner of Cromwel's diſſolving the Parliament.

This Revolution could not but be very pleaſing to the King, for now the Stone was rowling, in all probability it would not fix (as in the ſequel it appeared) till that juſt Government ſhould be retained under which this Kingdom had enjoyed as much happineſs, for many Centuries of years, as any Nation in the World.

A Council of State conſtituted.

The firſt thing done by theſe Officers after this change, was to conſtitute a Council of State conſiſting of the Chief Officers of the Army, and ſuch of the late Parliament as were their Confederates, in whom the Supreme Authority was placed, and till a Repreſentative ſhould be choſen, all obedience was required thereunto as fully as when the Parliament was ſitting, and all Judges, Sheriffs, Juſtices of Peace, Mayors, Bayliffs, and other Civil Officers and Publick Miniſters whatſoever were to proceed in their reſpective Offices and Places, and Writs were to run in the Style of the Keepers of the Liberty of England as before. 1653.

The Dutch thought to profit themſelves by this alteration, and made all poſſible haſt to get out their Fleet, but our new Governours omitted nothing that might advance their Maritime preparations. And the firſt thing they did after their eſtabliſhment, was to make an Ordinance for the raiſing of ſix Months Aſſeſſment from the twenty fourth of June enſuing, which was readily obeyed, becauſe it exacted not ſo great a ſum as the laſt Acts of Parliament for Aſſeſſments. A ſix months Tax ſetled.

Whileſt theſe things were in Action, all Officers and Soldiers in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and all the Officers in the Fleet were practiſed on to approve of the Armies proceedings, and did comply therewith, ſo that no Commotion followed in any part upon this mutation of Government.

The next conſiderable matter that occur'd, was a Naval Combat betwixt the Dutch Fleet under Trump aſſiſted with De Ruyter, Wit Witrens, and the two Everſons, conſiſting of 104 Men of War, 12 Galliots, and nine Fire-ſhips; and the Engliſh Fleet under the Command of General Monk and General Dean who were both in one Ship) aſſiſted by Penne the Vice-Admiral, and Lawſon Rear-Admiral, conſiſting of 100 ſhips of all ſorts. It was about eleven of the Clock at Noon on the ſecond of June that both the Fleets engaged, and ſo fatal was the beginning of the Fight, that at the firſt Broad-ſide of the Enemy, Dean was ſhot almoſt off in the middle by a Cannon-Bullet, as he ſtood by General Monk; but he without any diſturbance was ſo preſent to himſelf, that he cauſed him to be removed, and proſecuted the Battel with great reſolution, without any further notice of the accident. The noiſe and Thunder of the Cannon was very great, and had been very deplorable to both Parties, if a ſudden calm had not abated the fury of the Fight for ſome time after it began; but after two hours ſuch a freſh gale of Wind aroſe, that the Fight was renewed in ſo violent a manner, that it continued with very little intermiſſion whilſt there was any light; Lawſon preſſed ſo hard upon De Ruyter with his Squadron, that he had carried him, if Trump had not come into his relief, but he could not prevent Lawſon's ſinking a Ship of Holme of 42 Guns, that had in her a hundred and forty men; the General with his Squadron was in the thickeſt of them, and greater execution had been done, but that the Wind blew croſs to the Engliſh, and ſo favoured their Enemies, that they bore away before it. The next morning early General Monk found himſelf near them, but the Wind was ſo ſlack, he could not come up till Noon to engage their Fleet, but then the Combat was begun with greater vigour than at any time before, and continued till ten at Night; ninety of Trumps Fleet in the heat of the Engagement were in ſo great confuſion, and ſo unwilling to ſtand to the Fight, that he fired upon them, and ſent his Boat to Command them to come up to him, but nothing he could Trump engaged by Gen. Monk and Dean which was the Fifth Sea Fight.

Gen. Dean ſlain in the fight.

1653. could do or say, could perswade more than twenty of them to return, the rest steered away East and by South, but the Wind being fresh West-wardly, the General press'd so hard upon them, that he sunk six of their best Ships, and two were blown up amongst their own Fleet, and eleven Ships and to Hoyes were taken, and thirteen hundred and fifty Prisoners, whereof six were Captains of very good note, and of the Ships one was a Vice-Admiral, and two were Rear-Admirals.

Trump defeated.

At the end of this days Fight General Blake came in with eighteen fresh Ships, and if the Dutch had not been upon the Flats of Dunkirk and Calice, whereby our great Ships could not get up to them, most of their Fleet had been ruin'd or taken. The English had not one Ship lost or disabled, and, except General Dean, but one Captain slain.

Van Trump imputed this overthrow to the ignorance and unskilfulness of his Captains, but his Masters were so humbled by it, that a resolution for Peace was immediately taken up, and a Vessel with a white Flag, and a Messenger to prepare a way for two Embassadours, was sent into England.

The Council of Officers had now agreed upon the several persons all over England (who were the most sanctified Creatures they could nominate) to form a Representative, and a Summons was sent to every one of them in the name of Oliver Cromwel Captain General of all the Forces, &c. to take upon them the trust to which they were summoned, and to meet at White-hall to that purpose on the fifth of July then next coming.

The New-Parliament summoned.

These according to the respective Summons assembled at the time appointed, and went to Westminster to the Parliament House; and chose one Rouse a Cornish-man (made by the late Parliament Provost of Eaton) to be their Speaker, and appointed several Committees in the manner as other Parliaments used to do, to make their business easie to them.

The Dutch in this Conjuncture had underhand made Overtures of a Peace to Cromwel, which was not ill received, but that they might make it on better terms, they were resolved once more to try their Fortunes at Sea, to regain their lost Reputation; and in order thereunto, they prepared a Fleet to the number of an hundred and twenty five sail, with so much confidence of success, that they posted Van Trump out with 95 ships before the rest were ready, which were to be brought to him by Witt Wittens from the Texel.

It was upon the 29*th* of July in the Morning when the English Fleet of about 106 Ships descried the Dutch, they had time to draw together, and divided their Fleet into four Squadrons, (viz.) the first under Trump, the second under Vice-Admiral Everson, the third under Rear-Admiral Floris, and the fourth under Witt Wittens for a Reserve.

The English Fleet was commanded by General Monk in Chief, having Penne for his Vice-Admiral, and Lawson Rear-Admiral; Blake was discomposed in his health, and not with the Fleet, the English were all a-stern, and could not get up till six of the clock to come to any Engagement, and then it was begun with a few of the nimblest Frigots, which were afterwards re-inforced to the number of thirty, who continued the Battel till the Night parted them, though the rest of the Fleet could not get up to joyn with them. 1653.

The last Dutch Engagement between Gen. Monk and Trump, being the sixth combat.

The Dutch by the Darkness of the Night sent away many of their maim'd disabled Ships, and got by the English Fleet to joyn with the twenty five Ships that Wittens brought to them, which much encouraged the rest to renew the Fight, in hopes to be reveng'd of their late affront; and now both Fleets met in the most fierce and cruel Fight that ever was fought, (General Monk observing this War to be very burthensome to the Nation, thought the best way of ending it to be in the sharpness of it, and therefore gave orders to all his Captains, neither to give nor take Quarter; for he had found by experience, that the taking of Ships oblig'd him always to send other Ships off with them, and so the Fleet became weakned,) the Air was quickly fill'd with scattered Limbs of Men blown up; the Sea was died with the Blood that flowed from the Veins of the slain and wounded. Witt Wittens and Everson did bestir themselves, and often attempted to board the Ship in which the General himself was: Cornelius Everson's ship was sunk, and he taken, and the famous Van Trump himself standing upon the Poop of his ship with his drawn Sword encouraging his Men, was slain with a Musquet-Bullet; whereby the rest of the Fleet was so discouraged, that they hoysted out all the sail they could to hast away towards the Texel: The English pursued little, (having bought the Victory at a dear rate) but tack'd about to Sole-Bay, there to repair their shattered ships, and dispose of their Prisoners, whereof five were Captains, (viz.) Everson, Zanger, Fomeen, Scotten, and D' Hayes, and about 1200 Common Men, by the mercy and compassion of the English taken out of Boats, and swimming in the Sea; Thirty three sail of Ships, out of which they were sav'd, was sunk to the bottom of the Ocean, and in regard that these Prisoners were belonging to so many lost Ships, by this means the number of them was known; but it is supposed that some were sunk, out of which no men were saved. The English lost 400 Common men, and eight Captains, Graves, Peacock, Taylor, Crisp, Newman, Cox, Owen and Chapman, Men of great resolution; and had about 7000 wounded, whereof five were Commanders, but they lost but one ship, which was called the Oak.

Van Trump slain.

Van Trump was a Man of so great Courage and Experience in Maritime Affairs, that he justly merited the fame of being the most Renowned Sea-Captain of this Age, and perhaps there were few better at any time before. He was a Person of much Vertue, Honour, and Fidelity, and a great lover of his Countrey, which made him bear a grateful respect to the House of Orange, by whom the foundation was laid of that (High and Mighty) greatness they now assume and enjoy; and by whose

A Character of Van Trump.

1653. Prudence and Courage their Liberties were reſcued and preſerved againſt one of the moſt potent Princes of Europe. Out of his great ſenſe of Honour, he had much commiſeration for the ſufferings of our Royal Family, and did endeavour to perſwade his Maſters to eſpouſe the Kings Intereſt, as that to which they were in Juſtice and Conſcience obliged to adhere, and though he was without ſucceſs in that undertaking, he omitted not on all occaſions to teſtifie his affections to his Majeſty.

The War was not only proſecuted in thoſe great fights, but in all parts of the World where the Trade of the Two Nations was uſed, the ſhips of each engaged one the other, and many ſore conflicts were made in ſeveral places; but becauſe the particular deſcription of theſe encounters would ſwell this Treatiſe to too large a bulk, we do omit the doing thereof.

This new Parliament (for ſo for diſtinction we muſt call it) began to be ſo troubleſome in their conſultation, that the whole Nation, and the moſt of thoſe Army Officers that named them, grew wearier of them than thoſe that were before removed; for they were ſo Seraphical and Notional in their debates, that the whole Magiſtracy and Miniſtry was to be ſo modelled, as would make the Government ridiculous; but the Miniſtry and the Maintenance thereof by Tythes was that they moſt arraigned as an Antichriſtian Conſtitution; ſo that now all things ſucceeded to Cromwel's expectation, and their diſſolution was earneſtly preſſed to ſave a threatned confuſion in Government, if they continued in Authority, and of this ſome amongſt themſelves were ſo ſenſible, that Rouſe the Speaker on the twelfth of December acquainted the Houſe, that their ſitting was no longer neceſſary, and being ſeconded by ſome others Privy to the intention, he roſe from the Chair, and went out of the Houſe with the Mace before him, and with as many as would follow him (being the major part of the Members) he came to White-hall, and there reſigned to Cromwell the Inſtrument by him formerly delivered to them at their firſt ſitting, Harriſon and ſome few ſtaid in the Houſe after the reſt went, but were quickly diſperſed by a party of Souldiers ſent to diſſolve them.

The new Parliament diſſolved.

About four days after, the Officers of the Army had prepared an Inſtrument or Syſteme of Government, on which the foundation of a new Dominion was to be erected, and they entreated Oliver Cromwel to accept of the Government under the Title of Protector of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland and Ireland: He at firſt ſeemingly refuſed the Dignity; but when the exigence of Time and neceſſity of Affairs where laid open to him, he did accept of it, and was that day at one in the afternoon inſtall'd at Weſtminſter in manner following.

The Protector inſtall'd.

He came from White-hall to the Chancery Court in Weſtminſter-hall, attended by the Lords Commiſſioners of the Great Seal, the Barons of the Exchequer and Judges in their Robes, and after them the Councel Learned of the Common-wealth, and the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Recorder of London in their Scarlet Gowns, then came the Protector attended with many of the chief Officers of the Army; there was a Chair of State ſet in the Court, and the Protector ſtood by it, till the Inſtrument of Government was read; then the Oath was adminiſtred to him, which he took in the following words: 1653.

I promiſe in the preſence of God, not to violate or infringe the Matters and Things contained in the Inſtrument, but to obſerve and cauſe the ſame to be obſerved; and in all things to the beſt of my underſtanding, Govern the Nation, according to the Laws, Statutes, and Cuſtoms thereof: and to ſeek their Peace, and cauſe Juſtice and Law to be equally adminiſtred.

Having ſubſcribed this Oath and the Inſtrument, he ſate in the Chair of State, and put on his Hat, and the Lords Commiſſioners of the Great Seal delivered up the Seal to him, and the Lord Mayor his Sword and Cap of Maintenance, all which he reſpectively returned to them again; and then the Protector in the ſame manner as he came, returned to White-hall. To publiſh the Inſtrument of Government is not very neceſſary, and will be too long, but ſome Heads thereof are here inſerted:

The Heads of the Inſtrument of the Protectors Government.

1. A Parliament to be called every three years.
2. The firſt to Aſſemble on the third of September, 1654.
3. No Parliament to be diſſolved till it have ſate five Months.
4. Such Bills as are offered to the Protector by the Parliament, if he aſſent not in twenty days, to be Laws without him.
5. That his Council ſhall not exceed the number of one and twenty, nor be leſs then thirteen.
6. That immediately after the death of the preſent, and ſucceeding Protectors, the Council ſhall chuſe another before they riſe.
7. No Protector after the preſent, ſhall be General of the Army.
8. The Protector ſhall have power to make War and Peace.
9. That in the Intervals of Parliament, the Protector and his Council may make ſome Laws that ſhall be binding to the Subject.

1653. The first Act of these Counsellors, after their establishment, was a Proclamation notifying the Government, with a direction therein, That all Judges, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, Mayors, Bayliffs, and all other publick Officers, and Ministers whatsoever within this Common-wealth, or any part thereof, do proceed in their respective places and offices till further Order to the contrary.

The States of the United Provinces were brought into so low condition by the two last fights, and their people so much dispirited, that a general Revolt was feared in the Provinces; nevertheless they put as good a Countenance as they could on their condition, and chose the Heer Opdam to be Admiral of their Fleet in the place of Trump, but thought it more advisable to prosecute Overtures of Peace than venture another Battel; and certainly if the War had been continued, their Mariners were so baffled, they would very hardly have procured Men to furnish a Fleet, and one Battel more might have brought us a blank Paper for our own conditions; but Cromwel was not so well settled in his Throne to hazard any thing, and therefore the Dutch Embassadors, Newport, Toungstal, and Bevering, and Vander Perre were well received by him; and in the beginning of this year they were so diligent in their Negotiation, that on the 5*th* of April the Articles of Peace were signed in London, and on the 26*th* of the same Month they were Proclaimed in London and Amsterdam, and in this Peace the King of Denmark was included.

Opdam supplies the place of Trump.

1654. The Protector concludes a Peace with the Dutch.

For the King of Denmark espousing the Interest of the States of Holland, had Arrested Two and twenty English Ships which were in his Ports, and, at their Instance, confiscated the Merchandizes therein; so that they were obliged to compose that Difference, and this was that which had more difficulty than any other matter in the Treaty.

The Articles of the Peace we think not very essential to our History to be inserted at large, but the two which were of most importance, were these, (viz.)

The Men of War and other Ships of Holland meeting the English Ships in the Narrow Seas shall lower their Sayls to them.

The States shall cause restitution to be made by the King of Denmark of all the Ships and Goods of the English by him seized which are yet undisposed, and a full compensation in value for such of them as had been sold, to be ascertained in a time prefixt by six English Merchants, and six Dutch, who should meet for that purpose.

A Peace with the Queen of Sweden.

And the Spanish Embassador was as early to congratulate the Protector's Authority: and Peace was made with the Queen of Sweden, and the Conde del Sa Lord Chamberlain of the Kingdom of Portugal came in a splendid Embassie to sue for a Peace of him: nor were the French backward to own his power, having given to Monsieur Bourdeaux, their Resident here, the Quality of Embassador, to qualifie him the better for his Negotiation, and added to him the Baron of Bas for a Colleague. Cromwel being now owned by many of the Neighbour Princes and States abroad, and by most of those of his own party at home, thought himself insecure from none but the Royalists, and to give them some terrour by his Agents, formed a Plot to draw in some honest credulous persons of that party to their destruction; and in prosecution hereof in the Month of May Colonel John Gerard, and his Brother Mr. Charles Gerard, Mr. Philip Porter, Mr. Peter Vowel, and Mr. Sumerset Fox, were apprehended for a pretended intention to assassinate the Protector, and brought before a High Court of Justice erected for that purpose, proclaimed on the 13*th* of June following, and sitting on the 31*th*, before whom they were tried for their lives, and three of them, (viz.) Colonel John Gerard, Mr. Vowel, and Sumerset Fox were condemned. The last of these was reprieved and pardoned upon his confession of the fact, and craving mercy, but the other two were executed. Mr. Vowel was hanged at Charing-Cross, where, with an undaunted spirit, tempered with a Christian Constancy and Patience, he gave up his life. Colonel Gerard was beheaded on Tower-hill, and died with great Courage and Magnanimity. With him upon the same Scaffold suffered the Portugal Embassador's Brother Don Pantalion Sa, who had a while before made a riot in the New Exchange, upon conceit of some affront offered there to him, and killed one Greenway, a Gentleman standing quietly at a shop, no opposition being made but by this Colonel Gerard, who was fatally joyned with him in death. The Murder was committed by a Knight of Malta, who escaped; but this Gentleman and four more of the Embassadors Servants being taken (one whereof was an Irish youth,) they were arraigned in Westminster-hall before Judge Rolle, and others by special Commission of Oyer and Terminer thereunto appointed; and the Portuguese were tried by a Jury of half English and half Strangers, and the Irish Boy by a Jury of English; they were all found guilty, but none suffered but the above-mention'd Don Pantalion, and the Irish youth, who was hanged at Tyburn.

Col. Gerard and others tried before a High-Court of Justice.

Col. Gerard and Pantalion Sa Beheaded.

Our King had remained in the Court of France, between two and three years, with an expectation sometimes flowing, and sometimes ebbing, of gaining at length some opportunity to recover his Kingdoms; some hopes he had of assistance from several other Princes of the Empire, as the Dukes of Brandenburgh, Lunenburgh, Brunswick, &c. as also the Emperor himself, to whom was sent in a decent and Honourable equipage the Lord Wilmot, created Earl of Rochester, and his Address received with much civility and respect. Moreover, the Dutch seemed very inclinable to the owning and adopting his Interest in their War with England, and Prince Rupert was designed to have had the Command in His Majesties Name, of a Squadron of their Ships; yet so little speed was made in putting this Overture into act, and so suddenly was the Peace made up between this Nation and them, that whatever they hoped for and expected from them, quickly vanished and came to nothing. His next and more probable expectation was from the Success of those earnest endeavours that were made by the Pope and other other Princes, for a Reconciliation between the two Crowns of France and Spain, in which Affair he also interposed himself a most zealous Solicitor, as not doubting but that from the united Forces of two such powerful Monarchs, he should receive considerable assistance: and matters were once in a fair way to a peaceful Conclusion, had not the Politick Reasons of State, as it was thought, of Cardinal Mazarine, put a stop to this Grand Work; so that taking his leave of the King of France (and the other Great Ones) from whom he received many Complements and Apologies; he went, accompanied with his Brother the Duke of York, his Cousins, Prince Rupert and Prince Edward Palatine, to Chastillon, a House belonging to the Prince of Conde, where they stayed a while to determine how most commodiously each of them should dispose of themselves. The King, with Prince Rupert, resolved for Germany (the Earl of Rochester being at that time with the Emperor at Regensburgh, to sollicit in his behalf;) and the rather, because about that time a General Dyet of the Estates of the Empire was to be held in that City: Prince Edward took his Journey to Bourbon, and the Duke of york remained in France till a good while after the Conclusion of the Peace with England, being Lieutenant-General of the French King's Army, Commanded in Chief by Marshal Turenne. Prince Rupert parted from the King to go to Hidelburgh, the Chief Seat of his Brother Charles Prince Palatine, and thence to the Imperial Court at Vienna, and the King took his Journey by the way of Cambray and Liege to the Spaw, which he made his first place of Residence in Germany. Here his Sister the Princess Royal of Orange met him, and after a few months stay in this place, accompanied him to Colen, where they were received with great Honour and Magnificence: as they made their entrance into the Town, the great and small Guns were discharged, and the Deputies of the City came in a solemn manner to complement them: the Duke of Newburgh also entertained them very splendidly at his House at Dusseldorp, from whence the Princess of Orange returning into Holland, the King her Brother brought her onward of her way as far as Bedinguen.

He departs out of France towards Germany.

The King removes to the Spaw. Thence to Colen.

The conclusion of the War with Ireland.

From the time we left Ireland in so declining a Condition, and so almost lost to His Majesties Hopes, and the Lord Lieutenants endeavours, the most considerable Force that was left, was in Ulster, under the Leading of Emir Mac Mahon Bishop of Clogher, who (Owen Roe Oneal being dead) succeeded him as General in those Parts, besides the united Forces of Clanrickard, Muskerry, and Castlehaven, and some few Parties that now and then sailed from their Fastnesses; these for a while gave check to the Republicans and Cromwel's Substitutes; till in the end the said Prelate being overthrown (even to the taking of his Person mortally wounded in the Fight) by Sir Charles Coot, and Colonel Fennick; the Lord Muskerry by my Lord Broghil; the Marquess of Clanrickard, soon after a defeat he received at Finagh, forced to lay down his Arms in the Isle of Carrick; the remnant of the Ulster Forces Commanded by the Lord Jinkillen, Colonel O-Kely, and the Mac-Mahons, Relations of the aforesaid Bishop, yielding upon Articles; as likewise did Morrah O-Brian, having all of them stood it out to the last Extremity: the remaining Towns, Castles, and Forts which held out, as Athlone, Galloway, Ballishannon, Ballimote, the Isles of Arran and Enibuffen, and other places, were all constrained to surrender themselves to the Conquerors Power; the Marquess of Ormond and the Lord Inchequin, having in time provided for their Safeties, (when they saw things in a desperate condition, and still growing worse and worse) by Imbarquing for France, nothing was left but to dispossess and extirpate the vanquish'd, and take possession in their room. Some they removed out of the World by an Itinerant High Court of Justice, which went in Circuit from one place to another, the President whereof was one Justice Donellan an Irish-man, and Cook (notorious for his officiating in another High-Court) his assistant. Others were sent out of the Land by the Articles of Transportation, which the Marquess of Clanrickard and others upon their laying down Arms had concluded with them; namely, to have free liberty to go beyond Sea to serve the King of Spain, or some foreign Prince in his Wars: those Inheritors that remained and escaped the High Court, were transplanted to the Province of Connaught, so that there was a large extent of Territory left for the Adventurers and Purchasers of Irish Lands. The main pretence of this foresaid Court which sate at Kilkenny, and thence removed to Waterford, Dublin, Ulster, and other places, was for the Tryal of those that were judged guilty of the Irish Rebellion in One thousand six hundred forty one. The Chief of Quality that suffered, (for there was a number of less note) were Colonel Mac Hugh, Colonel Tool, and Colonel Walter Bagnal, and who was of all the most Eminent as in Quality, so in Crime (had he been judged by a Lawful Authority) as having been one of the principal leading Men in that Insurrection, and likewise one of the chief obstructors of the Union, endeavoured by the Lord Lieutenant to the advantage of His Majesties Service, Sir Philem Oneal, who being taken near Charlemount, tryed and condemned, was hanged and quartered near my Lord Canfields House, at the place where he had caused his Father to be Murdered. Thus was Ireland become subjugated to the English Usurpation. And so likewise was Scotland thought to have been at this time, when on a sudden a new Hostility springs up in the Highlands, headed by divers of the Scotch Nobility, who had the most powerful influence in those parts, the Earls of Glencarn, Athol, Seaforth, Kinoule, the Lord Kenmore, the Lairds Mac Renalds, and Mac Cloud, Colonel Montgomery, Sir Mungo Murry and Sir Arthur Forbs; these having each of them got together their several Parties, were endeavouring to unite into a Body, and so trusted to have been able with a Force not altogether contemptible to have taken the Field against the main Power of the English that were then in Scotland; and 'tis like enough they had speedily effected what they intended, had not the chief Body of them, amounting in all to about 4000 under Glencarn and Kenmore been encountred on the sudden, ill arm'd, ill provided, and in disorder, by Colonel Morgan at Cromar: Glencarn's Army in this Conflict being very much put put to the rout and dispersed, and himself missing but little of being taken, the rest in little straggling parties were many times met with to their loss: yet were they not for all this so out of heart, but that they again made a shift in some sort to reimbody, and that so much the more confidently, upon expectation of Middleton's coming over with Supplies out of Holland; though upon his arrival not long after with Commission to be General, Sir G. Monro, (who together with the Lord Napier, and Major General Dalyel, landed with Middleton at Tony Ferry) having also Commission to be Lieutenant-General; The High-land Levies instead of being re-inforced by these additional Forces and supplies were rather weakened and overthrown by the animosities of some of the Scotch Nobility, especially Glencarn stomaching the preference of Middleton and Monroe to the Command of the Army above him, thereupon departed in discontent, and laid down his Arms. Upon the neck of which breaches and defections among them, General Monk (the Dutch War being ended, having no more Work to do at Sea, is sent Commander in Chief into Scotland, and coming upon Middleton at Loughberry on the twentieth of July, gave him an utter defeat, and thereby put a period to these Highland Agitations, and all further attempts in Scotland, to the disturbance of the then regnant Authority in England.

The Kirk of Scotland also her self at this time had the wings of her Religious Empire very much clipp'd, if not quite taken away by the dissolution of her General Assembly, which was done by Colonel Morgan, the foregoing year at Aberdeen, where they were assembled, Mr. Andrew Cant and the rest of them in vain protesting against the action: the like disturbance they had afterwards at Edenburgh from Lieutenant Colonel Cottrel.

The Marquess of Argile, to keep up his Reputation with the Church of Scotland, seemed much troubled in his mind at this proceeding against the Assemblies, and interceded with the Protector for the liberty of the Church, wherein he had very good success: For Oliver considering that his declining the Kings Interest, facilitated the total subjection of Scotland to his Authority, was willing enough to oblige him, by seeming to do that at his request, he determined to do before for the quieting of the Minds of the People; the Church of Scotland was therefore indulged with the exercise of Religion, and a great part of their Jurisdiction and Discipline; they were restrained in little more than the power of keeping General Assemblies (their Presbyteries being permitted to convene) and the rigour of Excommunication: For, whereas before persons excommunicated were not excluded from the Communion of the Kirk, but had all their Estates confiscated till their Reconciliation: This better part was not now to be executed; but to please the Ministers for the restraint of their power, the maintenance of Scholars in the Universities of Scotland was increased, and many Privitedges granted to them.

The Government and Security of the Kingdom of Ireland, was the next care of the Protector. Major General Lambert was formerly appointed for that Government, and had provided all his Equipage to go thither; but Cromwel was jealous, lest his ambition should excite him to gain a Party there to establish himself against him: and therefore he artificially contrived to hinder him from going, upon pretence of greater advancement here, and he made him next to himself, Commander in Chief of all the Armies, with an entertainment of ten pounds a day; this done, he constituted his own Son-in-law Fleetwood to be Deputy of Ireland, assisted with 6 Counsellours (that is to say) Steel, who was after made Chancellor, Petty one of the Barons of the Exchequer in England, appointed to be Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, Mr. Robert Goodwin of Suffolk, Miles Corbet and the Colonels Robert Hammond, and Matthew Thomlinson.

Fleetwood is made Deputy of Ireland.

The King was at Colen when he received the disconsolate News of the disasters in Scotland and Ireland, supported chiefly by that brave and undaunted fortitude, which never failed him in the greatest of his adversity. The Princes of Germany were very kind to him, which made his stay in those parts the more agreeable; and to encrease his comfort, he sent the Marquess of Ormond to Paris, to wait on his Brother the Duke of Glocester to him, whom he more earnestly desired to have near him, lest his youth might be prevailed upon by the subtilty of Arguments, and temptation of Riches and Promotion, to change his Religion; for the King was ever most zealous in the profession of the Protestant Religion in himself and Family, and on all occasions to promote it to his power in others.

The Marquess of Ormond sent to attend the Duke of Glocester.

According in the late Instrument of Government, wherein it was Articled, That a Parliament should be called every three years, and that the first should begin on the third of September 1654, A Parliament was summoned by Oliver's Writs, chosen after the wonted manner of Election by the Peoples voice, and assembled at Westminster at the prefixed time above mentioned, making choice for their Speaker of William Lenthal, Speaker in the Long Parliament: their beginning was somewhat bold, considering the totteringness of their Estate; for at their very first sitting, they began to question the lawfulness of the Power by which they were called, whereupon they were enjoyned to sign a Recognition of the Government, as it was settled in a Single Person and a Parliament, before they could be re-admitted to their Seats in the House: this all of them that sign'd (for some refused) had liberty again to take their places; but so little did their proceedings please his Protectorship, that they had scarcely sate full five months (and so long they were to sit by one of the Articles of the Instrument) when he came and dissolved them. A day or two after which, were apprehended Major Wildman, with a Declaration proving the lawfulness and necessity of taking up Arms against Cromwel: and of the Royallists, Sir John Penington, Sir Henry Littleton, and some others, about a new Conspiracy, which Oliver told the Members of his Parliament at the time of his dismissing them, he knew to have been countenanced and abetted, if not in a part promoted by some of them present, whom

The Members enjoyned to sign a Recognition.

The Parliament dissolved.

1654. whom he could name. And the truth is, there was a foundation laid (by a Combination of the most couragiously affected toward their Princes Service throughout the Kingdom, authorized by Commission from His Majesty) of a General rising for him in every County; which had not so quickly and so easily been suppresst, had not Cromwel, sparing for no cost to maintain his Instruments of deceits; for he had his Spies ready hired, not only here, but in all corners, such as counterfeiting themselves zealous Royallists, insinuated into their Counsels, and betrayed them, (of which number Sir Richard Willis at last became shrewdly suspected to be one) but even about the King's Person, as appeared by the defection of one Manning, preferred in consideration of his Fathers Merits (his Father was Colonel Manning, slain in His late Majesties Service) to be one of the King's Secretaries Clerks, whom Colonel Samuel Tuke, forcing open his Chamber-door, took in the very acts of holding Correspondence with Thurloe, Oliver's Secretary, from whom having newly received a Packquet, and setting himself busily in the returning of Answers, to prevent discovery, he was hastily chewing Papers in his mouth, just as the Colonel entred. Thus, for a long time, had he made it his weekly practice to send Intelligence to the Usurper, of all that was transacted in the King's Court, and had a large Pension punctually assigned him for his pains; till at length thus fortunately found out, he had the reward of his treachery paid him in a more deserved manner, being, by the King's command, the whole Court beseeching His Majesty to make a publick example of him, shot to death in one of the Duke of Newburgh's Castles. This Combination, though it were probably to the very bottom discovered, before the apprehending of the above-named persons; yet so far the design, being generally laid, had taken effect, that in several Counties some small Armed Parties began to gather into a Body; in Shropshire and Wales some endeavoured to have taken Shrewsbury and Kirk-Castle by surprize, but were both prevented; and of those that attempted Shrewsbury, Sir Thomas Harris, who was the chief, was taken Prisoner, and sent up to London.

Manning's Treachery, for which he is put to Death.

The Surprize of Shrewsbury endeavoured.

Upon Sunday the 11th of March, a party for the King of about 200 entred Salisbury about Midnight, and having seized upon Horses, and taken away the Commissions of the Judges that were upon their Circuit, bended their course towards Cornwal; of which Captain Unton Crook having timely Intelligence, pursued them with his own Troop, and at a place called Southmolton in Devonshire, overtook them, and after four hours sharp Conflict, tired as they were, and drowsie, and faint for want of sustenance, drove them to a necessity of yielding; yet Penruddock bravely stood it out, till Articles were granted for the Indemnity of him and his Company, which Crook is said to have afterwards perfidiously denied, and left them wholly over to the Courtesie of their Judges: besides 50 common Prisoners, there were taken of the chief Leaders, 3 Captains, Penruddock, Jones and Grove, only Sir Joseph Wagstaff made a shift to escape away. Other Risings there were in Northumberland, and at the Forest of Sherwood in Yorkshire, where Five hundred Horse being met, and not finding the Country to come in as they expected, dispersit themselves, and returned to their Habitations. Also at Hexam-Moor in Yorkshire, there was a great Rendezvouz of the Gentry of the Country, of whom Sir Henry Slingsby was taken, and Sir Richard Malevorer with much ado escaped.

An Insurrection at Salisbury.

And the first in order that paid the Nation for it.

At Salisbury, Exeter and Chard in Somersetshire many of West-Risers were tried by a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, and executed, and particularly at Exeter; Penruddock and Grove were Beheaded, Captain Jones was reprieved; besides those who were put to death of the chief Leaders, many Prisons in the West were filled with a number of the common sort of Prisoners, till within a little while after that they emptied themselves into Foreign Plantations.

Penruddock and Grove Beheaded about the Western Rising.

And there hapned about this time an Adventure which served very opportunely for the ridding of Prisons of their surcharging numbers, and the imploying of a multitude of loose and vagrant people, there having been ever since the Peace with the Dutch, preparations made for the equipping forth of a great and powerful Fleet, upon an Expedition which was kept very secret, and not made known even to those that went upon it, unless to the Supreme Commanders, till the very last; only it was given out, that the Voyage would be very profitable, and to a place where there was much Gold and store of Riches: In this Service we may well think there would not be wanting enough that would greedily engage themselves; hither all sorts of people flocked, especially those of low and Bankrupt Fortunes, and upon hopes of enriching themselves, run headlong most of them to their ruine, a Fate that commonly attends precipitate Ambition and Covetousness. This Navy setting sail from Portsmouth on the 27th of December, put in at the Barbadoes on the 28th of January, Venables commanding the Land-Forces, and Penn being General at Sea.

The Death of Mr. John Selden.

This Year had been sufficiently memorable, if for nothing else, yet for the death of that Famous and Learned Antiquary Mr. John Selden, whose Works are a Monument far more Worthy his Memory, than that in the Inner-Temple Church.

The Marquess of Leda comes Embassador from Spain, and speedily returns.

The King of Spain was not ignorant that this great preparation was design'd to make some impression on his Dominions in the West-Indies, and after having dispatched expresses into those parts to give them warning thereof, he sent the Marquess of Leda (a person of great reputation in Arms) in a splendid Embassy to the Protectory, to divert, or prevent the prosecution of the business: he arrived at London the 22d of May, but had so cold reception, and was so much discouraged in his Negotiation, that he quickly returned.

In the mean time the English Fleet set sail from the Barbadoes the 30th of March, and steered its course towards Hispaniola, one of the fairest and richest Islands belonging to the American Dominions of the King of Spain; so that it was by this time apparent enough which way this Expedition tended. And whereas it was admired 1654. mired by many, that at that time when no Hostility was declared between this Nation and the Kingdom of Spain, or any defiance bid on either side, we should carry War into his Territories, without any provocation by him first offered. It was alledged, That the Conditions of Peace extended not beyond the Line. This, though it serv'd to stop the mouths of some, yet it could not satisfie the Spaniard, who look'd upon it as an absolute breach: However it were, whether this Expedition were just or not, whether it were undertaken to a pious end, as was pretended, to curb the excessive Pride, and ambitious Usurpation of the Spaniard, and to bring freedom and purity of Religion to those Indians under his Yoke; or, as many are apt to believe, to partake with the Spaniard of some of his Indian Gold, (thinking it too much for one Potentate to ingross so much Treasure to himself,) I shall not undertake to determine. This is most certain, That at the beginning of this Enterprise, it met with a very remarkable Check, (however the War with the Spaniard proved afterwards successful enough) for General Venables, when as he might have landed his men within a very little of Santo Domingo, the principal Town and Fortress of the Island, and which was in a manner deserted by the Garrison Soldiers,) upon sight of the English Fleet; nevertheless led by I know not what Policy and Interest of his own, and (it is more than suspected) over-rull'd by the Counsels of his Wife, set them ashore ten Leagues Westward of Domingo; whereupon the Spaniards gather'd fresh Courage, and betook themselves again to the defence of Santo Domingo, which they had abandoned. The English landing without opposition, and seeing no Enemy near them, thought themselves safe enough, and were in their minds absolute Lords of the Indies, sharing the Golden mines among them; when contrary to their expectation, the General causing it to be proclaim'd at the Head of the Army, That none upon pain of Death should plunder any Gold, Plate, or Jewels, or kill any Cattel. This sudden frustration of their Hopes, and the Climates excessive heat, proved the one such a damping to their Spirits, the other such a weakning to their Bodies, that by that time they had marched a most tedious and disconsolate March through thick Woods, in deep scalding Sands, ready to perish with miserable Drought and Thirst for want of Water, (of which they met not with a drop in many miles,) they were brought to such a condition, that they needed not an Enemy to kill them, being already almost dead with faintness, and weakness; so that the Spaniards, Negroes, and Molatto's falling upon them, kill'd, with little or no resistance, till they were weary of killing; had those that could make a shift to fly away, found it a sufficient Atchievement for that time, to bring themselves back again safe unto their Ships.

The English land in the Island Hispaniola.

They are cruelly entertained by the Spaniards of Hispaniola, and driven out of the Island.

In this Conflict Major General Heines acted the part of a very valiant Soldier, who being shamefully deserted by his own men, and over-powred by his Enemies, was slain stoutly fighting: there fell above six hundred in the Fight, besides what were cut off in straggling parties near as many more; and all this Execution was done by not above sixty of the Enemy. The Remnant of this Naval Army, that they might not be thought to have undertaken so long a Voyage, and of such expectation altogether in vain, possest themselves, with little or no opposition of another Island called Jamaica; which, however not so plentiful and rich a place as that which they at first aimed at, yet with much Industry, and the Supplies that were sent them out of England, they made a shift to make a Habitation of it tolerable enough to abide in, planting themselves at Oristano, the chief, if not only Town thereof, and have kept it ever since. 1654.

They possess themselves of Jamaica.

The first Adviser to this Undertaking, was one Gage a Minister, (formerly a Romish Priest) who also undertook to be the chief Guide in this Expedition, as one who by his long time of Travel in those parts (of which there is a handsome Relation of his extant) was well acquainted with them; and there he ended his days not long after his arrival, reaping little Fruit of his Project.

Whilest the Proceedings in the West-Indies were unprosperous, General Blake had better fortune in the Streights, who coming with his Fleet before Tunis, and sending to the Governour thereof to demand satisfaction for the Depredations committed by his people on the English, and to require the English Captives to be delivered to him, had a contemptuous answer return'd, (viz.) Here are our Castles of Gueletto and Porta Ferina well mann'd and furnished with Ordnance, do what you can, we fear you not. And at the same time they mann'd a Line all along the Shore, and planted Guns thereon. Whereupon (after a short Consultation with his Officers) Blake with his great Ships and their Seconds, came into the Bay of Porta Ferina, within Musquet-shot of the Castle and their Line, and fired with such fury upon them, (notwithstanding the frequent discharges of forty great Guns upon his Ships,) that in two hours the Castle was made defenceless, and all their Guns dismounted, and the Stones clattered about their ears; and finding nine of their Ships in the Road, he caused them all to be fired with his long Boats, and in five hours they were consumed. After this brisk Action he sailed to Algiers and Tripoly, with both which places he made very advantagious Treaty, and then came again to Tunis which he found (by this time) willing to submit to what he proposed.

General Blake's notable Attempt and success before Tunis.

Notwithstanding the ill success of the several late endeavours for the King, for which so many suffered, it was not much above a Month e're the Earl of Lindsey, the Lord Willoughby of Parham, Newport, Maynard, Faulkland, Lucas Peirc, Sir Frederick Cornwallis, Sir Geoffery Palmer, Sir Richard Wingfield, with divers others, were committed to the Tower, upon suspicion of pretended High-Treason against Cromwel; which yet, went no further than bare suspicion; for they were never brought to a publick Tryal.

The Lord Willoughby of Parham, the Lord Newport and others committed to the Tower.

About the beginning of July, Major Sedgewick went with a Squadron of twelve ships, a-

The Duke of Glouceſter comes to Colen to his brother the King.

The Duke of Glouceſter willingly obeying the Order of the King his Brother, was come away with the Marqueſs of Ormond from Paris, and having ſtayed for ſome time with his Siſter the Princeſs Royal at the Hague, was at laſt accompanied by her to the King her Brother at Colen, where ſhe her ſelf alſo ſtaid with them till after the Fair at Frankford; to which place, they all of them together made a Progreſs of State and Pleaſure, attended by the Marqueſs of Ormond, the Earl of Norwich, the Lord Newburgh, the Lady Stanhope, and Monſieur Hemſſeet her Huſband, they went by Coach a little beyond Bonne the Archbiſhops Electoral Seat; the reſt of the Journey they went by Water: through every Princes Countrey which they paſt, they had the chief Officers of State ſent to Complement them, and were ſaluted by the great Guns from all their Towns and Caſtles, more eſpecially the Prince Elector of Mentz ſent his Grand Marſhal to invite them to his Court: whereupon the Lord Newburgh was ſent back with the Grand Marſhal, to deſire the Elector to excuſe them at Preſent, promiſing to wait upon him at their return. Being arrived at Frankford, and hearing that Queen Chriſtina of Sweden was coming that way in her Journey into Italy, the King ſent one of his Lords to her, expreſſing his deſire to wait upon her, at whatever place her Majeſty ſhould be pleaſed to nominate; the place then appointed for this Interview was Coningſtein, a Village near Frankford, in the Electorate of Mentz, where he had firſt particular Diſcourſe with her himſelf for half an hour, which paſt with many Complements and Ceremonies of Civility; next the Duke of Glouceſter was admitted, and then the Lords that attended the King. As theſe Princes came back from Frankford, the Elector of Mentz, renewing his Civilities, provided all manner of accommodation for them, as they paſſed through his Territories; and meeting them himſelf a great part of the way, he brought them to one of his Palaces, where he entertained them in a very ſumptuous and ſplendid manner, for the ſpace of two or three days, after which they returned to Colen: four Burgomaſters being appointed by the Magiſtrate of the City to wait upon them, and welcome them home.

An Army having been ſent under the Marqueſs of Pianella, and the Earl of Soiſſon Commander of the French Forces in Italy, by Charles Emanuel Duke of Savoy againſt his Proteſtant Subjects in the Valleys of Piedmont, upon occaſion of ſome high Diſpleaſure taken againſt them, and the Soldiers left to their own unbridled Licence, having committed many cruel Outrages and Maſſacres upon the poor miſerable People; Cromwel taking this opportunity to ingratiate himſelf with the Proteſtants abroad, (affecting to be thought the Chief Patron and Protector of thoſe of the Reformation in all Parts) concern'd and beſtirr'd himſelf very vigorouſly for their Relief; he appointed a ſolemn day of Humiliation to be kept, and cauſed a large Contribution to be gathered for them throughout the Nation, and ſent his Agents abroad to mediate for them; Mr. Pell to the Proteſtant Cantons of the Switzers, Mr. Samuel Moorland, and Mr. George Downing to Turin to the Duke of Savoy, but his Meſſage being ſlighted by him, he took another courſe to deal with him, namely, by the Mediation of the King of France, his now great Allie; by whoſe Power and Authority with that Duke, a Pacification was ſhortly concluded: Though of the large Collection that was made, ſo ſcanty a ſhare came to them, (for ſome they had) that it may be very well ſuſpected, whether ſelf-Charity for the getting of Money, were not as well aim'd at, as Charity ad extra for the beſtowing it.

A Contribution gathered throughout England for the diſtreſſed Proteſtants in Piedmont.

However it far'd with the Proteſtants abroad, theſe at home, viz. the Royaliſts, becauſe they would not become Oliver's obedient Subjects, are not only not ſav'd from Perſecution, but perſecuted themſelves; while, beſides other diſpleaſures both toward the Clergy who were prohibitted from teaching School, and from having any Benefices, or officiating as Chaplains; and toward the Laity, who were by Proclamation confin'd (ſuch as had ever been in Arms) not to come within twenty miles of London, and diſabled from electing or being elected in Parliament, there comes out a two-handed Invention of Cromwel, which ſerv'd him at the ſame time to acquire Money to his own Coffers, and to bring them low in their Eſtates and Power; this was an Order for the Decimation, or tenth part of the Eſtates of all ſuch as ever had been in Arms either for his late or preſent Majeſty. For the better executing this Project of Decimation, (under colour of ſecuring the Peace of the Common-wealth) for which Orders were ſet forth toward the latter end of October by Oliver and his Council, is ſet up the Office of Major Generals Civil, in the nature of Preſects or Governours of Provinces, to curb, watch, and keep in awe the Royaliſts, and if it were poſſible to pull down their high Stomachs; they were eleven in number, namely Kelſey, Goff, Disborough, Fleetwood, Skipton, Whaley, Butler, Berry, Worſley, Lambert, and Barkſtead, which laſt was alſo Lieutenant of the Tower, each of them having his ſeveral Counties allotted to his Government in the nature of Provinces: In which their Principalities they reigned like ſo many petty Kings, domineering over the Gentry and Nobility, till Cromwel either thinking to do a ſpecial Act of Grace by taking of his Maſtiffs, or jealous of what their Power in time might come to, eaſily gives way to his next Parliament to unhorſe thoſe whom he himſelf had ſo lately mounted.

1655. Upon the tendring of certain Propoſals to the Protector by Manaſſeh Ben Iſrael, a Jewiſh Merchant, in the behalf of his Hebrew Nation, for their free admiſſion to Trade and exerciſe of their Religion in England, a Conference was held about it ſeveral days at White-hall, by the Members of the Council, and certain Divines of the moſt Eminent then in eſteem: and many Arguments being urged, ſome for, others againſt their admiſſion; thoſe againſt it ſo far prevailed, that the Propoſals took no effect.

A debate held at White-hall about the admiſſion of the Jews.

An Imbargo upon the Goods of Engliſh Merchants in Spain. Open War with England proclaimed by the Spaniard at Dunkirk.

The Spaniſh King thinking it in vain to hope for a Conſervation of the League on this ſide the Line, from thoſe whom he judged to have ſo apparently broke it on the other ſide, by invading his Iſland of Hiſpaniola, began not obſcurely to make preparations for War; and to ſhew that he had entertained thoughts of Hoſtility, a general Imbargo was made in Spain, of all Engliſh Merchants Goods, and many of their perſons ſecured. Hereupon the like was done in England, and there ſuddenly followed on both ſides a denunciation of open War, which by the Spaniard was not long after ſolemnly proclaimed at Dunkirk.

Articles of Peace between England and France ratified and proclaimed.

The diſſolution of the Peace with Spain, was the product of a Peace with France; for there having been long ſince an Addreſs made to that end from France to the State of England: No ſooner did the breach begin between England and Spain, but the French King ſends to Monſieur Bourdeaux his Embaſſadour here to preſs his Embaſſie; which he did with ſo good ſucceſs, that in a ſhort while after the Articles of Peace between us and France were concluded, ratified by both Parties, and on the 28th. of November the Peace was proclaimed at London, and at Paris much about the ſame time.

Whereupon ſoon after Cromwel not to be behind-hand in State, and to provide for the diligent management of all matters concluded in this Treaty, ſends over in the Quality of his Embaſſadour Extraordinary to the French King, Colonel Lockhart, ſometime one of the Itinerant Judges in Scotland, and now advanced to this Dignity by the Marriage of a Niece of his pretended Highneſs. And at the ſame time there was a ſtrict League of Amity between him and Carolus Guſtavus the then King of Sweden, and Embaſſies of Friendly Correſpondence were on each ſide interchanged, from hence went Mr. Rolt, one of Oliver's Bed-Chamber as Envoy, and from thence arrived here the Lord Chriſtian Bond, who was entertained with more than ordinary reſpect; for of all Amities that were between Cromwel and Foreign Princes and States, his moſt particular and intimate ſeems to have been with the Swediſh King, whom a while after he under-hand aided with men in his War againſt the Dane, while at the ſame time he made ſhew of endeavouring an Accommodation between thoſe two Kings.

One principal Condition of the Treaty with France, was the excluſion of the King and all his Relations and Adherents out of the King of France his Dominions; but he upon Foreſight of what this Treaty would come to, had long ſince betaken himſelf to Germany, and there remained (for the moſt part at Colen, as hath been already mentioned) until ſuch time as the Spaniard invited him into Flanders. His Brother the Duke of York, notwithſtanding the great Command he had in the King of France his Army (the neareſt Ties and Relations little avail, when Self-Intereſt comes in place) was, by the ſame reaſon of State adverti'ſed to depart that Kingdom with all his Retinue by a prefixed time, not without ſome Complements and Apologies for this diſmiſſion: alſo his departure was reſpited for ſome ſpace, in which he was viſited, and honourable treated by the Marſhal Turenne, and others of the French Grandees; as likewiſe the Duke of Modena (who at that time was come into France about ſome important Affairs;) at length he took his leave of the King and Court of France, and attended by the Lord St. Albans, and other Engliſh Lords, took his Journey toward Flanders, where at that time the King his Brother reſided, at the invitation of Don John of Auſtria, who was then Governour of the Low Countries for the King of Spain, ſent the Count of Fuenſaldagne, to offer him in the name of the Spaniſh King all poſſible Service and aſſiſtance.

The cloſe of this Year puts on Mourning in like manner as the laſt: the laſt Year ended with the Learned Selden; this, with that moſt Pious and Reverend Prelate, James Uſher Archbiſhop of Armagh, and once Primate of Ireland, whoſe Judicious Writings are ſufficiently famous in the Common-wealth of Learning throughout Chriſtendom; his Burial, though he died on the one and twentieth of March, was deferred till the 17th of April, and then performed with all decent Pomp, and by moſt of the Nobility in London, attended to Weſtminſter-Abby, where his Funeral Oration was delivered by the Almoner to Cromwel (for ſo Dr. Bernard, once Preacher to the Society of Gray's Inne, was then Intituled.) Moreover Cromwel himſelf defrayed all things befitting his Interment, beſtowing 200*l.* toward the ſolemnizing thereof. Yet were his Coffers not ſo well furniſht as he deſired. And therefore notwithſtanding his no ſucceſs in his laſt Parliament, he finds a neceſſity of calling one again, whereupon he ſend forth Writs in July for the ſummoning of another Parliament on the ſeventeenth of September.

A Parliament ſummoned again.

In the mean while, a part of the Engliſh Navy, namely, the Rear-Admiral and ſix other Ships under Captain Richard Stayner, ſet upon a Fleet of Eight Spaniards, within four Leagues of the Bay of Cadiz; the Admirals Ship in which was General Don Marco del Porto, with ſix hundred thouſand Pieces of Eight, run aſhore in the Bay; the Vice-Admiral a Gallion Commanded by Don Franciſco de Eſquevel, and having in her 1200000 Pieces of Eight, and another ſhip Commanded by Don Rodignes Calderon were taken, and afterwards fired (one wilfully by the Spaniards in it, the other by accident;) Two others were taken and kept in poſſeſſion, the Rear-Admiral a Gallion, Commanded by Don Franciſco del Hayo, and having in her two Millions of Plate, and another Ship commanded by John de la Torre, very richly laden; another man of War of ſome value, with a Portugal prize, and a ſmall

1656. The Marquess of Bayde & his Wife perish in a Ship set on fire

Vessel of Advice from the Vice-Roy of Mexico, escaped to Gibralter. In the Vice-Admiral which was set on fire by the Spaniards themselves, to prevent being taken Prisoners, was the Marquess of Bayde, with his whole Family. There perished in this Combustion (besides a number of less Note) the Marquess himself with his Wife and his Eldest Daughter, who was going into Spain to be married to the Duke of Medina Celi. There were saved from this fire, the Marquess his eldest Son Don Francisco de Lopez, a younger Son Don Joseph de Sanega, and two Daughters, Donna Josepha, and Catalina, with about ninety others. In the Rear-Admiral was also taken Prisoner Don Diego de Villa, Alva, Governour of the Havana. It was related by the young Marquess Francisco de Lopez, who with his Brother and Sisters was brought up to London, and there for a while detained Prisoners, that the Cities of Lima and Calao in Peru, were about five Months before destroyed by an Earthquake and Fire raining from Heaven, in which Ruine there perished above 11000 Spaniards, but of Indians not above 100; also that the Mountains of Potosi being laid level, the Gold and Silver Mines where thereby utterly destroyed. This enterprize near Cadiz purchased no less profit than honour to the performers thereof, and to the Chief in power. As for the Spanish young Nobles that were taken, the Protector, to give him his due, dealt very nobly by them, and after no very long time of detention, dismist them home without any Ransome.

A sad and wonderful accident at Peru.

The Parliament assembles.

On the seventeenth of September (the time appointed) a Parliament assembled at Westminster, and chose for their Speaker Sir Tho. Widdrington; none were to be admitted in this Convention, by the Instrument of Government, but such as after their Elections should be approved of, and allowed by the Council, and there were many discontented persons chosen, of those that were dismissed at the last Dissolution of what remained of the Long Parliament and others of the Fifth Monarchy Principle, that the Protector thought it not safe to admit into the House, till some Laws should be passed for the better strengthening of his Authority, so that till the 20th of June the proceeding went on smoothly enough, and on that day the Parliament adjourned it self to the twentieth of January following, and passed some Acts, the principal whereof were:

An Act for Renouncing and Disanulling the Title of Charles Stuart into the Nations of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

An Act for the securing of his Highness the Lord Protector, Person, and the continuance of the Nation in security and peace.

A Vote to assist his Highness in his War against the Spaniard, which they declare to have been undertaken upon just Ground.

An Act for preventing the multiplicity of Buildings within ten Miles of London, the substance of which was, That for every House built from such a time within that compass, upon a New Foundation, there should be paid a years Rent to the Protector.

The Humble Petition and Advice, was a Model of Government, with which they several times waited upon the Protector at White-hall, to desire him to take the Chief Government of the Nations upon him, with the Title of KING; of which, the Power he already had, the Name only he wanted. This Offer was brought to an open Conference, but it was first for a long time together gently and tenderly touch'd upon, as springing from a Motion suddenly started by some of the Protector's Friends, when as sure enough they did but work after the Copy secretly prescribed them, and as they had private Encouragement and Instructions from the person they seemed to Court. As oft as the Members made their Addresses to him with this Humble Petition and Advice, he still desired further time of deliberation, before he could positively determine in a matter of so great weight and concernment; till at length being requested to give his final Answer, he returned (after he had several times sifted his Officers, to see how they stood affected, and found them so averse (the most part of them) that he thought it not safe to venture) That he could not take upon him the Government with that Title. Thus openly refusing (in regard Matters were not brought to sufficient maturity) what it was generally more than believed, he had mainly pursued.

1656. The Parliaments Petition and Advice to the Protector to take upon him the Title of King.

Sindercomb and others Plot against the Protector's life.

It must needs be thought high time for Cromwel's Convention to make Acts for the security of his Body, since there was now more noise than ever of a most desperate Plot against it. The Criminals said to be of this Plot, were Miles Sindercomb, a cashier'd and dis-satisfied Army-man, Toop, one of Cromwel's Life-Guard, Cecil and Boi, (the last of whom was a Priest belonging to Don Alonso de Cordoua) (once Lieger Embassadour here from Spain) and by him instructed, as it was given out, to hire and set those other his Agents a-work, comes off himself with a Non est inventus; Cecil and Toop pleaded they were drawn in by Sindercomb; he on the other side, that he was trapan'd by them. Of the several Ambushes in this Plot, thus runs the Story; At Hammersmith a House is hired on purpose, placing of an Engine called a Blunderbuss, to shoot him as he goes to Hampton Court; at Hide-Park Corner also he is waited for, as he goes to take the Air; as likewise at another House in Westminster, by which he was to go to the Parliament House. Lastly, when these took no effect, the next design was to set White-hall on Fire, by placing a Basket of combustible matter in the Chappel, with a Train laid to have taken Fire at a prefixed time, which also some way or other happens to be discovered and prevented. In conclusion, he of the Life Guard discovers all, and both he and Cecil have their pardons, he for his discovery, and Cecil for his free Confession, and the sorrow he expressed. Sindercomb boldly and sturdily standing it out, and denying all at the Court commonly called the Upper-Bench, before Cromwel's Attorney General, was nevertheless cast by the Witness of his two fellow Conspirators who left him in the lurch, and was sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn; in the mean time being kept close prisoner in the Tower. That very morning he was to have been executed, he was found dead in the Chamber, being reported to have stuffe up into his Head a certain poysonous Powder to avert the shame and misery of the Execution that was preparing

The Tryal of James Naylour before the Parliament.

Memorable also was the Tryal (happening a little before this discovery) of one James Naylour, the great Champion and Ring-leader of the Sect called Quakers, who having spread his Doctrine, and gained many Proselytes to it in divers parts of the Nation, was more especially taken notice of at Bristol, and from thence was brought up to London, attended by several men and women of his Opinion, who, all the way they came (the Women especially) are said to have sung Hosanna's, and to have used the same kind of expressions toward him, as anciently the people of the Jews did to our Saviour, when he rode triumphant into Jerusalem. The Parliament took it upon them to Judge him themselves, before whom being convented, he was charged of Blasphemy, for assuming to himself Divine Honours, and such Attributes as were due unto Christ only. After he had used many cunning Sophisms and Evasions to clear himself, such as argued him not altogether ignorant of humane Letters, he was nevertheless Sentenced by the House to be (first at London) publickly whipt, pilloried, and stigmatized, as a Blasphemer, then to be conveyed to Bristol, there to be also whipt; lastly, to be brought back to London, to remain in Bridewel during pleasure: which Sentence was punctually inflicted upon him.

His Sentence.

The King now in Flanders having his residence for the most part at Bruges, had, upon hopes of the good success of those his Subjects of England, who now began again busily to stir for him in all parts of the Nation, embodied together several Regiments, consisting of such English, Scotch, and Irish as he recalled out of the Service of the French King, and those that came in to him from other parts, whose Colonels were the Duke of Ormond, the Earl of Rochester, the Lords Wentworth and Gerard, and Lieutenant General Middleton; these Forces he kept quartered upon the Sea-coast, to have been in readiness, if occasion were, to have seconded those in England; Monsieur Munsin, an expert Souldier, formerly Lieutenant-General to the Prince of Conde, being designed to have conducted this Army; but the Counsels of his Friends that acted for him in England, being from time to time betrayed, and His Majesty not being in a capacity to keep his Men in continual Pay, he took the opportunity, since he could not make use of them himself, to gratifie a Power that had oblig'd him, and which stood in need of resolute Men, and thereupon consigned them to the Service of the King of Spain.

The King keeps an Army in Flanders.

1657. In vain did Cromwel think to be acknowledged the Protector of the three Nations, since all the several Interests therein, how contrary soever among themselves, attempted at one time or other, to shake off the Yoke of his Protection: yet as much in vain did both, all that already, and those that at present attempted to strive, Oliver being still too cunning and too quick for them all; for on the Nineteenth of April, 1657. at a certain house in Shoreditch, were apprehended a discontented Party formerly in the Army, that went under the name of Fifth-Monarchy-Men, such as taking upon them to be the Champions of Christ's Monarchy on Earth, renounced all Monarchy beside; the chief of whom were Thomas Venner, a Wine-Cooper-prædicant (whom we shall have occasion to take more notice of hereafter) Powlon, Hopkins, Gunter, and Gray their Scribe. They had appointed to Rendezvouz that night at White-hall-Green, and thence to have Marched into some other Counties to joyn with others of their Party, that were ready to shew themselves upon the first opportunity; there was taken with them, besides a great quantity of Arms, and certain Printed Papers (that were to be dispersed) a Standard with a Lion couchant, Or, in a Field Argent, and having this Motto, Who shall rouse him? There were also taken into custody Major General Harrison, Captain Lawson late Vice-Admiral, Colonel Rich and Major Danvers; whereof the first was committed to the Serjeants at Arms, and the rest to other Prisons.

Fifth-Monarchy-men apprehended upon a design against the Government.

Major General Harrison and others secured.

The Spaniards were very much distressed in all parts by the War with the Protector, and on the Twentieth of April so gallant an Action was performed by General Blake in part of their Dominion, that the like hath scarce been mentioned in Story.

The General lying with some Ships near Cadiz to watch for the return of the Spanish Plate-Fleet, had intelligence that they had put into the Bay of Santa Cruz in the Island of Teneriff, hereupon he weighed Anchor on the 13th of April, and on the 20th rode with his Ships off the offing at Santa Cruz, where he discerned the Spanish Fleet to the number of sixteen, barricadoed in the Bay, in a semicircular manner. Near to the mouth of the Haven a Castle is placed, which was then well fortified with great Ordnance, and besides that, there were seven Forts round about the Bay, with six, four, and three great Guns on each, all united by a Line of communication from Fort to Fort, and well lined with Musqueteers; and Don Diego Diaques, the Spanish General of the Fleet, upon sight of Blakes Fleet, caused all the smaller Ships to be moored close to the shore, and set six great Gallions well-manned further out at Anchor, with their broad-sides at Sea.

General Blakes successful enterprize against the Spaniard at Santa Cruz.

Blake having well consider'd this posture of the Enemy, sent Captain Stayner Commander of the Speaker Frigot with a Squadron into the Bay, who by eight the next morning fell pell-mel on the Spanish Ships, but Blake, who would have his share of the toil and glory of so brave an enterprize, immediately seconded Stayner, and placed some Ships to pour their broad-sides into the Castles and Forts, whilst he with Stayner, fought the Spanish Fleet (which was not inferiour in number to the English, and much better manned) and by two in the afternoon they gained an entire Victory, but the General perceiving he could not bring off the Spies, set them all on fire, but one that was sunk; and when this Service was performed, the

1656. wind even to wonder, which before blew ſtrong into the Bay, ſuddenly veer'd about to South-Weſt (which brought our Ships ſafe out to Sea.)

The News of this ſucceſs of Blake was ſo grateful to the Protector and the Parliament, that they ordered him a Jewel of Five hundred pound, and an hundred pound was given to the Meſſengers that brought the Letters, and proportionable Gratuities and Thanks to moſt of the Officers and Mariners.

An Army of Engliſh ſent to aid the French in Flanders.

According to the Conditions of Agreement between England and France, the French King demanded Auxiliary Forces from England to help him in his War againſt the Spaniard in Flanders, which was readily granted by the Protector, and 6000 Foot forthwith ordered to be ſent over, Commanded in Chief by Sir John Reynolds, one of Cromwel's Knights, a Man of good Courage and Reſolution, once Commiſſary General in Ireland. No ſooner were theſe Forces arrived in France, but the French, by their help, took two very advantagious places, Montmedi and St. Venant; nor was it long after ere they took the ſtrong Fort of Mardike, being of notable conſequence toward the ſpeedy gaining of Dunkirk. This Fort was immediately after it was taken, conſigned by the French into the ſole poſſeſſion of Major General Morgan and the Engliſh, who preſently fell to fortifying of it, and in a ſhort while made it ſo impregnable, that when the Spaniard was ſenſible how much it imported to the keeping of Dunkirk, to regain this Fort, ſent a ſtrong power of Men (among whom were two thouſand Scotch and Iriſh Reformadoes, aſſigned by our King to that Service, and commanded by his Brother the Duke of York) to ſet upon its recovery by a deſperate Storm; they were, after a very Gallant and Reſolute effort upon the place, which continued for the ſpace of ſix hours, repelled in the end, with the loſs of many Men.

Montmedi and St. Venant taken.

1658. After Cromwel had given his final Anſwer to his Parliament, that he could not take upon him the Government with the Title of King, it was reſolved on, that the Title of Lord Protector ſhould be continued and inſerted in the Humble Petition and Advice, by which Title he was ſolemnly inveſted (with much more Ceremony than before) on the Six and twentieth of June, before a great Aſſembly of people in Weſtminſter-hall, where a Fabrick was erected for that purpoſe, and a Chair of State placed for the Lord Protector, whoſe Inſtalment wanted but little of a Regal manner; and though he attained not the Crown, yet he had the Scepter; for there were four Emblems of Government preſented unto him by Sir Thomas Widdrington the Speaker (who at the delivery of them made an Oration to him, in which he amply diſcanted upon each of them) a Purple Velvet Robe lined with Ermines, wherewith he was veſted by the Earl of Warwick, Commiſſioner Whitlock preſented a large Bible with Boſſes and Claſps richly Gilt, and a Scepter of Gold, and a Sword, which the Speaker girt about him. Thus attired, while he ſate in his Chair under a Canopy of State, holding the Scepter in his hand, the Herald ſtanding aloft, made a ſignal Trumpet to ſound thrice; after which he was Proclaimed Lord Protector of the Common-wealth of England, and Scotland, and Ireland, and then returned to White-hall in State, having the Sword carried before him by the Earl of Warwick. He was likewiſe proclaimed not only in London, and other parts of England, but alſo in the Chief Cities of Scotland and Ireland. And now he began to take the King upon him in his manner of Living, and to Govern after a more Monarchical manner, and to model his Family according to the faſhion of a King's Court; to which end he had his Yeomen of his Guard in their Livery of Gray Cloth, with Welts of black Velvet, of whom Walter Strickland was Captain; his Lord Chamberlain was Sir Gilbert Pickering; the Lord Keeper of the Seal Nathaniel Fynnes; Lambert was Warden of the Cinque-Ports, Glyn Lord Chief Juſtice of England, and Steel (formerly Recorder of England) Lord Chief Baron. Moreover, being thus confirmed Protector by Authority of his Parliament, and having fortified himſelf by Alliances abroad (for beſides the Leagues with France, Sweden, the United States, and fair Correſpondence with Denmark, he had alſo upon the coming of Don Franciſco de Mello Embaſſador, concluded a firm Peace with Portugal) he began to make it his next care, for the better eſtabliſhing of himſelf, and ſtrengthening of his Intereſt at home, to advance his neareſt Friends and Relations, and to match his Children into the Nobleſt Families; his eldeſt Son Richard he called out of the Country, to inure him to a Court-Life, and an inſight into publick Affairs, deſigning him for Succeſſion in the Protectorate, which the Univerſity of Oxford prudently foreſeeing (as the Learned were never found backward in complying with the Times, and courting the Riſing Sun) ſent their Agents and Proctors to him to elect him their Chancellour, in which Honour he was ſolemnly Inſtalled at White-hall. His ſecond Son Henry, he made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the room of his Son-in-law Fleetwood, whom he recalled from thence, wanting, as he ſaid, his Preſence and Council. His two youngeſt Daughters he Matched, Frances the younger to Mr. Robert Rich, Grand-Child to the then Earl of Warwick, and Mary the elder to the Lord Falconbridge: the Nuptials for them both being kept with much feſtivity and ſplendor, both at White-hall and Hampton-Court, and the Ladies are ſo vertuous they deſerved a better Father.

Scarce was the Mirth of theſe Solemnities over, when, to allay the Triumphs for the ſeveral ſucceſſes of the Engliſh in Flanders, there arrived the News of the loſs of Sir John Reynolds, General of the Forces in thoſe Parts, who with Colonel White, and ſome others, imbarquing for England, by the way of Goodwin-Sands, in a ſmall Veſſel, at a tempeſtuous Seaſon, contrary to the perſwaſions of many [It is unſafe to venture againſt ill Preſages] was caſt away with his whole Company. But here was ſomething more than ordinary in this haſty coming over of Reynolds and White, both ſeeming to prevent the arrival of each other; for whether Reynolds was ſent for by Cromwel, or ſuſpected the intention of White to be ſome Impeachment againſt him; his buſineſs probably was to defend himſelf, in reference to an imputation of holding Correſpondence with the Royalty, becauſe he was prevailed with by the Duke of York,

Sir John Reynolds and his Company caſt away upon Goodwin-Sands.

York, who always loved ſtout Men, to give him a Meeting between Dunkirk and Mardike, at which Parley, Reynolds was indeed not backward to render his Highneſs thoſe Honours and Civilities which were due to a perſon of his Illuſtrious Quality. Not many Months before, there died at Sea, as he was entring into the Sound of Plymouth, that valiant and expert Sea-man General Robert Blake, not long ſurviving his notable Exploit at Santa Cruz; the beſt Elogium that can be given of him, is the true rehearſal of his Actions; than which, ſaving that it was his misfortune to ſerve an illegal Power, never were any performed at Sea more conducing to the Glory of our Engliſh Nation. Alſo Vice-Admiral Badily ended his Life on Land, whither he was come for the recovery of his Health. And at Jamaica there died Lieutenant General Brain, Commander in Chief of the Forces there.

The death of Gen. Blake, Vice Admiral Badily, and Lieut. General Brain.

Col. Sexby dies in the Tower.

Colonel Sexby, one that was a Priſoner in the Tower, upon ſome deſign againſt Cromwell, on a Common-wealth account, died about this time, and his death was not without ſuſpicion of Poyſon: he was a virulent Enemy to the late King, and all the Royal Line, and ſuſpected to have acted the horrid Murder on him, by cutting off his Head, or aſſiſting therein with a Vizor, for upon that action he was promoted from a private Trooper to the Command of a Regiment.

The return of Cromwel's Convention after their Adjournment, with the Addition of the Other Houſe.

The laſt Convention having adjourned on the 26*th* of June, met again on the 20*th* of January following; and in this Seſſion, which differed from the other, as much as one diſtinct Parliament could poſſibly have done from another, two very obſervable things are to be taken notice of, which gave more diſturbance to Cromwell's Ambition and Safety, than he with all his Policy and foreſight was aware of. The firſt was the admiſſion of thoſe Members which in the laſt Seſſion were kept out with a high hand, whom ſince the Injuſtice of the act did not reſtrain from excluding the time before, the conſideration of his Intereſt urged him now no leſs, but rather the more to have excluded them this time alſo; but he was obliged to the contrary by his Friends (if at leaſt they were his Friends) of the laſt Convention, who made it one of their Articles in their Humble Petition and Advice, That thoſe perſons who are legally choſen by a Free Election of the People to ſerve in Parliament, may not be excluded from doing their Duties; but by conſent of that Houſe whereof they are Members. The other was the erecting of a new Convocation, intended (in imitation of the Old Conſtitution) for a Houſe of Lords, but they would not venture at firſt to call it by any other name than that of the Other Houſe: It conſiſted partly of ſuch as he took for his eſpecial Favourites, Officers of the Army and others, many of which were pickt out of the Houſe of Commons to be conſtellated in the Other Houſe, partly of ſeveral of the late excluded Common-wealth-men, and ſuch like wiſe of the Army whom he thought hereby to draw off to his own Party, and about half a ſcore of the old Nobility were nominated, but refuſed to come. Now in this Contrivance of his, whatever his expectation of it was, he found himſelf very much deceived, ſince by this ſtrong inundation of the late excluded, and the tranſlation of ſeveral of his Friends of the Commons into his Other Houſe, his intereſt there was ſo weakened, that his tranſlating alſo of a few of his Opponents (if he thought to make a counterpoiſe that way) availed him little; for Sir Arthur Hazlerig, and the reſt of the Sticklers, both diſdaining to accept of Cromwel's offered Baronage, and that by the addition of their own preſence they might ſtrengthen their own Party the more, took their places in the Houſe of Commons, by which means the Common-wealth-faction grew ſo potent, and flew ſo high, that the Other Houſe was not ſo much as taken notice of, except in way of deriſion and contempt; ſo far were they from being concurred with, or owned in any of their Meſſages. Moreover, they began to call in queſtion what was done in the laſt Seſſion, as being invalid without their aſſent: ſo that the Humble Petition and Advice, which but lately made ſuch a noiſe, was like in a moment to come to nothing. This ſo incenſed the Protector, that in a great heat and paſſion he goes from his Council, and notwithſtanding the earneſt diſſwaſion of ſome of the chief of them, takes a Hackney-Coach for haſte, and being come into his Other (or Lords) Houſe, ſends for the Houſe of Commons up to him, and for a Preamble to their Diſſolution, ſtanding under a Canopy of State, unfolds his Mind to them in this following Speech, which we have thought remarkable enough to ſet down at large, in regard it plainly diſcovers (as averſe as he ſeemed from accepting the Kingly Title) his ſtrange perturbation of ſpirit, and how nettled to the quick he was to ſee himſelf croſt and curbed in the tendency and progreſs he made thereunto, though by ways a little fetcht about, and under the ſhew of ſettlement and flouriſhing Eſtate of the Nation.

Oliver's Speech at the Diſſolution of his laſt Parliament.

I had very comfortable expectations that God would make the Meeting of the Parliament a Bleſſing; and the Lord be my Witneſs, I deſire the carrying on the Affairs of the Nation to theſe Ends. The Bleſſing which I mean, and which we ever climbed at, was Mercy, Truth, Righteouſneſs, and Peace, which I deſire may be improved.

That which brought me into the Capacity I now ſtand in, was the Petition and Advice given me by you, who, in reference to the Ancient Conſtitution, did draw me to accept of the Place of Protector. There is not a Man living can ſay I ſought it, no not a Man nor Woman treading upon Engliſh Ground; but I contemplating the ſad Condition of theſe Nations, relieved from an Iriſhine War into a ſix or ſeven years Peace, I did think the Nations happy therein. But to be Petitioned thereunto, and adviſed by you to undertake ſuch a Government, a Burden too heavy for any Creature, and this to be done by the Houſe, that had the Legiſlative Capacity, I did look that the ſame Men that made the Frame, ſhould make it good unto me: I can ſay in the preſence of God, in compariſon of whom we are but like poor creeping Ants upon the Earth, I would have been glad to have lived under my Wood-ſide, to have kept a flock of Sheep, rather than undertook ſuch a place of Government as this is; but undertaking it by the Advice and Petition of You, I did look that you that had offered it unto me, ſhould make it good.

1657. I did tell you at a Conference concerning it, That I would not undertake it, unless there might be some other persons that might interpose between me and the House of Commons, who then had the Power to prevent tumultuary and popular Spirits; and it was granted I should name any other House; and I named it of men that shall meet you wheresoever you go, and shake hands with you, and tell you it is not Titles, nor Lords, nor Party that they value, but a Christian and an English Interest, men of your own Rank and Quality, who will not only be a Ballance unto you, but to themselves, while you love England and Religion.

Having proceeded upon these Terms, and finding such a Spirit as is too much predominant, every thing being too high or too low, when Vertue, Honesty, Piety, and Justice are omitted: I thought I had been doing that which was my Duty, and thought it would have satisfied you; but if every thing must be too high or too low, you are not to be satisfied. Again, I would not have accepted of the Government, unless I knew there would be a just Accord between the Governour and the Governed, unless they would take an Oath to make good what the Parliaments Petition and Advice advised me unto; upon that I took one Oath, and they took another Oath upon their part answerable to mine; And did not every one know upon what condition they Swore? God knows, I took it upon Condition expressed in the Government: and I did think we had been upon a Foundation, and upon a Bottom, and therefore I thought my self bound to take it, and to be advised by the Two Houses of Parliament. We standing unsettled till we were arrived at that: the Consequences should necessarily have been Confusion, if that had not been settled. Yet there are not constituted Hereditary Lords, nor Hereditary Kings; the Power consisting in the Two Houses and my Self: I do not say, that the meaning of your Oath was to you that were to go against my own Principles, to enter upon another Man's Conscience; God will judge between Me and You: If there had been in you any intention of Settlement, you would have settled upon this Basis, and have offered your Judgment and Opinion.

God is my Witness, I speak it, it is evident to all the World, and people living, that a new business hath been seeking in the Army against this Actual Settlement by your Consent; I cannot speak to these Gentlemen as Lords (pointing to his right hand) whatsoever you will call them, I speak not this to them, but to you; you advised me to run into this Place, to be in a Capacity by your Advice; yet instead of owning a thing taken for granted, some must have I know not what; and you have not only disowned your Selves, but the whole Nation, which is in likelihood of running into more Confusion in this fifteen or sixteen days that you have sate, than it hath been from the rising of the last Session to this day, through the Intention of devising a Common-wealth again, that some of the People might be the Men that might rule all, and they are endeavouring to engage the Army to carry that thing: And hath that Man been true to this Nation, whosoever he be, especially that hath taken an Oath, thus to prevaricate? These designs have been upon the Army, to break and divide us: I speak this in the presence of some of the Army, that these things have not been according to God, nor according to Truth (pretend what you will.) These things tend to nothing else but the playing of the King of Scots his Game, if I may so call him; and I think my self bound before God to do what I mean to prevent it. That which I told you in the Banquetting-House was true, That there were preparations of Force to invade us; God is my Witness, it hath been confirmed to me since within a day, that the King of Scots hath an Army on the Water-side ready to be Shipped for England; I have it from those who have been Eye-witnesses of it; and while it is doing, there are endeavours from some who are not far from this place, to stir up the People of this Town into a Tumulting, what if I said into a Rebellion? and I hope I shall make it appear to be no better, if God assist me; it hath been not only your endeavour to pervert the Army while you have been sitting, and to draw them to state the Question about a Common-wealth, but some of you have been listing of persons by Commission from Charles Stuart, to join with any Insurrection that may be made: And what is like to come upon this (the Enemy being ready to invade us) but even present Blood and Confusion. And if this be so, as I do assign to this Cause, your not assenting to what you did invite me to by the Petition and Advice, to that which might be the settlement of the Nation; and if this be the end of your sitting, and these be your Carriages, I think it high time that an end be put unto your sitting. And I do declare to you, I do dissolve this Parliament: And let God judge between Me and You. At which many of the Commons cried, Amen. And so the Parliament were Dissolved.

Thus was he driven from one Inconvenience to another, from the Inconvenience of a Parliament that crost him, to the Inconvenience of no Parliament at all, whereby he was much streightned for want of those supplies of Money which he expected.

Towards the latter end of this year died the Protector's Son-in-law Mr. Robert Rich, and was but little above two Months survived by his Grandfather the Earl of Warwick himself.

1658. The following year, 1658. begins with the News of a Victory at Jamaica (which came by an Express from the Governour on the 8th of April) obtained by a Party of the English there, commanded by Major Richard Stevens, against 500 Spaniards, who, under Don Christopher Arnalda Sasser, having lately landed in that Island, and begun to fortifie themselves at a place called St. Anne, were fiercely set upon by the English, and forced to flie into the Woods and Mountains; and another Body of Spaniards, consisting of 300, who had fortified themselves at Chanerie, in the North of the Island, were by the Governour himself, Colonel Doiley, driven quite out of their Hold, Don Francisco de Prencia, the Maestro del Campo, with others taken, many kill'd, and the rest utterly dispers'd.

Cromwel had no sooner freed himself of the danger threatned him from his Parliament, but he is presently alarm'd again by his old enemy the Royalist, whom yet he had still the Fortune to prevent by his Intelligence; however, he took all Advantages to provide still more and more for his

Among those that had been formerly imprisoned, were Doctor Hewet, Minister of St. Gregories, and Sir Henry Slingbey; which last had been a Prisoner ever since the Rising in the West; yet being a person who was known to bear no good will to the present Power, he is charged with an Intention of delivering up Hull, meerly upon the expressing of his Consent thereunto, to some that were sent to make the motion to him, and sift out his mind with purpose to betray him; and these were Major Waterhouse, Captain Overton, and Lieutenant Thomson; and the Doctor seems to have been no less hardly dealt with, considering what things were laid to his Charge; which had they been true, would certainly never had been so utterly denied at the very moment of his Death, by a man of his known Honesty and Integrity. The rest that were taken afterwards were, Mr. John Mordant, Brother to the Earl of Peterborough, Mr. Manley, a Merchant, Mr. Hartgil Baron, Mr. Stapeley, Mr. Maunsel, Mr. Woodcock, Mr. Carrent, Mr. Jackson and Captain Mallory, of whom Mr. Mordant, Woodcock, Carrent, and divers others were tried at a High Court of Justice, which on the twenty fifth of May was set up under the President-ship of Commissioner Liste. All hitherto mentioned, except Sir Henry Slingsbey and Doctor Hewet, having the good hap to come off with life: Sir Henry and the Doctor were the first brought to Tryal, and both of them sentenced to die as Traytors: The first, upon the bare Testimony of those three men which had so treacherously circumvented him, which in vain he pleaded; as also the impossibility, a Prisoner, as he was, of performing what he was charged with. The other as a Mute, disowning the Courts Authority, and thereupon denying to plead. The next was Mr. Mordant, who also at first disavowed the Courts Authority, but was at length prevailed with to plead, and in the end acquitted only by one voice. In that fortunate interim, while Colonel Pride by reason of a Fit of the Stone wherewith he was troubled, had withdrawd himself from the Court, and staid somewhat longer than he intended; the other two being so far favoured, as to have their Sentence mitigated, were on the eighth of June beheaded on Tower-Hill. The next that were tryed were Mr. Thomas Woodcock, Captain Henry Mallory and Sir Humphrey Bennet: The first made so handsome and discreet a defence for himself, that they could fasten no Accusation upon him, and so were forced to acquit him. Captain Henry Mallory (tho' scandaliz'd by some malicious persons) behav'd himself with Resolution and Loyalty, and was condemn'd, but not put to Death. Of the rest that had to do with this High Court, William Carrent was acquitted: Colonel Edward Ashton and John Barrely, the first in Tower-Street, the other in Cheapside, were hanged and quartered on the seventh of July; the same day Henry Fryer, ready to have been executed in Smithfield, and two days after John Summer in Bishopsgate-street, and Oliver Allen in Grace-Church-street, had their Reprives brought them. The same day the two last were Reprived, Edmund Stacy, his Sentence remitted, was hanged near the Royal Exchange. In the mean time, Manley, Baron, and Maunsel aforementioned, with two others, namely, Edmund Seymour, and Guy Carlton, having made their escape, were at the Upper-Bench (as it was then called) Indicted of High Treason, though absent, and out-lawed.

In Flanders Successes came on with a swift Career: presently after the taking of Mardike-Fort, Dunkirk was straightly begirt by the joynt Forces of the French and English, the French commanded by the Marshall of Turenne, the English by the Lord Lockart, Ambassadour from the Protector to the French King, who was constituted General in the room of Sir John Reynolds deceased. The Relief of this so important a place (it being the chief Sea Port, and, as it were, the Key of all Flanders) the Spaniards resolved to Assay, though with the hazard of a pitch'd Field; and to that purpose they assembled together all the Force they could make, amounting to about seven thousand Foot, and nine thousand Horse, Commanded by Don John himself in person, together with the Duke of York, the Prince of Conde, and the Marquess of Caracene; and drawn down from Fuernes Fort, were engaged by the Marshall of Turenne, and the Count of Schomberg joyning with Lockhart and his English Forces, who making their way (a good part of them) up a Sand-Hill against the whole Power of the Spaniards, were the main Instruments in gaining a clear and eminent Victory over the Spanish Army, most of the Infantry being either slain or taken; and among the taken were divers Officers of the Spanish Nobility, and Persons of high Quality, seventeen Colours, six great Guns, with the whole Baggage of the Field; the Prince of Conde was unhorsed in the Fight, and Mounted again by his Cousin Bouteville, who was thereby taken Prisoner in the Princes stead. There were slain of the English Captain Sherwin, and another Captain, five Lieutenants and two Ensigns, with eighty Common Soldiers, besides three hundred wounded, and some mortally, among whom, Lieutenant Colonel Roger Fenwick,

No ſooner was this Battle ended, but the French and Engliſh returned again afreſh to the Siege of Dunkirk, which the Marqueſs of Leda Governor thereof (who had been formerly ſent Embaſſador to the Protector) ſeeing now more ſtraightly than ever inviron'd both by Land and Sea, whereby it was reduced to great extremities; he reſolute to defend the Town, made a bold Sally forth, in which he received his mortal Wound: the Governours death, and the terror of the Granadoes ſhot into the Town wrought ſo upon the beſieged, that they were ſpeedily brought to Articles of Surrender, and on the 25*th* of June, marched out with Colours flying, ſo that the King of France in Perſon, accompanied with the Cardinal Mazzarine, took poſſeſſion of the place, and immediately reſigned it up into the hands of General Lochart in behalf of the Lord Protector, and the Engliſh.

The ſixth of Auguſt, Elizabeth the Protectors ſecond Daughter died at Hampton-Court of an Impoſthume in ſome of the inward parts, which afflicted him very much, becauſe he loved her above all his Children; and that ſorrow was increaſed by the length of her Sickneſs, and the grievous torments ſhe endured: A little before ſhe expired (which was in much pain) the Delirium of her Sickneſs prompted her to utter many things, (which though formerly ſhe thought ſhe yet durſt not expreſs) againſt the Injuſtice of many of her Fathers Actions. She was married to one Claypole, the Son of a private Gentleman of Lincolnſhire; of a moderate Fortune; but ſhe could not be confined to it being of a Spirit as high as if ſhe had been born to that Greatneſs to which her Fathers Ambition had advanced her. She was of a very generous and obliging Diſpoſition, and very much troubled at her Fathers Auſterity, and oppreſſion of the Royal Party, to ſeveral of whom ſhe did many good Offices. The Grief which the Protector had contracted for her death, was very much augmented by his trouble to diſcern, that the Diſcontents ſprung up amongſt many of the inferiour Officers of the Army, were fomented by Fleetwood and Desborow; the firſt of whom married his Daughter and the other his Siſter, who with Berry and Cooper Colonels, and Sydenham and Pickering, two of the Privy-Counſellors were in a Confederacy againſt the preſent Government in favour of a Common-wealth. And a while after he fell ſick himſelf of a Tertian Feaver, which at firſt ſeemed not to ſignifie much danger, but by degrees it grew upon him: yet his imagination was ſo far tranſported with enthuſiaſtick ravings, that inſenſible of his own danger, he affirmed That GOD had reſerved him to greater Attempts than ever yet had been performed by him; and that he was aſſured he ſhould not die of this Sickneſs. In which Extaſie he was much heightned by Goodwin one of his Chaplains, who openly declared, GOD had heard the Prayers of his Servants for him and given him his Life; and therefore he perſwaded ſome of his Friends to keep a kind of private Thankſgiving beforehand for his undoubted recovery. This Confidence amuſed his Phyſicians ſo much, that they were leſs regardful of his Condition. But nevertheleſs it was adviſed, he ſhould be brought to White-Hall, where with more conveniency than at Hampton-Court, a reſpect might be had to his Health, and the Publick Affairs of the Nation; where he had not been many days, e're it viſibly appeared he had but a few more to live. He had ſometime before his Sickneſs appointed a Junto, or Committee of Nine, with whom he privately conſulted in the moſt urgent Affairs of the Government. Theſe were Fleetwood, Fiennes, Desborow, Whaley, Thurloe, Laurence, Berry, Cooper and Goffe, which were mixed of both Factions; that is, of that of a Single Perſon, and that of a Commonwealth, that he might diſpleaſe neither, and that he might by that Confidence divert the latter from deſigns upon his Power. 1658.

The death of Mrs. Elizabeth Claypole, Cromwel's ſecond Daughter.

Her Charity.

Cromwel falls ſick at Hampton Court.

He is removed from thence to White-hall.

Upon Tueſday the 31*th* of Auguſt, finding himſelf in danger, he commanded his Servants and all other Perſons except Mr. Thurloe, and Dr. Thomas Goodwin, out of the Room, and declared to them, That in regard he found his Sickneſs and Weakneſs encreaſing, he was reſolved to declare his Succeſſor, according to the Power given him by the * late Petition and Advice; And therefore he deſired them to take notice, that he Named and declared his Son to Succeed him accordingly. They asked him which Son: He replyed, My Son Richard, My Eldeſt Son. Immediately thereupon there came ſome Perſons into the Room, whereby it happened that nothing further was ſaid at that preſent. But * Mr. Thurloe and Dr. Goodwin immediately conferring together, did conceive that the buſineſs was too great and weighty for them alone to bear the Burthen of the Atteſtation of it; and therefore reſolved to take the firſt opportunity they could to move him again therein, and to deſire him for that Reaſon to call ſome others, to whom he might communicate his mind in that matter: But in Regard that Relations and others (who perhaps would take it ill to be put out of the Room) were conſtantly there, they could not all that day, nor the next gain any opportunity.

But on Thurſday, perceiving his Diſtemper very much to increaſe, and hourly gain upon him, They reſolved not to defer it longer, and thereupon they asked him, Whether he remembred what he had ſaid unto them the Tueſday before? Which he ſaid he did. They asked him whether he continued in the ſame mind or not, touching the Succeſſion of his Son Richard? He anſwered, That he did. They then told him, it would be requiſite he ſhould communicate his pleaſure to ſome others, and that the Declaration of the Buſineſs was of too great Concernment and Conſequence for them alone to undertake, if there ſhould be Oppoſition, and therefore deſired him to ſend forthwith for ſome others. He asked them for whom he ſhould ſend? They replyed, whom he pleaſed. Then ſend, ſaid he, for the Committee,

Upon Friday (the third of September, the ſame memorable day of the Year, that in 1650 he overcame the Scots at Dunbar, and the year following at Worceſter) at three of the Clock in the afternoon he departed this Life.

Thus after ſo many hazards in the Field, ſo many Ambuſhes ſaid to have been laid againſt him at home, notwithſtanding the multitude of Enemies, that from all Parties and intereſts whom his violent purſuit of Greatneſs had exaſperated, conſpired againſt his ſafety; contrary to the real belief of many men, the ill-bodings of ſome, and the earneſt wiſhes of others, he died not of a violent, but in his Bed a natural Death. The day of his death was uſhered in by a Night as tempeſtuous as had been ſeen in this Age, as if the Elements had been in Combuſtion at the flight of a Spirit, which had made ſo great a Conceſſion in the Affairs of the World.

Cromwel's Deſcent and Character.

He was born in the Town of Huntington, and was the Son of a Second Brother of Sir Oliver Cromwel and Huntingtonſhire, a perſon of eminent Note in the late Kings time; his Mother was the Daughter of Sir Richard Steward of the Iſle of Ely, and his Wife Elizabeth the Daughter of Sir James Rouſhier, by whom he had three Sons (whereof one died young) and four Daughters.

His Family is ſaid to have originally derived the name of Cromwel from that great Cromwel, who was Henry the Eighth's Vicar-General over the Spiritualities; their Lineal Deſcent was from one Williams of Glamorganſhire, who living contemporary with this Lord Cromwel, and marrying his Daughter, in gratitude for the Favours he had done him, took his Name upon him, and tranſferred it to his own Poſterity. As for his Qualities, there is no doubt, though his Diſſimulation, his Ambition, and his many other Vices obſcured what was praiſe-worthy in him; yet there was ſomething of Generoſity in his Nature, as may be exemplified, in the particular care and regard he had for the Relations of ſome that had ſerved him faithfully, and died in his Service; which one that writ his Life, parallels with the Gratitude of the fore-mentioned Lord Thomas Cromwel, toward Seignior Friſcobald an Italian Merchant, from whom he had received Civilities.

By his Reputation in Arms, he was courted or feared by moſt of the Princes in Europe, and the King of France and Sweden were entred into ſo ſtrict a League with him, as might have troubled the whole World; but Cardinal Mazarine, the Chief Miniſter of France, held moſt ſecret Intelligence and Friendſhip with him. He was a man of ſingular Courage and Reſolution, and that attended with a moſt proſperous ſtream of Fortune, which is not always the concomitant of Valour. He kept the Armies under him in ſo exact Diſcipline, that they rather ſeemed a Body of well governed Citizens than Soldiers: Swearing, Profaneneſs, Drunkenneſs, Murder, Rapine, Uncleanneſs, the common Vices of their Soldiers, were not to be found amongſt his. His Ambition and deſire of Glory, excited him to make Attempts alſo in other Countreys, in purſuance thereof, whereby a great Renown accrued to our Nation in all parts of the World, And had he not employed that Policy and Sagacity of Parts, which muſt be confeſſed to have been in him, to evil Ends, and by unheard of Impieties traiterouſly aſpired unto that higheſt pitch of Honour which belonged not to him, uſurping his Majeſties Government, he might have been worthy of eminent Place and Dignity in it.

An hour after his death, there met together thoſe of the Privy Council then in Town, that had been the moſt zealous Promoters of the Petition and Advice, and beſt affected to that Government. Theſe were made acquainted by Thurloe, with what paſſed on Tueſday and Thurſday; and alſo, that Oliver had ſubſcribed a Paper long before his Death, touching the Succeſſion, wherein Fleetwood was declared Succeſſor; and that this Paper having been laid in a Cabinet, known only to Oliver and his Wife, and no perſon more (as we thought) was ſearched for, but could not be found.

Oliver's Will concerning his Succeſſor imparted to the Council and Chief Officers.

They then agreed to ſend two of their Number to Fleetwood and Desborow, and to know of them unfeignedly, whether they acquieſced in the Declaration that Oliver had made, touching the Succeſſion of his Son: acquainting them, that they knew there had been a Paper ſubſcribed by Oliver in his life-time, to the effect aforeſaid: and therefore requeſted to know of them, whether if hereafter any ſuch a Paper ſhould be found or produced, they would notwithſtanding ſubmit to the laſt Will and Parol Declaration of Oliver? Whereto Fleetwood replied, and promiſed, as in the preſence of God, That if any ſuch Paper then were, or ſhould thenceforth be found or produced, yet he would not inſiſt thereupon, foraſmuch as he cordially acquieſced, as he ſaid, in the ſucceſſion of Richard. And thereupon, a Council was forthwith ſummoned, where Fiennes and Thurloe, gave an Account of Oliver's Appointment of his Succeſſor: and Goodwin, Whaley and Goffe were called in, and atteſted the ſame upon their Oaths. And being withdrawn, the Council unanimouſly declared their Satisfaction; Desborow having firſt ſtood up, and adjured them all in the name of the Living God, that if any diſſatisfaction remained upon their Spirits, they would freely declare it; as he profeſſed he would have done, had any doubt remained with him. This paſſed; the Preſident and whole Council went at once to congratulate Richard, and condole his Fathers Death.

After the Congratulation, Strickland, Skippon, and some others of the Council were sent to the City, who appeared very well satisfied with what was done; and the next Morning a Proclamation was divulged, subscribed by Chiverton Lord Mayor of London, and as many of the Chief Officers of the Army, and Counsellours of State as could begot together; wherein Richard Cromwel was at White-Hall, Charing-Cross, and several other publick places in London, proclaimed Protector of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland. About four a Clock in the Afternoon, after the Proclamation, the Lord Mayor presented his Sword to him which he presently returned; and after some Ceremonies passed (the Council, and many Officers of State, and of the Army being present) Nathaniel Fiennes, one of the Commissioners of the Great Seal of England administred an Oath to him in these words:

The Oath administred to him by Fiennes.

I Do in the presence, and by the Name of God Almighty, promise and swear, That to the uttermost of my Power, I will uphold and maintain the true Reformed Protestant Christian Religion in the purity thereof, as it is contained in the Holy Scripture of the Old and New Testament, to the uttermost of my Power and Understanding, and encourage the Profession and Professors of the same. And that to the utmost of my Power, I will endeavour, as Chief Magistrate of these Nations, the maintenance and preservation of the Peace and Safety of the Just Rights and Priviledges of the People thereof. And that in all things, according to my best Knowledge and Power, I will Govern the People, of these Nations according to Law.

Thus far matters succeeded well: his Brother Henry Cromwel was chief Governour of Ireland, and a Gentleman was sent to acquaint him with the present posture of Affairs. Of Scotland they had some doubt; but to endeavour to rectifie all things there, Richard sent that Evening to Mr. Thomas Clarges (Brother-in-law to General Monk) to prevail with him, to go immediately into Scotland, with his Letters to Monk, to know how he stood affected to his Advancement. This Clarges was pitched upon as one who had great Interest in the General, and had been lately chosen by his procurement, upon the death of one Rowe, to be Agent for the Armies and Council of Scotland, and Ireland, an Employment of good Value, whereby he became interessed in the knowledge and Affections of the Officers of all the Armies in England, Scotland, and Ireland; for the Regiments of that of Scotland, especially of the Horse, were often changed, whereas the Irish Army continue still unchanged. And although at first his having been in the late Kings Service at Oxford made them at White-Hall unwilling to employ him, yet he was esteemed of a moderate Behaviour, and had so demeaned himself in the pretended Parliament in the Year 1656. by his actings against the Kingship of Cromwell, that they would not then disoblige him, lest it should seem to be for that Reason. Besides, all of the contrary faction (of which were the chief of the Army) professed a great esteem of him, not so much in respect of himself, but because it was believed Monk engaged him in those Councils; and the opinion of that contributed more than any thing to divert Oliver from accepting the Crown. Clarges willingly accepted of this occasion to go to General Monk, to be able to inform himself particularly of his inclinations: For, although he had a Relation to him by Marriage, the Generals so far distant Residence, gave him little opportunity of other converse with him than by Letters. The City of London, and the generality of the people in England (having been wearied and tired with the miseries of War, and their Spirits subdued by the Oppressions and Tyranny of Oliver Cromwel) seemed outwardly to comply with the necessity of the Time, and submit to an approbation of that they could not remedy. But subtile Contrivances, congratulatory Addresses in all, or most Cities and Counties were framed, subscribed, and presented to him. In Scotland, by private advice to some of the Officers of the Army, things were so prepared, that when Mr. Clarges came thither, he found them all prepossessed, and doubting one the other; they liked, or seemed not to dislike all that was done at London: But the General himself and he had many secret Conferences, and the General then declared himself weary of the uncertain Condition, wherein he found both himself and the Nation inthrall'd by the over-ruling Tyranny of the Soldiers, (who made themselves a divided Interest from the rest of the people) so that they consulted of a Paper to be drawn up, and to be presented to the new Protector, the Heads whereof were to advise him to suppress the division in the Church, by countenancing a sober and Orthodox Ministry; to permit no Councils of Officers; And to model and put the Army into the hands of the * qualified Nobility and Gentry of the Nations, as such whom the people might best trust. From this Conference which was managed by both, with much reservedness, Clarges began to perceive the General was in his Principles well fixed to restore his Country to its ancient Government, when ever a fit occasion should present it self for the Attempt. With this Paper, and a Letter of approbation of the choice of the Protector, Clarges returned to London to him. The Letter he delivered publickly, but the Paper was privately communicated, and well liked of by him: and the prosecution of the Advice thereof in his Attempts to model the Armies, was the main cause of all the Divisions which hapned in them, and the happy Consequences thereof.

Addresses to the young Protector from all parts of the Nation

The Army of Scotland submits to what was done in England.

* Such as never had been against the Parliament, to prevent the jealousie of the action.

Mr. Tho. Clarges made choice of to be sent into Scotland to acquaint G. Monk with Richard's Advancement.

Mr. Clarges returns from Scotland to the Protector.

Addresses to the young Protector from all the Regiments of the Army both in England, and other Parts.

By the same Arts, as those from the Cities and Counties in England, Addresses were promoted, and subscribed by all the Regiments in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging. Lockhart Governour of Dunkirk, who had married his Cousin-Germane, was as forward as any to promote Addresses, both from that Garrison and the rest of the English under Major General Morgan, who were yet in the French Army. Commanded by Marshal Turenne, and had gained a great fame and reputation to their Country, by many signal Services in that Compagne; for by their valour chiefly 1659. chiefly, a great Victory had been obtain'd, as before mention'd, over the Spaniſh Army near Dunkirk, which was followed by the taking of that Town, and the Fort of Mardike, and the Towns and Forts of Bergen, Dixmude, Ferne, Oudenard, Mervin, Gravelin and Ypre; which laſt place, taken about the beginning of October, Old Style, was the firſt Military Succeſs that the Engliſh had abroad under Richard's Government. Marſhal Turenne had not hopes ſo late in the year, to gain a place ſo conſiderable; but having beaten a Party of Five thouſand Men under the Prince of Ligne that was ſent to joyn with ſome other Forces, and to viſit that Garriſon in their March, he ſuppoſed that the Town miſſing the ſuccor they expected, might quickly be ſurrender'd; they were in it about 2500 old Souldiers, beſides whom, all the Townſmen aſſiſted that were able to bear Arms, being in all about 4000; and it was taken in a fortnight Siege. After the Army had been two or three days before it, Turenne ſent for Major General Morgan, who commanded the Engliſh, to order him to keep double Guards, for that he had certain Intelligence that the Prince of Conde intended, with all the force he could get together, to put relief into the place. Morgan informed him, his Men were ſo expoſed, that he commonly loſt five or ſix every time they mounted the Guards, and therefore he propoſed, that rather than weary them out with ſo much continual duty, the Town might be aſſaulted. Turenne, who was a wary Captain, was unwilling to hazard the reputation of that Army which had been victorious by many proſperous ſucceſſes that Summer, and therefore at firſt rejected the Advice; but Morgan preſſing more upon him, and offering himſelf with 600 Engliſh to go on upon the ſtrongeſt part of the Town, he at laſt conſented. He was ſeconded by two Serjeant Majors, who each of them commanded 600 French, and were to attaque two other places, at the ſame time that Morgan made his Aſſault; but he with his Engliſh entred and gained moſt of the out-works, and turned the Cannon of the beſieged upon the Town, before his French Succours came in; and immediately after, the Town was ſurrendred upon eaſie Terms; the Prince of Ligne, Barbancon and Arembeg Marched out with the Garriſon. Turenne imbraced Morgan after this ſervice; and, though he had long before eſteemed him a very expert and valiant Captain, he ever after valued him as one of the braveſt Commanders of his time, and in the Report of this Action to the moſt Chriſtian King, he attributed the merit of it wholly to him; which occaſioned an Invitation of Morgan to Paris, where it was intimated to him, a good Preſent of Plate was providing to gratifie his Services; but he whoſe modeſty made him ever prefer the vertue of generous Actions, before the Reward of them, choſe rather to return into England, to his Family and Relations, after his long and hazardous abſence.

The taking of Ypre by the Engliſh under M. G. Morgan.

The young Protector not ſo great a well-wiſher to His Majeſties cauſe as was believed.

Some were willing to believe the new Protector had a good affection towards His Majeſty, and would uſe his power to his advantage, as ſoon as he ſhould be confirmed in it, and had the Army in his abſolute obedience, to which they were induced by the obſervation of his former deportment; for in his private Conditions he demeaned himſelf with civility and reſpect to the Gentlemen of the Countrey where he lived, and was always ready to do Offices of kindneſs to perſons in diſtreſs, apparently diſliking of the ſeverity of his Father, and not averſe to overtures for his Majeſties Reſtitution; but it was afterwards evident, that he did but formalize in the doubtful time of his Authority; for when he ſaw himſelf owned and acknowledged by the Army and People, he was very much reſerved to all that wiſhed well to his Majeſty, and either really declined his Service, or had not vertue enough to reſiſt the temptation of greatneſs, or courage enough toward the declenſion of his Power, to uſe that little which remained, to attempt to free his Country from Thraldom and Oppreſſion. 1659.

In the firſt place, after his advancement to the Supreme Dignity, principal care was taken by him and his Council for the Interment of his Father, with all the State and Solemnity accuſtomed at Kings and Princes Funerals; and therefore ſearch is ſaid to have been made into the Records, to ſee what had been expended upon the Burial of King James, and the ſame Coſt, if not greater, was to be beſtowed on this: The Corps of his late Highneſs being Embalmed and wrapt in Lead, was removed from White-Hall to Somerſet-Houſe, there to lie in Regal Pomp and State; a Spectacle to all comers; the order and manner whereof was briefly thus.

Four Rooms one within another were compleatly hung with black; the three firſt with Cloth, the fourth with Velvet; each Room was adorned with Eſcutcheons of his Arms, Crowned with the Imperial Crown, and at the upper-end of each Room, was placed a Chair of State, and over that a Cloth of State, and over the Cloth, a large Majeſty Eſcutcheon, painted and guilt upon Taffata: In the fourth Room where the Corps were, there lay upon a Bed of State, raiſed by two gradual Aſcents, and covered with a large Pall of black Velvet, his Effigies veſted with a rich Sute, Kirtle and a large Robe of Purple Velvet, Laced with Gold, and Furred with Ermines; to the Kirtle was girt an Embroyder'd Belt, by which hung a Sword richly hatcht with Gold, in the right hand was a golden Scepter, in the left a Globe, on the head a purple velvet Cap furr'd with Ermines; behind was placed a Crown Imperial, ſet with precious Stones, upon a Chair and Cuſhion of tiſhued Gold, on each ſide a rich Sute of Compleat Armour, at his Feet his Creſt; the Bed of State was encloſed with Rails and Ballaſters covered with Velvet, at each corner whereof, were Pillars adorn'd with Trophies of Military Honors carved and guilt; on the tops of the Pillars were the Supporters of the Imperial Arms, bearing Streamers Crowned; at the Pedeſtals were Shields and Crowns guilt: within the Rayls ſtood eight Silver Candleſticks, or Standards, five foot high, with long Tapers of Virgin Wax burning in them, and next them four great Standards of his Arms, ſet upright in Sockets, with the Guidons great Banners, and Banrols of Taffata richly painted and guilt. The Effigies having for ſome time been ſeen in this poſture, was afterwards ſhewed in another Room, veſted after the ſame manner, and attended with the ſame Ornaments as is already deſcribed, and this continued until the day of conducting 1659. conducting the funeral pomp to the Church, which was on the Twenty third of November; for till then all things could not be prepared and made ready: and then the Effigies placed in a ſtately Funeral Chariot, covered with black Velvet, and drawn with ſix Horſes in like manner mantled, and adorned with black Plumes of Feathers, was attended from Somerſet-Houſe to Weſtminſter by all the Officers of his Houſhold, the chief Officers of the Army and Navy, the Magiſtracy of the City, the Judges at Law, the Ambaſſadors and Publick Miniſters of Foreign States and Princes, the Members of the late Upper-Houſe, and of the Privy-Council, all in Mourning, each Company being diſtinguiſhed by Drums, Trumpets, a Banner born by one of the chief Ones, and a Horſe of State Mantled with black Velvet, led alſo by ſome one of Eminency. Laſtly, the Horſe of Honour trapped with Embroydery upon Crimſon-Velvet, and adorned with white, red, and yellow Plumes, was led by the Maſter of the Horſe, with ſuch other like Formalities uſed at the Obſequies of great Perſons. At the Weſt end of the Abby-Church, the Effigies being taken out of the Chariot, was carried through the Church unto a Canopy of State, born by ſix of his Gentlemen, up to the Eaſt end, where it was placed in a ſumptuous Catapalco, or Monument of Wood framed for the purpoſe, with Pilaſters and other Adornments of Architecture, carved, painted, and guilt, to remain for a certain time exhibited to publick view; a ſort of Temporary Monument much uſed in Foreign parts, at the death of great Princes: the Corps had been privately inhumed many days before the Solemnity in Henry the Seventh's Chappel.

Aſſoon as the Ceremonious Rites of this great Burial were paſt, the Preparations for which had for a time very much put a ſtop to proceedings, both Domeſtick and Foreign, immediately other matters of Publick concernment began ſeriouſly to be taken into conſideration, by the New Protector and his Council. The firſt thing was the ſending of a Naval Supply to the King of Sweden, between whom and the old Protector there had been contracted a very firm and inviolable Amity, and Forces had been ſent to this King's Aid out of this Nation, both for Land and Sea-ſervice; for the lattter whereof, he now more than ever had occaſion to make up a good ſtout Fleet; for after that by his Succeſs againſt the King of Denmark, he had won him to a Conceſſion of a great part of his Territories, and of half the Dominion of the Sound, and had at length withdrawn his Army: the King of Denmark judging the Conditions too hard on his ſide, and alledging them not to have been punctually obſerved by the Swede, began preſently after the departure of the Swediſh Army, to fly to Arms, for the recovery of what was loſt, being eſpecially encouraged thereunto by a certain aſſurance of Aid from the Hollander, beſides his entring into confederacy with the Emperour, the King of Poland, and the Marqueſs of Brandenburgh, againſt the Swediſh King, who having quick Intelligence of the King of Denmark's Deſign, ſpeeded back with his Forces, and was ſet down before Copenhagen, e're the Danes were well aware of his coming; but the Daniſh King had before-hand (providing againſt the worſt that might happen) ſo well fortified and ſtored the City, that it was able to endure a long Siege; and now the Soveraignty of this famous Bay of the Baltick Sea, called the Sound, being thus diſputed between theſe two Kings, the Dutch thought it a matter of no ſmall advantage to them, that the Sound ſhould continue in the power of the Dane their conſtant Ally, leſt the Swede gaining too much ſway therein, they might be deprived of the benefit thereof, which was of high concernment to them, and therefore made all poſſible haſte to ſet out a Fleet for the Relief and Supply of Copenhagen: the Engliſh on the other ſide, thought it no leſs imported them to help the Swede, though it were againſt the Dane and the Dutch, both of them our friends in outward appearance; leſt their joynt Intereſt and prevalence againſt the Swede, who, of all other Potentates, was the moſt firmly united in League to this State, might have proved prejudicial to us likewiſe in relation to the Sound, which alſo concerned us no leſs weightily than the Dutch, therefore a Squadron of luſty Frigots was ſent forth by this State under the Command of Sir George Aſcough toward the Sound, which having for ſome time been detained upon the Coaſt by contrary Winds, and afterwards ſteering their courſe towards thoſe Northern Seas, which the extremity of the Winter had made innavigable, they were forced, for that time, to return not without ſome damage to the Ships, by reaſon of the Ice, and the loſs of ſome Men, through the bitterneſs of the weather in thoſe parts, ſo that this Enterprize was ſuſpended till the coming on of the Spring, and then a more powerful Fleet was ſet out under the Command of General Montague, Sir George Aſcough being invited by the King of Sweden to take upon him a chief Command in his Navy.

A Squadron of Ships ſent towards the Sound.

Another greater Fleet ſet out under Gen. Montague.

In the mean time the Hollanders Fleet, led by General Opdam, and Witte Witteſon, arriving at the Sound with relief for Copenhagen, were aſſailed by the Swediſh Rix Admiral Charles Guſtave Wrangle, in which Battel the Dutch are ſaid to have received a notable Overthrow, ſeven of their Ships being loſt, and Witte Witteſon one of their Admirals, with many other perſons of Quality ſlain; nevertheleſs during the Fight, ſeveral Dutch Fluyts and Merchant-men paſſed by with proviſion to Copenhagen, which ſo ſtrengthened the beſieged, that they thereby became inabled for the ſuſtaining of a long Siege, as hath ſince appeared; and not long after, the Swedes in a reſolute effort againſt the City, were repelled with the loſs of a great many Men, and ſome of Eminency.

The Sea-Fight between the Swedes and the Dutch.

Copenhagen relieved.

The Warlike proceeding between the King of Sweden and Denmark.

And now in England, want of Moneys, and other preſſing occaſions of the State, required the ſudden calling of a Parliament: the young Protector iſſues out his Writs, ſummoning the Members to meet at Weſtminſter the 27th of January. Elections are made by the Counties, not without ſome canvaſſing of Parties.

Moreover, according to the conſtitution of the Government, Members were elected to the Commons Houſe for Ireland and Scotland, as well as England. The Elections were ſo diſpoſed in England, that many honeſt Gentlemen in all parts were choſen, but the Upper (for it did not yet aſpire to the Name of Lords) Houſe, was filled with

1659. with the Chief Officers of the Army, whereof most were of such contemptible extraction and education, that the Commons were unwillingly brought in any capacity whatsoever to own them. From the time of Summons of this Parliament, to their convening, Richard was frequently entertained with the fore-mentioned Addresses, which much heightened the confidence he had entertained of his future Prosperity, and made him think of modelling the Council conformable to designs he had of subjecting the Army to his entire Command; for the Council, as the Government then stood, had a great co-ordination with him in the administration of it, and the major part consisted of such as countenanced in all their extravagancies the Officers of the Army, who were many of them Anabaptists, and of other Sects.

He endeavours to new model his Council.

He pretended not to remove any of the Councellors, but to add so many of his friends to them as might make the greater number firm to him, he proposed the Lord Broghil, and Faulconbridge, who had Married his Sister, but they were not approved of; and instead of these, it was offered by those that opposed them, that Four Colonels of the Army might be admitted, (viz.) Whaley, Goff, Berry and Cooper: The first two had been of the late King's Judges, but were affected to the Protector and his Family; the other two were Factious and Seditious. These Tranfactions were not agitated in open Council, but privately treated of by particular Persons; but so rumored, that the Army began to be jealous of the Protector, and murmur at his Actions; sometimes they would complain of the Company and Conversation he used, and at other times censure his Religion, exclaiming that Godliness was discouraged by him, and that he rather favoured those of loose Principles, than the zealous Professors of the Gospel. But in this he was injured, for if his private Condition represented him a kind of Libertine, he assumed, together with the publick Person, a more grave and circumspect behaviour, conformed himself to the constant observation of all Religious Duties, and was in appearance at least, if not really so, of a blameless Life and Conversation.

The Army grows jealous and censorious of him.

The Grandees of the Army, doubtful of the temper of the approaching Parliament, moved the Protector to call together some of the Officers of the Army to London, (as his Father was accustomed to doe on the like occasions) to advise with him, to obviate any peril that might happen in the beginning of his Power, if the Parliament should attempt Innovations; He was a little surprized at this advice, but thought it not time to refuse it, and thereupon Letters were sent to as many of them as could be spared from their Charges to repair to London, to be there at the opening of the Parliament. The Names of his Fathers Privy-Councellors which acted and were continued under him, were Richard Lawrence President, Nathaniel Fiennes one of the Keepers of the Great Seal; John Thurloe, Secretary of State; General Mountague, Sir Charles Woolsey, Colonel Philip Jones, Philip Lord Lisle, Son to the Earl of Leicester; Lieutenant General Fleetwood; Colonel Desborow; Sir Gilbert Pickering, Colonel Sydenham, Walter Strickland, Colonel Philip Skippon; of which the six last named, were Favourers and Abettors of the Army; Lawrence the President was an Anabaptist, but somewhat moderate in his Opinion; the Lord Lisle was often absent and uncertain, endeavouring as much as he could to appear to a Neuter. There was another whom I should have named, which was Mr. Major, the Protector's Wives Father, but his indisposition of Health rendred him uncapable of Action. Fleetwood and Desborow had frequent meetings at Desborow's House, who with the Factious part of this Council, and some of the Colonels of the Army that favoured them, which were Berry, Hewson, Cooper and Ludlow, consulted to wrest the Power of the Army out of the Protector's Hands, and in order thereunto, Disborow was sent to tell him, That the Army was filled with many jealousies and fears of Designs against it, which would put them into Mutiny, and inevitably hazard the subversion of the Government, unless some speedy remedy were taken for prevention; and that no better way could be thought on, than putting the Command of the Army into the hands of some person that had served with them, and of whose Courage and integrity to their Cause, they might have confidence and assurance; and immediately named Fleetwood to be the Man, adding, That this would not only satisfie the Army, but give great content to the Godly Party (which was a Name much used by all these Novelists) and free him from much of the trouble, which rendred him now less intent in the more necessary parts of Government: To this he replied, That as to the fears and jealousies of the Army, when he knew their Grounds, he would give them what redress could be desired, not doubting but the Parliament now ready to sit down, would take care both for his and their security, and the peace and quiet of the Nations; But as to the Command of the Army, he freely told them, he should not think himself able to protect himself or them, if he should part with it, which his Fathers Example confirmed him in. And with this Answer dismissed him. His Father, as was before mentioned, was much perplexed before he died, with many Seditious Anabaptist Officers of the Army, who were impatient of his Government, but the fear and danger of a division, and respect to his person, kept them in some degree of Obedience; He displaced many of them before he died, and had reduced the rest, and wholly modelled the Army to depend on him, if he had lived a few Months longer: he had introduced his Son, my Lord Faulconbridge, and many others into Chief Commands, who were allied to him in Blood, or by their advancement wholly depending on him; all this while matters were carried without much heat, and not out of possibility of accommodation when the Parliament sate down.

The Names of the Protectors Privy-Council.

Desborow sent to the Protector to perswade him to resign the Command of the Army to Fleetwood.

The King's Letter, which he refused.

At the prefixed time the Parliament meets, consisting as the last Parliament had done in his Fathers time, of two Houses, the Commons, and the Other, (which now began to be called the Upper-House) for the first was chosen Speaker Chaloner Chute, a Lawyer, who, within a short while fell sick unto death, as also Sir Lisebone Long,

A Parliament called by the new Protector.

1659. Long Recorder of London, who was chosen pro tempore in his stead; for the latter was chosen Nathaniel Fiennes Lord Keeeper of the Seal. The Act of Recognition of the Protector to be chief Governour of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging: which was many days debated in parts, and at last part of it resolved in these words, viz. That it be part of this Bill to recognize and declare his Highness Richard Lord Protector and Chief Magistrate of the Common-wealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging. And it was added, That neither this nor any other Vote that is or shall be passed in order to this Bill, shall be of force or binding to the People until the whole be passed. The Protector liked well these Proceedings, and thought himself towards a good Settlement; but of those that were zealous for a Common-wealth, there was in this Parliament, such a considerable number, who had so powerful Influence on publick Transactions, that to procraftinate the time, they cast in several previous Debates, in which, nevertheless, the Assertors of the Protector's Interest being more in number, carried things to their own Advantage by the major Vote, as particularly in the business of the Scotch and Irish Members to be continued in among them, and the owning of the Upper-House, and holding an Entercourse with them, after a long Consultation in question of their Authority. However, the Factious Counsellours which abetted discontents in the Army, continued their Meetings to pursue their purpose of wresting the Command of the Army out of his hands, and putting it under Fleetwood.

Several Designs had been in vain undertaken for His Majesties Restauration during the Usurpation of Oliver Cromwel, which were chiefly managed by the Earl of Oxford, the Lord John Bellasis, Sir John Greenvil, Sir William Compton, Colonel John Russel, and Sir Richard Willis, who for their supposed conduct of the privacy of their Counsels, were commonly called, The Sealed Knot: But, though nothing was more prudently and ingeniously contriv'd, all their Consultations were from time to time imparted to Thurloe by Sir Richard Willis, which was not yet known. Nevertheless, His Majesty about this time thought fit to appoint new Commissioners, and sent over into England a blank Commission dated at Bruxels the eleventh day of March, in the eleventh year of his Reign, which was filled up with the Names of Arthur Ansley, Son to the Viscount Valentia; John Mordunt, Brother to the Earl of Peterborough; Sir John Greenvil, Sir Thomas Peyton, and William Legg; which was as followeth:

The Form of the Commission.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To Our Right Trusty and Well beloved, &c. And to every of them Greeting. We do by these Presents Constitute and Appoint you Our Commissioners, giving you, or any one or more of you Power to Treat with any Our Subjects of Our Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, that are, or have been in Arms against Us, or Our Father of Blessed Memory, or that have contributed to the present Rebellion in England (excepting such as actually sate in Judgment for the taking away the Life of Our said Father, or pleaded as Councel Learned against his Life, or attended as Ministers to that odious pretended Court, or laid hands on His Person in the Execution of that Horrid Murder) And to assure them in Our Name, That if they shall forsake the present Rebellion, and joyn heartily and effectually for the suppressing of the same, and for Our Restauration to the Rights due to Us by the Laws of God, and of that Our Kingdom; That then We will not only freely pardon their former opposing Us and Our dear Father, and all other their Crimes, and Offences in acting, adhering to, or complying with the said Rebellion, But, that We will Recompense and Reward such of them as shall by any Remarkable Service Merit of Us, either by reducing, or rendering any Town, Fort, or Garrison of the Rebels into Our hands, or into the possession and power of you, or of any other Trustee imployed by Us or you for Our Service: And what you or any one or more of you shall by vertue of this Our Commission in Writing under your hands, or the hands of any one or more of you, promise in Our Name in this kind, We shall Ratifie, and Confirm, and Perform. Given at Our Court at Bruxels this Eleventh day of March, 1659. in the Eleventh year of Our Reign. 1659.

These Gentlemen proceeded with much Wariness and Diligence in the execution of this Commission, the Effects whereof shall be made known hereafter; But in the mean time, we shall return to what passed between the Parliament and Army. Besides the private Meetings of some select Officers at Desborow's House, the General Council of Officers (as they called themselves) met in Fleetwood's House, where they acted with as much formality, as if they had been the Supreme Legislators of the three Kingdoms.

It was a little before Cromwel's Death, that great preparation was begun for the setting forth of a Fleet to the help of the Swedes against the Danes, and that under the Command of General Mountague, nor did his Death put a stop thereunto, Sir George Ascough being sent with a Squadron of Ships, though hindred from coming up to joyn with them, by reason of the freezing of those Seas, as hath been already mention'd: whereupon, for the better managing of the Charge, it was thought expedient that the House of Commons should be engaged in it, and a Narrative Report was made to them by Secretary Thurloe about the latter end of February this year, concerning the State of the War betwixt the Crowns of Sweden and Denmark, in Relation to the Baltick Sea, and the command of the Sound. This took so 1659. so far, as to gain a Vote for the providing a considerable Navy for the preservation of Trade, which was forthwith equipped, and General Montague sent with it to the Sound about the latter end of March, who was so straightned in his Commission, that he lay there without doing any thing, till he was called back by that part of the Long Parliament that subverted the Power that sent him.

The Upper House as it now began to be called in a strain somewhat nearer Lords House) favoured the Military Council of Officers, but the Commons took much distaste at it, as if it portended a kind of Force upon their Councils. The Protector in the mean time advised with his Friends, how to free himself from the Embarassments of the Officers of the Army; My Lord Faulconbridge, Colonel Ingoldsby, Colonel Bridge, Colonel Charles Howard, Major Knight, all Officers in the Army, and some few others, counselled him to send a Party to Desborow's house, to seize upon those that met there, which were eight or nine of the Chief Confederates, and immediately after to give their Commands to the next Officers to them, till he could have a fairer opportunity to put them into better hands; and to send for all the rest of the Officers to come to him, and to Command all of them to repair to their respective Commands, that were not obliged by Service in Parliament to attend that duty. These Counsels were very agreeable to his Inclination, but the Secretary of State and some others to whom he brake the business, diverted him from the first; but to the latter, of dismissing the Officers he readily consented; and the next day he sent for them, and dismissed them accordingly: And the same day that this was by him done, the Commons openly debated against this Assembly of Officers, and Voted, That during the Sitting of the Parliament, there should be no General Council or Meeting of the Officers of the Army, without direction, leave, and authority of the Protector, and both Houses of Parliament. And because in the Debate of these Questions, many that favoured the Army, had cunningly cast out some minatory Expressions, insinuating, That this way of proceeding might make them think themselves suspected, and provoke them to break forth into some act of opposition and disturbance, they passed another Resolve, That no person should have or continue Command in any of the Armies in England, Scotland, or Ireland, or any of the Dominions or Territories thereunto belonging, who shall refuse to subscribe, That he will not disturb or interrupt the free Meeting in Parliament of any the Members of either House of Parliament, or their freedomes in their Debates and Councils. These were transmitted to the Upper House, to be confirmed there; but they made a slow progress in them upon divers late contracted Jealousies, not the least of which was from a late Vote of the Commons, wherein they declared at the acknowledgment of their Constitution, That their acknowledgment of that House for another House of Parliament, should not prejudice the Peerage of the Land, or their Priviledges: as also believing, that the Protector conspired with the Commons to weaken and divide, or subdue the Power of the Army; in which they were somewhat confirmed, for that these Matters were Debated and Voted the same day he had dissolved the Council of Officers, and dismissed them. The Protector had many of the Chief Officers of the Army fixed to him, but the inferior sort, who were of Fanatick Opinions in Religion, and were more numerous; and had most influence upon the Soldiers, were for Fleetwood and Desborow: For it was artificially instilled into their Heads, That the Protector did intend to cast them out of their Places, and put the Army into the hands of the Nobility and Gentry of the Nations, thereby to bring in the King, and destroy that Liberty of the Gospel they had so long contended for. The Debate against the Army in the House of Commons, was on the nineteenth day of April, from which time the Meetings of the Officers were more frequent than before, and upon the two and twentieth day, the Protector was informed, that they would either themselves dissolve the Parliament, or compel him to do it. He called his Confidents about him, and made preparations against all accidents that might happen; and in the Evening many of his Friends encouraged him to take Horse, and appear in the Head of some Troops that were ready to receive him. While this was doing, the other party had drawn up some men in the several Avenues to White-Hall, and in Saint James's Fields, yet it was believed, if he had appeared with vigour and courage amongst them, respect of his Person would have prevailed much with the Common Soldiers; but he was fearful and unresolved, of a Spirit unbecoming the Quality he assumed; and many of those about him were as irresolute as he, some advised one thing, some another, wasting their time in contradictions; and, as it happens in the Consultations of fearful people, they debated many things fit to be done, till the time was past to put them in execution. Desborow his Uncle came to him from the discontented Officers, and pressed him much to sign a Commission to Fiennes to dissolve the Parliament, which he a great while obstinately refused, till Desborow insolently told him, if he did it not, it should be done without him, and so urged by threats and importunities, he at length, consented to it.

The Inferiour Officers of the Army jealous of the Commons and the Protector.

The discontented faction of the Army in a posture of hostility against the Protector.

He is forced by Desborow to sign a Commission to Fiennes for the dissolving of the Parliament

The next morning, the House of Commons having heard of these Transactions at White-Hall, Ajourned themselves for three days: but this their Adjournment proved a total Dissolution; for those that had made this breach upon them, proceeded further to compleat their purposes, and besides the aforesaid Commission directed to Fiennes, caused a Proclamation to come forth in the Protectors Name, to publish the Dissolution of the Parliament in these words;

The Upper House jealous of the proceedings of the Commons and the Protector.

A Proclamation for the dissolution of the Parliament.

WHereas We summoned our High Court of Parliament to Assemble and meet together at Our City of Westminster the Seventeenth and twentieth of January last, which hath continued until this present day; And whereas we did by Our Commission under Our Great Seal of England bearing date at Westminster this present Two and twentieth day of April for divers weighty Reasons, declare Our Pleasure and Resolution to dissolve the said Parliament, and to that end did thereby constitute and appoint Our Right Trusty and Right well beloved Councellor Nathaniel Fiennes, One of the Lord Keepers of Our Great Seal of England, and other Our Commissioners in Our Name, this said present Twenty second day of April, to dissolve Our said Parliament, which was by them done according to the tenour of the said Commission in the usual place, and by vertue thereof our said Parliament, is Dissolved: Nevertheless, We have thought it necessary with the Advice of Our Privy Council, by this Our Proclamation, to publish and make known the same, to the end all persons whom it may concern, may take notice thereof. Given at White-hall the twenty second day of April, in the year of our Lord, 1659.

Desborow and Fleetwood promise the Protector that his Power and Dignity should be continued

Fleetwood and Desborough having (to get the power of the Army to them, and their Party) made this Breach upon the Parliament, and in it shaken the Protectors Government, intended of themselves, as it should seem, nothing less than to dethrone him, though by reason of what they had already done, they quickly found it was not in their power to prevent what they so little intended; they came to him together and apart several times that day after it was done, and protested to him, That his Power in all things, but the immediate Command of the Army, should be preserved intire; and even in that, nothing should be done, but in his Name, and by his privity; telling him, They had not taken this course, but upon certain Assurance of the Designs of the Kings Party, and others to disturb the publick Peace, which nothing could prevent, but the breaking up of that Parliament.

He received not much Consolation from these Discourses, and gave little credit to them, well knowing that it was far easier to draw the Officers of the Army into seditious courses, than to moderate them. He told them, he doubted not of their intentions, and that they had been practised upon to do that in haste, which they might have leisure enough to repent, and that they would find now they had made a Concussion of his power, it would be a Providence too hard for them to re-settle it, and so it proved in effect; for at the first Meeting of the Officers at Walling ford House, after the emission of the fore-mentioned Proclamation, they would not hear of any thing in behalf of the Protector, and were so far from thinking of the continuance of his Power, that when any thing was moved tending that way, it was obstructed or diverted by propositions of Government. Yet at last, when they had determined, that the Chief Command of the Army should be in Fleetwood, with a Power to dispose of all vacant Offices till farther Order, they were perswaded to allow the Protector a kind of Limited Supremacy (somewhat like that of a Duke of Venice.) But, the next day, whilst many of the Superiour Officers met at Wallingford House, in further consideration of a Model of Government, the inferiour Officers being the most numerous, assembled in the Chappel at St. James's, having Doctor Owen, and other Independent Ministers with them to assist at their Devotion, where the matter was artificially so contrived, that the prosperity they enjoyed under the latter part of the Commons House of the Long Parliament, was much magnified; with some intimations of Advice to return to that Government, with which the Auditors were very much affected, but nothing more was done at that time. This was promoted by Lambert and his Friends, wherein he appeared not openly himself, but set Colonel Lilburn to manage the Business, at whose Chamber his Friends had private Junctoes.

The Officers of the Army oppose it.

The Superior Officers meet at Wallingford house to consider of a Model of Government, and the inferiour at St. James's.

The next day Fleetwood and Desborow were alarmed with this Countermine against their Designs; for the Inferiour Officers came now to open Declaration of their forwardness to restore the latter part of the Long Parliament, and to restore to their Commands Lambert and the rest of the Officers who had been displaced by Oliver Cromwel for dis-affection to him; yet with so much respect to the Protector, and his Family, that they would have an Honourable Provision made for them. Fleetwood endeavoured to oppose this Torrent, suspecting Lambert's Ambition would quickly supplant him, if he got Power: but when he perceived it was already too great to be resisted, the Consideration thereof obliged both him and Desborow to comply, for the preservation of their Authority. However, to retard their proceedings, they propose, first, to have the Army settled and modelled in a way of Unity before they determined upon the Government, which was thought rational; and at a Meeting of a General Council of Officers, in order thereunto, they removed the Protector from his Regiment, and the Colonels Ingoldsby, Howard, the Lord Faulconbridge, and Colonel Bridge, from theirs: Colonel Norton they displaced from the Government of Portsmouth, which they gave to Colonel Whetham, and made Colonel Edward Salmon Governour of Hull, in the room of Colonel Smith, who, by the recommendation of Fleetwood, had the Command of that Garrison given him by Oliver Cromwel. To Colonel Sanders they gave the Protectors Regiment of Horse; to Colonel Rich that of Ingoldsby's; to Sir Arthur Hazlerig Colonel Howard's Regiment of Foot, with the Government of Berwick, Carliste, and Tinmouth: To Lambert they gave the Lord Faulconbridg's Regiment, and to Okey that which was his own before, which was lately commanded by Colonel Bridge: Major Packer, and Captain Gladman, Anabaptist Officers, who had been by Oliver Cromwel displaced were restored to their Commands: The Inferiour Officers, in all these respective Regiments, were suitably modelled according to the Opinion of their Colonels.

Several Colonels removed from their Regiments and others put in their rooms. As likewise Governours of Towns and other Officers.

Thus Lambert was brought into the Army, wherein he quickly recovered much of his former power. After this, the Council of Officers was reduced to a smaller number.

The Officers of the Army consult about restoring the Remnant of the Long Parliament.

The twenty ninth of April there met at Fleetwoods House, Lambert, Desborow, Sydenham, Cooper, John Jones, Berry, Hacker, Lilburn, Ashfield, Salmon, Zanchy, Okey, Sanders, Clark, all Colonels, and 1659. and Major General Kelsey, and Barkstead the Lieutenant of the Tower, where they debated the Election of a Council, which should have a Negative upon the Remnant Parliament, when it should be restored: But after much Debate, that was thought fitter for the Debate of the Parliament than them.

They next consult about some Articles for the security of themselves and their Friends, and for a Foundation, on which they would oblige their Parliament to establish the Common-wealth Government.

They send to treat with Vane, Hazlerig. and others.

These Articles being digested into form, and agreed to by the General Council, a certain number of the Officers were deputed to meet with Sir Henry Vane, Sir Arthur Hazlerig, Mr. Scot, and Major Salloway, the prime leading men in this Parliament, to consider how they might be disposed to consent to them. Vane and those with him had been Treated with apart; but when they came to publick discourse, they were very reserved in their Answers; yet they gave them hopes of their consents, and of their endeavours to prevail upon others; but said, they could not undertake any previous Agreement, to oblige the Parliament, without their Authority and consent, at such time as they were met together.

This caution of theirs was disliked and suspected by Fleetwood, Desborow and Lambert; but the Inferior Officers were so far possessed in favour of them, that it was not time to contend. They therefore desired them to use means to draw as many of the Members as they could together with all convenient haste, because the Government was a kind of Inter-regnum; and the Officers in the mean time drew up a Declaration to invite them to sit, which upon the sixth of May was presented to the Speaker by Lambert; with about 13 or 14 Officers of the Army in his Company. The Declaration it self we have thought fit to Insert, to shew the inconstancy of these new Politicians, that so soon altered from what they so solemnly declared; The Title was,

A Declaration of the Officers of the Army, inviting the Members of the Long Parliament, who continued sitting till the 20*th* of April, 1653. to return to the Exercise and Discharge of their Trust.

The Armies Declaration to invite the Remnant of the Long Parliament to sit again.

THE Publick Concernments of this Common-wealth, being through a vicissitude of Dangers, Deliverances and Back-slidings of many, brought into that state and posture wherein they now stand, and our selves also contributing thereunto, by wandring divers ways from Righteous and Equal parts; And although there have been many Essays to obviate the Dangers, and to settle the Nations in peace and prosperity, yet all have proved ineffectual; The only wise God, in the course of his Providence, disappointing all Endeavours therein. And also observing to our great grief, that the good Spirit which formerly appeared amongst us, in the carrying 1659. on of this great Work, did daily decline; so as the Good Old Cause it self became a Reproach: We have been led to look back, and to examine the Cause of the LORD's withdrawing his wonted Presence from us, and where we turned out of the way, that through Mercy we might return and give him the Glory.

And amongst other things, calling to mind that the Long Parliament, consisting of those Members who continued their sitting until the 20th of April, 1653. were eminent Assertors of that Cause, and had a special Presence of GOD with them, and were signally blessed in that work (the Desires of many good People concurring with ours therein;) we judge it our Duty to invite the aforesaid Members, to return to the Exercise and Discharge of their Trust, as before the said 20th of April 1653.

And therefore we do hereby most earnestly desire the Parliament, consisting of those Members who continued to sit since the Year 1648. until the 20th of April 1653. to return unto the Exercise and Discharge of their Trust; and we shall be ready in our Places, to yield them, as becomes us, our utmost Assistance to sit in Safety, for the improving present Opportunities, for settling and securing the Peace and Freedom of the Common-wealth, praying for the Presence and Blessing of God upon their Endeavours.

6*th* of May Signed by the Direction of the Lord Fleetwood, and the Council of Officers of the Army.

Thomas Sanford Secretary.

They agree to accept of the Invitation.

After the delivery of this, many of the most Eminent Members of this Remnant of the Long Parliament, having before consulted with as many of the rest as were in London, came also and gave a Visit to the Speaker, to signifie their willingness to return to the Exercise of their Trust, (as they call'd it) in pursuance of the Invitation given them by the Army, and that they would meet the next morning, which was the 8*th* of May, at 8 of the Clock in the Painted-Chamber, where they desired his Presence to accompany them from thence to the Parliament-House; which he accordingly did, and they all went together, and took their Places. Thus ended the Reign, or rather the Usurpation of the Cromwels, being overthrown by those of their nearest Relations, from whom by Interest, they might have expected Spport: But such was the Fate of this ill-acquir'd Dominion, to be subverted in its greatest Security, by the Ambition and Malice of those that assisted the Aspirers in the obtaining of it.

And take their places in the House,

1659. Upon the Diſſolution of the Protector's Parliament, diligence was uſed by Clarges to acquaint Monk with all Occurrences; but the Officers of the Army in Scotland, then in London, of Fleetwood's Party, had ſo diſperſed Letters amongſt their Friends, to ingage them for the reſtoring of this latter part of the Long Parliament, that when he conven'd ſome of them at Edenburgh to ſound their Tempers, he perceived they had been wrought upon; and therefore he judged it moſt prudent, to ſeem to approve of what was done: And to that purpoſe he writ a Letter ſigned by himſelf and his Officers, to the Officers at London, which gave them Aſſurance of his Adherence to them; (but if Richard had not diſſolved his Parliament, Monk had then marched into England in favour of it.) They did not fear much any ſtorms from the Army in Ireland, who of themſelves could do little, without correſpondence from England and Scotland.

General Monk ſeems to give his Conſent to what was done in England.

They publiſh their Intentions by a Declaration.

The words of the Declaration extracted out of the Parliament Journals.

The firſt thing the Remnant-Parliament did when they met, after Election of their Officers, was the paſſing a ſhort Declaration, which was ordered to be Printed and Publiſhed; in the Cloſe whereof they declare, That they are Reſolved through the Gracious Aſſiſtance of Almighty GOD, to apply themſelves to the Faithful Diſcharge of the Truſt repoſed in them; and to endeavour the Settlement of this Common-wealth upon ſuch a Foundation as may aſſert, eſtabliſh and ſecure the Property and Liberties of the People in reference unto all, both as Men and Chriſtians; and that without a Single Perſon, Kingſhip, or Houſe of Peers: And ſhall vigorouſly endeavour the carrying on of Reformation, ſo much deſired, and ſo often declared for; to the end there may be a Godly and Faithful Magiſtracy and Miniſtry upheld and maintained in the Nations, to the Glory and Praiſe of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to the reviving and making glad the Hearts of the Upright in the Land.

Sir George Booth, and others of the old ſecluded Members claim their priviledge of Sitting, but are kept out.

Sir George Booth, Colonel Roſſiter, Mr. Pryn, and ſome others, Members of the Commons Houſe of this Parliament, (formerly ſecluded by the Army) attempted to go into the Houſe, but were all kept back by Adjutant Gen. Allen, except Mr. Pryn who ſlipt in, but they would do nothing whileſt he was amongſt them, but adjourned till the afternoon; and when he again would have entered he was ſtaid by ſome Officers of the Army.

About four days after the preſent ſmall Parliament had ſate, which was ſpent in making a Committee of Safety, and diſpatching Intelligence of their being re-inſtated in their former Power, to ſeveral of their Members abſent in the Country, whom they had not diſabled from Sitting; the Officers of the Army preſent themſelves with their Petition and Addreſs, a thing they often inſiſted to have proſecuted, and was one of the occaſions that heightned the differences betwixt them and this Parliament.

The Title was, The Humble Petition and Addreſs of the Officers of the Army, to the Parliament of the Common-wealth of England. The Addreſs it ſelf was in theſe words following: 1659.

The Humble Petition and Addreſs of the Officers of the Army to the Remnant Parliament.

CAlling to mind the former Declarations of Parliament, and the Grounds therein inviting us to take up Arms, and thoſe many ſignal Providences, wherein the Lord hath owned You and your Forces both by Sea and Land, in aſſerting that Righteous Cauſe, wherein the Civil and Religious Liberties of the People of theſe Nations were involved, ſo as that all open oppoſition was beaten down before you; and likewiſe weighing with our ſelves how in the ſeveral late Changes in Government, that publick Spirit which appeared in that Work, hath ſince that time been diſcouraged, and another raiſed up, drawing back to the ſame things you had contended againſt, even to the hazarding the Eſſentials of that Cauſe; we did upon ſerious thoughts of heart think it our duty once more to appear againſt thoſe back-ſliding ways: and Providence having brought the ſtate of Affairs to the condition they were in ſome few days before your ſitting, we found it neceſſary to aſſert amongſt our ſelves ſome of the Fundamentals of our Good Old Cauſe, with ſome other things conducing to the Preſervation thereof, with a full and fixed reſolution, through the Aſſiſtance of GOD, effectually even to the hazard of our Lives to endeavour the Recovery and ſecurity of the ſame. And the ſame Good Providence holding forth an opportunity to us, to open unto You a Way for the further diſcharge of your remaining Truſt in Parliament, we did by our Declaration of this inſtant May, humbly deſire you would be pleaſed to return to the exerciſe and diſcharge thereof, as before the 20th of April, 1653. And having to our great rejoycing ſeen your Declaration of the ſeventh Inſtant, ſhewing, that you are reſolved through the Gracious Aſſiſtance of Almighty GOD, to apply your ſelves to the faithful diſcharge of the Truſt repoſed in you; and to endeavour the Settlement of this Common-wealth upon ſuch a Foundation, as may aſſert, eſtabliſh and ſecure the Liberties of the People, in reference unto all, both as Men and Chriſtians, and that without a Single Perſon, Kingſhip, or Houſe of Peers, reſolving vigorouſly the carrying on the Work of Reformation, ſo much deſired, and ſo often declared for, to the end there may be a Godly and faithful Magiſtracy and Miniſtry upheld and maintained in theſe Nations; which ſo fully anſwers what our hearts were drawn forth 1659. forth to desire, that we could not any longer forbear to express our thankfulness for this door of hope again, opened towards the attaining a consummation of those things so much breathed after by the good People of this Common-wealth. And however we find our selves in some measure prevented, by the late Declaration and Resolves of this Parliament: Yet this nevertheless we have judged it our Duty to represent what was chiefly and unanimously upon our hearts, when we engaged in that which made way for your Return, which we humbly (as becomes us) lay before you: 1659.

1. That the Liberty of the Persons, and Property of the Estates of all Free People of these Nations, be maintained, preserved, and kept inviolable according to Law, under the Government of a Free State and Common-wealth, without a Single Person, Kingship, or House of Peers.

2. That there may be such a just and due Regulation of Law, and Courts of Justice and Equity, as that they may be a Protection, and not vexatious or oppressive to the People of these Nations.

3. That by an Act of Oblivion, all and every person and persons who have since the 19*th* of April, 1653. mediately or immediately advised, acted, or done any matter or thing whatsoever, in reference to the several Changes or Alterations in the Government of these Nations since the said 19 of April, 1653. or in order to the Publick Service, Peace, or Safety of these Nations, be Indemnified and saved harmless, to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

4. That all Laws, Ordinances, Declarations, and Establishments made in the several Changes and Alterations of Government, that have been in these Nations since the 19*th* of April aforesaid, and not as yet particularly repealed, be deemed good in Law, until particularly repealed.

5. That such Debts as have been contracted for the Publick Service and Affairs of this Common-wealth, and for the Charges of the Government, since the Twentieth of April, 1653. be carefully paid and satisfied.

6. That all persons who profess Faith in GOD the Father, and in Jesus Christ his Eternal Son the true God, and in the Holy Spirit, God Co-equal with the Father and the Son, one God blessed for ever, and do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be the Revealed or Written Word or Will of God, shall not be restrained from their Profession, but have due encouragement, and equal protection in the profession of their Faith, and exercise of Religion, whilst they abuse not their Liberty to the civil injury of others, or disturbance of others in their way of Worship: So that this Liberty be not extended to Popery or Prelacy, nor to such as shall practise or hold forth Licentiousness or Prophaneness under the profession of Religion: And that all Laws, Statutes, or Ordinances, and Clauses in any Laws, Statutes, or Ordinances to the contrary, may be declared null and void.

7. That a Godly, Faithful and Painful Gospel-Preaching Ministry be every where encouraged, countenanced, and maintained.

8. That the Universities and Schools of Learning be so countenanc'd and reformed, as that they may become the Nurseries of Piety and Learning.

9. That such persons as have at any time since the Twentieth of May, 1642. aided, or assisted, or adhered to the late King, Charles Stuart his Son, or any other person or persons whatsoever of that Party, against the Parliament or Common-wealth of England, and all other persons whatsoever that have made use of any Authority or Power under pretence of Law, or otherwise, to deprive or abridge any of the good People of these Nations of their Christian Liberty, or have or shall express themselves in any way mockers, scoffers, or revilers of Godliness, or of the Professors thereof, or are other wayes scandalous or loose in their conversations, or have not given good satisfaction of their affection and faithfulness to this Cause, may be speedily removed out of all places of Power or Trust in the Magistracy, or other management of the Publick Affairs of these Nations, and that no such persons may be admitted unto any such Place of Power or Trust for the future.

10. And forasmuch as no godly or other good Interest can be preserved, or maintained, unless the persons who are chiefly 1659. chiefly intruſted with the management and exerciſe of the Government, be of ſuitable Spirits to thoſe Intereſts, That thoſe who are or ſhall be intruſted therein, be ſuch perſons as ſhall be found to be moſt eminent for Godlineſs, Faithfulneſs, and Conſtancy to the good Cauſe and Intereſts of theſe Nations.

11. That to the end the Legiſlative Authority of this Common-wealth may not by their long ſitting become burthenſome or inconvenient, there may be effectual Proviſion made for a due Succeſſion thereof.

12. And for the better ſatisfaction, and more firm Union of the Forces of this Common-wealth, in this juncture of Affairs, for preſerving and maintaining the Principles and other matters thereunto ſubſervient, We do unanimouſly acknowledge and own the Lord Charles Fleetwood Lieutenant General of the Army, to be Commander in Chief of the Land-Forces of this Common-wealth.

13. That in order to the eſtabliſhing and ſecuring the Peace, Welfare, and Freedom of the People of theſe Nations for the ends before expreſſed, the Legiſlative Power thereof may be in a Repreſentative of the People, conſiſting of a Houſe ſucceſſively choſen by the People, in ſuch way and manner as this Parliament ſhall judge meet, and of a ſelect Senate, Co-ordinate in Power, of able and faithful Perſons, eminent for Godlineſs, and ſuch as continue adhering to this Cauſe.

14. That the Adminiſtration of all Executive Power of Government, may be in a Council of State, conſiſting of a convenient number of Perſons qualified in all reſpects as aforeſaid.

15. That all Debts contracted by his late Highneſs, or his Father, ſince the Fifteenth of December 1653, may be ſatisfied, and that an honourable Revenue of Ten thouſand pounds per annum, with a convenient Houſe, may be ſettled upon him, and his Heirs for ever; and Ten thouſand pounds per annum more upon him during Life: And upon his Honourable Mother Eight thouſand pounds per annum during her life, to the end a mark of the high eſteem this Nation hath of the good Service done by his Father, our ever Renowned General, may remain to Poſterity. Theſe having been the Thoughts and Deſires of our hearts, unanimouſly agreed upon before your returning to Sit, and finding the ſpirits of divers of the honeſt faithful People of this Common-wealth led forth for the ſame things, and your ſelves by your late Declaration and Reſolutions in a great meaſure aſſiſting them; We thought it our Duty to the Nations, to You, and to the Honeſt People, humbly to preſent theſe, and beg the Bleſſing and Preſence of the Lord with you in the proſecution and bringing forth ſuch a Settlement as may be for the Honour of God, the Union, Joy and Rejoycing of all the peaceable People of the Common-wealth. 1659.

And we ſhall pray, &c.

This Petition was preſented by Lambert the Twelfth day of May, accompanied with Desborow, and Barkſtead the Lieutenant of the Tower, with Twelve other Colonels, and Two Lieutenant Colonels. We find entred in the Parliament Journal the words which Lambert ſpake at the delivery of it, which were theſe:

Mr. Speaker,

WE are Commanded by the Officers of the Army, to preſent before you their humble Petition and Addreſs; there are ſeveral things contained in it, which have been a long time upon their Hands, and no viſible way of redreſs; Finding to their great Joy and Satisfaction, that you are Returned; in diſcharge of their Truſt, they thought it not fit to neglect this opportunity, but have Commanded us to preſent this Petition.

Lambert's words to the Speaker at the delivery of the Humble Petition and Addreſs.

When he had ſaid theſe words, he withdrew with thoſe that were with him; and the Houſe upon Debate Order'd their Speaker to return them the following Anſwer, which is likewiſe entered in the Journal of that Days proceedings.

I am

The Speakers Speech.

I Am Commanded by the House to tell you, That they have read the Petition and Addreſs that you have made here to Us; They have commanded me likewiſe to tell you, That as they found your Affection before they came hither, ſo they find that Affection continuing.

For the things contained in your Petition, they are things of great weight, and many more things of great weight are lying before the House; and it is concerning the Settlement, for which the Divine Providence of GOD hath brought us hither, who we hope ſhall never depart from us.

The Houſe finds in your Advice much of Love and Affection, and have commanded me to acknowledge that Love and Affection you have ſhewn, and to give you thanks, very hearty thanks for your love and expreſſions of it; And accordingly in their Name I do give you very hearty thanks.

The Houſe by Votes agreed to all the Articles of this Petition at the firſt Debate of it, except ſuch as concerned the publick Revenue, Government, and the Protector, which were referred to a Committee, whom they directed to go to the Protector, and receive an acknowledgment from him of his Submiſſion to the Government, before they would do any thing for him, and to take a State of his Debts: which being declared to him, with the Reſolve of the Houſe, the occaſion of that Meſſage: After Conſideration, he delivered the following anſwer to them in Writing, with his Name to it.

The Protector Richard's ſubmiſſion to the Powers in being.

I Have peruſed the Reſolve and Declaration which you were pleaſed to deliver to me the other night, and for the information touching what is mention'd in the ſaid Reſolve, I have cauſed a true ſtate of my Debts to be tranſcribed and annexed to this Paper, which will ſhew what they are, and how they were contracted.

As to that part of the Reſolve, whereby the Committee are to inform themſelves, how far I do acquieſce in the Government of this Common-wealth, as it is declared by this Parliament:

I truſt my paſt Carriage hitherto hath manifeſted my Acquieſcence in the Will and Diſpoſition of GOD, and that I Love and value the Peace of this Common-wealth much above my own concernments; and I deſire that by this, a meaſure of my future Deportment may be taken, which through the Aſſiſtance of GOD ſhall be ſuch as ſhall bear the ſame Witneſs, having, I hope, in ſome degree, learned rather to reverence and ſubmit to the hand of GOD, than to be unquiet under it. And (as to the late Providences that have fallen out amongſt us) however in reſpect of particular Engagements that lay upon me, I could not be active in making a change in the Government of the Nations, yet thorow the Goodneſs of GOD, I can freely acquieſce in it; being made, and do hold my ſelf obliged as (with other men) I expect Protection from the preſent Government, ſo to demean my ſelf with all peaceableneſs under it, and to procure to the utmoſt of my Power that all in whom I have any Intereſt, do the ſame.

Richard Cromwel.

A Schedule of his Debts were annexed to this Paper: what was contracted for the Funeral of his Father, they abſolutely rejected, and made ſlow progreſs in the reſt, and delayed to ſettle any Revenue upon him or his Mother, as was deſired; but gave him Two thouſand pounds to diſcharge part of his own private Debts, and required him and all his Dependents, to remove from White-Hall in ſix days. Fleetwood diſcovered a little Diſcontent at this contempt put upon his Brother Cromwel, and that Family; but as ſoon as it was ordered that he ſhould be Commander in Chief of all the Armies and Land Forces in England, Scotland and Ireland, for one year, in compliance with the Twelfth Article of the Armies Petition and Addreſs, he was leſs ſolicitous in the concernments of his Wifes Family: When the Houſe Voted he ſhould Command the Armies, they likewiſe Voted, He ſhould have power to Sign and Seal ſuch Commiſſions for the Conſtitution of Officers under him, as ſhould be approved by the Parliament, and nominated by Sir Henry Vane, Sir Arthur Haſterig, Lieutenant General Fleetwood, and the Colonels, Lambert, Desborow, Ludlow, and Berry, or the Major part of them, who were made Commiſſioners for that purpoſe. And for his better Eſtabliſhment, they directed a Bill to be prepared and brought into the Houſe to be paſſed into an Act for his Conſtitution; which was done accordingly; but upon the ſecond Reading of it, they would not admit of that Clauſe, to Authorize him to Sign Commiſſions, but Ordered, That all Commiſſions, both to the Commiſſion-Officers of the Army, and the Captains of the Fleet, ſhould be ſigned by the Speaker of the Parliament of the Common-wealth of England, to be written by the Clerks attending the Council of State, and delivered to the Officers gratis, by the Speaker in the Parliament Houſe. They alſo at the ſame time Ordered, That the Government of Ireland ſhould be by Commiſſioners nominated, and appointed by Parliament, and not by one Perſon, and that Colonel Henry Cromwel ſhould be acquainted with the Order, and required forthwith to repair to the Parliament. This Gentleman had made himſelf very popular in Ireland, in his Government of that Kingdom, under his Father, and his Brother; but in regard there was a Council co-ordinate with him in civil matters, many of the Members whereof were of ſevere and rigid behaviour, the generoſity of his Diſpoſition was ſomewhat over-rul'd; nevertheleſs, moſt people in diſtreſs there did receive ſuch Effects of his Civility, where he had any manner of capacity to ſhew it, That they acknowledged he deſerved to have been the Son of a better Father.

Fleetwood Voted Commander in Chief of all the Forces.

All Commiſſions to the Officers of the Army ordered to be ſigned and given by the Speaker.

Henry Cromwel called from the Government of Ireland.

He had the Iriſh Army under good Diſcipline, and was ſo well beloved of the Officers, that it is probable he would not have conſented to the change of Government, if he had had time to prepare againſt it; For his Brother gave him no intimation of what had hapned, nor any Commands to appear on his behalf; what he had heard, being only from the intelligence of private Friends. At the firſt Alarm, he adviſed with his Confidents what to do, and to prevent Confederacies againſt him, by any

Com-

Combinations of the Officers of his Army he commanded all of them to their Charges, and (to uſe his own words) not to hearken to any deſign of Innovation, how ſpeciouſly ſoever the ſame might be preſented to them. Likewiſe he diſpatched Cornet Monk to Scotland to General Monk (who came thither not till fifteen days after the alteration of the Government) to inform himſelf how he and his Army ſtood affected to it; who returned no other Anſwer than a Copy of the Letters the Officers of his Army had obliged him to ſend to the Parliament.

In all probability, if Colonel Henry Cromwel had drawn his Army together, and fixed them to his Authority, and then declared againſt their proceedings at London, he might have ſhaken much the new foundation of the Common-wealth; for the Armies in England and Scotland were not then modelled, and the Officers many of them (as hath been ſaid) Relations or Dependents of the Family of the Cromwels; but he was ſo doubtful of the ſucceſs, that he undertook nothing, but peaceably ſubmitted as his Brother had done, (though in more generous terms) to the Authority then introduc'd.

We purpoſely omit many particulars of theſe tranſactions, and others in the Journals of the Parliament, as their Conſtitutions of a Council of State for the more immediate executive Power of the Common-wealth, the Nomination of Judges, Commiſſioners of the Great Seal, and Commiſſioners for the Admiralty, and Government of the Navy, and Colonel Henry Cromwel's Letter to the Parliament, when he ſubmitted to it, as not very eſſentially pertinent to this Hiſtory.

Fleetwood and his Friends were troubled at the reſtriction of his Commiſſion, yet he diſſembled his paſſion, and yielded to neceſſity, till a more favourable conjunction might give him opportunity to inlarge his power: however, both he, Desborow, Lambert, and many of them were diſſatisfied with the way of receiving their Commiſſions from the hands of the Speaker, and would have remonſtrated againſt it; but by enquiring into the temper of the inferiour Officers, they found them well enough affected towards it, and therefore did not proceed for that time. And Fleetwood himſelf, to diſſemble his acquieſcence, with great Submiſſion and Proteſtation of Obedience to the Parliament, received his Commiſſion in the Houſe, from the Hands of the Speaker, and after him Lambert, Desborow, Berry, Ludlow, Sydenham, and the reſt of them in and about London, who had Commands in the Army.

Fleetwood, Lambert, and others receive their Commiſſions in the Houſe from their Speaker.

The Parliament now became confident of its Power, and meditated to ſubject the Army wholly to it (which made them jealous of each other.) Although all the Armies and Navy had declared their concurrence in obedience to them; yet they diſplaced thoſe Officers in both, whom they ſuſpected in any manner to have been affected to Cromwel, or Monarchical Government. The ſeven Commiſſions before named, to whom the nomination of the Officers of the Army was firſt committed, were continued in that Authority and very active in it. Thoſe of the Anabaptiſt perſwaſion, were by them eſteemed moſt firm to a Common-wealth, and by their Information they were much guided in the diſpoſition of Places; but where they had been put out by Cromwel, for diſſatisfaction to him, they were reſtored as of courſe. Colonel Lockhart, Governour of Dunkirk, had made his ſubmiſſion; but ſhortly after, there was a deſperate Mutiny in the Garriſon, at firſt ſuſpected to be for the King, but it was quickly appeaſed, and found to be otherwiſe. And the better to regulate the Affairs there, and quiet the place, Lieutenant Colonel Pierſon, Colonel Aſhfield, and Colonel Packer, are forthwith ſent over. Thus all things ſucceeded fortunately to them. Embaſſadors from all parts making haſte to congratulate the felicity of their Government.

The Governour of Dunkirk ſubmits to the change of Government.

The Embaſſador from the United Provinces, was prepared with his Credentials for Audience within a fortnight after the firſt beginning of this New Common-wealth, and at his Audience, in the name of his Maſters, he made a more than ordinary Profeſſion of Amity, and deſire of Unity and Confederacy with them. The Commiſſioners who had that in Charge, made great diſpatch both in modelling the Army and Navy, Pierſon and Maſon, two Anabaptiſts, Lieutenant-Colonels under General Monk, undertook to know ſo well the Army in Scotland, that their information was much credited in the ſetling of it, and to weaken Monk's Power, they had deſigned to remove thoſe he moſt truſted, and put others of their own Creatures into their places. Of all theſe paſſages the General had very good Intelligence, his Agent Clarges not omitting to acquaint him with all that paſſed with theſe Commiſſioners. And after a while he took publick notice of it in a Letter to the Houſe, in which, among other expreſſions, he told them he had heard of their Intentions to diſplace many of his Officers, which he conceived they did not from any knowledge they had of their Perſons and Qualifications, but the Informations of others; and that he thought himſelf as fit to be credited in that matter as any, and did aſſure them, they were all honeſt and ſtout Men, and ſuch for whoſe Fidelity and good Behaviour he would be ingaged.

The Dutch Embaſſador courts our reſtored Senate in a high manner.

Gen. Monk digeſts not the Juſtices deſigns of Modelling his Army.

This Letter put a little ſtop to their Cariere, but did not divert their Revolutions: yet to give him ſome ſatisfaction, they ſent him back word, they would be very careful in the placing or diſplacing of his Officers, and that in his own Regiments of Horſe and Foot, there ſhould be no alteration till ſuch time as he were conſulted in it. Monk was not ſatisfied with their Anſwer, but privately adviſed ſome of thoſe Officers, whom he heard they would put from their Commands, to go to London, to ſolicite their own Concernments, and as much as they could obſtruct and retard the proceedings of the Committee. That which was of moſt advantage to the preſervation of his Officers, was an Order made, That ſuch Officers as were new conſtituted for Scotland or Ireland, becauſe they could not come to the Parliament to take their Commiſſions, ſhould receive them from ſuch Commiſſioners as ſhould be appointed for the Civil Government of thoſe Kingdoms doms respectively. And none being yet appointed for Scotland, that Affair rested a while in suspense, yet was not so far neglected as to hinder the designment of the remove of many, whom nevertheless the General underhand kept still in their Commands, till further order.

He uſeth his utmoſt induſtry to obſtruct it.

An Old Act of Assessment revived.

In the pretended Parliament begun at Westminster, in the year 1656. An Act had passed for a three years Assessment upon England, Scotland and Ireland, at thirty five thousand pounds per mensem on England, six thousand per mensem on Scotland, and nine thousand a Moneth on Ireland, to determine the 24*th.* of June 1660, of which one years proportion was yet uncollected, which made the House to pass an Act on the 18*th.* of June this year, to authorize the collecting of that money, knowing it to be less difficult to continue a Tax already imposed, than after the expiring of that to raise a new one. In this Act, they appoint the whole years Assessment to be paid into the Treasury, one Moiety on or before the tenth of August, and the other on the tenth of October.

Commissioners appointed for the Government of Ireland.

Having, as is aforesaid, recalled Colonel Henry Cromwel from Ireland, they appoint for the Civil Government of that Kingdom certain Commissioners, namely, Steele, Robert Goodwyn, Matthew Thomlinson and John Jones; and for the Command of the Army, Colonel Edmund Ludlow, who with the Title of Lieutenant General was immediately upon receipt of his Commission dispatch't away.

The Kings Commissioners active endeavours to raise the Country for his Majesties Service.

In the mean time, the Kings Commissioners were not idle in ingaging as many as they could for his Service; and Captain Titus was sent by his Majesty to treat with Major General Brown, and such others in the City of London as he knew to be well inclined to his Interest. When he came to London and sent to Brown, he refused to have any Communication with him, and therefore he used the mediation of Mr. Charlton, and Mr. Beverly of Lincolns-Inne to treat with him, and they had several Conferences without any effect; for he being a Prudent Wary man, was unwilling to hazard himself till he saw some Body of Men together, to busie the Army, and divert the Forces in London and Westminster. Titus then addressed himself to Mr. Mordant and the rest of his Majesties Commissioners, and was very assistant to them. So Active were these Commissioners, that most of the Nobility and Gentry of England, and Wales were engaged by them, and a day in July fixed for the Rising. Sir George Booth was to raise Lancashire and Cheshire. Sir Thomas Middleton, Shropshire and Flintshire. Sir John Carter, Denbighshire. The Earl of Stamford, Leicestershire. The Lord Willoughby of Parham, (who also advanced money to buy Arms) Suffolk. Colonel Rossiter, Lincolnshire. Colonel Popham, Somersetshire and Wiltshire, and to secure Bristol and Taunton. Mr. Edward Dunch and others, Berkshire Major General Massey, and the Lord Herbert of Worcester, and Mr. How, Gloucestershire. Sir William Compton, Sir Thomas Leverthorp and Mr. Fanshaw, Hartfordshire. Mr. Mordant, Sir Francis Vincent, and Sir Adam Brown, Surrey; with many more in all places too long to name.

The first Rising was to be of such as had never engaged on the Kings side in the late Wars, thereby to draw the Army to less opposition; for the Declaration had no mention of his Majesty, but was called, The Declaration of the Lords, Gentlemen and Citizens, Freeholders and Yeomen, in this once happy Nation. The words of it were these:

The Declaration of Sir George Booth emitted at the time of his Rising.

SInce it hath pleased Almighty God to suffer the Spirit of Division to continue in this distracted Nation, and to leave us without any setled Foundation of Religion, Liberty, and Property, the Legislative Power usurped at pleasure, and contemned; the Army raised at first for our Defence abused, and misled into unwarrantable Actions by the Cunning and Ambition of some of the Superiour Officers; no Face of Government appearing either in any single person, or a Body of Men in Council lawfully constituted, to whom the Grievances of the People may with any Probability of Success be properly addressed. Therefore we being Conscious of our Duty, and sensible of our own and the Nations Ruine, if these Distractions continue, or issue in a more fixed oppression by some Settlement inconsistent with the Laws, Peace and Interest of these Nations, have taken Arms in Defence of our selves, and all others who will partake with Us in the Vindication and Maintenance of the Freedom of Parliaments, against all Violence whatsoever of the known Laws, Liberty, and Property of the Gobd people of this Nation, who at present groan under Illegal, Arbitrary, and Insupportable Taxes and Payments unknown to our Ancestors, This being our Duty to GOD and to Man, and our only Design, we cannot dispair of the Blessing of him who gives Victory; nor of the chearful concurrence of all Good people, nor of the undeceived part of the Army, whose Arrears and increase of future pay, and Advancement of high Command, We shall by all means procure, suffering no Imposition of force on any mans Conscience; And to this We doubt not but all honest English-men will say Amen, Amen.

Sir George Booth's Rising aided by the Kings Friends from all Parts.

But yet many of the Kings Friends in all parts were to bring in their Aids, Colonel Richard Arundel and Trelawny undertook, if his Majesty would bring five hundred Horse into Cornwall, and Arms for as many more, they would raise the other five hundred: And Major General Egerton did as much in Staffordshire; and many others in other parts. The Preparation could not be expedited with that haste as was intended, so that the day of Rising was deferr'd to the first of August, and Mr. Cooper was sent by Mr. Mordant to his Majesty to acquaint him with it; who was so soon dispatch't, that he returned in five days to those that sent him to let them know, his Majesty would be present with them in a short time: With him Colonel Roger Whitley came into England, with some verbal Instructions to Sir George Booth, and some blank Commissions to disperse in Lancashire, Cheshire and Flintshire; He staid no longer in London, then to receive Mr. Mordant's Commands, and some of the forementioned Declarations to carry with him to Booth. Captain Titus was sent to the King, to let him know all was ready: His Majesty thereupon remov'd privately from Brussels to Calais, about the first of August, which was two days after Titus came to him: he had in his Company only the Marquess of Ormond, the Earl of Bristol, Dr. Quatermaine, Mr. Daniel Oneal, and one Maurice Delaval, a Servant of the Marquess of Ormond's, with two other Servants, one belonging to the Earl of Bristol, and the other to Oneal, nor did they travel thither together, but by two and two. His Majesty had not only Dr. Quatermaine with him, and the first place he came to from Brussels was a little Village where Monsieur Marsin met him, with whom he had much discourse about his Affairs. Marsin accompanied his Majesty to St. Omers, where they parted; and then he went directly to Calais, where the rest met him; but to avoid being known they dispersed into several Lodgings, and his Majesty had with him only Maurice to wait on him. The Dukes of York and Gloucester, were at Breda, and were sent for to Brussels, but they arrived not till the day the King parted from thence, and after he was gone. The Duke of York with Titus followed his Majesty to Calais, but the Duke of Gloucester by his Majesties appointment continued at Brussels, ready prepared to come over upon the first intimation. The King staid three days at Calais, and a Shallop was ready at Boulogn for his Transportation in Kent, upon the first news of any considerable Parties being in Arms.

His Majesty removes from Brussels to Calais, to be ready if occasion were to come over.

The Duke of York follows from Breda.

The main of the Design prevented by discovery.

But in the height of this Expectation, one Mr. Baron arrived from Mordant with the ill News of the disappointment of much of the Design in all the South and West parts of England, which was thought to be discovered by a Letter intercepted at Reading from the Lady Mary Howard, about the Latter end of July, but it was known long before that Letter, to Scot, and some few other Members of the Council of State, which hastened them so much in a more than usual care in modelling the Army, and setling the whole Militia of the Kingdom, wherein the meanest Commission-Officer in any of the Trained Bands, Troops, or Companies, was to be approved in Parliament, and they had privately laid a contrivance to have Soldiers at most of the Risings of the King's Friends all over England: So that their accidental intercepting of the Lady Mary Howards Letter by the Officious diligence of a Post-Master, was rather a Service than a disadvantage to his Majesty since thereby his coming to England, which might have exposed his Person to inevitable Peril, was prevented. Notice of this discovery could not be soon enough dispersed to prevent the appearance of many Gentlemen in divers parts. The Earl of Lichfield, with Sir Adam Brown, my Lord Mordant, (so we now stile him, in regard he here first declared his having received the Dignity of Viscount) and about twenty five others Rendezvouzed near Guilford in Surrey, but by reason of the taking of Sir Francis Vincent an active Servant of the Kings, there was so little appearance, that all divided to shift for themselves: the Earl of Lichfield and my Lord Mordant came disguised by Water in the Common Barge from Chertsey to London, and got privately to Alderman Robinson's House, where they were for a while concealed.

The most considerable Body that got together was under Sir George Booth, who with the Earl of Derby, the Lord Kilmury, and Major General Egerton, were met at the time appointed at Warrington, at first with a small Party; but they having the very Flower of the Gentry and Gallantry engaged among them, their numbers increased every minute: Colonel Roger Whitley delivered his Message to Sir George Booth from his Majesty, and the Declarations he had received from the Lord Mordant, with an account of his Majesties Preparations beyond the Seas, and his readiness to come over upon the first notice; which was no small Satisfaction and Joy to the whole Party, which then consisted of about Five hundred men. The first thing they resolved, was to march towards Chester, and the first night they marched to a place called Tradsam, where they met Colonel Werden, who assured them that the Gates of Chester would be opened to them: And the next day they marched thither, and took possession of the Town, but the Castle was defended against them by Croxton the Governour thereof for the Parliament, who had one Company in it. The next day Major General Egerton was sent with a Party to Chirk-Castle, where Sir Thomas Middleton hearing of his approach, opened the Gates and joyfully received him. The next day he went with them to Wrexham (having left his Son to command the Castle for the King) and there many came in to them. The next day after, Colonel Whitley was sent with a party to put a Garrison into Harding-Castle in Flint-shire, which was newly left by a Party of the Parliament Soldiers that marched from thence to Denbigh-Castle, their next Garrison, but were seized by the Country, and brought Prisoners to Sir George Booth's Party. Colonel Ireland at the same time declared for them in Leverpool, and Mr. Brooks one of the present Members of the House of Commons, willing to expiate his former mistakes, cordially joyned with them for the freedom of his Countrey, and met at the first Rendezvouz.

Sir George Booth appears with several others in a considerable Body

They take possession of Chester City, but the Castle holds out against them.

Chirk Castle deliver'd to them by Sir Thomas Middleton.

Colonel Ireland and several others declare for them.

The Parliament somewhat apprehensive of these Proceedings, caused all the Horses in and about London to be seized, and all the Avenues to the City to be guarded, and divers Troops and Companies to be placed in all the ways toward the West, and North-west Parts. They had every hour news of the dispersing of several little Parties, and Lambert was ordered with a Brigade to march to suppress Sir George Booth and his Party. The Lord Mordant, as the most active Agent for his Majesty, was summoned on a great penalty to appear; and Mr. Edmond Dunch and Brooks, two Members of the House whom they suspected to be ingaged for the King, were on the penalty of a hundred pounds a piece required to attend the service of the House.

Mr. Monk, a Minister sent into Scotland to solicite his Brother the General, to the imbracing his Majesties Interest,

Mr. Nicholas Monk, a Reverend Minister, a Person of most firm Loyalty to his Majesty, and the only Brother to General Monk, came at this time to London in his way to Scotland, from Sir Hugh Pollard, Sir Thomas Stukely, and other of his Majesties Friends in the West of England

England. His business was to ingage his Brother in his Majesties Cause, to promote the present Design being directed to receive further Instructions from Sir John Greenvile. He came directly to Mr. Clarges before he saw any one, and communicated his business to him, and afterwards to Greenvile, who much encouraged his undertaking, and shewed him two Letters he had received from his Majesty, one to General Monk, and the other to himself; which may not be impertinent to this History to be here inserted, to manifest the great Vigilance of his Majesty, whose eye was in every place where he had any prospect of assistance to his Affairs. That to Monk was as followeth:

His Majesties Letters to General Monk and Sir John Greenvile.

SIR,

I Cannot think you wish me ill, for you have no reason so to do, and the good I expect from you, will bring so great a benefit to your Country, and to your self, that I cannot think you will decline my Interest. The Person who gives or sends this to you, hath Authority to say much to you from me; and if you once resolve to take my Interest to heart, I will leave the way and manner of declaring it intirely to your own Judgment; And will comply with the Advice you shall give me. The rest I refer to the person who conveys this to you; and it is in your Power to make me as kind to you as you can desire, and to have me always.

Your Affectionate Friend,

July 21st 1659. CHARLES R.

The other was to Sir John Greenvile of the the same date, in these words, Viz.

His Majesties Letter to Sir John Greenvile.

I Am Confident that George Monk can have no Malice in his heart against me; nor hath he done any thing against Me which I cannot easily pardon, and it is in his Power to do Me so great Service, that I cannot easily Reward, but I will do all, I can; and I do Authorize you to Treat with him; and not only to assure him of my Kindness, but that I will very liberally Reward him with such an Estate in Land, and such a Title of Honour as himself shall desire, if he will declare for me, and adhere to my Interest: And whatsoever you shall promise to him on my behalf, or whatever he or you by his Advice, shall promise to any of his Officers, or the Army under his Command (which Command shall still keep) I will make good and perform upon the Word of a King.

CHARLES R.

Greenvile earnestly pressed to have Clarges ingaged, and Mr. Monk moved it to him, with a promise of Great Advantage from his Majesty upon his Restitution. Clarges replyed, That he needed not these Temptations to oblige him to his Duty; and refused to have any Discourse concerning those Matters with Sir John Greenvile at that time, well knowing, that the least jealousie of his actions from those in power, might make him useless for that future Service which could not be done without him. Mr. Monk negotiates with Mr. Clarges about the foresaid business.

But because all the ways to Scotland were obstructed, he took care to provide a Frigot for the Transporting of Mr. Nicholas Monk thither, and convey'd him safe on Shipboard fully instructed how to manage his Negotiations with Caution, and to communicate with none but the General, except Dr. Samuel Barrow Physician to the Army, a very discreet Gentleman, and Mr. John Price, his Chaplain: The first of which was ejected out of Trinity-Colledge in Cambridge for his affection to his Majesty; and the latter, the Son of a Sequestred Minister, always educated in Principles of Loyalty, a good Scholar, and an honest Man; both recommended by Clarges to the General at his first going into Scotland, to be near his Person. Clarges secretly conveys Mr. Monk on Shipboard for his Transportation into Scotland.

The King when he received the News from the Lord Mordant of the disappointment of the Design, went from Callais to Bulloign, and from thence by easie Journeys, and very privately to Rouen. The Duke of York and Captain Titus stayed behind a while at Bulloign, and the parts adjacent, to be ready upon all occasions if any thing should intervene. His Majesty at Rouen was in Consultation which way to move, when Dr. Allestry came to him with the news of Sir George Booth's being in Arms, with Sir Thomas Middleton, and others, with great Forces in Lancashire, Cheshire and North-Wales, which put him in good hopes of Success. The first rumour of this Rising represented it very formidable, forasmuch as his Majesties Friends that lived at distance from it, were willing to receive it with the greatest advantage, so that the Numbers were believed to be much greater than they were, and by imagination advanced to what the willing Affections of the favourers of his Majesties Cause would have them. His Majesty sent the Marquess of Ormond to Paris to Transact some Affairs there, and went himself to St. Maloes by Caen, where he met the Earl of Bristol, and Mr. Oneal. His Majesty removes privately from Calais to Rouen. Thence to St. Maloes.

They at Westminster in the mean time were very active in dispatching Lambert on the Expedition against Booth, but first they issued forth a Proclamation to proclaim Major General Egerton, Colonel Robert Werden, Sir George Booth, Sir Thomas Middleton, and their Adherents, Traytors and Rebels, which was commanded to be proclaimed in all Market Towns, and read in all Churches. Major General Massey, the Lord Herbert, and others stir for the King in Glocestershire.

Major General Massey was very active in Gloustershire, and if by an accident of the interception of a Letter his Design had not been ruin'd, he had certainly taken Glousester; and what with his own reputation in these Parts, and the assistance of the Lord Herbert of Worcester, Colonel Barrow, Captain Glaynford, and others of the Kings Friends, they would have got together about three thousand Men, Miners and others, out of the Forest of Dean, and from about Stroud-Waters, and other places. There was in Glouceſter a Troop of the Army Horse under one Dale and a Militia-Troop commanded by one Crofts, who upon this Discovery caused three hundred Foot to be presently raised, and sent a Party of Horse to take the Lord Herbert, Massey, Barrow, and Glaynford: They took the Lord Herbert, and brought him to Glouceſter; Barrow and Glaynford defended themselves in Barrow's House, and upon Parol, to render themselves at Glouceſter, were not taken. Massey and his Servant being taken Prisoners, Massey himself was set on a Horse, and a good stout Trooper set behind him to hold him in his Arms, two rode on each side, and some Troopers before his Horse, and others behind: It was about the close of the Night, the Evening very dark and Tempestuous with Rain and Hail, insomuch that when they were going down a very steep Hill by Nimpsfield, Road, about ten miles from Glouceſter, the way to Bath, Massey's Horse, with the man that rode behind him fell headlong all together, and tumbled down that steep Hill, whereby it hapned that the Fellow let go his hold, and most of the rest also; so that all the Prisoners, except the Lord Herbert, and Massey's Servant, escaped.

The Lord Herbert taken.

And Major Gen. Massey.

Massey escapes, together with several other prisoners.

The Parliament sent to Dunkirk, for three Regiments to strengthen the Army; and Colonel Zanchy brought out of Ireland his Regiment of Horse, and Axtel's Regiment of Foot, which landing at Angleſey, marched to joyn with Lambert, who at his first march from London had not above fifteen hundred, but by Conjunction of several Troops and Companies that met him, increased to above five thousand before he engaged; Sir George Booth had not half the number, and those he had were without any Order or Discipline, because many of them being Noblemen and Gentlemen of Quality, were not without great Emulation, every one aspiring his Command, whilst no body obeyed. Sir George Booth having intelligence of Lambert's drawing near to him, thought to have got a days march before him into Lancaſhire, to have encreased his numbers; and to gain time, he and Sir Thomas Middleton sent a Trumpeter with to Ministers, to shew the ground of their raising an Army, and desired a Treaty to save effusion of Blood: To which Lambert agreed, on condition they would first lay down their Arms, and surrender to him the Garrisons in their power. To this there was no reply; but some of Lambert's Men pressed so hard the next morning upon Booth, that at a Bridge near Northwich, a sharp Encounter was made between the Forces of each Party. The Boothians with much Courage defended the Pass, till they were over-powered by numbers. Captain Morris, a gallant Loyal Gentleman was killed, and some few others of Booth's Party; of Lambert's very few fell, and those that did, of no great Note; all the vanquished dispersed themselves; Sir George Booth and Sir Thomas Middleton got away. The Lord Kilmury, Brooks, Major General Egerton, Sir William Oneale and others were taken Prisoners, and all the Garrisons immediately submitted to Lambert.

Sir George Booth's Forces ingage with Lambert.

Sir George defeated.

Sir George, although he had the good Fortune at that time to escape, was not long free, being seized at Newports-Pannel in a Disguise, as he was riding towards London, in order to his Transportation into some Foreign Part.

Taken prisoner at Newport Pannel.

The Curious that made Remarques on this generous Undertaking, as commonly wiser in the Discourse than Execution of any great Design, did much censure the Conduct of it. They said, that they had many Opportunities to have ruined their Enemies, but omitted all; That Colonel Zanchy from Ireland, landing in Angleſey, might have been met, and with good probability of Success fought with, e're he could have joyned with Lambert, they being with all their Force betwixt him and them; and that Colonel Lilburn, who was gathering men together in York-ſhire, might easily, by any any small Force from Lancaſhire have been broken, and hindred in his Levies; and that many other little Parties, which in small numbers came from several Parts might have been met and dispersed, before they united; and that one Blow given to any one of them, would have added so much to their Reputation, that it might have brought great Accessions to their Party. Others, were of Opinion, that nothing was more destructive to his Majesty than these Plots and Contrivances of Rising for him; and that the best Resolution he could have taken, since the end of the first War, was to have sate in Expectation of some favourable Advantage to himself from the Division of his Enemies; For what could new raised men do against experienced and Successful Soldiers? And where the late King with all his strength could not prevail, Parties could less expect to conquer. But doubtless this was a great mistake; for it was nothing else, but the restless and invincible Spirit of the Royal Party, that by keeping the Usurpers in a perpetual distraction and Alarm, hindred them from proceeding to a final Establishment of their Power; and supported the very Life and Credit of the Cause. And certainly, the Generosity of those Noble Persons cannot be enough commended, since they valued no hazard, in respect of their Duty to their Soveraign, and the Vindication of the Laws and Liberty of their Country, and have left such an Example of Loyalty to their Posterity, as we hope will be maintained, as long as the Fame of their Vertues and Honour shall endure.

The management of this Rising censured by many.

General Monk in Scotland, was so much prevailed upon, by the report of Sir George Booth's prosperous Success in his Enterprize, and the importunity of his Brother Nicholas Monk, that he resolved to march into England in pursuance ance of Booth's Declaration, which was very ſuitable to his own Inclinations.

He conſulted in this Matter beſides his Brother, only Major Ralph Knight, Major of his own Regiment of Horſe, Captain Jeremiah Smith likewiſe of his own Regiment, Dr. Samuel Barrow Phyſician to the Army, Dr. John Price his Chaplain, and Dr. Thomas Gumble then Chaplain to the Council of Scotland, in regard he had many Seditious Officers in his Army, who were Spies upon all his Actings, and therefore was obliged to be very wary, and circumſpect in his Proceedings; inſomuch, that when Colonel Atkins, a Royaliſt of his ancient Acquaintance, came into Scotland to him, about the ſame Errand that his Brother did, Monk (for fear of awakening the Jealouſie of the Factious about him) durſt not ſhew him any Countenance or Reſpect, but rather the contrary, ſending him away ſomewhat diſcouraged: When all was ready for his March, and a Declaration to that end prepared, he demurred for two days, upon the ſtop of the Engliſh Packet, in expectation of Intelligence from his Agent Clarges, from whom he two days after received the fatal News of the Defeat of Sir George Booth.

Is diverted by the News of his Defeat.

The King receives News thereof at St. Maloes.

The King being ſtill at St. Maloes in preparation of a Veſſel to tranſport him into Egland, had the firſt notice of theſe Misfortunes from Mr. Brett, an Engliſh Benedictine Monk, which in a while after was confirmed to him by the Marqueſs of Ormond, who came to him from Paris, with Particulars of it: The King (aways preſent to himſelf in the moſt difficult Accidents of his Life) diſcovered not much alteration at this, though it ſeemed a Croſs, that it might very well no leſs ſenſibly affect him, than whatever had yet happned to him improſperous, and giving Check to his Fortune; becauſe hereby all his hopes became deſperate, of his being ever reſtored to his Subjects, without ſuch Foreign Force as ſhould be able to afford aſſiſtance and Supply to their Endeavours for him, by holding his Enemies ſo long in Play, till by acceſſion of his Friends, they might be ſtrong enough to reſiſt their greateſt Power and Force: yet even in this Reflection, he had many Doubts in his Mind, for that many late Succeſſes of the Engliſh in Flanders, had made them ſeem invincible to thoſe, from whom His Majeſty was to expect Aſſiſtance. But ſince now nothing but Foreign Aid could viſibly raiſe his hopes, he reſolved ſeriouſly to apply himſelf to the Treaty now in Agitation upon the Borders between France and Spain, about a Peace betwixt thoſe two Crowns, which was managed by Cardinal Mazarine, and Don Lewis D' Haro, the two chief Miniſters of the two Kings, to which His Majeſty had an Eye long ſince, not doubting but he ſhould in ſome meaſure be comprehended in it, ſo as to receive Aſſiſtance from thoſe Princes his Allies, aſſoon as they ſhould be freed from their Embaraſments; and in proſecution hereof he had commanded Sir Henry Bennet, a perſon of great Prudence and Addreſs, his Embaſſadour Reſident in Spain, not to fail to attend Don Lewis D' Haro to the Treaty, and to be preſent there to negotiate his Affairs. The Treaty being near Concluſion, His Majeſty, for fear it ſhould be ended before he came thither, made all poſſible haſte to repair to thoſe Parts; and in order thereunto, took his Journey forthwith from St. Maloes to Reimes, where he met Sir George Carteret, and after ſome ſmall ſtay with him, went from thence to Nants, and there his Company divided till they met again at Thoulouze; from thence he went by the Paſſage of Oleron, over the Pyrenean Hills, to Saragoſa, the chief City in Aragon, and there he continued eight or nine days, and diſpatched Mr. Omale to Fontarabia, to inform himſelf of what paſſed at the Treaty; who, when he came thither, after ſome Confederence with Bennet, they agreed to haſte away Mr. William Dungan, an Iriſh Gentleman to the King, to let him know, the Treaty was prolonged, and that his Preſence would very much quicken and advance his Affairs. His Majeſty then immediately haſting by Poſt to the Treaty, continued incognito (as he had done all his Journey) till he came within three Leagues of Fontarabia; where he was attended by Bennet with Coaches to augment his Equipage; and from thence he reſumed his State, and went in Publick.

He begins to deſpair his chiefeſt hopes from the Peace between France and Spain.

Sir Henry Bennet Negotiates for his Majeſtey at that Treaty.

His Majeſty repairs thither himſelf.

He was met by the Baron of Batteville, a Perſon of great Honour and Civility (Governour of Fontarabia) with a Troop of Horſe, a Mile and a half without the Town; and when he came near it, all the Guns were diſcharged, and Don Lewis himſelf met him within the Gate. During his ſtay there, he was entertained in as ſplendid a manner as the time and place would handſomely admit. And during the Treaty, he had frequent Conferences with Don D' Haro, and was every day viſited by him.

And is honourably entertained by the Spaniard.

The Governing Power in England imployed at the ſame time to attend on Cardinal Mazarine at this Treaty, and to promote their Concerns, Lockhart, who had continued ever ſince Oliver's Death, Extraordinary Embaſſadour in France. The Cardinal lay at St. John de Luz, the neareſt Town to Spain, on the French Borders, where he ſhewed ſo much Countenance and Reſpect to Lockhart, that the King thought it not decent to give him a Viſit, but he received many from divers of the French Nobility.

General Monk was inwardly very much troubled at theſe Diſaſters; and the more, becauſe he found himſelf every day more and more incapable to remedy them: for the Houſe diſplaced Colonel Daniel, the Governour of St. Johnſtons, and many other Officers whom he much truſted, and were about to remove the reſt: ſo that ſeeing which way things were likely to tend, and thinking it better to reſign of his own accord, than to be worm'd out of his Command; or at leaſt remain but like the Image of a General, and ſerve only for a Prop to other Mens deſigns, he ſent a Letter upon the Third of September, to Lenthal the Speaker, to be communicated to the Parliament, to deſire a Diſmiſſion from his Command; pretending, That he was infirm in his health, and had long continued in that remote Country; and therefore requeſting, now that that all Insurrections, which threatned disturbances to the Peace of the Nations, were allayed, he might be permitted to return into his own Countrey, to end his days in quiet.

This Letter, though it was not sent to Clarges to be delivered, as usually all his Packets were, because he suspected he would have opposed that resolution of his, and been very backward and dilatory in the delivery of the Letter; yet Mr. Nicholas Monk giving him Intimation of it, the Matter was so ordered, that the Letter came to his hands, and by him delivered to the Speaker, with whom he dealt so effectually, that he agreed to delay the offering of it to be read for ten days, till a Packet came from Scotland to contradict it: Yet Clarges was put to great perplexity in this Business; for Vane, Salway, and those that affected not, or suspected the General (having private advice of this Letter) often call'd to have it read; and had not earnest and dextrous prevention been used to divert the House with other business, by some that loved the General well, and were prepared by Clarges, he had by this Despondency rendred himself incapable of doing that, for which he seemed by Providence especially chosen and markt out.

The said Letter through Clarges his perswasion is kept off by the Speaker from being Read.

The Army begins to contrive the recovery and advancement of their Power.

The Defeat of Sir George Booth and his Party, heightned much the Spirits of the Chief Officers of the Army, who began now to contrive how to restore the Military Power to its former Greatness, which was somewhat of late lessened by the Parliament, and in Designation to be wholly subjected to them. To effect this, there was a strict and private Correspondence held between some of the Officers at London, and Lambert, and those with him in Lancashire, Cheshire, and Parts adjacent. The Difficulty was, how to ingage the inferiour Officers (who were somewhat affected with their immediate Dependance on the House, by receiving Commissions from the Hands of the Speaker) to obviate this. It was advised to attempt nothing at the General-Council of Officers in London: but to begin with those of Lambert's Brigade, as most exalted by their late good Fortune; and therefore apter to be seduced by any plausible advantages of Power. These therefore were all conven'd to the number of Fifty at Derby, the 16*th* of September, the first thing on which they began their Debate, was the Constitution of the Army; the Unity, Discipline, and Conduct whereof, they said was invaded by a Party of Neuters and Malignants: They complained of several Miscarriages in the Civil Administrations of Government, and of the Inactivity and Backwardness of Persons in Authority and Trust in the Counties, and the Defection of many Corporations, both which appeared in the time of the late Insurrection. They also seemed much to resent the Parliaments unwillingness to prosecute the Proposals of the Army at their first sitting, as an Expedient for Settlement, with many other things of like Concernment. These things were artificially insinuated into the Minds of the inferiour Officers who were easily enough drawn to an Opinion of their own Power, and to think themselves qualified to give Laws to all but themselves.

Consultations among the Officers of the Army, promoted by Lambert, in dislike of some Miscarriages of the Junto.

However, these Matters were at first only Treated of in Generals, It being moved and agreed, that Colonel Zanchy, Colonel Michael, Major Creed, and some few others, should meet as Committees for the rest, to reduce them into Form, which was accordingly done. Lambert himself went privately to London, and Lieutenant-Colonel Duckenfield, a great creature of his, presently followed, to acquaint the General Council of Officers with these Proceedings; and shortly after, the whole Matter being digested into the Form of a Petition, was sent up in a Letter inclosed to Colonel Ashfield, Colonel Cobbet, and Duckenfield; by whom, or any one, or more of them, it was to be delivered to Fleetwood, to be communicated to the General Council of Officers: and at the same time, when this was sent to London, an Officer was dispatched with a duplicate of it to General Monk, and a Letter with it to desire his Concurrence, and that the Officers of his Army might joyn with them: which Letter was subscribed by Fourteen of the Chief Officers imployed under Lambert.

Their Desires concluded to be drawn up into the Form of a Petition.

Sir Arthur Hasterig had secret Intimation of these Consultations at Derby; and the next day after the Petition came to London, which was on the 22*d* of September, he moved the Parliament, at their first Sitting, against it, exclaiming with much earnestness against the Officers of the Army, who (he said) were attempting alterations in the Government, to the setting up a Single Person over them.

Hasterig vehemently opposeth the Armies proceedings.

This put the House into a Jealousie of Lambert; to whom, in their private Discourses, they attributed the whole Contrivance; and though he outwardly appeared passive in it, they said he aspired to succeed Cromwel: And because it was not yet time to effect his purpose, in his own Person, he would set up Fleetwood to be General of the Armies in England, Scotland and Ireland, and establish himself in the next Command to him, to be thereby able, with less envy, to compass his Ends. For Fleetwood, they said, was of an easie nature, and would be contented with the Name of General, allowing Lambert the power of it, till he should find a fair Occasion, to assume it in his own Right; and when he should have so gotten the Sword, he would not long want the Scepter.

And possesseth the House against them.

The Junto's Censure of Lambert, in reference to this Business.

Fleetwood confessed he had the Copy of a Petition, but seemed much perplexed at Hasterigs laying such an Imputation on the Officers of the Army, and endeavoured to justifie their Innocence, as tending nothing less than what was alledged; but all he said could not allay the Heat raised by Hasterig, insomuch, that they ordered, that Ashfield, Cobbet and Duckenfield, whom he affirmed to have the Original in their hands, should that Afternoon attend the House with it, and appointed Fleetwood to give them notice thereof, and to bring with him the Copy he had. Monk made no Progress in Scotland in this Affair, nor did he think fit to call together his Officers about it; but some of them that were Anabaptists attempted privately to get Subscriptions, till they heard of the severe Reflection that was made upon it by the House: Whom in the Afternoon

Fleetwood endeavours to justifie the Officers of the Army, but in vain.

Ashfield, Cobbet, and Duckenfield attend upon the House with this Petition.

noon, the three Officers mentioned attended with their Petition: And because it was That, on which the chief Foundation was laid of that difference betwixt the Remnant Parliament and Army, which ended in the Diſſolution of both, and was never yet Printed, We have thought it material enough to be here word for word inſerted.

To the Supreme Authority of theſe Nations the Parliament of the Common-wealth of England, &c.

The Humble Petition and Propoſals of the Officers under the Command of the Right Honourable the Lord Lambert in the late Northern Expedition.

Humbly Sheweth,

The Tenour of the Armies Petition and Propoſals.

THat whereas we, with others who deſire to fear the Lord in theſe Nations (though by our provocation we were ripe for deſtruction) have been again ſaved by the Lord, and have had a late view of his appearance as of old; in the beholding of whoſe gracious Footſteps, as we cannot but rejoyce, ſo our ſelves tremble, leſt the fruit of all (which the Lord may expect, and his people long earneſtly for) become abortive now in the day of our deliverance: We therefore preſent unto your Honours Conſideration theſe enſuing Propoſals which we humbly lay before you:

1. That the Humble Petition and Addreſs of the General Council of Officers at Wallingford-Houſe to the Parliament, which was ſo unanimouſly and chearfully agreed to, and approved of, in a day of our greateſt Confuſions, may not be laid aſleep, but may have freſh Life given unto it; It being upon farther and clearer grounds ſtill upon our hearts, as the beſt and only Expedient yet offered (notwithſtanding many Eſſays) to a happy and durable Settlement, being a fixed and firm Fence and Boundary (under God) for the ſecuring the Civil and Spiritual Liberties which the Spirit of the Nation is unwearied in travel, not only to invade, but upon every opportunity (as We have often ſeen, and lately had a clear Evidence of) is ready to attempt the ruine and deſtruction of the ſame.

2. That whereas God having given a Spirit to the Army fixed and faithful to the Intereſt of his People, and Our Good Cauſe; when many who had been Friends, were either Apoſtates, Malignants, or Neuters, joyning with the old Enemy, leaving the Parliament and Army, and their few active Friends ſingly to conflict with their late difficulties; And having now no ſuch hopeful way like to prevail, to ruine and fruſtrate what we have ſo long Conteſted for, as by working Diviſions in the Army, making Breaches, begetting Miſ-underſtandings, and diſſolve its Unity, wherein, under God, its greateſt ſtrength lies: We do therefore, as the moſt effectual means for the maintaining the Diſcipline and Conduct thereof, and preſerving its Unity inviolable, Humbly Propoſe, That his Excellency the Lord Fleetwood may be ſettled Commander in Chief of the Armies (his Commiſſion expiring within a few Months;) that the Lord Lambert be the General Officer and Chief Commander of the Army next and under him; and alſo, that the Lord Deſborow be the Chief Officer of the Horſe under them: And that General Monk be the Chief Officer and Commander of the Infantry: They being all Perſons under whoſe Conduct, Courage, and Fidelity, We have had eminent Succeſs, Victory and Deliverance in the days of greateſt Straights, and have been ſignally bleſſed and owned by the Lord; to Whom, and not to Man, be the Honour of all.

3. That having had very ſad experience of a grand Apoſtatizing Spirit gone through the Nations, and amongſt many of thoſe who were intruſted for the ſafety thereof, very few acting or appearing in ſeveral Counties for the preventing the Plots, and ſuppreſſing the Power of the Enemy in the late Rebellious Deſign, and many others not only flattering, but falling in with them, whereby a total ruine was threatned, and had been effected, had not the Lord in Mercy prevented: We therefore humbly propoſe, That there may be a diligent enquiry in all parts, by faithful men imployed to that purpoſe, what intruſted Perſons have been guilty of any Contrivance, and acted againſt the Common-wealth Intereſt, and that they may be proceeded againſt accordingly. And likewiſe what Perſons upon wicked purpoſes have been Neutral in ſuch a diſtracted day, when their aſſiſtance, according to their Imployments and Truſts, would have been not leſs uſeful than ſeaſonable; and that all ſuch may be removed from their Places and Imployments, Civil and Military; and that ſuch, who on the contrary in this Juncture of the diſcompoſed Affairs, declared their owning of this Intereſt, either in the County Troops, or Militia Volunteers, or otherwiſe, may be looked on as Friends; encouraged, ſatisfied their Arrears, protected from Injuries, countenanced by you, and as they are capacitated, inveſted with Authority in their ſeveral Countries.

4. That in the late Inſurrections, ſome conſiderable Corporations, have not only aided, abetted and countenanced the Enemies Deſign, but have alſo made uſe of the Arms lodged with them, and themſelves appeared in the Rebellion, willingly received the unmerous acceſſion of all engaged therein: Therefore we humbly propoſe, That ſuch Corporations may be diſcountenanced, and that you would be pleaſed to give your ſignal mark of diſfavour againſt them; As alſo for the future, ſo to regulate Corporations, that ſuch Perſons well Qualified according to the Government of a well Conſtituted Common-wealth may be intruſted with Authority of Majeſtracy in every of the ſeveral Towns: That ſo the Footſteps of Monarchy may be rooted out.

5. We humbly offer, That all Perſons whatſoever, Magiſtrates, Miniſters, or others, who have openly or ſecretly ſtirred up, or provoked the Inhabitants of theſe Nations to War and Commotions againſt the Parliament, and particularly to the late Inſurrections, (of which is viſibly apparent, many of them have not only been Abettors, but in their Perſons appeared with Inſtruments and Weapons of War, as ſome of us know) may be proceeded againſt, as You in your Judgment ſhall think fit.

After

The House signifie their displeasure, and Vote against the effect of the Petition.

After the Reading of this Paper, the House adjourned till the next Morning, and ordered then to resume the Debate of it, and that no other business should intervene; And at their Meeting, they Voted, That to have any more General Officers in the Army than are already setled by the Parliament, is needless, chargeable, and dangerous to the Common-wealth; and that Fleetwood shall acquaint them with this Resolve.

They had it under Consideration, to have Imprisoned those that brought the Petition; but because the chief and most remarkable design of it tended to set up some new General Officers in the Army, they thought it enough to declare against it.

The Officers resolve upon more moderate Proposals.

Fleetwood the next day, at a Meeting with many of the Leading Officers at his own House, informed them of the Parliaments displeasure signified in their late declarative Vote against the Petition and Proposals, and they thereupon resolved to decline the insisting thereon; but agreed, that some of their number should draw up somewhat in Writing of a more moderate nature, to be presented to the House, to profess an adherence to their Authority, in opposition to the King and his Party, (whom they styled the Common Enemy) and that they would stand by them in the Settlement of the Common-wealth against all disturbances whatsoever: And that this should be prepared and brought to be read and considered by a General Council of Officers to meet for that purpose the 27*th* of September, in the Chappel at Somerset-House.

Another Petition brought into the Council of Officers more high than the former.

And the said Petition was at the appointed time prepared, and brought into the General Council by those to whom the care of framing it was committed, with a long Preamble, and many Proposals far different from what was expected by many that were then present; for there seemed at their former meeting, to be a general sense and opinion, that they should humble themselves for what they had before done with the permission and consent of their Masters, and make some Declaration of their intention, never to interpose more in matters of Government. But contrary to this, they arraigned them for what they had done against the Petition of Lambert's Brigade, and for what (they said) had been groundlesly and without cause alledged against them; and were so far from acknowledging their offences, thereby to recover the good opinion of the House towards them, that they justified their own proceedings with a kind of Reprehension of those that mis-informed the House concerning it. Colonel Okey, Colonel Hacker, Colonel Sanders, Major Daberon, Major Barton, and Major Breman, with many others, did much oppose the carrying on of this Representation, which retarded the Progress of it. And some of the dissenting Officers writ to General Monk, and sent him a Copy of what was brought in, with all the debates thereupon, desiring him to imply his Credit with Fleetwood and Lambert to put a stop to it; as that which would, if not prevented, put an irreparable Breach betwixt the Parliament and the Army.

Monk writes his sence of it in a Letter to Fleetwood.

Monk was somewhat at a stand to know how to behave himself in this matter, but to avoid suspicion, he writ to Fleetwood a Courteous Letter of his opinion of the whole Affair, but insisted chiefly on that part of the Petition, wherein it was proposed, That no Officer or Souldier should be cashier'd or dismist from their Places, without a due Proceeding at a Court-Martial, or by his own consent, except in case of Reducement or Disbanding; desiring they would add (after the words Court-Martial) or by order of the Commander in the Chief of the Army upon the place; alledging, That although the removing or displacing of Officers or Souldiers, otherwise than by Sentence of Court-Martial, was a thing rarely practised: yet if a General, or the Supreme Authority, should be understood to be restrained therein, it might encourage the more inferiour Officers and Souldiers to affront the Superiour, and the General himself, and would in time, make the Army a kind of separate Corporation from the Parliament.

Monk offers himself to March into the Assistance of the Parliaments Party.

This Letter came not to Fleetwood, till the greater part of the Officers had agreed to the Representation to be presented to the House. But Monk's intention was to make his advantage of this division, and to that end, sent his Brother Nicholas to London to Clarges, to Authorise him principally to acquaint such of the Members as he thought most fit, That if they would assert their own Authority, he would March into England, to justifie it against any opposition.

During this debate at London of the General Officers, all imaginable endeavours were used by the Dissenters, to protract and lengthen the time, but they were by much over-numbred. And the Petition was Signed by 230 Commission-Officers of the Armies in England, Scotland and Ireland, who were then in and about London.

Orders made by the Junto of Commons, for the incouragement of the Souldiers, the better to ingage them to their Interest.

The Leading Members had from time to time Notice of the Progress of this Petition, and the matter of it, so that to prevent the Officers of the Army, even in the most reasonable of their Demands, they made many Orders concerning Pay of the Souldiers, and Mariners, and Provisions for the Maimed Souldiers, and Orphans, and Widows of such as were killed in their Service. To the Souldiers they ordered, that all the Arrears, as well of those of the Army, as the Militia-Troops and Companies should be paid out of the Moiety of such Moneys as should be raised by the Sale, or other disposition of the Estates of Delinquents Sequestred, and to be Sequestred upon the late Insurrection, and out of one Moiety of Money to be raised by the Sale of Forests and Chaces, excepting New Forest, and the Forest of Deane. And excepting such Timber and Trees as should be thought fit to be reserved and made use of, for the use of the Common-wealth. And to the Officers and Mariners of the Navy, they ordered the other Moiety of the Money to be raised upon Delinquents Estates. And also that Hampton-Court-House, Parks, and Somerset-House, (except the Chappel which was reserved for a French Congregation) and all other Mannors, Parks, Houses and Lands contained containing in the several Acts for Sale of the King and Queens Lands, should be sold, and the Money go to that use. And for the maimed Souldirs, Orphans and Widdows, of such as were slain in their Service, they ordered the Committees formerly constituted for inspections into the Publick Treasuries, to pay two months pay to them, and to take care to put such of their Children to be Apprentices as were fit for it. They likewise, to gain themselves the more general Esteem, considered of some ways to satisfie part of the Debts contracted to raise Arms against the King, at the beginning of the War, upon the Publick Faith of the Parliament, which had been long neglected, and in order thereunto, they ordered, that the other Moiety of the Money to be raised by the Sale of the Forests (except as aforesaid), should be employed towards the payments and satisfaction of those Debts. The House imagined that these their Proceedings would so far satisfie the Generalities of the Officers of the Army, as to divert them from the delivery of their Petition; and many of the most active Members in credit with the leading men did what they could to hinder it, but could not prevail. And upon the 5th of October, Colonel Desborow, with many others, came to the Door of the Parliament, and Sent the Serjeant to inform the Speaker, that he, with some others of the Officers of the Army, attended with something to be presented to them, whereupon he was called in with those in his Company, and in the name of the rest spake these following words.

The remnant indeavour in vain to divert the delivery of the Petition.

Desborow's words at the delivery thereof

"I Am Ordered by the General Council of the Army, with the rest of these Gentlemen, to wait upon you, to present unto you their Humble Representation and Petition; and they humbly desire you would accept it, as that which proceeds from the Hearts of those who desire nothing more than that the Lord would strenghen your Hearts in carrying on that good Work of setling these Nations upon the Foundation of a Free Common-wealth, whereby the Religious and Civil Liberty of the good People thereof may be preserved and secured.

Having said this, he and those with him withdrew, and the Petition, being delivered by the Serjeant at Arms attending, into the Speakers Hands, was by his direction read. The Title was,

The Humble Representation and Petition of the Officers of the Army; to the Parliament of the Common-wealth of England.

The substance of the Armies humble Representation and Petition.

In the Preamble they set forth, "That having had by their Order some late Votes of Parliament Communicated unto them by Lieutenant General Fleetwood their Commander in Chief, occasioned by a Debate in Parliament upon the Petition and Proposals of the Officers under the Command of the Lord Lambert in the late Northern Expedition; they have enquired diligently into their Hearts and Ways with reference thereunto, and finding nothing amongst them but Faithfulness and Integrity to the Parliament and Common-wealth, they are sensible that there have not wanted some Persons who have endeavoured to beget misunderstanding betwixt the Parliament and the Army, and to that end have represented their Actions and Intentions so, as it is taken for granted, that there hath been irregularity amongst them, at which they feel they have taken offence, whereas if there had not been an Anticipation, they are perswaded it would have appeared to all unprejudiced Spirits that neither they (who for the generality of them were ignorant (for so they pretended) of that whereat the offence was taken, nor their Faithful Brethren of the Northern Brigade, who signed the said Petition and Proposals, did design or intend any thing tending to the interruption of the Parliament, the prejudice of the Peace of the Common-wealth, or any other by-ends whatsoever respect, not becoming the Trust reposed in them. Wherefore being sensible of the Evils that Persons abroad may make from the least apprehensions of Difference betwixt the Parliament and the Army, and that they may, as much as in them lies, remove all occasions of surmise, justifie their own Innocency before them, and frustrate the expectations of any, who by blowing up the Coals of Dissention, hope to warm themselves thereby; They have thought it their Duty to present their naked Thoughts to them, hoping they will find so much of Integrity and approved Faithfulness in them, for the welfare of the Common-wealth, as may continue a firm Confidence of them, and engage their Zeal against all such as shall go about to reproach their Faithful Army, or any Member thereof for the future, especially considering that the Peace of these Nations depends much upon a Cordial and Affectionate Union of the Parliament and Army, and an uninterrupted good understanding of each other.

It could not rationally be believed, that these men could think this their manner of Proceeding suitable to the temper of Subjects to their Superiours, or that it could tend to any thing but that which they seemed to avoid, namely, a Breach betwixt their Parliament and them. But a clearer manifestation of this was apparent in their Proposals annexed to this Preamble, ushered in with Four bold Declaratory Assertions; of all which we shall insert the words themselves as they were presented. Where they say,

We do humbly and plainly declare,

The Armies Proposals.

1. That notwithstanding what any persons may suggest or say to the contrary, We are not for, but against the setting up of any Single Person whatsoever in supreme Authority: And for a demonstration hereof, We may appeal to your own Judgements, upon our late Actings, wherein since our our Declaration of the sixth of May last, We have with all Industry and Faithfulness endeavoured to render our selves serviceable to you and the Common-wealth, and have Chearfully observed your Commands, some of Us with our Lives in our hands in your late Service; wherein to our great encouragement the Lord hath once more appeared to own you and your Army, and the Good Old Cause, for which we have contended. And at the late Return of this Parliament to the Discharge of their remaining Trust, We did with simplicity and plainness in our Humble Petition and Address presented to you, manifest our Hearts and Desires, and that with much unanimity and fulness of consent which we apprehended was well accepted by you.

2. That we have not since changed our Principles, tending to a well-regulated Common-wealth, wherein the Liberties of the People thereof both Spiritual and Civil may be fully secured, and Persons of known Integrity, Piety and Ability employed in Places of Trust and Commitment; but resolve by the assistance of God to remain constant to them: And make it our humble Prayer to God, that he would incline your Hearts effectually to prosecute the same, and make you Instrumental in bringing forth such a Foundation of Government, whereby all the Good People of these Nations may rationally expect that such Liberties and Rights shall be preserved to them and their Posterities. And we can truly say, that it is in our Hearts earnestly to desire, that God would Crown you with the Honour of making these Nations happy by such a Settlement, as may not be liable to every Change of Governments, to have the Peace thereof disturbed by introducing new Governments.

3. Whereas a Petition and Proposals were lately drawn up by the Officers of the Brigade, that (under the Command of Major General Lambert) hazarded themselves in your Service with good success, whereby through the Blessing of God upon them, and others of your faithful Friends and Servants, the Peace of this Common-wealth is still continued: And the said Petition was sent up to some Officers here, to be presented to the Lord Fleetwood; which had been by some interpreted to evil and sinister Ends, and from thence suggestions derived, as if there were intentions to vindicate the Parliament, to set up a Single Person, or another General: In order thereunto, We do sincerely profess, (what ever the design of any Persons may be to promote such Causeless Jealousies) We have had no other than Faithfulness and Candor in our Hearts and Albions towards the Parliament; nor do we apprehend (with submission we may speak it) any reason or cause of offense to be conceived against your faithful Servants, who lately gave so ample proof of their Fidelity and courage.

4. We cannot but esteem our selves unhappy to have been so mis-represented to the Parliament; as should occasion such a publick Admonition upon Record; and considering what evil use may be made of these things by the Publick enemy, and to the end they may be disappointed of their hopes, and all such Persons discouraged as shall go about for the future to promote Jealousies, or by mis-information to beget Divisions between the Parliament and their Faithful Servants the Army: And that a good understanding may be preserved between them; We humbly pray,

1. That the Officers of the Army, and particularly those who have reason to bear the marks of your Favour for their Faithfulness in the late Northern Expedition, may stand right in Your Opinion, and have your Countenance.

2. That whatsoever person or persons shall for the future Groundlesly and Causelisly, inform the House against your Servants, thereby creating Jealousies, and scandalous Imputations upon them, may be brought to Examination, Justice and condign Punishment.

3. That it being an undoubted Right of the People to have a Liberty in a peaceable and submissive way, to Petition the Supreme Authority, which Liberty hath been by your selves asserted, allowed and approved of; We cannot but also assert the said Liberty, and humbly Conceive, that your Faithful Servants of the Army have no way forfeited their Rights as Freemen, and that therefore they hope it will be no offence for them to submit their humble Desires to the Parliament.

4. That you would be pleased to take into Your serious Consideration, the necessitous Condition of the poor Souldiers, of your Armies, and that all possible care may be taken for their timely supply, their Wants being such as earnestly call for it: And that some speedy and effectual course may be taken to provide for the Maimed Souldiers, and the poor Widows and Orphans of such as have been slain in Your Service, that the blessing of God may be upon you.

5. That such who have freely offered themselves in the several Counties and Cities of these Nations, to own and stand by you and your Cause in the late Insurrections, with the hazard of all which is dear unto them, may have your Encouragement, and be imployed in Places of Trust and Command.

6. That it being a thing granted by all, that without due Execution of Martial Discipline, the Peace, Union and good Government of an Army cannot be preserved; the Discipline of the Army may be preserved inviolable, and in particular, that no Officer or Souldier of the Army may be Cashiered or Dismissed from their Places without a due proceeding at a Court-Martial, or by his own Consent, except in cases of Reducement or Disbanding.

7. That it being judged necessary by the Parliament, for the keeping of the Army under such a Conduct as may render the same Serviceable to the Common-wealth, to appoint a Committee of Nominations, for the proposing of Officers to the Parliament, for their Approbation; We humbly pray, That no Officers may be brought into the Army, but such as shall first come under the Consideration of the said Committee, and be by them presented.

8. The Office of the Commander in Chief of the Army being of so Great concernment to the Peace of this Common-wealth, and his Commission as present (as we conceive) expiring within a few Months, We humbly pray, that the Consideration of that matter, may come before you, and some such effectual course be taken therein, as may prevent our fears, and the hazard of leaving the Army to Confusion.

9. And that you would retain a good Opinion of your Army, and against all discouragements whatsoever ſoever, proceed in the carrying on of that good Work intruſted in your Hands, for the Glory of God, and advantage of theſe Nations. In the proſecution whereof, through the help of our God, We ſhall be found (notwithſtanding all endeavours to the contrary) faithful to You and this Commonwealth.

The Inſolency of theſe Propoſals, gave our preſent Senators reaſon to ſuſpect their Authority to be of no long continuance; but in regard many Officers of the Army diſſented from the Repreſenting and Propoſing Party, they imagined the reſt would not be very haſty to make a Rupture: Therefore they reſolved to aſſert their Power at any hazard; in order whereunto, they had many ſharp Debates, about this Repreſentation and Petition; but in the end they concluded with moderation, and directed their Speaker to call the Petitioners into the Houſe, and acquaint them "That the Par"liament had read their Repreſentation and
"Petition, and taking notice of the good Ex-
"preſſions therein of their Affections and
"Faithfulneſs to this Parliament and Common"wealth, had Commanded him to give them
"the Thanks of their Houſe for them; and
"to let them know, that they had already ta"ken into conſideration the Relief of the Poor
"Widdows, Orphans, and maimed Soldiers,
"to whom Penſions had been formerly allow"ed; and had alſo ſetled a way for ſatisfaction
"of the Arreats due to the Officers and Soldiers,
"and would endeavour to bring the ſame to
"ſpeedy effect.

The Junto diſſemble at firſt their diſguſte at theſe Proceedings of the Army.

Desborow gives an Account of this Anſwer to a General Council of Officers who aſſembled that Afternoon on purpoſe. It was not unknown to them, that the Houſe reſented their Addreſs, and that in ſuch a degree, that it was evident they intended to alter the Conſtitution of the Army. To provide againſt this, they thought fit to ſtrengthen their Party, by getting more Subſcriptions to their Repreſentation and Petition, and immediately they agreed upon the Form of a Letter to be ſent to Ireland, and another to Scotland, and to every Regiment in England; for the Signing and Diſperſing of which, they nominated from among themſelves a ſelect number in the nature of a Committee. That to General Monk, was in theſe Words:

The Council of Officers labour to get Subſcriptions to their Repreſentation.

Right Honourable,

A Letter from a Committee of the Council of Officers to General Monk, concerning the Armies Repreſentation.

"WE do by Command from the Gene"ral Council of the Officers of the "Army now in London, tranſmit the incloſed to
"you, being a true Copy of the Repreſentation
"and Petition, which was this day by them hum-
"bly preſented to the Parliament; and the Votes
"of the Houſe paſſed thereupon: And are further
"to ſignifie as their Deſire, that the ſame may be "communicated to all the Commiſſion-Officers of "that part of the Army under your Command,
"and the Subſcriptions of all taken to their Repre-
"ſentation and Petition, that are free to Sign the "ſame; which being ſo Signed, it is deſired you "will be pleaſed to cauſe them to be cloſe ſealed
"up, and returned to Thomas Sandford Eſquire,
"Secretary to his Excellency the Lord Fleetwood,
"who is to give an Account thereof. As we "have thus fulfilled the General Councils Plea-
"ſure, we are well aſſured you will be pleaſed to "comply with their Requeſt; which is all at pre-
"ſent from

Your humble Servants,

J. Lambert, Rich. Creed, John Desborow, John Maſon, William Packer.

The General had intimation of this Letter, from Clarges before it came to his hands, with a full Narrative of the Occurrences that paſſed upon the delivery of the Repreſentation; which made him reſolve to admit of no Subſcriptions in Scotland. And when the Letter came to his hands, He returned in Anſwer to it; That he thought it unfit to have any Subſcriptions made to that, to which now the Parliament had given an Anſwer, leſt it ſhould be underſtood to make a Party againſt them. And in purſuance of this Reſolution, he ſent Orders to all the Regiments under his Command, to forbid them to ſubſcribe.

The Subſtance of General Monk's Anſwer.

The Houſe a little before this Agitation, had begun to Court General Monk very much, as thinking it a matter of no ſmall importance, to gain him wholly to them. And he having ſent a Letter to them, (which they received two days after the delivery of the Repreſentation of the Army) to acquaint them with the peaceable condition of Scotland in obedience to their Government, wherein he moved ſomething in favour of ſome of his Officers, and commended the temper of his Army: They returned him anſwer the ſame day with the thanks of the Houſe, and let him know, The high eſteem they had of the Services, which with ſo much Valour, Prudence and Faithfulneſs he had performed; and that they had granted the deſire of his Letters, with aſſurance to him and his Officers and Soldiers under his Command, of returns of Favours from the Parliament anſwerable to their merit.

He is Courted by the Parliament party.

And complemented by a Letter with gratulatory expreſſions for his good Service.

Upon the tenth of the ſaid Month, they took the Propoſals in the Armies Repreſentation into Debate.

To the Firſt they Anſwer,

"That the Officers of the Army have re"ceived, and ſhall from time to time receive
"marks of the Favour of the Parliament, and "countenance anſwerable to their Merit and "Faithfulneſs.

To the Second they Anſwer,

"That it is the Duty of all Perſons, eſpeci-
"ally the Members of Parliament, to inform
"the Houſe of any thing, which in their appre-
"henſion may concern the publick Safety;
"And it is the undoubted Right of the Par"liament to receive, and debate thoſe Infor-
"mations, and to reſolve what they think fit
"therepon.

The Houſe takes into Debate and anſwers, one by one, the Armies Propoſals.

To the Third they Declare.

"That every Member of the Army, as Free-"men of England, have right of Petitioning "the Parliament: but withal, think fit to let "them know, that the Petitioners ought to "be very careful both in the manner, and in "the matter which they desire; That the way "of promoting and presenting the same may "be peaceable; and the things Petitioned for "not tending to the disturbance of the Com-"mon-wealth, nor to the dishonour of the "Parliament: And that it is the Duty of Peti-"tioners to submit their Desires to the Parlia-"ment, and to acquiesce in the Judgment there-"of.

In Answer to the Fourth Proposal.

"They Order Two months Pay to be "forthwith paid to the Officers and Souldiers "of the Army in England, out of the Six "months Assessment of Five and Thirty thou-"sand Pounds a month now due; And that "the Council of State do give Order, that the "same be paid accordingly; And that Two "months Pay be also issued to the Officers and "Soldiers in Scotland and Ireland. To that "part of the Proposal, to provide for the maim-"ed Soldiers, and the poor Widows and Or-"phans of such as had been slain in their Service, "They refer the former Votes made in their be-"halfs.

To the Fifth Proposal they Answer.

"That such Persons as have been Faithful and "Active for the Parliament in the late Insurrection, "the Parliament will take care to give them all "due encouragement as occasion shall be of-"fered.

This Resolute Procedure of the Members at Westminster, filled the Army with strange Rumours: And they in the mean time to provide against all Accidents, consulted, If any Breach should be made upon their Government, how to leave them that did it as destitute as might be of Means and Authority to maintain themselves in such Actings. And since nothing could more weaken them in such Confusion than want of Money, They for a time deferred their further Consideration on the Proposals of the Representation, and made an Act against the raising of Money upon the People without Consent of Parliament; wherein they enacted,

An Act of the Remnant against raising of Money without Consent of Parliament.

That all Orders, Ordinances and Acts, made by any Single Person and his Council, or by both or either of them, or otherwise, or by any Assembly or Convention pretending to have Authority of Parliament, from and after the Nineteenth day of April, 1653. and before the Seventh of May, 1659. and which have not been or should not be Enacted, Allowed and Confirmed by this present Parliament, should be declared, deemed, taken and adjudged to be of no force or effect from and after the said Seventh day of May, 1659. And that no Person or Persons shall after the Eleventh day of October, 1659. Assess, Levy, Collect, Gather, or Receive any Customs, Impost, Excise, Assessment, Contribution, Tax, Tallage, or any Sum or Sums of Money, or other Imposition whatsoever, of this Common-wealth, without their Consent in Parliament, or as by Law might have been done before the Third of November, 1640. And that every person offending contrary to this Act, should be adjudged to be guilty of High Treason, and forfeit and suffer as in case of Treason.

That which chiefly provoked them to the hasty making of this Law, was a Letter which had been communicated to them under the Hands of Lambert, Desborow, Berry, Kelsey, Ashfield, Cobbet, Packer, Barrow and Creed, directed to Colonel Okey. It was much to the same purport with that sent to General Monk before mentioned, and in the same Form: This Letter was by accident delivered to Okey; for there being many Letters signed, to be sent to the several Regiments, which were left to be disposed of by Fleetwood's Secretary, he, amongst others, directed one to Okey; who, as soon as he had it, shewed it to Sir Arthur Hasterig, and he to the House; who looked upon the Contents thereof, to be such as tended to the fomenting of the Army against them; but respited the Consideration of it till the next morning, which was the twelfth of October.

A Letter to Okey, the chief cause of the speedy putting forth of this Act.

That Night Mr. Nicholas Monk arrived (after not above four days Journey from Scotland) and had Orders from the General to tell Clarges, That he was resolved, if the Parliament would be resolute in asserting their own Authority against the Army, he would assist them in it, and if required thereunto, march into England in their Defence.

Mr. Monk arrives from Scotland, with private Orders from the Gen. to Clarges.

Clarges, early the next morning, communicated this to Walton, Hasterig and Scot, who were so much encouraged by it, that at the first sitting of the House, they moved, that the Doors might be shut, that none of their Members might go out; and then after a long and brisk Debate, they Ordered that the Commissions of Lambert, Desborow, Berry, Kelsey, Ashfield, Cobbet, Packer, and Barrow, who subscribed the said Letter should be void.

The Commissions of Lambert, Desborow, and others voted void.

They had it in motion, to declare at the same time, that the next immediate Officers to them should have their Commands conferred on them, but delayed that till the next day, yet ordered the Names of those Officers to be brought to them, and before they parted, they made an Act appointing Commissioners for the Government of the Army; wherein they first repealed and made void the ACT, Constituting Charles Fleetwood, Lieutenant-General, and Commander in Chief of the Forces raised, and to be raised by Authority of Parliament, within England and Scotland, and all Power and Authority thereby given: And that all the Armies for the future should be governed by Commissioners, in the place and stead of a Lieutenant-General. These Commissioners were, Fleetwood, Monk, Ludlow, Hasterig, Morley, Walton and Overton, who were impowred to execute all and and singular the Powers and Authorities, incident or belonging to the Office of Lieutenant-General, from the 11th of October, 1659. to the 22d of February, 1659, &c.

They likewise Ordered the Serjeant at Arms to carry the Orders for Discharge of the said Officers Commissions, to the respective Persons whom it concerned: And because Lambert was the most considerable Person, and the next Officers to him were Men they knew, and in whom they confided, they immediately ordered Camfield, his Lieutenant-Colonel, to have the Command of his Regiment; and that Skepper the Major should be advanced to be Lieutenant-Colonel, and Captain Bradshaw to be Major of the Regiment. Three of these lately Constituted Commissioners for the Government of the Army, met at Night, in the Speakers Chamber at Westminster, and ordered Colonel Morley's and Colonel Mosse's Regiments, as a Guard to the Parliament, who possessed themselves of the Palace-Yard, and the Great Hall: Lambert on the other side, seeing what was like to become of him, if Matters were driven on at that rate, as they were begun against him, thought best to play his Game, while it was in his Power to prevent; and to that end drew some Regiments together, who marched to Kings-Street, and possessed themselves of all Avenues to the Parliament.

Lambert removed from his Regiment, and the Officers under him successively advanced.

Col. Morley and Mosse ordered with their Regiments to Guard the House.

Lambert, with the Regiment that adhere, stops the Passages to the Parliament House.

In the morning the Speaker came with his Coach towards the House; but at the Entry into the Palace-Yard, he was stopt by Lieutenant-Colonel Duckenfield; and after a little Expostulation was forced to return. The Souldiers on both sides kept their Station till towards the Evening in a posture of Hostility, ready to have fired one against the other, only expecting when the Word would be given for Onset; so that it was verily thought the Business would have come to a sharp Conflict between them: but they were better advised, insomuch that the Council of State meeting at White-Hall, and ordering all of them to draw off to their Quarters, both Parties agreed thereunto, and marched away that Night: However, Lambert's Party obtained their Desire, forasmuch as none of the Members were permitted that Day to assemble; and for the future, Fleetwood took care always to keep good Guards at the Door of the Parliament-House, to prevent them from Meeting. The next day divers of the chief Officers of the Army met at White-Hall, and chose Ten Persons as a Council for carrying on the Affairs and Government of the Common-wealth, till further Order. These were Fleetwood, Lambert, Whitlock, Sir Henry Vane, Desborow, Sir James Harrington, Major Salway, Berry, Sydenham, and Archibald Johnson a Scotchman, commonly called the Laird of Warreston; And at Wallingford-House, the same Day, the General Council of Officers agreed, that Fleetwood should be Commander in Chief Over all the Armies; that Lambert should be the next Chief Officer under him; and Desborow Commissary General of the Horse; and that all the Officers to be constituted in the Army, should be nominated by Sir Henry Vane, Fleetwood, Lambert, Desborow, Ludlow and Berry; but in especial manner they took care for the preparing of Articles of War, for the good Government and Discipline of the Army, as that which would be most necessary for their Consistence. In this they were very industrious; and in all the time since the first modelling of their Armies, their Discipline was so exact, that the Carriage of their Souldiery was very tolerable to the People, and that made their Enormities, in reference to the Government, less obnoxious to Vulgar Censure. Some mentioned General Monk to be considered in their Distribution of Offices, but were not hearkened to; and those that opposed it, assured the rest, that he had little power over the Officers of his Army; and if he disagreed to their Counsels, he might easily be displaced: they had not yet received his Resolution concerning the Subscriptions about which they writ, to be made by his Officers to their Representation and Petition, and therefore were ignorant of his Dissent from their Actions: So that in Confidence of his Concurrence, they dispatched Colonel Cobbet to him, with a large Narrative of the Reasons of their Proceedings.

Lambert and his Party dissolve the Remnant Parliament, by hindring the Members from coming into the House.

A Council of Ten Army Officers appointed to be managers of the State Affairs pro tempore.

The prevailing Party of the Army no great Favourers of General Monk.

The Lord Mordant, and some others of the Kings Friends lying at Callais, immediately upon the News of these Disorders in England, dispatched Mr. Nicholas Armorer to his Majesty, who was then at Fontarabia, industriously soliciting for Supplies of Men and Money, of which he had large promises from the Spaniards, and for the defraying the Expences of his Journey, he received from Don Lewis D' Haro a Present of Twenty Thousand Crowns: His Majesty had once a purpose to have gone directly to Madrid; but upon the Advice brought to him by Mr. Armorer, in hopes that something might fall out in England to his Advantage, he chose to return to Bruxels. The Earl of St. Albans coming up to the Borders to the King, just upon the Dissolution of the Treaty, met His Majesty at Bayon, in his Return from Fontarabia; Cardinal Mazarine being before departed from St. John de Luz, not having received any Visit from His Majesty before his departure.

Mr. Armorer sent by the Lord Mordant to the King at Fontarabia to inform him how matters were in England.

The King returns from Fontarabia toward Bruxels, meeting the Earl of St. Albans by the way.

The Earl of St. Albans conferred much with the King whilst he staid with him, which was not long, and then he went to Paris, whither the King followed him incognito by easie journeys; and after some stay there, went from thence to Brussels.

At this time such of the Kings Friends as had opportunity were very active in his Service, amongst whom the endeavours of Mr. Evelin of Says-Court near Debtford in Kent, is not to be omitted, who having some acquaintance with Colonel Herbert Morley, one of the five Commissioners for the Command of the Army, whose Birth, Education and Interest in his Country rendred him unlikely to be cordially inclined to prostitute himself to the ruine of his Country; he attempted with just and honest Arguments to draw him to the Royal Party, to which he believed he might be very useful, as having a greater credit than any of his Party in Sussex, where he lived, in case His Majesty should Land there, and having also also a good Influence upon the Fleet, and two of the Army Regiments.

Morley, after some Hesitation, was perswaded by Mr. Evelin to return to his Allegiance, and he desired him to intercede with the King for a Pardon to himself and some few others of his Relations, (which he named) and then departed into his Country, and gave him notice how to correspond further with him.

The Council of Officers consult about a Frame of Government.

The Council of Officers had frequent Meetings at White-Hall, and a Junto of the wisest of them were in deep Consultation, how to make such a Frame of Government as should be durable and lasting against all Attempts whatsoever. They found most of the Gentry in England to be some way or other involved in the late Endeavours for the King, and were advising of a way to seize all their Estates, and divide them amongst their own Party; whereby the Riches of the Nation, the most powerful of all Interests, would be absolutely changed into the Hands of Persons irreconcileable to Monarchy. This was such Advice, as if it had succeeded, might have proved fatal, and laid a Foundation to Slavery, never to have been subverted.

A certain number of Persons called to take upon them the Government, under the Title of a Committee of Safety.

The General Council, on the Twenty sixth of this Month, nominated Twenty three Persons to be intrusted with the Management of Publick Affairs, whom they called a Committee of Safety; and the next day they invited them to sit, and gave them Powers and Instructions; of which the chief were,

Their Instructions.

1. To execute all the Powers of the late Council of State, together with Authority to call all Delinquents to Accompt, that were in the late Insurrection, and to proceed to a bringing them to Justice, and to give Indemnity to all Persons that had acted for the Service of the Common-wealth, since the Year 1649.

2. To oppose and suppress all Rebellions and Insurrections.

3. To treat with Foreign States and Princes.

4. To raise the Militia in the several Counties.

5. To dispose of all Places of Trust that are void, and to remove such as are Scandalous.

6. To make Sale and Compositions for all Delinquents Estates.

Their Names.

The Names of these Governours were, Bulstrode Whitlock, lately made Keeper of their Great Seal, Fleetwood, Lambert, Desborow, Steel Chancellour of Ireland, Sir Henry Vane, Ludlow, Sydenham, Salway, Walter Strickland, Berry, Lawrence, Sir James Harrington, the Laird of Warreston, Alderman Ireton, Tichborn, Hewson, Clark, Bennet, Colonel Lilborn, Cornelius Holland, Henry Brandriff, and Robert Thomson.

They likewise published a Declaration, in the Close whereof they Declare; That,

The substance of their Declaration.

'They think themselves obliged, for preventing the manifold Evils and Inconveniences 'which must necessarily fall upon the other Good People of the Nation, as well as themselves, by 'reason of the several Orders, Acts, pretended Acts, 'or other Declarations, or any of them, Enacted, 'made or past on Monday the Tenth of this Instant October, and on Tuesday and Wednesday then 'next following, to declare them, and every of 'them null and void to all intents and purposes: 'and likewise all Acts, Orders, and Proceedings 'thereupon had or done in as full and ample 'manner, as if the said Orders, pretended Acts 'or Declarations, and every of them, had never 'been: all which they publish and declare, that 'all Persons concerned may take notice thereof, 'and no Person whatsoever suffer any further prejudice thereby, hoping that all peaceable, 'well-minded, and unprejudiced persons, will acquiesce in the necessity and Justice thereof.

'They further Declare to the World, that 'it is upon their Hearts, and they earnestly desire, and shall endeavour, that a due Liberty 'may be assured to all the Free-Born People of 'these Nations, both as Men and Christians; 'That a full and through Reformation of the Law 'may be effected; as also, that a Faithful, Godly, and Painful Gospel Preaching Ministry may 'be incouraged and provided for, by some certain Way that may be less troublesome to 'them, and less vexatious to the People, than 'that of Tythes. And further, that they have 'no Aim or Ends to set up a Military or Arbitrary Government over the Common-wealth: 'But have already provided, that the Civil and 'Executive part of Government shall be lodged 'in a Committee of Safety; and they obliged in a 'short time, to prepare such a Form of Government, as may best suit and comport with a Free-State and Common-wealth, without a Single Person, Kingship, or House of Peers: and that 'they shall to the utmost of their Endeavours 'labour to obtain those desirable things so 'often declared for; and to maintain and preserve the Peace of these Nations in their 'several Stations and Places; and shall hope, 'that God for his own Glory, and the good 'of his own People, will give a blessed end of 'these Troubles, by a happy Settlement upon 'the Principles formerly declared for; and 'which have been, and still are, so earnestly 'breathed after, by all those that truly fear his 'Name.

And then to Cajole the Godly Party (as they called them) they proceeded to tell them;

'They doubt not but such being truly sensible of the many Temptations besetting them 'on every hand, the great Difficulties they laboured under (and know not what further 'Straights a Day may bring forth) will say 'on their behalfs, Who are sufficient for these Things? And out of former Experiences being taught, That the Lord is a present Help 'in time of Trouble, will cry aloud for them 'before the Throne of Grace, That the LORD 'himself may appear, and carry on his own 'Work in their Hands: And if it shall please 'him by his Spirit, to stir up those that fear 'his Name to be instant on their behalf, they 'shall not fear what evil Man can do unto them.

These

The Exorbitancy of their Actions somewhat restrained by the advice of some moderate men among them.

These unreasonable Men, impatient of all Government, thought by these insinuations to silence all Gain-sayers, and to make the People believe, they could frame any Government, and not be obliged to submit to it. Their Confidence was great, and their frequent Invasion of several Constitutions so successful, that they thought they were not by any to be opposed, in the most extravagant of their Actings; yet in this Design of theirs, they had the better grounded hope, in regard Vane, Whitlock and Salway, and some others of the most prudent of their Party, assisted in their Councils.

Whitlock, indeed, was much censured for his Conjunction with them; but some wise Men, that marked his Demeanour, and the Moderation he used, did believe, that if he had not in a great measure restrained the Exorbitancy of their Intentions, they had in the short time of their Tyranny, done much mischief to many of the King's Friends.

The substance of General Monk's Letters to Fleetwood and Lambert.

That which put the greatest Check to their Career, and gave some Life to the fainting Hopes of all good Men, was the Arrival of Letters from General Monk in Scotland, to Fleetwood and Lambert, which came to them the Twenty eighth of October in the Evening. He complained therein, Of their Violation of Faith to the Parliament, and declared his Resolution to endeavour to restore them to their Power, against all Opposition whatsoever.

Fleetwood, Lambert and Desborow immediately met at White-Hall in much Confusion; and about Twelve at Night they sent Major Haynes to desire Clarges to come to them; who when he came, after some question of his knowledge of the Generals Proceedings (to which he made very wary Answers) they desired him to go into Scotland with Colonel Talbot, (whose Regiment was then at Edenburgh) to prevail with Monk for a Treaty of Mediation, to prevent the effusion of Blood. They said, they chose Talbot to accompany him, because he was very grateful to the General.

Clarges dispatched away into Scotland by the Grandees of the Army, together with Col. Talbot, to solicit Monk to a Treaty.

Clarges was very glad of this opportunity to get away, (for he feared to be much worse Treated,) and they were so pressing for his Departure, that they allowed him but three hours preparation for his Journey.

Monk well inform'd of all passages in England.

In the mean time, Monk in Scotland had by an express from Clarges, which came to him the 17th of October, received exact Information of the Interruption of the Parliament; and at several times before, he had notice of all the Proceedings introductory to it, which made him expect no less, and therefore gave him time to prepare for what happened.

He had in Scotland at this time Ten Regiments of Foot Compleat, each consisting of a Thousand Souldiers, besides Officers; except four Companies which had been drawn into England a little before upon the Alarm of Sir George Booth's Rising; his numbers of Horse were but small, having had Two Regiments of them likewise removed upon the same occasion: so that there remained with him but two Regiments of Horse, viz. his own, and Colonel Philip Twisleton's, and one Regiment of Dragoons, Commanded by Major General Morgan. The Foot were dispersed at great distances, Eight Companies of his own Regiment lay at Edenburgh, and two of them at Dalkeith, where his Residence usually was: All Colonel Talbot's Regiment was quartered in Edenburgh; Nine Companies of Colonel Wilks his Regiment were in the Citradel at Leith, and one of them in the Castle at Edenburgh; Nine Companies of Colonel Read's Regiment were at Sterling, and the Tenth in England; Eight Companies of Colonel Overton's Regiment at Dundee, and two of them in England; Colonel Daniel's Regiment lay at St. Johnston's; Colonel Saunrie's Regiment at Aire; Colonel Cobbet's at Glascow; Nine Companies of Colonel Fairfax's Regiment at Aberdeen, and the other in England; and part of Colonel Smith's Regiment at Innerness; and the rest of the Garrisons in the High-lands: The Horse and Dragoons lay in several places near the Foot Quarters; but at such distances, as might not incommode the Country.

The late Commissioners of Nomination, whilst they sate at White-Hall, had much changed the Officers in all the Regiments both of Horse and Foot, which raised great Discontents amongst them: They had given Colonel Daniel's Regiment to Pierson his Lieutenant Colonel, an Anabaptist; They had also displaced Hubblethorn, who was Major to Colonel Talbot's Regiment; Hughes, who was Major to Wilkes, they had reduced to be but Captain, and preferred one Knolles an Anabaptist to his Command; Johnson the Eldest Captain in his own Regiment of Horse, they put out, (and many more too long to mention) in all the Regiments; few or none of those New Officers chosen at White-Hall, to supply the places of those removed, were yet come into Scotland: So that General Monk taking that Opportunity to retain all the displaced Officers in their respective Commands, made them, who had been thus obliged before, thereby intirely depend on him.

Monk keeps in those Officers whom the Commissioners had displaced.

Having resolved to stand upon his Guard, and Declare against the Army in England; the first thing he did, was to Consult which way best to secure these Regiments, and the several Garrisons with least hazard; and knowing that in Actions of great Concernment, there was more use of Execution than Council, he made very little hesitation in what he intended to Act: He was most diffident of his own Regiment of Foot, (which, during his Absence in the Dutch War, had been so transformed, that most of the Officers were become Anabaptists) and the three Regiments in Glascow, Aire and St. Johnston's.

And removes those whom he himself distrusted.

The first minute that he had Notice of the Disorders at Westminster, which was on the before-mention'd 17th day of October, he sent Captain Jeremiah Smith of his own Regiment of Horse, to Edenburgh and Leith, to signifie his Pleasure to Major Hubblethorn, Major Hughes, and Captain Johnson, to have them come to him to Dalkeith: The first was Major to Talbot's Regiment of Foot; the other to that of Wilks's, quarter'd at Leith; and Johnson commanded commanded a Troop in his own Regiment of Horſe.

The General ſignifies his Reſolution to ſeveral of his Officers, to March into England to re-eſtabliſh the Parliament, and hath their conſent and incouragement.

Theſe came immediately upon Summons to the General, and there they met Captain Morgan of his own Regiment of Foot, and Miller of Wilks's his Regiment, who had the Guards of Dalkeith Houſe: The Lieutenant-Colonel, and Major of the General's Regiment, were both Anabaptiſts, and at that time abſent; Lieutenant-Colonel Cloberry of Read's Regiment, was by chance there, and was adviſed with. The General communicated his Intelligence to them, and his Reſolution to march into England with a part of his Army, to re-eſtabliſh the Parliament; To which they all freely conſented: Hubblethorn gave him perfect aſſurance of all Talbot's Regiment of which he had now the Command; becauſe the Colonel, and Pounel the Lieutenant-Colonel were both in England: And indeed much muſt be attributed to the Courage and diligence of that Gentleman, whoſe Regiment was by him intirely, both Officers and Souldiers, made at the General's Devotion; which being then quartered at Edenburgh, gave a great Reputation to the whole undertaking: For although ſome in all the Regiments, and many in moſt, were ready upon the Confidence they had in the General's Courage and Conduct, and were well inclined towards him; yet they were all apter to follow in any Deſign (as moſt naturally are) than to begin the action: Captain Johnſon had been by the Nominators at London removed from his Troop, but was now by the General reſtored to it; and as he was the Eldeſt Captain of the Regiment, by the abſence of Major Knight, he had the Command under the General of all his Regiment of Horſe, and was well beloved by them: Major Hughes gave him hopes of making all Colonel Wilks his Regiment at his Service: Hubblethorn (whom he made Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment) was ordered to draw it early the next Morning into the High-Street at Edenburgh, and to let all the Muſqueteers have Matches lighted, with Powder and Bullet; and Johnſon was Commanded to be ready in Edenburgh at the ſame time, with his own Troop; and that of one Captain Symnel's, an honeſt ſtout Officer: Hughes was appointed in the abſence of his Colonel, and Lieutenant-Colonel, who were ſent for the next morning, to confer with the General, to ſecure the Citadel at Leith: He had upon ſome kind of expectation of Change, kept Captain Witter (of the Regiment lying at St. Johnſtons) and Captain Robſon (of the Regiment of Aire) both at Edenburgh, and had ſent for them to him; and upon Conference with them, they both undertook, one to ſecure the Citadel at St. Johnſtons, and the other at Aire; which was very difficult ſervice to perform, in regard that moſt of the Officers in thoſe Regiments were very ill-diſpoſed towards the General: Little more was done that Night, but the ſending an Expreſs to Major Knight, who was then in Yorkſhire at his own Houſe, to haſten him to his Command.

Great preparations in Monk's Army, for the fortifying themſelves againſt the prevailing Faction in England.

The next day after Dinner, the General Marched to Edenburgh, with only Captain Smith's Troop of Horſe, having before diſpatched away Witter and Robſon. Morgan had been ſent before to Edenburgh, to draw up his Regiment, but had Orders to give them neither Match, Powder nor Ball: As ſoon as he came into the High-Street, and found the Regiments in that Order he expected, he retired a little into his Quarters, to model his own Regiment, and ſent for Morgan to him, whom he immediately made Lieutenant Colonel; Captain Nicholas he promoted to be Major, and at the ſame inſtant diſplaced all whom he knew to be diſaffected to him, and ſuch of them as were dangerous to be impriſoned; which done, he marched with both the Regiments to the Gray-Friers Church, where he called together the Officers, and told them, That the Army in England had broken up the Parliament out of a reſtleſs uncontroulable diſpoſition of being pleaſed with nothing that tended to the welfare and happineſs of the People; that though they had lately taken ſhame to themſelves (in their publick Declaration) for their former Apoſtacies, yet now, finding the Parliament ready to humour them in all their Extravagancies, they were weary of them: He ſaid he was reſolved to make the Military Power ſubſervient to the Civil, and that ſince they had their Protection and Entertainment from the Parliament, it was their Duty to ſerve and obey them againſt all oppoſition; which ſhould be his Practice, and he expected their Concurrence and Aſſiſtance to joyn with him. But if any were diſſatisfied, and would declare it to him, they ſhould have free Liberty, without Reflection, to leave the Service, and have Paſſes to go home.

The General Marches to Edenburgh, and there orders all things to his beſt advantage.

His Speech to his Officers.

Upon this, Colonel Wilkes, and his Lieutenant-Colonel, with all that were preſent, unanimouſly declared to live and die with him; Captain Johnſon was then diſpatched to Berwick, to ſecure that Garriſon, which was then under the Command of Lieutenant Colonel Mayers; and he did it very effectually, and it was a Service of great Advantage to Monk's Deſigns; Captain Hatt, and Captain Dennis, two well approved Officers of Colonel Cobbet's Regiment, being both at Edenburgh when theſe tranſactions were, and having received private Orders to model that Regiment then quartered at Glaſcow, and to March with it to Edenburgh, came thither before any knowledge of the alterations at the Head-Quarters, and privately conſulted with ſuch of the Regiment as they were confident of, before they publickly diſcovered their Orders: Lieutenant Colonel Young, who was there in Chief, in the abſence of the Colonel and Major, did as much as he could to oppoſe it; but he being preſently ſecured, Hatt and Dennis performed their Inſtructions, and immediately Marched the Regiment to the General.

Captain Johnſton ſecures Berwick.

Capt. Hatt and Dennis bring off Col. Cobbet's Regiment to the General.

Captain Witter, as ſoon as he came to St. Johnſtown, drew up two Companies, whom he moſt confided in, upon the Sands before the Cittadel, and propoſed to them what he had in Charge from the General; whereupon they all ſhouted in conſent to it, at the noiſe whereof the Souldiers coming in confuſion out of the Cittadel, he Marched with the aforeſaid Companies panies into it, and took poſſeſſion thereof; He made Lieutenant-Colonel Keine, and Major Kelk Priſoners; the firſt whereof was afterwards upon his conſent to joyn with the General releaſed from his Impriſonment, but Kelk was ſtill detained. Of this Regiment at St. Johnſtown, Witter, for his handſome performance of this undertaking, is by the General advanced to be Major.

And is made Major of the Regiment.

Robſon at Ayre was more deliberate in the execution of his Orders; he dealt ſo with the Officers, that moſt of them except the Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel, agreed to comply with the General. The Lieutenant-Colonel privately got away to Carliſle, and ſecured that Garriſon for the Army in England; the Colonel temporiz'd a while, but finding his Arts ſucceſsleſs, and there upon flying away into England, the General gave the Command of the Regiment to Robſon, for his good Service; and ſent into England for Colonel Daniel, who had been a little before diſplaced, (and Pierſon his Lieutenant-Colonel advanced to the Command of that Regiment) to take again his Command of Colonel thereof.

Robſon gets poſſeſſion of the Cittadel at Ayre.

And is made Colonel of the Regiment.

The ſettlement of theſe two Regiments gave much incouragement to the General in reference to the carrying on of his deſign; and the rather, in regard he himſelf had look't upon it as none of the eaſieſt works to compaſs.

He made no alteration at firſt in thoſe Companies which belonged to Colonel Overton at Dundee, becauſe he had hopes to gain him to declare for him with the Garriſon at Hull, then under his Command; and in regard they were on that ſide of the River Tay, they could not have done much if they had oppoſed. He ſent to Colonel Fairfax, who quartered with his Regiment at Aberdeen, to haſte with it to Edenburgh, and Lieutenant-Colonel Cloebery was ſent to Read, his Colonel at Sterlin, to appoint him to march to the General with all his men except two Companies, which were to be left for the ſafety of the Town and Caſtle. And at the ſame time, he ſent a Commiſſion to Innerneſs to Colonel Man, to be Colonel of that Regiment, in the place of Smith, who adhered to the Army in England) and appointed him to ſend three of his beſt Companies to Edenburgh. He diſpatch'd alſo ſome truſty Officers to the Horſe Troops, and then went himſelf to Leith, to ſettle the Cittadel and Regiment in obedience; to him upon his firſt coming, he diſplaced Knolles, and confined him, and reſtored Hughes to be again Major to the Regiment, and likewiſe ſome other Anabaptiſt Officers were put out, and others placed in their rooms; Capt. Clifton, who with a Company of this Regiment from Leith, had the Command of Edenburgh Caſtle, upon promiſe of faithfulneſs and Service to the General, was by him continued in his Command with Truſt and Confidence. And thus theſe three Regiments of Foot at Leith and Edenburgh, were in one Afternoon pretty well ſettled till more time could be allowed to refine them.

Smith's Regiment at Innerneſs given to Colonel Man.

The General marched to Leith to ſettle the Cittadel, and Regiment there.

Upon the 21ſt. he marched ſome Companies of Horſe and Foot to Linlithgow, intending to go thence to Glaſcow, to ſettle Cobbet's Regiment of which he was in ſome doubt; but he there received intelligence of what was done by Hutt and Dennis, and therefore went no further.

And thence to Linlithgow.

He there alſo had notice of the ſubmiſſion of the Cittadel at Ayre, and that Barwick was rendred to him, where Colonel Cobbet was ſtayed and detained in Priſon, as he was coming into Scotland with his Regiment, and it was ſeaſonably done; for if he had been permitted to paſs, the opinion which was had of him by the Souldiers, might have much hindred the General's proceeding. He was brought with a Guard to Edenburgh Caſtle, and kept there, the General being much incenſed againſt him, upon private advice that he had inſtructions to have ſeized him, if he had not agreed to the Armies Actions in England. At Linlithgow at a Council of Officers, it was adviſed that ſome way ſhould be uſed to draw off the Independant Churches in England, from favouring the Engliſh Army, which would have much weakened that Party, if it had ſucceeded, for moſt of the inferiour Officers were of that perſwaſion; for the effecting of this a Declaration was framed, agreed to, and publiſhed and diſperſed all over England: And at the ſame time, another Declaration was alſo made to ſatisfie the Kingdom in general, with the reaſon of his taking Arms, alledging that he did it for the vindication of the Rights and Liberties of the People, and the freedom of Parliaments.

Col. Cobbet detained priſoner at Berwick.

Two Declarations publiſhed by the General, in vindication of theſe proceedings of his.

Two Expoſtulatory Letters were alſo writ, the one to Fleetwood, and the other to Lambert, blaming the violence of their Proceedings againſt the Parliament, and another to the Speaker, to be informed of the Condition wherein the Houſe then was; declaring therein, that whereas there ought to be a right underſtanding between the Parliament and the Army, he would be ready, in caſe the Army perſiſted to diſobey their Orders, to aſſiſt them with the Forces under his Command, according to his Duty.

By this time, Major Knight was returned out of England: for hearing of the diſorders at London, and that ſome jealouſies had been entertained of him, upon an Information that he had been ſome months before engaged with the Lord Caſtleton in Sir George Booth's Riſing, he thought beſt for his own ſecurity, to make all poſſible haſte down to his Command; his Arrival fell out to be three days after the General had firſt declared; Morgan's Regiment of Dragoons, was made a Regiment of Horſe; and Major Farmer was ſent with a Troop to ſecure Carliſle, who when he came thither, did not march into it with Confidence, as Johnſon did into Barwick; but ſent in to treat with the Governor, and was ſo long doing it, till Elton that Commanded the Town, had fixed the Souldiers to a Reſolution of keeping him out. Moreover, Monk conſidering that his Army could not be got together in ſix weeks time to march into England, he therefore to amuſe the Faction there, ſent Major Knight with four Troops of choice Horſe, and ſix Companies of Foot, to ſurprize Newcaſtle. The Horſe-Troops were Commanded by Knight, Johnſon, Wilmot, and Simnel, and the Foot by Miller, Manſfield, Collins, Winter, Seymour and Belcham, all Gallant and well reſolved men. But being come as far as Morpeth, he had advice, that ſome Forces were got into Newcaſtle before him, which being intimated alſo to the General, he preſently countermanded him and his party to Anwick, where he ſtaid for ſome time; the not-taking Newcaſtle, was no diſcouragement to the General or his Army; for upon more deliberate conſideration he thought the miſs of it rather fortunate, than prejudicial to him, ſince if he had taken it, it would in all probability have been immediately beſieged by Lambert. And then he muſt have been obliged to attempt the relief of it, and fought before he could have been well enough prepared for it, and thereby have hazarded his whole deſign.

Monk invites Lieutenant-General Ludlow in Ireland to a conjunction with him.

The General at the ſame time that he ſent the before-mentioned Letters to London, did likewiſe ſend a Meſſenger with Letters to Lieutenant General Ludlow, who Commanded the Army in Ireland, to move him to joyn with him, or at leaſt to repreſent to him ſo fair an account of his Action, as might induce him not to be his hinderance in any of his Undertakings.

Col. Lilburn in Yorkſhire makes all poſſible oppoſition againſt General Monk.

Colonel Lilburn, who lay at York with ſome Forces, upon the firſt Rumour of Monk's Declaration, drew what Forces together he could, and without ſtaying to be well informed of the Reaſons of Fleetwood and Lambert's breaking up the Parliament; He drew all the Officers in thoſe parts to enter into Aſſociation againſt Monk, and to joyn with the Army at London, in whatſoever they deſigned.

He endeavours to ſeduce the General's Secretary from his Service, but prevails not.

He alſo writ to Mr Clarke, the General's Secretary, who was an active uſeful Inſtrument in his affairs, to ſeduce him from his Service; the truth is, the greateſt part Clarke's Eſtate was in England, and he was a man of ſo civil and ingenious a converſation, that he might have been the better excuſed in a Neutrality to both Parties, and his intereſt did direct him to it. But he was reſolved to hazard all his Fortunes in the Generals Bottom, and would not by threats or cunning, (which were both uſed by Lilburn to him) be prevailed with to quit his Party. For which his Fidelity and Conſtancy at this time, he was ever after ſo much eſteemed by the General, that he truſted him with his moſt ſecret tranſactions.

He intercepts the Generals Letters to Maj. Gen. Morgan.

Major General Morgan had lain long ſick of the Gout at York, and began about this time to recover his health. The Letter which Monk ſent to him was intercepted by Lilburn, which Morgan little reſented, but thought it adviſable ſo far to conceal his paſſion (till he might have convenient opportunity to get into Scotland) as to ſeem to Lilburn rather to diſlike than approve of the Generals proceedings.

Talbot and Clarges arrive at Edenburgh, and are well received by the General.

Colonel Talbot and Clarges came not to Edenburgh till the ſecond of November; they were both very well received by Monk, but eſpecially Clarges, being his Brother-in-law, with whom he had that night much Conference in private. The General wondred that Fleetwood and Lambert would ſend him, and thought it a good Omen to his Succeſs, that he had him to aſſiſt his deſigns. Clarges frankly asked him what was the true end he aimed at in their Enterpriſe; telling him, that it was impoſſible for him to be ever truſted after this Rupture if he patched up a Peace with the Engliſh Army, and withal acquainting him that he obſerved a great Conſternation in the Officers and Souldiers as he paſſed, and that he believed many of them would fall off to him.

He diſcovers to Clarges ſome glimmering of his intentions.

The General (as the moſt reſerved man then living) was in ſome trouble to be preſſed to diſcover his Intentions, and at that time opened himſelf no further than to let him know, he was reſolved to endeavour to free his Native Country from the ſlavery it was under, and to effect it, he thought it one of the beſt Expedients would be to reſtore the Parliament; but in their Admiſſion to ſit (if it were by his Arms) he would make no difference betwixt them, but let in as well the Secluded Members as others. Having ſaid this, he conjured Clarges to ſecreſie, being very ſenſible that the jealouſie had on him by the Army was ſo great, it having been often caſt in his diſh, by ſome of his ill-willers, that the King was in the bottom of his Deſigns) that all he could contrive, would be little enough to beget a Confidence, even in his own Party to engage with him.

The preſent condition of Monk for Money an Ammunition.

As to the preſent Condition of his Affairs, he acquainted him that he had about Seventy thouſand pounds in money, part whereof was already in his Treaſury, and the reſt would in a ſhort time be paid into it. And that all his Magazines were very well ſtored with Ammunition, Arms, and all other neceſſaries, and that he had in part modelled his Army fit for his purpoſes, and ſhould in a while perfect it. Clarges let him know, that the wants in Fleetwood and Lambert's Army were very great, and that upon Lambert's Expedition they were not able to advance one months Pay for his Army, which would make them by free-Quarter be very burthenſome and diſtaſtful to the Country. So that if by a Treaty, or any other means he could protract time, his buſineſs might be done without hazard. The General replied, That he thought the Overture of a Treaty from Fleetwood and Lambert might be improved to his great advantage, for he could not in a months time draw his men together. And that his ſending Knight with a Party to lodge at Anwick, was to make them think him in greater readineſs than he was, the more thereby to diſtract their Levies. The General then reſolved upon a Treaty, and the next Morning ſummoned his Chief Officers together, to nominate Commiſſioners, and to reſolve upon Inſtructions for them, he choſe to adviſe with his Officers in all theſe matters to free them from Suſpition. Colonel Talbot was very glad his journey was ſo ſucceſsful to obtain a Treaty ſo eaſily. The General and his Officers met, and at the firſt Propoſition they conſented to the motion for a Treaty, and when he put them to name fit Perſons to be Commiſſioners, they referred it to him.

Lambert's Army in great want of Money.

Gen. Monk takes hold for his advantage of Lambert's Overture for a Treaty.

He

Mr. Knight, Col. Cloberry, and Col. Wilks made choice of to be the Generals Commissioners in this Treaty.

He then appointed Major Knight, and Lieutenant Colonel Cloberry to be two, and put it to them to name a third, and they proposed Colonel Wilks, who was reputed to be a good Religious man, and acceptable to Fleetwood, and the Officers in England. They then came to consider of Instructions, and were so hot in debate, that the question was not without much contest carried for allowing them a fortnights time for the Treaty. The General was perplexed in his mind at this; for he would not have them limited to time, because that was the only thing he wanted, yet he discovered no displeasure: however, in the rest of the Instructions, he so invented matter to confound their Debates, that they had no power given them to conclude any thing; and they were to insist on the restoring the Parliament: But if the Members should refuse to sit, then to debate of some other Form of Government. They were likewise to provide for an Act of Indemnity for all Acts done since the first of October, and to take care that the Arrears of such part of the English Assessment as was appropriated to the Pay of the Army in Scotland, should be forthwith paid; and that a Godly, Learned and Faithful Ministry, with competent maintenance, and other incouragements, should be continued in the Three Nations; the like regard being had to Schools and Universities, with many other matters sufficiently remote from the present Affair. Moreover, it was particularly inserted, That they should provide, that the Acts of the Army in England, should not be deemed the Acts of a General Council of the Army, without the Concurrence of the Officers of the Armies of Scotland and Ireland.

Their instructions.

They meet Lambert at York, and began the Treaty there: but not agreeing, they set forward to London.

These Commissioners were hasted away, and Lambert was so far advanced with his Army, as to meet them at York, where he told them he had full Power from Fleetwood, the Officers of the Army, and the Committee of Safety, to treat and conclude with them of all differences. They seemed not averse to it, but when they began to enter upon the matter, and proposed the Restitution of the Parliament, he told them, Fleetwood and the Officers at London had agreed with him and his Officers not to conclude of any thing concerning that matter, without the common consent of all, and so they went forwards towards London. Nevertheless, as a thing previous to the Treaty, it was by both Parties accorded, that the Forces of neither should advance from their Quarters, and that there should be a free uninterrupted intercourse of Letters during the Treaty.

Monk's Army inferiour to Lambert's in number but better paid.

The Army of Horse and Foot with Lambert did amount to near twelve thousand, and Monk had not above half the number; nevertheless he had this advantage, that he paid all his Men, and the other did not. The way he had for providing Money, was very accidental: The late Parliament (so called) about the latter end of June (as is before expressed) had made a short Act to authorize the payment of a years Tax upon England, Scotland and Ireland, appointed to be raised by one of Cromwel's Parliaments: and they in that Act directed One Moiety of Money to be paid the First of August, and the other the tenth of October following. The Proportion for Scotland to pay of this Tax was Six Thousand pounds a Month; and in regard the Country was poor, and burthened with many other payments, the General writ to all the Commissioners of Shires, and indulged them so far as to grant them forbearance of payment till the tenth of October for the first Moiety, and two Months after for the rest, which they readily undertook to do and performed it for the most part: And this he had represented so effectually by Clarges his Agent to the Parliament, that he got twenty thousand pounds in Money to be sent into Scotland towards the pay of his Army, till that money could be collected. And that was the bulk of all the Money he had in this undertaking; but it was increased by Excise and Custome, and other Duties; for after he declared, he seized on all. And of this we make the more particular mention in this place, because some ignorant of these Transactions, have published, That the General had an Assessment raised for him at a Convention of the Nobility of Scotland; which was first invented by the Seditious in England to his prejudice, and afterwards, because uncontradicted, believed for a Truth.

Major Gen. Morgan takes his Journey into Scotland, to Gen. Monk.

Lambert was informed by his confident Lilburn, that Major General Morgan (who had been some time sick of the Gout in York) was dissenting from General Monk's Proceedings, and that he would be willing to go to him to dissuade him from the pursuit of them; and therefore he dealt with him to take a journey thither (on pretence of repairing to his Charge, which was then in Scotland) to use the credit he had with him to an Accommodation betwixt them: Morgan (who waited only for an occasion to get away) was glad of this Overture, and undertook to do his part in this business, so that at a days warning he began his Journey from York towards Edenburgh. He had with him one Trowbeck, a Chirugion (upon pretence of taking care of his health) a very subtile Intelligent Person, excellent in his Profession, and withal of great Discretion, and much beloved by the Souldiers of both Armies, and of considerable Interest among them. These got safe to Edenburgh about the seventh or eighth of November; and the coming of Morgan was a good Accession to Monk's Party, and a great encouragement to all the Officers and Souldiers: For he was esteemed by them to be next the General, a Person of the best Conduct of any then in Arms in the Three Nations, having been near Forty years a Souldier, and present in the greatest Battels and Sieges of Christendom for a great part of that time; and particularly in Flanders, where he Commanded a Brigade of Foot, he acquitted himself to the astonishment of his Enemies, and the admiration of Marshal Turenne, and all the French Commanders in that Service with him. At his first coming to the General, he asked him aloud merrily, If he would lay down his Arms, and be Friends with Fleetwood and Lambert? To which he was answered by him, if they would restore the Parliament, he had little more to say, and if he pleased, he might let them know as much. Morgan replied, I promised to ask you the Question, but not to return to them that sent me, if you denied it: I am very glad I am here with you to assist you, and follow your Fortunes in all your undertakings; You know I am no Statesman; I am sure you are a lover of your Country, and therefore I will joyn with you in all your Actions, and submit to your Prudence and Judgment in the Conduct of them.

His joyning with Monk, a matter of much importance.

The Discourse between the General and him at their first meeting.

This generous Friendship was kindly received by Monk, and it was the more valuable, in that it was done in a time when the Army in England was at it's greatest height; and that in Scotland very inconsiderable in respect of the other, and not yet well settled; for a day or two before one of the Troops of Morgan's own Regiment ran over Tweed to Lambert.

He privately delivers a Letter to the General from Mr. Bowles a Minister of York.

In the evening Morgan was private with the General, and delivered him a Letter which he brought from Mr. Bowles a Minister of York, a very eminent Man of those parts, and of great Credit with my Lord Fairfax, and many others of good Note in that County, (Clarges being yet at Edenburgh, and consulted with in the business.) The Letter imported, That the Lord Fairfax, and many others of good Interest in Yorkshire, were willing to joyn with the General, but that they disapproved of his Declaration which was restrained to the restoring of that Part of the Parliament only which sate after the Secluson of the rest; and was filled with many Protestations for the asserting of no other than a Common-wealth Government.

The effect of the Letter.

To this the General answered, That Clarges could witness his Intentions in those Particulars, That what was printed in his name, was not (at that Conjuncture) to be regarded as the Result of his own Reason, because his Writings were drawn by other hands; and till his Affairs had a firmer Consistency, and he more Power in his hands, it was unseasonable for him to contradict what was done; since all that was writ could scarce prevail with the Army to believe he had not a design to set up the King in his Government. The Conclusion of this was to send Clarges to Fairfax, Rossiter, and several others to engage them; it being thought expedient at the same time, to imploy all possible care to amuse the Parliament and Army, till the General could get a power in his hands to justifie other Counsels. Clarges was dispatched to Bowles, with a Letter of Credit to him, to cause a belief in him of what he should acquaint him with, on the part of the General, and another Letter to the same purpose to my Lord Fairfax, from whom he was to have an address to Rossiter in Lincolnshire.

Clarges sent to Fairfax, Rossiter, and others to engage them to General Monk.

Col. Talbot prevailed upon by Lambert to take part with him.

Talbot knew nothing of these Traverses, but carried himself with much moderation all the time of his stay, and with so much profession of respect to the General, That he assured him, If he would go to London and be a Neuter, he would preserve his Regiment for him: Which he promised to do, but was afterwards by the importunity of Lambert, prevailed upon to act contrary to that Engagement, and (some think) to his own Inclinations; for he was esteemed by all that knew him to be a Person not averse to a better and more just Government than he at that time lived under, and was obliging to all the Gentry where he lived, that needed his assistance and help.

Capt. Dean Mr. Caryl, Col. Whaley, and Goffe sent by Fleetwood to G. Monk.

Fleetwood could not conceal his fears; for the same Week that Talbot and Clarges were sent to endeavour a Reconsiliation, before he had any return from them, Captain Dean, one of the Treasurers, and not long after Mr. Caryl the Minister, with Colonel Goffe and Whaley, were sent to the General on the same Errand: Likewise Mr. Hammond and Mr. Barker were deputed in the name of the Independant Congregations in and about London, to mediate a Peace betwixt the two Armies.

Fleetwood by Letters courts Monk to side with him.

Mean while, Clarges and Talbot took their leaves of the General to return home. The pretence of Dean's coming into Scotland before Caryl and Whaley, was to look after his Charge; for he was one of the Treasurers at War; but he privately dispersed Tickets as he travelled, to seduce Monk's Souldiers from him, bringing him withal a Letter from Fleetwood, which contained an Offer of what Command in the Army he should desire, upon the least private intimation of his inclining to take part with him. This made the General to believe there was some jealousies betwixt Lambert and him; which he might have improved to the breaking of one of them; but he chose the more generous way, and refused the Offer; letting him know, He sought not himself, but the good of the Nations, and when that was obtained, he would rather lay the Command he had, down, than seek to enlarge it.

The ruling Faction in Ireland declare their resolution not to joyn with Gen. Monk.

Lieutenant-Colonel Barret came at the same time from Ireland with a Letter from Sir Hardress Waller, John Jones, and the ruling people of that Country, (for Ludlow was then in England) declaring their Refusal to joyn with the General; letting him know by their said Letter, bearing date the fourth of November;

That at a General Meeting of the Officers of the Irish Army, they Unanimously resolved not to approve of the Resolution he had taken, which tended (as they alledged) to the Engaging of part of the Armies of these Nations against their Brethren, or the dividing of them in Interest or Affection; being well assured that such a Practice would be found in the Issue to be nothing else but the opening of a door for the Common Enemy to come in, (whatever Umbrage should be put upon it) and destroy those very Persons and Authority, in whose behalf their Affections inclined them to undergo very great Difficulties. Adding, That they held it a Duty incumbent on them towards him (as their honourable Friend of whom they had a very high esteem) in the behalf of all the People of the Lord in these three Nations, to bear their Witness against any such Resolution or Practice, and to improve their utmost endeavours to prevent the same.

Another Party in Ireland inclineable to the General.

The General was not at all discouraged at this return to his Civil Letters and Declaration sent thither, having at the same time received Advice from Cornet Monk by another hand, That Sir Charles Coot, Sir Theophilus Jones, and a very considerable part of the Army were resolved to Assist him; That Sir Hardress Waller himself might in time be drawn to joyn with them, and that he

he doubted not in a ſhort while to receive good effects of their endeavours.

Dean and Barret ſent back into England with a check.

But in the mean time, upon notice that Dean and Barret were active to withdraw the affections of the Souldiers from their Duties, they were thereupon ſent away from Scotland with a ſevere Rebuke; the General being unwilling to puniſh them by Impriſonment or any ſevere courſe, becauſe they came to him on publick Buſineſs.

These Men did much miſchief amongſt the Souldiers, who were many of them by their inveiglements ſeduced; two Troops of Twiſleton's Regiment of Horſe, commanded by Aſhley and Dean, refuſed to joyn with the General, and Thirty three of them were diſmounted, diſarmed and caſhiered, and Foot-Souldiers put on their Horſes; but Forty of Dean's Troop with their Colours ran into England; and two Companies of Foot of the Regiment which came from St. Johnſton', being quartered at Dunbar, had like to have been betrayed to Newcaſtle by one Captain Guillim, who had been lately of that Regiment, and was diſcharged; This Guilim procuring leave to go into England, came to Dunbar, where he made the Souldiers believe that he was by the General reſtored to his Command, and had order to ſecure Captain Thomſon, who then Commanded them, and to carry them in Boats to Berwick; ſome of the Serjeants ſo far gave Credit to him, that they placed a Guard upon Thomſon, whileſt he in the mean time was hiring Boats to carry them, and was ſo earneſt in it, that he would have taken any, though never ſo leaky, for their Conveyance: This put the Men into ſome jealouſie, inſomuch, that they deſired to ſee his Orders, whereupon he leaped upon his Horſe, and ran away.

Cap. Guillim endeavours to betray two Companies of the General's Men, but is found out.

The General takes care to reform his Regiments.

At Sterlin, a Troop of Colonel Sanders's his Regiment were in the like Diſorder, and about thirty of the Men diſmounted, and others put in their places. This obliged the General to be more circumſpect in the reforming his Regiments; ſo that he diſcharged all the Officers whom he any way ſuſpected, and ſent them into England. In Colonel Fairfax his Regiment Eighteen Officers were diſplaced; and in moſt of the reſt ſome were put out, in all, to the number of Sevenſcore Perſons: Thoſe Regiments wherein leaſt alteration was made, were Talbot's and Read's; the firſt, through the diligence of Hubblethorn, who a while after deſervingly, upon Talbot's joyning with Lambert, had the Regiment conferred upon him; and the latter, by the Care and good Example of the Colonel, who was a Perſon that always loved and eſteemed the General.

Clarges excuſes Major General Morgan to Lambert.

Lambert was much troubled when he heard that Morgan had deſerted him, and when Talbot and Clarges came to York, he complained of it as a kind of Breach of Faith, but was quickly by Clarges better ſatisfied: for he aſſured him, he heard him move General Monk to a Peace with him; but being Major-General of that Army, he could not refuſe to do his Duty, in ſtaying there where his charge was, ſince the Difference between the two Armies was not yet come to that degree, to make it beyond hopes of Reconciliation; and that he might rather further the ſame by his Preſence, than Abſence.

Clarges his Conference with Mr. Bowles.

Clarges, as hath been already mentioned, had received a Letter to the Lord Fairfax, from the General, and ſome Inſtructions to Roſſiter, and ſeveral others; about which he was ſecretly to confer with Bowles the Miniſter at York, to whom alſo he brought a Letter of Credit, for what he ſhould propoſe to him; Bowles with whom he had much Diſcourſe, deſired to be fully informed of the General's Intentions, and was by Clarges ſo well ſatisfied in them, that he undertook to negotiate with the Lord Fairfax, Colonel Bethel, and ſeveral others in Monk's behalf; and for Evidence of it, he adviſed him to ſtay privately in York till he went to confer with the Lord Fairfax at his Houſe at Nun-Appleton, ſix Miles from thence, (that he might know what Advice to ſend into Scotland) which he accordingly did. And at his return, acquainted him, That Fairfax would riſe by the midſt of January, and he might be confident Bethel and Smithſon would joyn with him, who were Men of good Intereſt, and well-beloved of the Souldiery in Lambert's Army: On the other ſide, Bowles preſſed to know what expectations the General had from other places, and was by Clarges informed, that Colonel Wherham at Portſmouth was a great Friend to the General, and he doubted not, but he would take the firſt Opportunity he could to declare with that Garriſon for him, which he liked very well, for Wherham was a moderate Man. He told him likewiſe, that Colonel Hacker with his Regiment would raiſe ſome Men in Nottinghamſhire and Leiceſterſhire, and Colonel Hutchinſon and Sir Arthur Haſlerig would joyn with them; and that Okey was labouring to make diſturbances in London amongſt the Regiments there. Bowles at firſt was not well pleaſed that he ſhould make uſe of theſe Aids: but when he was acquainted by Clarges with the Reaſons which induced him to it, he was ſatisfied.

The firſt thing the General deſign'd, was to break Lambert's Forces, to make himſelf Maſter of all the Armies; and to effect this, it was requiſite to refuſe no help, ſince the major part of the whole would be ſuch as he could make uſe of to model the reſt, to any purpoſe he ſhould imploy them in. Then they found out a ſecret Meſſenger to ſend with intimation of this Conference to Monk; and Clarges went towards Lincolnſhire to purſue his Negotiations; but about Doncaſter he had ſo grievous a fall from his Horſe, as he was riding Poſt, that his Life was deſpaired of; but after a little ſtay there, he was brought to a Village betwixt Tuxford and Newark, where he was forced to ſtay ten days ere he was able to travel; nevertheleſs, in the mean time he ſent Expreſſes ſeveral ways, and by the means of one Briſtow, a Confident of Colonel Roſſiter, he had opportunity to ſend to him, and had his Anſwer; which was, That he would joyn with Fairfax, and do what he ſhould direct. When he came to Leiceſterſhire, he heard nothing of Haſlerig; but that he had, in deſpair of doing any thing, retired to Woodstock; and the Reason he gave for it, was, That if he should raise Forces in his County, it might give occasion to the Kings Party to Arm, and thereby hazard the whole Cause; and that therefore it would be better to close with the Army in all their Exorbitances, than venture with so much danger to oppose it.

Clarges deals with the Members of the late Council of State, to abet Monk's Designs against Lambert.

Clarges was somewhat troubled at this Discouragement, but omitted not to proceed in his Endeavours; and thereupon sent to many of the Council of State, who were retired, to draw them privately to London, to assist with their Counsels, in promoting the Restauration of the Parliament; which he did upon observation amongst the Souldiers of Lambert's Army, that they favoured much the Declaration of Monk, for restoring that Authority, and were only diverted from joyning with him against Lambert, upon a Jealousie of the Kings being in the bottom of his Design; which was often insinuated by the Council of Officers at London, in their publick and private Debates: So that in the immaturity of that time, nothing could more advance Monk's purpose of subduing the English Army, than to beget a Confidence in them of his adherence to his Declaration.

A Conference between Monk and the Commissioners of the Independent Churches.

This Practise prevailed so far, as to get the Council of State together in London, where they had many private Meetings: but in the mean time, the Commissioners for the Independent Churches, which were sent into Scotland, were solicitous to divert Monk from the prosecution of the War; and so far the Business proceeded, that there was a Conference appointed with them at Holy-rood-House, where were present to treat with them, General Monk, Colonel Fairfax, Colonel Syler, Doctor Barrow, the Judge Advocate of the Army, and Mr. Gumble one of the Generals Chaplains.

At this Conference, Mr. Collins an Independent Minister (who had been one of the Preachers of the late Council in Scotland) was admitted to be present as a Neuter.

The effect of Mr. Caryl's Speech in the Name of the Churches.

Mr. Caryl was the first that spoke, who in a long and studied Speech declared, That the Commissioners had desired him to speak for them; That they all came, not to deliver their own Sense of the Generals Proceedings, but the Sense of the Churches, (for so upon every occasion he called the Independent Congregations) That the Churches had not given them Commission to enter into the Merits of the Cause, nor to Debate whether Lambert's Action of turning out the Parliament were justifiable or not; but only to present it to his Lordship as their Opinion; That though that Action could not be justified, yet his Lordship had not a Call to appear against it, in that manner he then did; That his Lordship had only in Charge to keep Scotland in quiet, and was not bound to take notice of any Differences that should happen in England. (Nor indeed could it reasonably be expected of him, he being in a place where he could not be supposed to have such true and timely Information, as was necessary in a Business of that Concernment.) He proceeded to shew Reasons why the General should go on no further, telling him, That it would put a Strife amongst those that hitherto had been Brethren, engaged all along in the same Cause, partakers in the same Dangers, and the same Successes amongst those that still in their Papers and all their Addresses called and owned one another for Brethren, and that at a very unseasonable time, whilest the Cananites and Perizzites were in the Land: And thereupon he took occasion to inlarge himself upon all the Advantages the King and his Party would reap by this Quarrel, and all the Dangers the People of God (for so he called his own Party) might run into; And at last, by way of Aggravation, he told the General, That what Inconveniences soever should happen, would be laid at his Door, in regard he would appear to have been the Beginner of the War.

The General's Answer.

At this the General, in a little heat, interrupted him, shewing, That the War was already begun by Lambert and his Party, who had offered violence to those, from whom they had all received their Commissions; not sparing freely, and at large, to lay open their restless Instability, which would not suffer the three Nations to enjoy any settled Government at all, but keep them in a perpetual Circumvolution, till they were in danger to be brought to utter Ruine; repeating much of their Declarations, and many of their Actions; and declaring, That if they continued in that Course, he was resolved to oppose them to the uttermost, and would (to repeat his own words) lay them on their Backs.

The Treaty ended between the Commissioners of the Two Armies.

Caryl and his fellow-Commissioners endeavoured to excuse that Expression of theirs, which stirred up the General's anger; and Barrow on the General's side, did qualifie and mitigate his Answer, not thinking it meet wholly to disoblige so considerable a Party as the Independents, as things stood at that time; and so by degrees Expressions came to be very calm on both sides, both being in expectation of the issue of the Treaty then on foot, between the Commissioners of the Army of Scotland, and those of the Army in England; but after this time there was no more Meetings, for upon News from England, that Matters were tending to Accommodation, these Commissioners thought their Business done, and made haste to return to England.

Clarges, disabled by his Fall, could not get soon enough to London, to prevent the hasty conclusion of the Treaty there, (which was concluded on the Fifteenth of November) although he endeavoured by several Letters to Major Knight, one of the Commissioners, to prevent it, forasmuch as the rest of them were so prevailed on by the importunity of the English Officers, or else so terrified with their great Preparations, that he could not hinder the speed of it: As he came to London, he passed by Cambridge, and settled there a Correspondency with Mr. Pradman, one of the Fellows of Kings Colledge, by whose Care and Secrecy all his Packets were conveyed safe to Scotland, when all the ordinary wayes were obstructed. Mean while, being much troubled to find, that that very night he arrived at London, the Treaty betwixt the Commissioners on both parts was concluded, he seriously expostulated with the Commissioners about about their precipitant proceeding, telling them what Progress he had made in his Negotiations, and that by the midst of January there would be in many places such strong Diversions made, that the General could not but obtain his Ends: That his Money would last till the beginning of February, and by that means his Men would be so united and encouraged, that if he did nothing but lye still, Lambert's Army by their great wants (which made them insupportable to the Country) must break off themselves.

Knight was very sensible of his Error in this hasty Conclusion, and the rest were so far convinced, that in their Letter of the Sixteenth of November, to the General-Council of the Officers of the Army in Scotland, giving them an Account of the conclusion of the Treaty, they confess, they had exceeded their Instructions, out of a Suspition, as the Posture of Affairs then stood, that the Issue of the Difference, if longer continued, would not be to the Advantage of themselves, or of their Brethren of England, but of the Common Enemy.

The Agreement it self consisted of Nine Articles, which were expressed in the following words, viz.

The Articles of Agreement between the Commissioners of the two Armies.

1. That we will to the uttermost of our Powers, in our several Capacities, oppose the Interest and pretended Right of Charles Stuart, in and to the Government of these Nations, as also of all and every Person claiming a Right or Title to the said Government, or any share therein; together with, under or from him, or any other Person or Persons pleading or pretending such a Right or Title, by virtue of his or their descent from the same Line with him.

2. That we will not give our consent unto, but will oppose to our utmost Power, the setting up of any Single Person whatsoever, in the place of and for the Chief Magistrate of these Nations; and will endeavour to our utmost, that the Government of these Nations may be setled in the way of a Free-State, or Common-wealth, without a Single Person, King-ship, or House of Lords.

3. That no form of Government shall be determined of, and asserted by any part of the Army, as the Supreme Legislative Authority of this Common-wealth, and the Territories thereunto belonging, without the Approbation and Consent of a General Council of the Officers of the Army and Navy of this Common-wealth; which General-Council shall consist of two Commission-Officers for each respective Regiment, chosen by the Commission-Officers of the said Regiment, or by the Major part of them who can conveniently meet together; and likewise such Governours of Garrisons as are not Regimented, and can conveniently be spared, may be called to the said Council, and ten Officers of the Fleet, chosen by a Council of the Officers of the Fleet; and that the Quorum shall be Thirty one, and the day of their Meeting to be the Sixth of December next at White-Hall in the Old Council-Room.

4. That a Parliament, or a Supreame Delegated Authority of this Common-wealth, be with all possible speed Constituted and Summoned in such manner and form as shall be by the aforesaid General Council agreed unto; and the Qualifications of the Members thereof, to be agreed on by the Lord S. John, the Lord Warriston, Lieutenant-General Ludlow, Sir Henry Vane, Lord Whitlock, Sir James Harrington, Major Salway, Colonel George Thomson, Colonel Berry, and Mr. Scot; together with the Lord Steel, Colonel Barrow, and Lieutenant-Colonel Dobson, as Commissioners for the Army in Ireland; and three Commissioners for the Army in England, to be appointed thereunto; with the three Commissioners for the Army of Scotland, whereof the Quorum to be Nine.

5. That the Proportion of Money out of the Assessments of England, formerly appointed for the Supply of the Forces of Scotland, be duely paid and no further stop upon the same, but that it may be returned by Bills of Exchange, or otherwise, with all convenient speed, and any former Order and Orders to be made void.

6. That the case of the Officers of the Army of England and Scotland, that are suspended or displaced, or that have laid down their Commissions since the Eleventh of October last, only by reason of the precedent Differences, be determined by fourteen Commissioners of the Army in England and Scotland, or the major part of them; the one half of the said Commissioners to be chosen by the Council of Officers in England, and the other half, of the Council of Officers in Scotland; and that forthwith the said Officers be discharged from their Imprisonments or Confinements. The Day of Meeting of the said Commissioners, to be the First Day of December next, and the place of their Meeting to be at Newcastle upon Tyne.

7. That no Officer, or Souldier, or other Person of these Nations, that have acted in the late Differences betwixt the late Parliament and the Army, or between any of the Forces of this Common-wealth, for or against each other, relating to any Difference, since the Tenth of October last, be questioned for the same, but fully indemnified, and all Unkindness to be put in perpetual Oblivion.

8. That a Godly, Learned, and Faithful Ministry, with competent Maintenance, and other Incouragement, be continued in the three Nations, and that the Universities and Schools of Learning be so Countenanced and Reformed, as they may become the Nurseries of Piety and Learning.

9. That the Forces of Horse and Foot respectively, both of England and Scotland, that have been drawn forth by reason of the late Difference, shall forthwith March to such Quarters in both Nations, where they may best secure and preserve the Peace of the Common-wealth, against the Enemies thereof; and that there be no further difference, or appearance of that difference amongst Us.

We the Commissioners hereunto appointed and authorized by General Monk, and the General Council of Officers in Scotland, do this Fifteenth of November, 1659. in the name, and on the behalf of the said General Monk, and General Council of Officers in Scotland, fully Consent and Agree to the aforementioned Agreement, and and every part thereof, and do engage our ſelves and every of us to the full performance of the ſame.

Wallington and Lloyd, two Captains of the Engliſh Army at London, were ſent with this Agreement to General Monk to put it in Execution; and as they went, Major Cambridge of Lambert's Army was ſent by him in their Company. But Clarges was careful to ſend a Copy of it to him ſome days before they arrived; and the General was in much Perplexity at the Receipt of it, as that which diſtracted his Deſign almoſt paſt recovery; he was reſolved not to accept of it, but could not well tell how to decline it.

The General conſults how he might with the handſomeſt pretence refuſe his Aſſent to theſe Articles.

To take any prence from thoſe Articles which excluded the King's Government, would confirm the ſuſpicion which was fomented of his ſecret Intentions for the Royal Family; and to ground his Diſſent from the Subſcription of the Commiſſioners, where they aſſume an Authority (which they never had) and undertook for the performance of that Agreement, for the General and all his Officers would not be thought material enough to continue the breach betwixt them; That which was moſt plauſible, was to break it upon the Sixth Article, where it was provided, That all the Officers diſplaced by General Monk, might be in a Capacity of being reſtored to other Commands; and all thoſe put by him in their place (wherein his ſtrength conſiſted) be removed; he called together a few of his Confidents to adviſe what to do; theſe were Major General Morgan, Colonel Fairfax, Colonel Lydcott, Doctor Barrow, and Mr. Gumble; Lydcott was admitted, becauſe he was from a private Captain newly preferred to the Command of Cobbet's Regiment, and therefore by intereſt ſuppoſed to be averſe to this Agreement. The General and theſe Gentlemen having had much diſcourſe of the Buſineſs, they all thought it fit to diſapprove of the Agreement, but differed in the manner; but at laſt it was by Barrow propoſed, and agreed to by the General and the reſt, That they ſhould not declare a poſitive diſſent to what their Commiſſioners had done; but urge, that there was ſomething untreated of, further to be agreed upon; and ſome of thoſe things conſented to by their Commiſſioners, which without further explication, could not ſtand with their Declaration or Inſtructions; and that therefore it ſhould be deſired, that two more might be allowed to be added to their Commiſſioners, to meet a like number of theirs to be thereunto authorized, to put a more abſolute period to their differences.

Lloyd and others ſent with a Letter to the Officers at London.

The ſame Evening Wallington, Lloyd and Cambridge arrived; and the next Morning at a General Council of Officers at Edenburgh, when the Agreement was communicated to them, they were ſo artificially prepared, that they unanimouſly diſreliſhed it, and a Letter was framed, which they all ſubſcribed, to the ſame purpoſe with what was agreed on the day before, and Lloyd and thoſe with him went with it to London.

Mr. Atkins and Colonel Markham ſent by the General with a Letter to the City of London.

The City of London was very much diſcontented at the Committee of Safety, and Fleetwood became doubtful of them: But to heighten them the more, General Monk ſent a Letter to the Lord Mayor and Common Council, which was delivered to them by Mr. Atkins and Colonel Markham, about the Seventeenth or Eighteenth of November: wherein he acquainted them,

The Effect of the ſaid Letter.

That at the firſt notice he had of the Force upon the Parliament, he had ſent a Letter to them, declaring his Reſolution to endeavour their Re-eſtabliſhment, and that his Army was very Unanimous to concur with him in it; but that Letter miſcarrying, he had with the advice of his Officers now again written to them, to let them know, they were conſtant to their firſt Reſolution; and were the more confirmed in it, for being informed that the Authors of that Force had proceeded ſo far as to null and make void ſome Acts of Parliament; (which the King when he was at the higheſt, never attempted to do, and which no true Engliſhman can endure to ſee done, by any but Parliaments themſelves) and after they had ſubverted the Foundation of an ancient Government, were contriving by their own Power and Authority to ſet up a new Government over the Nations, adding, that if this ſhould be ſuffered, he knew not to what purpoſe ſo much Blood had been ſpilt, ſo much Treaſure ſpent, and ſo many Engagements made; they muſt take upon themſelves the Guilt of all, and look upon this ſlavery they had brought upon themſelves, as a Judgment upon them for their Murthers, Rapines and Perjuries: He proteſted to aim only at the reſtoring Parliaments to their former Freedom and Authority, and the People to their Juſt Rights and Liberties; in which he expected to be ſure of their aſſiſtance. As to Religion, he told them, he intended not that thoſe that truly feared God, ſhould be abridged of their Worſhip, but he ſhould be unwilling that ſome under pretence of maintaining that Liberty, ſhould endeavour the overthrow of National Miniſtry, and by conſequence leave the greateſt part of the People to utter Ignorance and Atheiſm: Concluding nevertheleſs, That Religion was not that about which he did at preſent contend, being deſirous to leave that to the Conſideration of the Parliament, for the Defence whereof, he and thoſe with him were reſolved to venture to the utmoſt; and if he ſhould miſcarry through want of their timely aid, it would be too late for them by their own

own strength to assert their Freedom; And if he succeeded, it would be dishonourable for so Famous a City, and so much Concerned, that its Liberty should be asserted without its own help; inciting them therefore now whilest so great an Army is waiting on him in the North, to use their Endeavours in the South, &c.

The Letter look't upon as factious, and the Messengers imprisoned

This Letter was dated the 12th of November at Edenburgh, and did so much insense the Committee of Safety, that the Gentlemen who delivered it were put into Custody: And the more to aggravate the business, Monk's Commissioners were either so imprudent, or so unsincere, as to declare, That they believed the Letter was fictitious; which made the City less active in pursuance of the Contents of it.

Whilest things were thus traversed in London, Fleetwood, Lambert, and all the Officers in England, could not dissemble their Confusion of Mind upon Monk's refusal to ratifie the Treaty, and sending for a Blank Pass to insert news names of additional Commissioners; and many Expostulatory Letters passed betwixt them about it, but more especially betwixt Lambert and his Officers, and him; for they were very apprehensive that this motion of a Blank Pass for adding to their Commissioners, or the naming of new ones, was only meant to gain time; but at last they did consent to it, though it never came to any effect, as shall be hereafter discovered.

Nine of the Old Council of State meet.

Nine of the old Council of State met privately in London the nineteenth of November, they a little resented, that General Monk's Commissioners did not communicate their Counsels with them, yet omitted not to give him all the encouragement they could; And in order thereunto, one Captain Elms, with Horton a Servant of Sir Arthur Hazlerig's was sent with Letter to him to Scotland; wherein they signifie,

And send a Letter to the General.

That his faithful Actions in discharge of his Trust and Duty to that Parliament, and for the good of the Three Nations and Posterity in these Times of so great Hypocrisie and Defection, was most gratefully acknowledged by them; and they assured him, his Service was exceedingly well resented by all sober and interessed persons, that love a Common-wealth; and that he might be confident, that they would adhere to him, and to their utmost promote the good Cause which he had hitherto with so much Wisdom and Courage highly owned, and that it was their Resolution to stand and fall with him in defence thereof; and that they would, as occasion should offer it self, the Lord enabling, be assisting to him according to his Declaration for removing the Force from this Parliament, that so they may Sit with Freedom, and, by Gods blessing, lay a Foundation of a happy and lasting Settlement.

Henry Nevil,

This was a great Encouragement to the Officers in Scotland; for the wisest of them did conclude from these appearances of Action at London, that their Party was increased in England, imagining that otherwise they durst not have so openly acted.

The Parliament party begin busily to appear against Lambert and his Faction.

Colonel Wheeham at Portsmouth was labouring to frame a Design of declaring for General Monk with that Garrison; and Colonel Morley, Walton, and Hazlerig went privately towards him to Treat about it: But before they went, the Council of State, at another Meeting before the time appointed by Parliament for their continuance was expired, framed a Commission, wherein they constituted General Monk Absolute Commander in Chief of all the Armies in England and Scotland, which was Dated the 24th of November, sealed with their Seal, and left in the hands of Clarges, till a safe Messenger might be sent with it to him.

The effect of a Letter from Lambert's Officers to Monk.

As soon as Fleetwood had received General Monk's Letters against the Ratification of the Treaty, and his desire to have two more Commissioners added to his, to renew the Treaty at Newcastle, Wilks, Cloberry, and Knight, the Commissioners had their dispatch, and a Pass to license their repair thither; but before they got to Newcastle, at a Meeting of all Lamberts Officers, a Letter was framed, and sent by Colonel Zanchy to General Monk's Officers and one from Lambert to the General himself.

In that from the Officers they write, That they had advised their General to acquaint General Monk, that if he pleased two appoint two Commissioned Officers of his Army to be added to those already in England, and signifie their Names to him, a safe Conduct should be forthwith given to them; but withall, That nothing in the Agreement be parted from, nor any new matter, or further explanations admitted, which are not consentaneous to what is already concluded; And that the General Council (agreed upon in the third Article of the Agreement at London) to meet upon the sixth of December, may accordingly hold their meeting. And in a Postscript to this Letter, they complained of the detention of Colonel Cobbet, who, they said, was a Publick Messenger, and desired therefore he might enjoy his Priviledge accordingly, except by some miscarriage he had forfeited the same. Colonel Zanchy was very kindly receiv'd by General Monk and all his Officers, and they met together with all convenient hast to give him his dispatch; acquainting him, That they should not disown any thing in that Agreement that was conformable to the Instructions by which their Commissioners were authorized; but what should appear to be beyond, they insisted to have it Treated on and explained. As to the third Article, mentioned in their Letter, they would not admit of any meeting in pursuance of it, till the whole should be concluded. And concerning Cobbet, they alledged, That he came not to Scotland as a Publick Messenger, but as a Colonel to Command a Regiment (after his Commission had been vacated by the Parliament, the day before their Interruption) and without any leave from General Monk; And that the General had intimation from a Person of Credit, That he had a design to seduce the Army from their obedience, if not to seize on his Person. This Letter was signed the 7th of December at night, and the next day Colonel Zanchy was to have returned with it to Newcastle, but upon Intelligence received, that a Party of Lambert's consisting of three Regiments of Horse, and a Regiment of Dragoons, with two Drakes was marched into Northumberland, and that sixty Dragoons, had possessed themselves of Chillingham Castle, near the Scotch Borders, the Colonel was staid; and the General, at three of the Clock the next morning, marched out of Barwick, and sent order to draw his Forces together toward Coldstream, a very convenient Pass upon the Tweed, where he settled his Head-Quarters. A little before this, his own Commissioners were come to him to Barwick, where he confined Colonel Wilks for discovering, or at least not pursuing some private Instructions; but after a while he was released upon satisfaction that what he did was out of Ignorance, and not Malice.

Col. Wetham at Portsmouth declares for Monk.

Colonel Wetham at Portsmouth, very generously declared for General Monk, with that Garrison, after he had secured Captain Peacock, and Captain Brown, and some other refractory Officers, that he was jealous of.

Commissioners from the several Shires and Burroughs of Scotland wait upon the General at Barwick.

Commissioners from the several Shires and Burroughs of Scotland, being summoned to wait upon the General, and he having appointed them to be at Barwick the thirteenth of December, he came on that day thither to meet them accordingly, releasing Zanchy, and sending by him a Letter to Lambert, wherein he acquainted him, he would by the next Post more fully inform him of his Resolutions.

The Scotch Commissioners appointed five to attend the General, and treat with him, which were the Earls of Glencarn, Rothes, Weems, and Eglington, and Mr. Alexander Bruce. These presented a Paper to the General, consisting of five Propositions.

Thier Propositions.

1. That the Lord General may be pleased to appoint a Committee in each Shire, for regulating the Affairs thereof, in order to his Lordships Commands, and their own preservation.

2. That his Lordship will allow each Shire presently to raise (for the securing the Peace and their own safety) some small proportion of Horses, under the Conduct of such Persons as his Lordship shall think fit to trust.

3. That his Lordship will declare, for the greater encouragement of the Shires, at the return of their Commissioners, if the Treaty shall break up, and take no effect, immediately upon the notice thereof, that he did authorize the Shires to put themselves in the best posture they can for his Assistance, and their own Defence.

4. That for the said effect, his Lordship will be pleased to furnish each Shire with some proportion of Arms, upon payment of just Rates thereof, within one Months time after the Receipt of them.

5. That all Gentlemen who are free to comply with his Lordships desires, may for themselves and Servants have Liberty to carry their Arms.

The General advisseth with his Officers about them.

The General, upon the receipt of this Paper, advised with some select Officers about an Answer to it, viz. Colonel Fairfax, Major Jeremiah Smith, Colonel Lydcot, Colonel Read, and Doctor Barrow. And the chief Question debated on, was, whether they should permit the Scots to Arm for their Assistance? Colonel Read was for Arming them: He argued, that it was a common danger, and they ought to make use of any aid that could be obtained for their defence. The General himself told them, That if he should draw all the men from his Garrisons, he could make his numbers of Foot quickly equal to Lambert's, but he had hitherto declined that, being unwilling to put Scotland out of English hands, and that he doubted not, if he could get a few more Horse than he had, even with those Foot he had without weakening his Garrisons, he should well enough defend himself against Lambert.

Others were of opinion, that although they should not imploy whole Troops, or Companies of Scots, yet they might safely mingle a good party of them with the English. But Doctor Barrow was against all motions of Arming the Scots at that time, believing if it were done, many of their own men might desert them, but if the General would take any opportunity, though it were but to beat up any of Lambert's Quarters, so that they might once come to Blood, that the devision being likely to increase after such an action, he might then strengthen himself with what Accessions he pleased. Nevertheless, he moved that some privately might confer with the leading men of the Scotch Gentry, to try if they would be brought to provide any numbers of Horses, on which the General might mount English to reinforce his own Troops. This last was approved as to the main Question; but upon the whole debate, they agreed upon particular Answers to every Article in the Generals name.

The General's Answer to the Scots Propositions.

1. To the First, That he would authorize the Noblemen and Justices of the Peace of each County with the Advice and Consent of the Governour of the next adjacent Garrison, to put in execution such Orders and Commands as his Lordship shall give for securing the Peace of the County.

2. To the second, That he would allow the Counties next adjacent to the High-lands, viz. to the County of Dumbarton and Sterlin, Forty men to bears Arms; To the County of Perth, Forty men in Arms; To the County of Forfar and Kinkardine, Forty men in Arms; And to the County of Aberdeen, Forty men in Arms, which are to be a Guard for the security of the said Counties against Thieves and Robbers. And for the rest of the Shires, his Lordship would take care, if he should have occasion to remove further out of Scotland: And he would allow the Heretors of the above-named Shires, to make choice of a fit Person to Command the said respective Guards; They giving Security to the Governour of the next adjacent Garrison, for their Fidelity and good behaviour, in Six hundred Pounds Sterling.

3. To the Third, His Lordship deferr'd his Answer, till the Issue of the Treaty now intended intended between him and the Engliſh Army.

4. To the Fourth, That he would furniſh them with fit means for their defence, whenſoever he ſhould apprehend their Peace and Safety to be in imminent danger.

5. To the Fifth, Such Noblemen and Gentlemen as ſhould ſubſcribe to live peaceably, and Act nothing to the prejudice of England, ſhould have liberty with Paſſes to wear their Swords, and have four Servants armed for their Attendants.

Glencarn's Arguments with the General, for arming the Scots to his aſſiſtance.

At a Conference with the Scotch Commiſſioners, upon the delivery of theſe Anſwers to their Propoſitions, they ſeemed unſatisfied with them, and the Earl of Glencarne in the name of the reſt, told the General, ſince they were willing to hazard their Perſons and Eſtates with him, they hoped he would not deny them to Arm for his Aſſiſtance and their own Safety, ſince if he ſhould engage and be worſted, they ſhould be expoſed to great ruine for their Affection and Reſpect to him, from which otherwiſe, by a Neutrality, they might be ſecure. To which he anſwered, That if that ſhould happen, they ſhould then Arm to what numbers they pleaſed. To this the Earl Replied, That the Country were now willing to riſe in Confidence of his Conduct and Courage, but if his Force ſhould be defeated, they would not be perſwaded to it. And beſides, they could not under ſix weeks time make their Levies. And if permiſſion were now denied, the Enemy, if Victorious, would be in their Bowels before they ſhould be in a poſture of Defence.

The Scotch Nobility depart home from Barwick.

The cautious General would not be prevailed on with theſe Arguments, and ſo they departed, he returned to Coldſtream to his Quarters, and the Scotch Noblemen and Gentlemen to their ſeveral Counties.

They had abſolutely refuſed the raiſing any Horſe to mount Engliſh, yet this came to no breach between them and the General, in regard before they left Barwick, the General acquainted them with Intelligence he had received from England, of the diſtractions in the Engliſh Armies and other Affairs, which made them to fear leſs than before, their own peace at home, and ſo all parted with mutual reſpect.

The General prepares to make defence againſt Lambert, if occaſion were.

After this meeting, the General was contriving how to break off the Treaty with Lambert, which he had hitherto, not without great Artifice delayed; but he conſidered, that as ſoon as that ſhould be done, Lambert would march towards him, and therefore he made preparation to fight him, if occaſion ſhould urge him to it. In order to which, he ſent an expreſs to Clarges to provide him ſome good Horſe-Officers, and ſend them by Sea in a nimble Bark. Mean while, in Northumberland the Oagles raiſed him two compleat Troops, and more Horſe were raiſing. He increaſed his number of Pikes in each Company, to be equal to his Muſquets, as thereby to be better able to make defence againſt Horſe, in which Lambert's greateſt ſtrength was placed.

What advantages he had againſt Lambert's Army.

Coldſtream was nine miles from Barwick upon the Tweed, and he had quartered all his men ſo conveniently, that he could draw them all together in ſix hours; for the Villages are much thicker upon the Scotch than Engliſh Borders. And if Lambert marched towards him, the Villages in Northumberland being thin, he muſt have quartered at ſuch diſtance, that his men would have been expoſed to great hazard of being often diſturbed in their Quarters. And if he had marched to fight, the General, being upon the defenſative part, could have brought as many hands to action as he. Or if he had marched to Carliſle, to have invaded Scotland that way, Monk would then have marched directly to London, and ſhould have been two or three days march before him. Or if he had divided his Army, the General would have preſently fallen on the neareſt part to him. In this poſture he lay at Coldſtream, when he received Intelligence from Clarges "That there were many great diffe"rences in London, betwixt Fleetwood and the "City. That the Apprentices, and ſeveral o"thers in favour of him, had many Conſulta-
"ons to make diſturbances; that they were fram-
"ing a Petition to the Lord Mayor and Com"mon Council, to preſs their Interpoſition for
"the reſtoring the Parliament, and preſervation
"of Magiſtracy, which was endeavoured to be
"ſuppreſt by the Committee of Safety, who emit-
"ted a Proclamation to prohibit all gathering
"of hands to Petitions, which incenſed the young "Men ſo much (being fomented by wiſer heads)
"that they roſe in many places in a tumultu-
"ous manner. And thereupon, Colonel Hew-
"ſon was ſent into London to ſuppreſs them,
"whereby a rumour was raiſed, that Soldiers
"came to plunder them, and all Shops were ſhut
"up, and many reproachful Words paſſed in "the Streets, between the Souldiers and Ap-
"prentices to that heat of Paſſion, that two of "the Apprentices were ſlain, and about twenty "wounded, and the reſt for that time diſper-
"ſed. But the Souldiers were ſo vilified,
"ſcorn'd and hiſs'd, that they were aſhamed to "march, and many Officers when they went "into the City, durſt not wear Swords, for "fear of affronts, and that many of the Pri"vate Souldiers, eſpecially the Horſe, wiſhed
"themſelves with him; Captain Izod, and
"others, being active to draw them from
"Fleetwood's Party. That he had ſent Captain
"Goodwin with ſome Horſe-Officers to him by "Sea to Barwick, and that Goodwin had his "Lord-ſhips Commiſſion for Commander in "Chief, of all the Armies in England and "Scotland. And that he had treated with
"Mr. Philip Howard, who had undertaken to
"raiſe an hundred Gentlemen well armed and
"mounted in Northumberland and Cumberland,
"on Condition to Command them for his Life-
"Guard, which he had promiſed his Lord-
"ſhip ſhould conſent to; but that juſt as he "was preparing for his journey, he was taken
"with the Small Pox, but his Elder Brother
"in the mean time, had writ and undertook
"to promote the Levies of the Men; that he "had treated with Colonel Redman, a gallant
"Horſe-Officer, and Colonel Bret, who had "been both by Ludlow removed from their "Commands, to draw off the Iriſh Brigade

Differences between the City of London, and the Armies Party there.

The Souldiers affronted by the Apprentices, not without Bloodſhed.

Oppoſitions from all parts increaſe againſt Lambert's faction.

" from Lambert, many of the men having been " before Commanded by them, and therefore " eaſily perſwaded; and that Colonel Morley, " Sir Arthur Hazlerig, and Colonel Walton " were active in Portſmouth, and all the Foot " which were ſent to beſiege that Town, had " ſeized on their Officers, and carried them Pri- " ſoners into it, and five Troops of Colonel " Rich his Regiment, and two of Colonel Ber- " ries were come in to them; That thoſe of " Berries were commanded by Colonel Crooke, " who was lately their Major, and is ſent into " the Iſle of Wight, where his Forces are increa- " ſed to ſeven Hundred: And at Taunton, and " ſeveral other places, there was great defection " amongſt all the Souldiers; That Sir Michael " Liveſey in Kent had raiſed two Regiments, " and Colonel Gibbons was joyned with him, " and Vice-admiral Lawſon had with two and " twenty Sail declared for the Parliament, and " [illegible] come into the Hope, ſtopping up the Ri- " ver of Thames. And the Block-houſes near Graveſ- " end on both ſides the River, had alſo de- " clared, That the Lord Mayor and ſeveral Al- " dermen, have had many ineffectual Treaties " with Fleetwood, and the Chief of the Army, and " Committee of Safety; the City demanding " the management and conduct of their own " Militia, and the Inſtant Reſtauration of the " Parliament, or the calling another, which are " refuſed to them, and the diſcontents there- " by much augmented.

A Letter of Advice from Monk to Lambert.

Upon Receipt of theſe Letters, the General writ to Lambert, by Major Banniſter, one of the Officers at Barwick, acquainting him, That ſince his laſt by Zanchy, he had certain Advice, That three of the Commiſſioners appointed by Act of Parliament, for the Government of the Army, were now in Portſmouth, acting by vertue of the ſame Authority, upon which he acted, and declaring for the ſame ends: And that he and the Army were thereby obliged in Honour and Duty, to take their Advice and Conſent in all Affairs that relate to the Cauſe they are now engaged in, which he doubted not, but he would judge reaſonable and neceſſary; and therefore he deſired a ſafe Conduct for the Major, to acquaint them with what had paſſed in the ſeveral Overtures betwixt them; but withal, he told him freely, he could not think it adviſeable to proceed further in Treaty (and he expected the other Commiſſioners would be of the ſame mind) till he remanded all thoſe Troops he had ſent into Northumberland, Cumberland, and Weſtmoreland, during that time.

The Treaty between Monk and Lambert broke off.

Lambert's Party daily decreaſe upon the appearance of the Portſmouth Commiſſioners.

Lambert upon advice with his Officers would not let Banniſter paſs, but ſent him back to Barwick, for he began now plainly to perceive, that the General intended nothing leſs than to treat further; whereupon both ſides prepared for War: but Lambert was ſo daily alarm'd with the ſucceſs of the Commiſſioners at Portſmouth, and the daily ſubmiſſion of ſeveral Troops and Companies of men, that he thought it more neceſſary to march Southward to aſſiſt his Friends in London, than hazard Battel with General Monk.

Fleetwood, and the reſt of the Committee of Safety were in no leſs diſorder than Lambert, but that which moſt amuſed them, was the Declaration of Lawſon with his Fleet for the Parliament which was chiefly tranſacted by the endeavours of Colonel Streater, an Active Inſtrument for the King in all theſe Revolutions, who was forc'd to fly thither upon diſcovery of a Deſign he had to ſeize on the Tower) for they thought themſelves ſure of Lawſon, and by his defection (added to the reſt) their Authority came to be generally deſpiſed, even by their own Souldiers, ſo that they abandoned all; and Fleetwood, with great contrition and ſubmiſſion, in behalf of his Confederates, ſent to the Speaker to deſire him to ſend to the reſt of the Parliament Members, and [illegible] with them to return to the exerciſe of their Truſt and Power for the Government of the Nation; acknowledging, That the Lord had blaſted their Counſels, and, (to repeat his own words) ſpit in their faces.

Fleetwood ſubmits, and deſires the Members [illegible] to return.

Upon this ſeveral Members met privately in the Speaker's Houſe, and gave Colonel Okey, Colonel Markham, Colonel Allured, and Colonel Moſs orders to draw the Regiments about Weſtminſter to a Rendezvouze in Lincolns-Inne-field; which being performed accordingly, the Souldiers declared to live and die with the Parliament, and marched down Chancery-Lane, where at the Rolls they made a halt till the Speaker came to them, and received their acknowledgments, and from thence by his Orders, they went to their Quarters, having firſt from him received the Word.

Several Regiments, being drawn up in Lincolns-Inne-fields, declare for the late Members.

And two days after, that is to ſay, on the twenty ſixth of December, in the Evening, the Speaker and the Members of Parliament, reſumed the Government, and ſate in the Parliament-Houſe, having met firſt at White-Hall in the Council-Chamber, from whence they went on foot through Chanon-Row, (the Mace being carried before the Speaker) to Weſtminſter-Hall, where as they paſs'd, the Souldiers upon the Guard ſtood in Ranks, and made Acclamations. At their firſt meeting, they Ordered Colonel Alexander Popham, Colonel Thompſon, Mr. Scot, Colonel Okey, Sir Anthony Aſhley Cooper, Colonel Matthew Allured, and Colonel Markham, or any three of them, to order, direct, and Conduct the Forces of the Army, and all other Forces, and to Command the ſame to ſuppreſs all Tumults, Inſurrections, and Rebellions, and all ſuch Forces which ſhall oppoſe or reſiſt the Command of the Parliament, and to obſerve ſuch Orders and Directions as they ſhould receive from time to time from the Parliament, or the Commiſſioners appointed by Act of Parliament, to Command the Army, or any three of them, till they ſhall come to London or Weſtminſter, or until the Parliament ſhall take further order.

They take their Seats again in the Parliament Houſe.

They order ſeven Commiſſioners for the management of the Army.

From theſe Commiſſioners an Order was ſent to Lambert to diſperſe his Forces, but they were upon breaking before notice thereof came to him.

We made ſome relation of a Treaty betwixt Mr. Evelyn and Colonel Morley, which at this time Mr. Evelyn thought to bring to ſome advantageous iſſue; for Morley upon this Change had his Regiment reſtored, and with it the Government of the Tower conferred on him, and

and his Brother Colonel Fagg had also a Regiment; Mr. Evelyn had done for him towards his Majesty, all he desired, for Pardon of him and his Friends; but when he came to him with the report of it, he was very reserved, and would not entertain any discourse with him of that matter, and after one time would rarely admit him into his Company, which made him suspect he had altered his Intentions, and put him to the hazardous experiment of a sharp and expostulatory Letter; but he was newly involved with General Monk, and Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper in intrigues of the like nature, which he durst not communicate; and Affairs were not yet mature enough for the things which Mr. Evelyn proposed, nor was he assured of the Officers and Souldiers in the Tower for such a Service; but it is most certain he received such impressions from Mr. Evelyn's former discourses, that he was one of the forwardest of his Party to embrace all occasions for the King's Service, as was evident by his early, vigorous and hazardous opposition in Parliament, shortly after their sitting, to that impious Oath of Abjuration of the King's Family and Line (hereafter mentioned.)

The Irish Brigade brought off to Monk by Redman and Bret.

When the Parliament thus reconvened, and Lambert in his declension; the Irish Brigade submitted to Redman and Bret, and was brought off by them; and at the same time, the Souldiers of two Dunkirk Regiments, then with Lambert, were in Mutiny for the General, who scarce had received Information of these Actings, when Captain Campbel also arrived at Coldstream with Letters from Sir Hardress Waller, and others from Dublin, with Intelligence of the Surprisal of Dublin Castle by Captain Joyer and Captain Bond, which was thus performed; one of Bond's Men softly knocking at the Gates, the Sentinel opened the Door, and as he opened it, the rest presently rushed in, and on a sudden surpris'd them within, and seized on Colonel John Jones, Miles Corbet, Colonel Matthew Thomlinson, Colonel Richard Laurence, Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Jones, Mr. Standish the Treasurer, and Tombes the Storekeeper: The Design was chiefly managed at Dublin, by Sir Theophilus Jones, Trevor, the three Warrens, Colonel Bridges, Thompson, Lisle, Worder and Temple, having been two months in Agitation, and was the more dangerous, because but in one of Five Foot Companies that Quartered in the City, they could repose any Confidence; neither durst they communicate their Intentions with more than one Officer of that Company, and some few Officers of Horse, whom they engaged out of three Troops; and so much they differed about the time of putting the business in execution, that till the night before the action, they had not resolved it: The pretext made use of for the business, was their Meeting to promote a Petition in the Army to call a General Council; which so dazled the Eyes of the Commander in Chief, and several other of his Confidents, that they suspected no other thing to have been intended. And that which the Execution was most remarkable is, that not one drop of Blood was shed. The next day after, the City of Dublin drew out their Militia, and declared with them; and although they had but eight hours notice, there appeared above Two thousand Foot, besides Horse.

The manner of surprizing Dublin Castle.

Cornet Monk was privy to the Design, and sent to Wexford, Waterford, and those parts, to incline them to joyn in it: But Sir Charles Coot and his Brothers had the hardest Task in the Province of Connaught; but they overcame all difficulties, and in a very short time brought the whole Souldiery and Garrison there to obedience, and in less than a Weeks space, Limrick, Clonmel, Yoghal, Ross, Kilkenny, Drogedah, Dundalk, Antrim, and many other places declared their Concurrence.

Sir Charles Coot reduceth all Connaught to a compliance with the present Design.

The General always carrying an even temper in his behaviour, seem'd not much exalted with this news; yet since it was likely to prove of no small Concernment to himself, he presently dispatch'd Captain Campbel back, with great acknowledgments of these Services, and desired to be supplied by them with Six Troops of Horse with all convenient speed: This good news was seconded with advice from Bowles of the Lord Fairfax's Rising in York-shire, which was somewhat sooner than his promise, but very seasonable to make a diversion to Lambert's Forces, with whom Colonel Lilburn's Regiment joyned by means of Major Smithson, who was a great lover of General Monk, and Colonel Redman, came in to them with the Irish Brigade; Colonel Bethel, Sir Henry Cholmley, Captain Strangwaies, and Mr. Arthington also joyned with them; the said Messenger also informed him, that the Parliament was again Sitting, and that Fleetwood had submitted to them; which made the General immediately March (for he heard that Lambert kept his Brigade together, and intended to oppose the Lord Fairfax and his Friends, and having quitted Newcastle, was Marched towards them;) wherefore on the Second of January at night, he advanced with two Regiments of Horse and two of Foot, and Marched to Wooller: He had the day before sent Colonel Knight with three Troops to Morpeth, to whom he that night sent Orders to seize on Newcastle, which he did by six of the Clock in the Morning. Major General Morgan was left sick, and Colonel Read, who commanded the Rear of the Army, Marched the next day with two Regiments of Horse, and three Regiments of Foot, with which his whole number amounted in all to Five thousand Foot, and Two thousand Horse. By that time he came to Morpeth, he had Information that Lambert's whole party was of themselves dispersed into several Quarters in Submission to the Parliaments Orders. And to assure him of the Parliaments Sitting, he received a Letter from the Speaker, dated the 27*th* of December, of Thanks for his Service; wherein the Restitution of their Authority was wholly attributed to his Fidelity, Care and Courage.

The Lord Fairfax, and several of Monk's Party joyning with him rise in York-shire.

General Monk begins his March into England.

He receives a Letter of Thanks from the Speaker.

The knowledge of this did more than any thing perplex the General, as one of the most fatal Accidents that could happen to him; for by their over-hasty Resumption of Power, back'd with a great Army newly return'd to their Obedience, he despaired of doing the good he intended to his Country, and thought no no longer of continuing in Arms than till a fair Opportunity ſhould be offered him to lay them down and retire, without making them jealous of him; For he expected they would not have thought their Sitting ſafe, till his arrival at London with his Army, and then he would have reſtored all the other Members with them, without undertaking to judge of the Difference betwixt them.

He receives an Addreſs at Morpeth from the City of London by their Sword-Bearer. As likewiſe from the Gentry of the Country in all parts as he Marcht along. He is viſited at York by the Lord Fairfax.

When he came to Morpeth, Mr. William Man, the Sword-Bearer of London, came to him, with a very reſpectful Letter from the Lord Mayor and Common-Council of London; to which he made a civil Return the next day from Newcaſtle, and thence he Marched with continued Journeys to York, where he continued five days, and all the way as he Marched from Cold-ſtream he was met by the Gentry, and ſaluted by all the People as he paſſed, with great Acclamations of Joy. Colonel Waters the Sheriff of Yorkſhire, met him betwixt Allerton and Topcliffe, ſeveral of the Gentry having attended him the day before at his firſt entrance into the County. At York he was viſited by the Lord Fairfax, whom he received with much kindneſs and reſpect, and very civilly acknowledged Mr. Bowles his diligent and induſtrious acting in his Concerns; there he Modelled Lambert's and Lilburn's Regiments of Horſe, and gave the firſt of them to Colonel Bethel, and the latter to Smithſon, and chang'd moſt of the other Officers.

The New reſtored Members begin very Actively in ſetling their Affairs; and on the Second of January they name One and thirty to be of the Council of State, paſſing an ACT for their Conſtitution; and ſeveral Inſtructions for them to Act by: amongſt which it was provived, that none ſhould ſit but ſuch as ſhould take an Oath of Abjuration of the King, his Family and Government.

The Form of an Oath of Abjuration to be taken by all the Members of the Council of State and Parliament.

The Oath was in theſe following words: viz.

I do hereby Swear, That I do renounce the pretended Title of Charles Stuart, and the whole Line of the late King James, and of every other Perſon, as a Single Perſon, pretending, or which ſhall pretend to the Crown or Government of theſe Nations of England, Scotland, or Ireland, or any of them, and the Dominions and Territories belonging to them, or any of them; And that I will by the Grace and Aſſiſtance of Almighty God, be true, faithful and conſtant to the Parliament and Common-wealth, and will oppoſe the bringing in, or ſetting up any Single Perſon, or Houſe of Lords, and every of them in this Common-wealth.

This Oath being ſtricter than any that had ever been impoſed, was by many diſliked; however, the leading Men that promoted it in Parliament affirmed, That without this, they could have no certain aſſurance of Power; And that the Hollanders, and thoſe of the Confederated Provinces could never be fix'd in their Government, till they had made a Renunciation of the King of Spain. And to that height this buſineſs was brought, that not thinking it enough for the Council of State, they drove on to have it ordered, that every Member in the Houſe ſhould alſo take the ſaid Oath: This was ſtrongly oppoſed by Colonel Fielder, Weaver, Dove, Hutchinſon, both the Puries, Ingoldsby, and many more of the ſoberer ſort, Who alledged, it would be a Confining of Providence to make ſuch an Oath, a Snare to many good Men, and a Terror to ſuch as were truly Conſcientious, who might ſuſpect this to be a fore-runner of many Oaths to fetter their Conſciences. Of theſe more moderate ſort of Men, Fielder and Ingoldsby only were thought Favourers of the King's Party, but the reſt were ſuch of whom they had no manner of Jealouſie at that time; though afterwards they appeared much inclined to a Conjunction with the Secluded Members, and well-diſpoſed to Monarchy: So that when the Act for the Council of State came to be executed, in that part of it which was the Adminiſtration of the Oath, Mr. Weaver, Colonel Morley, Oliver St. John, Colonel Fagg, the Lord Fairfax, and many more, even a third part at leaſt of their number refuſed it, and were therefore not admitted to Sit and Act.

The Oath oppoſed by ſeveral of the Houſe.

Whilſt the General ſtaid at York, he had Intimation, that Overton was taking Beds into Hull, breaking the Ice in the Grafts, and making ſuch preparation as if he took him rather for an Enemy than a Friend; wherefore he ſent Major Smith to him, one well known in that Garriſon, to inſpect into the condition of it, and writ a Letter to Overton, to expoſtulate with him about the Matter: who returned an Anſwer to him, That he perceived Rumour had rendred Hull as doubtful to him, as it had his Deſign dangerous to them and others; but he was glad to hear that he adhered to this Parliament in their preſent Conſtitution, againſt the re-admiſſion of the Secluded Members, a free Parliament, or Single Perſon, one of which had been continually charged upon him by the Common Cry of the Army.

Scot and Robinſon ſent from the Houſe to Complement and attend General Monk upon his Journey.

The Leading Members of Parliament, finding this difference growing amongſt themſelves about the Oath of Abjuration, contrived how to draw the General to their Party; and in order thereunto, Scot and Robinſon, two of their Members were ſent to meet him upon the way to gratulate his Return, but with private directions to engage him to take the Oath as ſoon as he came to London, before he took his place in the Council of State.

Of

Of these their Instructions Clarges having timely notice, was resolved to be with the General before them; but before he went, he privately got from Quarter-Master-General Butler a List of all the Quarters in London, for a purpose which shall be discovered hereafter.

He disposeth of several Regiments and Companies as he came along.

On the Twelfth of January, the House, to testifie their Confidence in the General, passed a Vote to approve of all he had done in order to the Service of the Parliament; and Ordered their Vote to be Printed: When he removed from York, he sent one of the Dunkirk Regiments of Foot, Commanded by Colonel Clark, and Major General Morgan's Regiment of Horse, into Scotland, which, with those he left in Garrison there, he thought enough to secure the Peace of that Kingdom, till time should admit further Consideration thereof. He left Colonel Fairfax his Regiment at York, and disbanded some Companies of Ashfield's Regiment, and mingled the private Souldiers thereof amongst his Regiments to fill up the Companies: And then having given the Council of State an Account of what he had done, he proceeded in his March towards London with four Regiments of Foot, viz. his Own, Colonel Read's, Colonel Lydcotts, and Colonel Hubbleshorns; and Three Regiments of Horse, viz. his Own, Colonel Knight's, and Colonel Cloeberries, which made his number in all 5800 besides Officers; that is, Four thousand Foot, and Eighteen Hundred Horse; He came the Nineteenth day of January to Nottingham, where Clarges came to him the day following, on which day also, Scot and Robinson arrived at Leicester; and, because the next day was Sunday, they rested there, and met the General upon the Road, betwixt Leicester and Nottingham the Twenty second.

Clarges gives the General an Account how Affairs stood at London.

At Nottingham, Clarges having had secret Conference with the General, communicated to him in what Condition all Affairs stood at London, and that they had there Two thousand Horse, and Eight thousand Foot, most of them modelled to their own Principles; that the Horse were the Regiments of Okey, Hasserig, Rich and Desborow; and though they had newly given the last to Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper, yet all the Officers under him were of the same Mould as the former. The Regiments of Foot were commanded by Ayres, Markham, Streater, Firth, Moss, Fleetwood, Morley and Fagg; of all which he could have no assurance but of the two last: for Morley's Men were firm to him, deserted their Officers in the North, and declared for him; and Fagg's was a new Regiment, raised about Portsmouth in his behalf. He told him, That except he could get all these Horse and Foot out of London, (except Morley's and Fagg's Regiments) and disperse them into several Quarters, and March his own Men thither, and be Master of London, he could never expect to do any good for his Countrey; since in all these times, it had been experienc'd, That to whatever was done at London, where they had Nine or Ten thousand Men to justifie their Actions, all the rest of the Regiments submitted.

And gives his advice touching the Regiments that were quartered in London.

And if his distinct and absolute Command in Scotland had not happened in a Conjuncture when Fleetwood and Lambert, the two Chief Officers of the Army, were in a Jealousie of each other, and their Treasure quite exhausted, he had never been able to have stood against them; and although there was that Jealousie, and the Principles on which he declared were such, as most of these in Command favoured; yet how slowly did Ireland and the Fleet joyn with him? And even the Council of State themselves (who had the temptation of Power to excite them) were backward enough to appear, till they saw a Distraction in the other Counsels; for fear, as some of the Chief of them alledged, least the King's Party might have Opportunity to mingle with their Levies, if they should make any: These Considerations took such impression in the General, as made him apprehend great Difficulties in what he went about, till Clarges told him, There were yet probable Hopes to make him Master of his wishes, which he proposed thus: He told him, The Council of State consisted of such only as had taken the Oath of Abjuration; and till he should take that, they would be so diffident of him, that whatever he desired of them, of any material Concernment, would be denied; That the major part in Parliament were against the Oath; and therefore in all his Affairs he was to apply himself to them, and therefore that his best way would be, to write them a Letter to this purpose, That he thought it inconvenient for their Service, that so many of the Souldiery now in London, lately in Rebellion against them, should be trusted with their Guards, till the present Officers by them placed upon them, should have by Discipline reduced them to perfect obedience. To which the General answered, That he approved of the Advice, but if they should offer to have an equal Number of his Regiments with the other, that Objection would be removed; and besides, he believed he had not Men enough to supply the Guards, which these now in London kept.

To this Clarges replied, It was worth his attempt to endeavour this; and that the same Reason for not mingling the Men, might hold as for not trusting them intire; but as concerning their Guards, that he had brought with him a List of all their Quarters, and did believe his Three Regiments of Horse, being in number, within Two hundred, as many as the Four now there, they might do the same Duty; and that his Four Regiments of Foot, now full as they were, might well keep the same Guards as six of theirs.

The General in fine approving of all he said, Clarges drew the Letter to the Parliament, for him to sign in these words:

The General's Letter to the House.

Right Honourable,

I Have lately acquainted the Council of State with what Forces I have sent into Scotland, and more are necessary to be sent thither, to re-inforce them, and secure the Peace of that Countrey, which I presume they have been pleased to report to you; I am now Marched in obedience to your Commands thus far on my way towards London, with Four Regiments of Foot, and Two Regiments of Horse;

each

each Regiment of Foot containing a Thousand, and each Regiment of Horse Six hundred; so that by a List which I have sent to me from the Quarter-Master-General of the Horse and Foot in London, I have disposed of these Regiments which March with me: And I humbly offer, That all those now in London, except Colonel Fagg's Regiments, and Colonel Morley's, may be sent to the several Quarters by me assigned; for, with submission, I conceive it not for your Service, that those Souldiers now in London, lately in Rebellion against you, should mingle with these your approved faithful Regiments, till the present Officers by you put upon them have by Discipline reduced them to a more assured Obedience to You. The Three Regiments of Horse with me, are as many in Number as those now in London; and my Four Regiments of Foot near as full as the Six I remove, so that your Numbers are not lessened. In this Letter I send Two Lists; in one of them the Quarters are set down for these Regiments which March with me into London; and in the other, the several Quarters of those to March out, which I did not appoint, but upon much consideration of the present Posture of your Affairs, and intelligence of the distemper'd Condition of the Places to which I assign them. I have sent a faithful Servant of yours to receive your Commands in this Business; because on your Forces under me will be drawn to Barnet: And if on that Day those in London March out, we may supply their Places: But I humbly desire your Pleasure may be so early communicated to us, that I may send the Quarter-Masters to make Provision for the Men; Which is all at present from, &c.

A List of all the Quarters that were assigned the Souldiery, that Marched out of London upon Monk's Marching in.

The General approved of the Letter, and signed it; and they agreed, that it should not be sent till he came to St. Albans; That those in the House, of the Faction, for the Oath of Abjuration, might suppose it came with the privity of Scot and Robinson; and seeing him so near, be less apt to oppose his Desires. It was Midnight before thus much was Resolved; But in regard he was to March the next Morning, he resolved fully to settle the whole Affair before he went to Bed; and therefore sent for the Books of Mapps, for the better assigning the Quarters of those that were to March out. And by the Quarter-Master-General's List he disposed the Quarters of his own Men. Colonel Knight was one in whom he had great Confidence, and he was sent for to assist in this Assignation of Quarters, but strictly enjoyned to Secrecy.

The Regiments of Horse to March out were Ordered thus:

Okey's Regiment; To Bedford one Troop, Buckingham one Troop, Ailsbury one Troop, Peterborough one Troop, and Northampton two Troops.

Haslerig's Ragiment; To Reading one Troop, Oxford two Troops, Glocester one Troop, Worcester one Troop, Hereford one Troop.

Ashley Cooper's Regiment; To Basingstoke one Troop, Bath one Troop, Bristol two Troops, Salisbury two Troops.

Rich's Regiment; To Ipswich one Troop, Colchester one Troop, Norwich two Troops, Bury one Troop, Yarmouth one Troop.

The Foot were disposed as followeth.

Colonel Ayres his Regiment; To Sandwich one Company, Dover two Companies, Canterbury five Companies, Rye two Companies.

Colonel Markham's Regiment; To Ipswich three Companies, to Colchester five Companies, and to Sudbury two Companies.

Colonel Streater's Regiment; To Buckingham three Companies, to Northampton five Companies, and to Newark upon Trent two Companies. The Confidence the General had of Colonel Streater, in placing his Regiment in the midst of the Kingdom, afterwards proved a good Expedient at the breaking out of Lambert.

The Regiment belonging to Fleetwood; To Hereford two Companies, to Oxford four Companies, to Worcester four Companies.

Colonel Mosi's Regiment; To Cambridge five Companies, and to Ely five Companies.

Colonel Fitche's Regiment; To Chichester five Companies, and the rest to Winchester.

The disposition of those to be in London were in this Order:

The General's own Regiment of Horse in the Mews, and in the Strand.

Colonel Knight's Regiment; To have four Troops in Kings-street, and Tuttle-street in Westminster, and two Troops in Holbourn.

Colonel Cloeberry's Regiment; Two Troops in Southwark, one in Bishops-gate-street, and three in Smithfield.

The General's Regiment of Foot in St. James's, and parts adjacent.

Colonel Read's Regiment in Somerset-house, the Strand, Long-Acre, Covent-Garden, and Saint Martins-lane.

Colonel Lydcott's Regiment in Thanet-house, Peter-house, and parts adjacent.

Colonel Hubblethorn's Regiment, in Holbourn, Smithfield, and parts adjacent.

Colonel Fagg's Regiment in Southwark.

Colonel Morley's Regiment in the Tower, and parts adjacent.

The next Morning the General Marched towards Leicester, and he met Scot and Robinson, the Parliaments Commissioners, in the way to it, and they never parted with him till he came to London.

At Leicester the General expected to be attaqued about the Oath of Abjuration, and was much troubled to think how to divert it. Clarges told him, He had a plain and a fair Answer to make to them, which was, That he heard many Men of undoubted Integrity had refused the Oath; and till he came to London, to hear the Reasons on both sides, for the taking and refusing, he could not with Prudence resolve it. This Advice he followed, and succeeded in it. Scot and Robinson at their first Interview told him, That the Parliament had Ordered a Thousand Pounds a Year for ever to be settled on him, and appointed them to acquaint him with it; and to let him know the sense the Parliament had of his great Services, and that they were providing Monies for his Souldiers, and were glad to hear of his repairing to London.

The General's Answer concerning the Oath of Abjuration.

Scot and Robinson's Message to him from the House.

The

The General was never more put to it than in this journey to dissemble his Inclinations; For these men watched every moment of his time: At Harbrough Alderman Fowke, Alderman Vincent, and Mr. Bromfield, met him as Commissioners from the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of London; and at the same time, Sir John Norris, with many of the chief Gentry of Northampton-shire, welcomed him into their County.

Commissioners from the City, met the General at Harbrough.

The Citizens, after a Congratulatory Speech, fell upon particulars, for the general Settlement of the Kingdom; and Mr. Bromfield, in a handsome free Speech, after the enumeration of the several Calamities it lay under, as the best Remedy; propos'd the re-admission of the Secluded Members, that the Parliament might be made full and free. Scot was so impatient at this, That he took the Words out of the Generals Mouth, and would not permit him to answer them. He told them, Now the Parliament had subjected the Military Power, to a due subordination to the Civil, they were free; and that having already given their Judgment in the Case of the Secluded Members, it did not become them to insist on their re-admission. Fowke endeavoured to qualifie what Bromfield had propounded, by saying, He conceived they were not obliged by their Instructions, to desire the Generals Mediation further, than that they might have all their own Members admitted, since it was unreasonable, that they should be Governed by a Parliament, where they had not their Representatives.

They propound the re-admission of the Secluded Members.

Scot stiffly opposeth them.

This Discourse, on all sides, was managed with some heat; and the General was forced to comply with Scot and Robinson, in their Extravagancies, to preserve their Opinion of him, which made the Citizens part from him somewhat unsatisfied, and so they continued, till he sent Clarges privately to give them a better understanding of his Intentions. But Sir John Norris, and the Northamptonshire Gentlemen, who were prepared to attend him at Northampton with an Address, were so much discouraged, that they thought to decline it, till Doctor Barrow requested Mr. Philip Howard, to advise them to proceed in their Intentions, and to assure them, That though they had not a satisfactory Answer, they might be sure it would produce a good Effect. At Northampton Sir John Norris delivered his Address; and as he marched to St Albans, several of the same nature were presented to him from the Gentry of Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Norfolk, and almost all Counties, which did all agree in the same matter, (viz.) For the Restitution of the Members Secluded in the Year, 1648. and the filling up the Vacancies in Parliament, or else for the calling of a full and Free-Parliament. All which were answered with much respect by him, although he durst not discover his Approbation of their Desires: And it is very observable, That in all the Counties, so much Caution was observed, That no Gentlemen signed any of these Addresses that had ever been engaged in his present Majesties, or his Royal Fathers Cause, nor scarce any of the Sons of such.

The General seems to comply with Scot and Robinson.

Sir John Norris, and the Gentlemen of Northampton shire, make an Address to him.

Several other Addresses, pleading for a Free-Parliament.

At Dunstable the General consulted Major Knight and Clarges, about the filling up the Blanks in the Letter prepared at Nottingham, having had Thoughts to send it by Clarges, Knight, or Clark his Secretary: but upon further consideration, it was thought convenient not to part with Knight, because his presence would be requisite with his Troops, if any Disorders should happen upon their March to London; as for Clark, he was so necessary to be with the General, for the issuing out Orders, that he could not be spared: and for Clarges, it was judged more expedient, that he should be sent before, to prepare a party in the House; so that Lydcott was chosen to be sent, as one very grateful to the Speaker, to whom he was near allay'd, and Friday was the Day inserted for his March into London: And upon the next Days Consultation, which was Saturday in the Evening, the 28. of January, he was dispatched away: And on Monday the Letter was delivered, which caused a long and violent Debate: Hasterig told them, the Council of State had before agreed, that four Regiments of those in London should march out, and four of the Generals be admitted; but nothing prevailed that he said against the Generals Letter: So that after Debate, from eight in the Morning, to twelve at Noon, the Result was in these words;

Lydcott made choice of, for the carrying of the General's Letter to the House, about the sending of their Souldiers out of the City.

Monday, January 30. 1659.

Upon Reading of a Letter from St. Albans, from General Monk, Dated the 28. of January, 1659. and two Lists therein.

The House consent to the General's Desire.

Resolved upon the Question by the Parliament, That the Parliament doth agree with the Distributions of the Souldiers, according to these Lists.

Resolved upon the Question by the Parliament, That it be referred to the Commissioners of the Army, to see the Souldiers forthwith distributed accordingly.

Lydcott returns to the General with the welcome News of these Votes, as well might it be so to him; for from the moment of the execution of them) which gave him the possession of London) he could not but think his Conduct would prove very ill, if he did not reduce the Armies, in the three Kingdoms, to his Obedience.

Captain Cuff, an Agent from Sir Charles Coot in Ireland, had attended the General, in all his March from Newcastle to London, and given him from time to time, and account of all Occurrences; by which means the General kept a strict Correspondence both with him, the Lord Broghil, and several others of the chief Officers there; Who, although they had reduced all that Kingdom to the Obedience of the Parliament, were nevertheless suspected by them; and Scot insinuated to the General, That notwithstanding all their Pretences, he had good grounds to believe, they had some other Interest in their Aim, than that of the present Parliament.

The General hath constant Intelligence of all Affairs in Ireland by means of Capt. Cuff.

The General diverted this Jealousie, with assurances of their Fidelity, and that he would undertake for them; which allay'd the Suſpicion for that time, or at leaſt ſo raked it up in Aſhes, that no Sparks outwardly appeared.

The Regiments that were to march from London, to give place to the General and his Regiments, had a Months Pay aſſigned them, to be paid at their Remove; but that did not hinder them from Mutiny at their departure, eſpecially thoſe that Quartered at St. James's and Somerſet-Houſe, which was not without great Induſtry of the Officers appeaſed; Upon which followed about Midnight an Inſurrection in the City, where about ſix or ſeven hundred drew together, and by Beat of Drum about the Streets, invited others to joyn with them for a free-Parliament, and the Liberty of the City, in expectation to have the Souldiers joyn with them; but two Troops of Horſe ſuddenly diſperſed moſt of them, and took the reſt (about eight and thirty) Priſoners, which were the next Morning committed to Lambeth-Houſe: This Inſurrection, together with the Diſorders of the Souldiers, ſo frighted the Council of State, that in the beginning of the foregoing Night, they had ſent to the General to March with all haſt into London; but that was afterwards contradicted, and he drew not near the Town till the Morning, and in the Afternoon, the others being all Marched out, Tumults quieted, and all both within and without in a great Calm. He marched with his Army by Grays-Inn-Lane into Holbourn, and from thence down Chancery-Lane, and ſo through Temple-Bar, along the Strand, to White-Hall. The three Regiments of Horſe marched firſt, and He in the Head of them gallantly Mounted, with his Trumpets richly habited before him, and ſeveral Led-Horſes after him, with many of his Chief Officers, and ſeveral Perſons of Honour and Quality; and after them marched the Foot. The Speaker of the Houſe met him in the Street near Somerſet-Houſe, where they Complemented each other: After which the General marched on to White-Hall, and the Speaker went to the Rolls. As ſoon as the Souldiers were quartered, and all the Guards ſet, the General was viſited by ſeveral of the Council of State; and being invited to take his place there, he went in compliance with them: But when the Oath of Abjuration was tendered, he refuſed it, for the Reaſons before mentioned, and was therefore not admitted, whereupon he returned to his Apartment. The next day was ſpent in Viſits to him, from all the Members of Parliament, and may other Perſons of the higheſt Quality. Mr. Scot told him, The Parliament did intend on Monday, publickly in their Houſe, to give him their Acknowledgments of his Service, and that they expected he ſhould there make publick Profeſſions of his Affections to their Intereſt and Authority, and his Diſlike of the Addreſſes to him, for the Secluded Members and a Free-Parliament.

A Mutiny among ſome of the Souldiery, that were to depart out of the City.

A Riſing in the City, diſperſed by the Souldiers.

Gen. Monk Marcheth with his Forces into the City of London.

He refuſeth the Oath of Abjuration.

Scot inſtructs him how to receive the intended Gratulations of the Houſe.

He made little Anſwer to him, but that he was much obliged to them, for the Honour of ſo great a Reſpect; and ſhould endeavour by his future Services, to give Evidences of his juſt Reſentments of it.

It is obſervable, That from this time in all the Orders to him from the Parliament, they called him only Commiſſioner Monk, and not General: And although yet no publick Order had ſuperſeded the Commiſſion of Commander in Chief, ſent to him by the Council of State, they allowed him no Authority, but conjunct with others, whereof he took little notice, but proceeded as before in the ſole Exerciſe of the Command of the Army. He was ſomewhat perplexed, how to behave himſelf in the Parliament, in reference to the great Profeſſions and Proteſtations they expected from him, of his Averſions from the King and his Party, to balance his refuſing the Oath of Abjuration: But he reſolved to act in that occaſion, as moderate as the Seaſon would bear, and yet to temper his Speech ſo, as not altogether to fail their Expections.

The Stile given him in their Orders, not General, but only Commiſſioner Monk.

On Monday, which was the ſixth of February, he was brought to the Court of Wards by Scot, Robinſon, and ſome other Members; after which, Scot acquainted the Houſe with his being there: Whereupon the Serjeant with his Mace being ſent to attend him, carried it before him, Scot and Robinſon, conducting him into the Houſe to a Place on the left Hand within the Bar, where a Chair faced with Velvet was ſet for him to ſit on.

He is conducted with much Ceremony into the Houſe.

As ſoon as he had made Obeyſance, the Speaker bid him ſit down; but he deſiring to be excuſed, and ſtanding behind the Chair, the Speaker expreſſed himſelf to him in theſe words.

The Speakers Speech to him.

IT hath been a common Obſervation, that the lighter Paſſions have a loud Voice, but ſuch as are of greater Magnitude are always ſilent. As it is in Paſſions, ſo in Actions alſo: Thoſe of a leſſer Dimenſion, are often magnified above their Meaſure; but Hiſtorians do commonly fail in the Expreſſions of Noble and Great Actions, and ſuch are frequently leſſened; and ſo it may well be in theſe of this Days Remembrance. The Infallible Author tells us, That in Judea is GOD known, and his Name is great in Iſrael; That Knowledge and Greatneſs of GOD is verified in the Inſtance of Martial Affairs, That the ſtout-hearted are ſpoiled, they have ſlept their ſleep, and none of the Men of Might have found their Hands. This is verified this Day amongſt Us here preſent, that both We and You might acknowledge that it is GOD, not Man, that hath performed this Great Work; that we his Creatures here may neither aſcribe it to our Wiſdom, or Your Valour, but that it was GOD, alone, and none elſe. But yet I have always obſerved, that albeit the Glory appertains to the LORD, yet the Influence of that

Glory

Glory extends it ſelf to the Inſtruments in his hand; and thereby thoſe Beams enlighten your Honour and Valour, as an eſpecial Inſtrument; not as a Merit, but as a Reward upon your Prudence and wiſe Conduct. The knowledge of what hath been done in this our Reſtitution, is not unknown in theſe Nations; I believe, to this part of the World, how our Friends (as we conceived) left us, and what Defection hath been in Duty and Truſt. The Face of this Land was covered with a Gloomy and Black Cloud, and the whole Nation left, in the judgment of man, to the uttermoſt of ruine: But in that condition, we did as the Prophet in the greateſt miſery of Iſrael, eſpy a little Cloud, no broader than a Hand, which is infinitely, in an Inſtant, become the Refreſhment of the whole Nation: That little Cloud was diſcerned afar off in your Hand, and by the Prudence of your wiſe Conduct, it diſperſed the Miſeries of theſe Nations, and became a Glorious Mercy to them all. This Houſe hath a true Reſentment of your Prudence and Conduct in this Great Work, and have commanded Me to return their hearty Thanks: But I muſt not end here, for they have alſo a full Senſe of thoſe Noble Commanders, Officers, and Souldiers, both of their Fidelity, Valour, and Duty in this Expedition: And as I have returned to you their Thanks, ſo it is their Deſire, that you ſhould return the ſame to your Commanders, Officers, and Souldiers, who have been Inſtrumental in theſe Actions.

After he had ended, the General ſtood up, and ſpake as followeth.

Mr. Speaker,

The General's Speech in Anſwer to the Speakers.

'AMongſt the many Mercies of God to 'theſe poor Nations, your peace-'able Reſtitution is not the leaſt. It is '(as you ſaid) his Work alone, and to 'Him belong the Glory of it; and I e-'ſteem it as a great effect of his Good-'neſs to me, that he was pleaſed to make 'me, amongſt many Worthier in your 'Service, ſome way Inſtrumental in it. I 'did nothing but my Duty, and deſerve 'not to receive ſo great an Honour and 'Reſpect as you are pleaſed to give me at 'this Time and Place, which I ſhall ever ac-'knowledge as a high mark of your Fa-'vour to me.

'SIR, I ſhall not now trouble you 'with Large Narratives, only give me 'leave to acquaint you, That as I mar-'ched from Scotland hither, I obſerved 'the People in moſt Counties in great 'and earneſt expectations of a Settlement, 'and ſeveral Applications were made to 'me with numerous Subſcriptions to 'them; The chiefeſt Heads of their De-'ſires were for a Free and a full Parlia-'ment, and that you would determine 'your Sitting; a Goſpel-Miniſtry, En-'couragement of Learning and Univer-'ſities, and for admittance of the Mem-'bers Secluded before the Year 1648. 'without any previous Oath or Engage-'ment. To which I commonly anſwer-'ed, That you are now in a Free Par-'liament, and if there be any Force re-'maining upon you, I would endeavour 'to remove it; and that you had Voted 'to fill up your Houſe, and then you 'would be a full Parliament alſo; And 'that you had already determined your 'Sitting: And for the Miniſtry their 'maintenance, the Laws and Univerſi-'ties, you had largely declared concern-'ing them in your laſt Declaration; and 'I was confident you would adhere to 'it: But as for thoſe Gentlemen Secluded 'in the year 1648. I told them, you had 'given Judgment in it, and all People 'ought to acquieſce in that Judgment; 'but to admit any Members to ſit in Par-'liament without a previous Oath or En-'gagement, to preſerve the Government in 'being, it was never done in England.

'But although I ſaid it not to them, 'I muſt ſay, with pardon, to you, That 'the leſs Oaths and Engagements are im-'poſed, (with reſpect had to the Security 'of the Common Cauſe) your Settle-'ment will be the ſooner attained to. 'I am the more particular in theſe 'matters, to let you ſee how grateful 'your preſent Conſultations about theſe 'things will be to the People. I know 'all the ſober Gentry will cloſe with 'you, if they may be tenderly and gently 'uſed; and I am ſure you will ſo uſe 'them, as knowing it to be the Common 'Concern, to amplifie, and not to leſſen 'our Intereſt, and to be careful that 'neither the Cavaleer, nor Phanatick 'Party have yet a ſhare in your Civil or 'Military Power; of the laſt of whoſe 'Impatience to Government, you have 'lately had ſo ſevere experience. I 'ſhould ſay ſomething of Ireland and 'Scotland; Indeed Ireland is in an unſet-'led Condition, and made worſe by your 'Interruptions, which prevented the 'paſſing an ACT for the Settlement 'of the Eſtates of Adventurers and Soul-

'diers there, which I heard you intended 'to have done in a few days; and I pre-'ſume it will be now quickly done, be-'ing ſo neceſſary at this time, when the 'Wants of the Common-wealth call for 'Supplies; and People will unwillingly 'pay Taxes for thoſe Eſtates of which 'they have no legal aſſurance: I need 'not tell you how much you were abu-'ſed in the nomination of your Officers 'of your Armies there; their malice that 'deceived you, hath been ſufficiently 'manifeſted: I do affirm, that thoſe now 'that have declared, for you will continue 'faithful, and thereby Evince, that as 'well there as here, it is the ſober In-'tereſt muſt eſtabliſh your Dominion. As 'for Scotland, I muſt ſay, The People 'of that Nation deſerve to be Cheriſhed; 'and I believe your late Declaration will 'much glad their Spirits; for nothing was 'to them more dreadful, than a fear to 'be over run with Phanatick Notions: I 'humbly recommend them to your Affect-'ion and Eſteem, and deſire the intended 'Union may be proſecuted, and their Tax-'es made proportionable to thoſe in Eng-'land, for which I am ingaged by promiſe 'to become a Suiter to you. And truly, 'Sir, I muſt ask leave to intreat you to 'make a ſpeedy Proviſion for the Civil 'Government there, of which they have 'been deſtitute near a Year, to the ruine 'of many Families: And except Commiſ-'ſioners for managing of the Government, 'and Judges to ſit in Courts of Judicature, 'be ſpeedily appointed, that Country will 'be very miſerable.

'I directed Mr. Gumble lately to pre-'ſent ſome Names to you both for Com-'miſſioners and Judges; but by reaſon 'of your great Affairs, he was not re-'quired to deliver them in Writing, but 'I humbly preſent them to your Conſi-'deration.

And ſo concluding, he delivered them the Paper wherein the ſaid Names were contained.

His Speech excepted againſt by Scot, and thoſe of his Party.

Scot and ſome others were much offended that he aſſumed ſo much in this Speech, and were once thinking to interrupt him. They complained to their confidents, That he was too poſitive in undertaking for the Officers in Ireland, of whoſe Affections to the Parliament in the preſent Conſtitution of it, there was juſt cauſe of doubt; and that in the whole Speech he ſeemed to affect Popularity, and gave the Cavaliers a poſſibility of being received into the exerciſe of Truſt, with a total Excluſion of the more ſtrict Parliament-Party, under the Notion of Phanaticks.

The City continue male-content.

But that which at this time more diſquieted theſe men than the General's Speech, was the diſcontented Carriage of the City, for the Common-Council had been in very high debates about the Government, and were reſolved to pay no Publick Taxes till the Houſe were filled up with equal Repreſentatives: This they looked upon as drawing towards a Contempt of their Authority, and thought they could not better provide for their own Securities, than by oppoſing in time, and puniſhing ſuch Contumacies; they therefore on the eighth of February in the Evening at the Council of State, Order the General to go into London the next Morning with a good part of the Army, and to ſeize upon Eleven of the moſt Active of the Common-Council, and commit them to the Tower; as alſo to pull down the Poſts and Chains, and take down the Gates and Percullices of the City, and Quarter his Souldiers there, till they were reduced to Obedience.

The General ordered to march into the City, and pull down the Gates.

The General was ſuprized at this Command, and debated many things with them in mitigation or ſuſpenſion of it, till near one in the Morning the next day, but nothing could divert their Reſolution; ſo that he was forced to obey their Orders, or quit his Command, for he had no longer time to deliberate than that very Morning in which they were to be put in Execution, Inſomuch, that after three or four hours repoſe to refreſh himſelf, he marched into the City, and pulled down the Poſts and Chains, and took into Cuſtody Nine of the Citizens which he had Orders to ſecure, the other two abſented themſelves. The Nine Impriſoned, were Mr. Lawrence Bromfield of Tower-ſtreet, Alderman Vincent, Alderman Bludworth, Mr. Thomas Brown of Woodſtreet, Mr. Daniel Spencer in Fridayſtreet, Mr. Penning in Fan-Church-Street, Mr. Jackſon, Mr. Chamberlain, and Mr. Richard Ford. The City was much Alarm'd at this proceeding: And the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and ſeveral of the chiefeſt of the Citizens applied themſelves to him to moderate his Actions. All the City indeed ſeemed as People confounded with Wonder and Anxiety. And Colonel Hubblethorn, and others, the Generals own Officers, were many of them ſo much troubled, that they came to him to offer up their Commiſſions, rather than be employed in ſuch an Action: They told him, The honour and reſpect they had to his Perſon ingaged them never to ſerve againſt him, or diſpute his Orders: But in this, ſince they could not without horrour obey them, they with tears prayed him to diſpoſe of their Commands to ſome more neceſſary Perſons. He was moved much at theſe their paſſionate expreſſions, but privately informed them of his own diſlike of what was Commanded; and therefore Conjured them to continue their Confidence in him, and execute what he had given them in Charge, as that from which better effects would enſue than was convenient at that time to be explained. With this they went away somewhat better contented, though not fully satisfied. He took his Quarter at the Three Tuns in Guild-Hall-Yard, where notwithstanding this Accident, he received with much Civility those which came to him: Among whom, one Mr. Jolly, a discreet Citizen, with modesty and temper represented to him the Inconveniencies of what he had undertaken, and told him, The Affections of the City to him were such, that whatever he reasonably could desire of them, should be easier obtained by Perswasion than Force. That the Controversie between Enemies had nothing in it extraordinary; but to be ill Treated by Friends was very grievous. When Hewson marched into the City with a greater Number, he could not compass his Ends, but received Opposition with Contumelies and Affronts both to his Person and Party: But when he came, a general Calm and Kindness was seen in the Countenances of the People; And now that he had put his most rigorous Orders in Execution, they seemed rather amazed with Astonishment to receive it from his hand, then provoked to resent the indignity of it.

He obeys their Orders, though unwillingly.

Mr. Jolly's Prudent Speech to the General.

This Prudent Speech made great impression on him, insomuch, that he told them thereupon, That he had Orders to take down the Gates and Percullices as well as the Posts and Chains, but he would immediately write to the Parliament to mitigate their Commands. And accordingly he writ to acquaint them, That he had secured all the Persons given him in charge to Imprison, except two that were absent; And that the next Morning the Lord Mayor and Aldermen had appointed a Meeting of the Common Council, where they doubted not that things would be composed to their satisfaction, and the Assessment be paid, (which was the chiefest cause of his March into London) so that thereupon he had forborn to meddle with the Gates and Percullices, till he should receive further Orders, because such severe acting would highly incense the City, and he hoped by mild means to reduce them to reason. This letter made them higher than before; for whereas in their former Orders they had appointed him only to unhinge the Gates, and pull down the Percullices, they now Command him to destroy both Gates and Percullices: And to prevent the meeting of the Common-Council, they ordered, That the present Common Council of the City should be dissolved; and declared them null and void. And without any other Answer, they sent these Votes to the General.

The General writes to the House to mitigate their Commands.

They so much the more stirred up, send more rigorous Orders than before.

Upon this return, he was not a little perplexed in Mind and very thoughtful what to do; but at last he resolved fully to execute his Orders, that the House might not take occasion from his dispute of them, in the unsettled condition of the Souldiers, to vacate his Commission, and thereupon commanded his Souldiers to break all the Gates and Percullices in pieces. Which done, on Friday in the Evening he came back to White-Hall; but at his return, Scot and Hasterig, and some others of their violent Friends were very much moved, as if he had disobeyed his Orders, by which they said he was to continue with his Army in the City, till several Designs of theirs for the further humbling them to their purposes should be effected; and there was a Whisper, as if he were to have been questioned for it. It was also artificially contrived, that the same day the Gates were pulled down, a Petition from a Factious Phanatick Party of Citizens was presented by one Praise-God Barebone to the House, to countenance the Action, and to press an Oath of Renunciation to be taken by all that should be imployed in Civil and Military Affairs: Nevertheless to please the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, they had the thanks of the House for their Moderation in this time of disorder in the City.

The General, though he demurred a little upon this Counsel, yet he seemed very sensible of the Contempts they at Westminster had put upon him in the whole Progress of this Affair, and was resolved after a day or two's private Consultation with some of his Officers, to do something to regain their Esteem he had lost; for the performance of which, he said, He would take time but till Tuesday Morning. This was the effect of their first Discourse. But a while after, Dr. Barrow came to Clarges, earnestly urging him to renew his Advice to the General, setting forth, That delay might give his Enemies time to put out of his power the doing what he intended; And that it was most necessary to be speedy in the retrieving the Good Opinion of the City, to manifest thereby the greater dislike of what he had done the day before, as that to which the necessity of the time (against his own Inclination) pressed him to. Whilst they were in this Discourse, two Officers of the Army in whom the General then had much Trust, came in to them, and they all together went to him again, and, with the same Arguments reiterated, dissuaded from delay; adding, That they had certain Intelligence, that the Council of State began to be jealous of him, for that little Favour he shewed to the City in the Execution of his Orders, and that he ought therefore in Prudence to provide for his own Safety. Barrow was appointed to gain what Intelligence he could against the next Morning; and the General with Clarges, Thomson, Sanders and Barton, which two last were advised with as two Officers that very much inclined to Admission of the Secluded Members, consulted what to offer to the House as a ground for their March into London: At last, waving all thought of making any excuse for marching into the City, they conclude, That Orders should be privately issued for about a dozen of the Chief Officers, in whom he had greatest confidence, to meet at Six the next Morning at the General's Quarters, and for

A Petition to the House from the Sectarian Party of the City.

Clarges Counsels the General to endeavour the speedy recovery of the Cities good Opinion.

Dr. Barrow urges the danger of delay in this business.

The General upon advice with some of his Officers, concludes to return immediately.

The General Commands the Gates and Percullices to be broken down.

for the drawing of some men together before White-Hall, to be ready to March; And that a Letter should be sent to the House in the Morning signed by the General and a Select number of Military Officers, to complain of many Irregularities committed by them: Amongst others,

The Substance of his Letter to the House.

That they gave too much Countenance to Lambert, Vane, and several that Ingaged with the late Committee of Safety; And that they had permitted Ludlow, and some others, to sit in their House, that had been by Sir Charles Coot, and some of the Irish Officers, accused of High-Treason; and had Countenanced too much a late Petition, to exclude the most sober and Conscientious, both Ministers and others, by Oaths, from all Imployment and Maintenance: And in conclusion, to request, That by Friday next they should Issue out Writs to fill up their House; and when filled, should rise at their appointed time, to give place to a Full and Free-Parliament.

The General having agreed to these Heads, retired to his repose, whilest the rest penn'd the Letter, which he directed to be drawn in his Name, and in the name of the rest of the Officers of the Army. The next day the Officers who had been sent for to meet at White-Hall, repairing thither early in the Morning, the Letter was produced, and read to them, (the General being present) and by all of them approved of; whereupon the General Signed it, and with him several Colonels; (viz.) Saunders, Read, Lydcott, Knight, Cloberry, Redman and Hubblethorn, one Lieutenant Colonel, which was Ethelbert Morgan, who Commanded the General's own Regiment of Foot, and six Majors, Johnson, Barton, Smith, Bannister, Pryme, and Nicholas; Cloberry and Lydcott were sent with the Letter to the House, and Clarges at the same time was sent to my Lord Mayor, to acquaint him with the General's Intentions to come and Quarter his Army that Night in the City, and to dispose him and the City to give him a favourable Reception.

The Letter being signed by the General, and several Officers, is sent by Cloberry, and Lydcott.

The General having sent Clarges before to the Lord Mayor, marches to Finsberry.

These things thus ordered, the General immediately marched away to Finsbury, where he drew up his Souldiers, till he should hear from Clarges how the City would receive him: Who finding my Lord Mayor very reserved, and averse to the General's coming, as terrified with his Actions the day before, had applied himself to Alderman Robinson and some others that he durst trust, and acquainted them privately, that the General's coming was for good to the City and Kingdom; but did not instance in the Particulars of what was in agitation, having had Orders to conceal that, till it was known how they at Westminster should receive the Letter: Nevertheless, Robinson sends for two or three Aldermen of his Confidents, and with these they go to the Lord Mayor to mollifie him, but without any effect for the present: Nevertheless, Clarges told him, the General was resolved, though he Quartered not in the City, at least to be his Guest at Dinner: And accordingly he sent to the General, to desire him to march with all his Men to Leaden-Hall-Street, to the Lord Mayor's Door, which he immediately did. While matters were thus carried on in the City, the House was in great Disorder at the reading of the General's Letter; but they temporized so far, as to shew no publick distaste at it; but Ordered, Clarges finding my Lord Mayor distrustful, applies himself to Alderman Robinson.

That the Thanks of the House should be given to the General for his Faithful Service in securing of the City; and that, as to filling up the House, the Parliament were upon Qualifications before the Receipt of his Letter, and the same should be dispatched in due time; and that Mr. Scot, and Mr. Robinson should attend them with their Votes, in Answer to his Letter.

The House dissemble their Resentment of the General's Letter, and give him good words.

As soon as the General came to the Lord Mayor, he told him, He was very welcome to his House, but that the City was full of Fears and sad Apprehensions of his sudden Return, after such violent Actions as the day before his Souldiers had been imployed in. The General told him, He hoped to make them of another mind in few hours. Yet was he inwardly somewhat troubled, not knowing what hindrance this Coldness he found might give to his Designs; insomuch, that he called Clarges aside, and checkt him, as one who had over-hastily pressed him on upon so little time of consideration, to so great an Enterprize. To which he answered, That he was now too far advanced to go back; and that the best Advice he could give him was, to desire the Lord Mayor presently to appoint the Aldermen and Common-Council to meet him at four a Clock at Guild-Hall, and there to acquaint them with his real Intentions, to comply with the Desires of the whole Kingdom.

The General troubled at the Lord Mayor's Diffidence of him.

This Motion pleasing, and the said Request being accordingly made to the Lord Mayor, Orders were immediately sent out: but in the mean time, Scot and Robinson came to him from them at Westminster, with the before mentioned Answer to the Letter.

Requests the same of a Common Council.

Scot made Protestations of the Parliaments Affection to him, and their high Opinion of his Services, thereby to divert him from his Intentions of staying in the City: but Colonel Bridges, † an Officer of Ireland, that stood by, told them, The General had no reason to credit their fair Speeches, since their words and their practices agreed not together, as was manifest in their Contempt of those his Friends in Ireland, who for his sake hazarded themselves in their Service; And now when he came from the Irish Army to Impeach Ludlow and Jones of High-Treason, he could have no Justice, but was put off from day to day, when Praise-God Barebone could be heard, and admitted with a Seditious Petition the first moment he came to the Door of the House. And Cloberry told them, The General and all his Officers could not but perceive that they grew Jealous of them, and that they went about to Balance them with such as had been their Enemies, which made it high time for them to consult for their own Safeties.

Scot and Robinson sent from the House to the General, with their Answer to his Letter.

† Bridges and Cloberry sharply upbraid them.

The General closed all with Moderation, telling them, All would be well, if they strictly observed the Advice of the Letter, and issued out Writs on Friday next for filling up their House.

With

An Act for constituting five Commissioners for the Government of the Army.

With this Answer they returned to their Fellow Members, not very well satisfied, as was evident by what they did that very Afternoon in the House; for they passed an Act to divide the Government of the Army among five Commissioners; Namely, General Monk, Sir Arthur Hasterig, the Colonels, Morley, Walton, and Allured, and made the Quorum of them to be three.

This was opposed by many of the General's Friends, but they were not enough to hinder its Progress; at last, for an Expedient, it was moved, That General Monk should always be one of three for Quorum: But, upon putting the Question, 'twas carried in the Negative. When word was brought him of this their Ingratitude to him, he could not avoid expressing much Indignation at it.

The Lord Mayor and Common-Council, being met at Guild-Hall about Five of the Clock, the General told them,

The General excuseth his late Proceeding in the City, before the Common-Council.

That the Employment whereon he was sent, at his last being in the City, was the most ingrateful to him that ever he undertook, and so much against his Inclination, that if any thing less than quitting his Command, could have prevented it, he had never accepted such Employment; nor did he value his Commission, out of any respect to himself, for he had often desired to lay it down; but as knowing how much it imported both him and them, to keep it out of the Hands of such as most probably would not be so well inclined as He, to the Settlement of these Nations; That what he had now to tell them, was, That he had that Morning sent to the Parliament, to issue out Writs within seven days, for the filling up of their House; and when filled, to sit no longer than till the Sixth of May, to give them Place to a full and a free Parliament.

The City joyfully receives the News of a Free-Parliament.

The News of this was quickly dispers'd through all the City, and received with great Demonstrations of Joy, expressed in Bone-fires, and Ringing of Bells.

After this, he retired for some time to a house in Cheap-side, to give order for the Quartering of his Souldiers, and went himself to Lodge at the Glass-house in Broad-street, till Drapers-Hall could be accommodated for his Reception.

The Monday after his stay in the City, the Council of State writ to him, To desire his Presence with them, to assist with his Counsels, in the carrying on the great Affairs of the Nation.

To which he the next day returned Answer.

The General's Answer to the Council of State, inviting him to come and sit with them.

That till the Oath should be taken away, which put a bar to him, and many others, from acting as Counsellors, his Presence could not be useful to them there. And withal, he informed them, That the Distractions of the City were increased by the continuance of Arms in the Hands of the Phanaticks, and Persons disaffected to the Parliament, who had 7000 lately out of the Stores delivered to them, and were providing more: Wherefore he desired them immediately to recal these Arms; and withal, to excuse his stay in the City for some longer time, till the minds of the Citizens were composed.

The Mayor and Aldermen of the City, and the Chief of the Officers (hearing how earnest the Parliament was to draw him again to White-Hall) importuned his Continuance in the City; and to induce him to it, they assure him, it cannot be safe for him, or them, that he remove; for that they had certain Information, That many private Letters were sent from Hasterig and others, to withdraw the Affections of the Souldiery from him, and that certain Men were imployed to several Regiments to debauch them. This Information had been enough to induce the General, had he not been resolved before: So that when Colonel Allured came from the Council of State, to perswade him against staying in the City, he acquainted him with what he heard. Allured laboured to infuse a Belief in him, of his having been misinformed of those things. It was answered by the General, That he put no greater stress on those Reports, than to be vigilant over the Actions and Motions of the several Parties, deferring the belief of them, till time should evince the truth. But he assured him, He was advertized from Persons of good Fame, That notwithstanding that Lambert was proscribed, and Vane put out of this Parliament, and ordered to leave the Town; yet the stay of the latter was connived at, and Sir Arthur Haslerig, and several other, corresponded with them both.

The City, and Chief Officers of his Army, dissuade him from hearkning to the Parliaments Invitations, to return back to White-Hall.

Col. Allured solicits his return in vain.

Sir Arthur Haslerig writ many Expostulatory Letters, to free himself of these Imputations, but could not sufficiently clear himself of them. And now by more frequent Addresses than ever, the General is from all Counties solicited to the Admission of the Secluded Members, which he only delayed, because the Army was not yet in a Temper for it; but to prepare them he received Visits from some of the Secluded Members, where they were always admitted, to hear by their Discourses, how well they were inclined to the Settlement of the Peace of the Nations. In this Method he so far proceeded, as on the 18*th* of February, to have a Conference before him, of some of the Secluded Members, and some of the others. Those of the Sitting Members were, St. John, Haslerig, Morley, Thomson, Ashley-Cooper, Weaver, White, Fielder, Hutchinson, and Rawleigh; but Scot and Reynolds also were intended by the General to be there, but for want of some Notice they came not. The Secluded Members that met them, were, Sir William Lewis, Sir John Evelin, Sir John Holland, Sir Gilbert Gerard, Colonel Popham, Mr. Annesly, Mr. Knightly, Mr. Crew, Mr. Trevor, Colonel Harley, Colonel Norton, Sir John Temple, and Colonel Birch. They discoursed of many things, in order to a mutual Accord, for the Peace and Welfare of the Nations, but came to no Conclusion; because the Sitting Members durst not undertake for the rest of the House, without their consent, which could not be known but by Vote: Yet severally all of them who were then present, seem'd well satisfied with that Moderation and Temper, which they found in those Gentlemen with whom they conferred.

The General is importuned from all Parts to admit the Secluded Members.

He admits of a Conference before him of the Sitting Members, with some of the Secluded.

The General was fully bent to promote their Admission so far, that if it could not be done by by Common Consent, he Resolved to admit them without it.

The Officers of the Army consent to the admission of the Secluded, upon certain conditions.

The Officers of the Army were consulted with, and they were willing enough to have them sit, on condition they would promise to Declare for a Common-Wealth Government, and pass an Act for the Confirmation of the Possession of their Lands, disposed of since their Seclusion, and to agree upon a short time for their Dissolution. Wherefore, to try how far they were inclined, to admit of those Conditions, † Mr. Clarges, Colonel Cloberry, and Dr. Gumble, were appinted to Treat with some of them, who, when they met, had many Discourses of the whole Matter.

† Mr. Clarges and others, appointed to Treat with some of the Secluded concerning the safe Conditions.

The Secluded Members Declared, as to Government, they intended no alteration in it, or to Act further than in preparation for a Parliament, to succeed them; and since there was no other way for their Summons, but by Writs, in the Name of the Keepers of the Liberty of England, by Authority of Parliament, they saw not how there could be by that Constitution any other Government introduced: As to Confirmation of Sales, and Dispositions of Lands, they said, they had been all made since the Seclusion, and they would not alter them, but rather mediate with the next Parliament, to pass an Act for their Confirmation; and for the time of their Sitting, they were contented it should determine in a Months time. Cloberry urged the great Insecurity the Army and many of their Friends would be in, if their Publick Lands were not confirmed, which was the price of their Blood; and though their not disturbing such Possessions in England, might be a little Satisfaction, yet the whole Nation of Ireland was unsettled, both as to Adventurers and Souldiers. To this it was Replyed, That they should not think themselves in a Capacity to pass any Acts at all, as being but one House; and to prevent all Jealousie of their Actions, they would consent to be Limited to the Chief Heads of what they should consult, during the short time of their Continuance.

The Consultations upon what the Members had delivered of their Intentions.

When the Conference ended, Report was made of the Substance of it to the General, and the rest of the Chief Officers, who approved of every thing proposed by the Secluded Members, except the not Confirmation of Publick Dispositions of Lands, and their refusing to pass any Acts of Parliament: As to that of Lands, which they would not be drawn to confirm, Clarges told the Officers, They could not Answer it to the Kingdom, to break with them for that Consideration, thereby to obstruct the Settlement of it, out of respect to their own private Interests; he said, The greatest part of his own Estate was in Ireland, and that it was acknowledged by all, the greatest Insecurity of Publick Estates was in that Kingdom: yet he would, for his own part submit all his Concerns to the Determination of the next Parliament; rather than by opposing the Admission of these Gentlemen, contribute to the hazard of the Publick Peace. And as to that of Publick Acts, he told them, He doubted not, but they would alter their Opinions, because no Money could be raised, to supply the Necessities of the Government; nor could their own Dissolution be but by an Act.

The General, upon hearing this, seemed very much satisfied, upon which all the rest assented. And it was agreed, That the Secluded Members that were in Town, should, before their Admission, sign a Paper, to consent to confine their Consultations, chiefly to the Four Heads following;

The General and the Officers agree upon admitting the Secluded Members.

1. To the settling the Conduct of the Armies, in the Three Nations, as might be most serviceable to the Peace of the Nations.

2. For the providing Maintenance for the Forces by Sea and Land, and Money for their Arrears, and the Contingencies of Government.

3. To the appointing a Council of State to settle the Civil Government and Judicatures in Scotland and Ireland, and to take care for the Issuing of Writs for the Summoning of a Parliament to meet at Westminster the 20th of April.

4. To their own Legal Dissolution.

The Chief Heads recommended to their Consultations.

This Subscription was willingly made, and on Tuesday following in the Morning the General gave them a meeting at White-Hall; Whence, after a short Speech to recommend to them the Settlement of the Nations, with assurance, That he would impose nothing on them, they went to take their Places in the Parliament: being conducted thither by Captain Miller who Commanded the Guards.

The General meets them at White-Hall, in order to their Admission into the House.

As soon as the Members were gone, the General Summoned all the Officers of the Army together that were then in and about London, to consider of a Letter to be sent to all the Regiments in England, Scotland and Ireland, to have their Concurrence to what had been done concerning the Admission of the Secluded Members; which was referred to a Committee to be drawn up, with special Directions to satisfie them, That nothing was intended for alteration of Government, but that it should continue as a Free-State and Common-Wealth: This he did, in regard he knew it impossible, as affairs stood, to keep the Army in Temper any other way. The Letter was in a little time prepared, and so many Clerks were imployed, that Copies of it were that Night Signed and dispersed to all the Regiments and Garrisons in England, and to the Commanders in Chief of the Armies in England, Scotland, and Ireland. It was penn'd in these Words;

Dear Brethren and Fellow-Souldiers.

The General's Letter to all the Regiments, to acquaint them with what he had done after

YOU cannot be Ignorant of the many Endeavours, and earnest Desires of many good Men in these Nations to bring us to a Settlement; which it hath pleased God to disappoint unto this Day, and leave us as a broken and divided People, ready to run into Blood and Confusion: Which that We might prevent so great Calamities impending after our earneſt ſeeking to God for his Direction and Aſſiſtance, We find no Expedient ſo likely for the ſatisfaction of the Good People, and the Quiet and Welfare of this Common-Wealth, as the re-admiſſion of the Secluded Members, in order to a Legal Diſſolution of the Parliament by their own free Conſent, and to Iſſue Writs for a future full Repreſentative of the whole Common-Wealth of England, Scotland and Ireland, under ſuch Qualifications as may ſecure our Cauſe, to Convene on the twentieth day of April next at Weſtminſter, for the eſtabliſhing of this Common-Wealth upon the Foundation of Juſtice and true Freedom. And to take away all juſt Jealouſies from you, We do aſſure you, That we ſhall joyn with you in the maintenance of thoſe Ends, and do expect your Cheerful Concurrence with Us; having no intentions or purpoſes to return to our old Bondage; But ſince the Providence of God hath made us free at the Coſt of ſo much Blood, we hope we ſhall never be found ſo unfaithful to God and his People, as to loſe ſo glorious a Cauſe; but We do reſolve with the Aſſiſtance of God, to adhere to you in the continuing of our dear purchaſed Liberties, both Spiritual and Civil. The reaſon of our proceeding in this manner may ſeem ſtrange, but if you duly conſider the neceſſities of our Affairs and the preſent ſtate of things, you will certainly conclude nothing ſo ſafe to ſecure Publick Intereſt, and to engage the Nations peaceably to ſubmit to a Free State; moſt of the ſaid Members having given us full aſſurance, that their Seſſion in Parliament ſhall be no longer than abſolute neceſſity will require, to the putting the Government into Succeſſive Parliaments, they not being free ſo to Act by the old Writs as when they ſhall be called upon a Common-Wealth accompt: And it is the Opinion of the trueſt Friends to a Free-State, That it cannot be conſiſtent with the perpetual Sitting of thoſe Members, being contrary to the nature of ſuch a Government.

And as We are confident the preſent Parliament now Sitting, will not Repeal any of the Acts, Ordinances, or Orders of this preſent Parliament, for Sales, or publick Diſpoſitions of Lands; ſo We ſhall in our Station obſerve, and cauſe to be obſerved all other Acts and Ordinances of this Parliament, whatſoever, and humbly interpoſe with the next ſucceeding Parliament, not only to paſs a further ACT of Confirmation of all ſuch Sales and Diſpoſitions of Lands, here and in Scotland; but alſo of the Diſtributions and Diſpoſitions of Lands and Houſes in Ireland to the Souldiery, Adventurers, or any other Perſons, made by or in purſuance of any of the Acts, Ordinances, or Orders of this preſent Parliament, or any pretended Parliamentary Authority. And we intreat you to ſend up an Officer to give to the Lord General Monk an accompt of your Acquieſcence with Us herein.

And if any diſaffected perſons ſhall take occaſion to make diſturbance of the Peace of the Common-Wealth, either in favour of Charles Stuart, or any other pretended Authority, We deſire you to ſecure them till the pleaſure of the Parliament or Council of State be known in that behalf. You ſhall ſpeedily receive Encouragement and Supplies of Money; and indeed it was not the leaſt Motive to induce Us to this way of Compoſure of Affairs, that we might facilitate the raiſing of Monies for the ſubſiſtence of the Army and Navy; which would not otherwiſe have been done (if at all) but with effuſion of Blood. We have nothing more at this time, but to aſſure you we ſhall ever remain.

These Transactions were managed with so much Secrecy, that the Members that were sitting in the House knew nothing of them, till they saw the Secluded Members come in and sit amongst them. Upon which they being surprised, were at first at a demur among themselves, whether they should keep their Seats, or quit the House; till at length the grand Sticklers of them for a Common-wealth, well knowing that it would not be in their power by staying, to make their Interest good against those who were now the major Party of the House, resolved, since they could not hinder them the partial possession thereof, to resign it intire unto them, while those of them that were the most moderate and well inclined staid behind, and took their Seats amongst the knew admitted Members: Who in the first place applied themselves to vindicate the Honour of their House, as far as in them lay, by nullifying and expunging out of the Journals all Votes whereby they were disabled from sitting as Members therein. Next, They order Mr. Vincent and Mr. Bromfield, and the rest of those Citizens which were committed by the Council of States Orders, when the City Gates were broken, to be released; as also all others who were any where Imprisoned upon Sir George Booth's Rising, or for making Addresses for the Admission of the Secluded Members: Moreover they Constituted General Monk by ACT of Parliament, Captain General of all the Armies of England, Scotland and Ireland, and repealed that ACT which made him only a Joynt-Commissioner with Colonel Morley, Haslerig, Walton, and Allured, for Government of the Army.

Upon the Admission of the Secluded Members, divers of the rest quit the House.

Some there were of these restored Members, who at the first admission, could not well be present, by reason of their far distant Habitations; of which number was Mr. William Morrice, whom Mr. Nicholas Monk, the General's Brother, knowing him to be a Prudent Person, and well disposed for his Prince's Service, and the good of his Country, writ to Clarges to put the General in mind of sending for him, that being near him, he might be assistant to him in his Counsels: To this the General was easily perswaded, having had long before by his Brothers report of him, a good Opinion of his Abilities and Worth; and the rather, for that by his Wife he was somewhat allied to him. Clarges acquainted Mr. Nicholas Monk with what he had done, and inclosed a Letter from the General to Mr. Morrice, to acquaint him with his admission of the Secluded Member, and to desire him to repair to the Parliament: Where he arrived whilest they were Sitting and took his place in the House; wherein he appeared a most useful Instrument by his great Abilities, in Promoting and carrying on of the General's Affairs in relation to his Majesties Interest.

The Parliament repealed the ACT for the former Council of State, and the Oath of Abjuration, and passed an ACT for another Council to consist of one and Thirty Persons: Which were,

A new Council of State chosen.

Most of them Men of Integrity, and well affected to Kingly Government.

The General hearing that Colonel Rich was about St. Edmunds-Bury, and having actually debauch'd two Troops, was endeavouring to corrupt the rest of his Regiment, he sent the Life-Guard to reduce them, and gave a Commission to Colonel Ingoldsby to Command the Regiment.

The Life-Guard had been lately in defection with the rest of the Troops under Lambert, and had not been mustered since the Restauration of the Parliament, nor had hitherto any Commander in Chief. And therefore the General thought fit at this time to model that Troop, and to give the Command thereof to Captain Philip Howard, making Mr. Robert Harley his Lieutenant, and his Kinsman Mr. Henry Monk, Cornet; who were so Active, that in six hours time they displaced all of whom they had any suspition, and filled up the Troop with honest and gallant men; who immediately Marched towards Suffolk, to execute the General's Orders upon Colonel Rich; but he having Notice of the Marching of that Party towards him, retired privately, and the the Regiment quietly received Col. Ingolsby to Command them, who by the Generals appointment put out all such Officers as were of froward and seditious Principles in Religion or Government.

The General takes care for the setling of North-Wales.

And to reduce North Wales to a more settled condition, than it was in at that present; the General gave Colonel Carter a Commission to be Governour of Beau-morris Castle, (the Souldiers whereof had been placed there by Colonel John Jones) with Authority to raise Forces to reduce Denbigh and Conway, which had been in very ill hands, and to settle that Country in quiet: which he did in a very short time, to the great satisfaction of all the Gentry and people in those parts.

The late Common-wealth-Parliament before the admission of the Secluded Members, had given Desborow's Regiment to Colonel Walton; but the General disposed of it to Colonel Charles Howard of Naworth, whom he also made Governour of Carlisle.

The Parliament levy a new Tax, and proceed to the settlement of the Militia.

The Parliament passed an Act of Assessment for a Hundred Thousand Pounds a Month for Six Months, and proceeded with much hast to settle the Militia both in the City and all other parts of England and Wales, having vacated the former ACT made before their admission, because most of the Commissioners and Officers all over England, were of Persons of suspected Inclinations to the Government.

There being at this time an unusual Confluence of Officers of the Army in London, and some Troops and Companies drawing together in several Parts of the Kingdom; the Parliament by Proclamation Commanded all Officers to repair to their respective Charges, and not to depart from thence without special Order from the Lord General: And that all such Troops and Companies as had removed from their Quarters without the Lord General's Licence, should return forthwith to their Last Quarters formerly Assigned, or to such others as should be Assigned them by directions from the Lord General.

They Command all Officers and Souldiers to repair to their several Commands and Quarters.

But notwithstanding all this Care in the Parliament, Colonel Overton was designing to make Disturbances in York-shire; He drew up a Letter to Colonel Fairfax, Colonel Bethel, and Colonel Smithson, which he caused to be Subscribed by all his Officers; And therein signified to them;

A Letter of Col. Overton and the Officers with him, to some of General Fairfax's Officers.

That having received intimation from private hands, That the abandoned Interest of Charles Stuart doth seem so to shine in the face of Publick Transactions, that many Jealousies and Dissatisfactions were created amongst their Brethren in the Army, who remained faithful to the true Cause they had contended for, insomuch, that (as it was represented to them) several Regiments had declared their disconcurrence with these present Distractions, and their Resolutions in adhering to the Cause God had determined with Victory against all Monarchical Interests, they could not but judge it incumbent upon them to wake in such a time, and to endeavour to be found in the discharge of that Duty which their Instruments commanded from them; wherein as on the one hand they were unwilling to appear precipitate in their proceedings, so on the other they were afraid to fall short of a timely interposing of their Assistance against that old Bondage which was likely to break in anew upon them: And therefore they thought fit to expedite that Intimation unto them, and desire to understand as well what was their sense, as what was signified or imparted to them: That as they were equally engaged and concerned in one Publick Cause, so they might (if occasion required) be as conjunctively abetting and assisting to the defence of it; which through the Assistance of God they were resolved to assert and maintain (as the fruits of their Blood, the Nations Treasure, and the Prayers of the People of God) against any design whatsoever which threatned the ruine of their Civil and Religious Rights.

The General sends Col. Overton to the Officers with him, to some of General Fairfax's Officers.

Many Copies of this Letter were dispersed amongst the Souldiers before the Original was sent, and an Attestation added in these words, This is Overton's and the Officers of the Garrison of Hulls Letter: And it is hoped, will meet with the Concurrence of all our honest Fellow Souldiers, who have been engaged in the Good old Cause against the Interest of a King and Single Person.

If Colonel Fairfax, Smithson, and Bethel had not been very Active, this practice had perverted many Souldiers, but they were vigilant to prevent it. Upon knowledge of this Letter, the General writ to Overton by Colonel Allured and Major Smith, to give him Satisfaction in his proceedings here; and the Council of State, upon his Motion did the like. Major Smith was well known and beloved in Hull, and, the General having a Design to Remove Overton, he was privately to deal with some Officers and Souldiers under him who loved him not, to bring him to Reason, if upon Orders for his Remove, he should be disobedient to them; And as soon as they were gone, he sent private Orders to Colonel Fairfax (to whom he gave a Commission to be Governour of Hull) to draw some Companies to Beverly, and Writ to Overton to repair immediately to him; his Letter was sent to Colonel Fairfax open, that he might see the Import of it. The Letter was in the following Words.

SIR,

The Generals Letter to Colonel Overton.

'I Have seen a Letter from you and some o'thers at Hull, dated from that Garrison
'on the twenty eight of February last, and di'rected to Colonel Fairfax, Colonel Bethel, and
'Colonel Smithson; wherein you complain of 'the present Transactions of the Publick Affairs,
'as if they tended to the bringing in of the King,
'and a Monarchical Bondage, which (you write)
'seems very likely to break in a new upon us,
'and threatens the ruine of our Civil and Re-
'ligious Rights: All which, you say, is derived
'to you from private hands, which do not only
'insinuate their private Jealousies, but inform 'you that several Regiments have declared their
'disconcurrence with the present Transactions.
'I must confess, I am a little suprized at this 'your Letter, and manner of Proceedings, ha-
'ving so lately sent to you from my Self, and the 'greatest part of the Officers of the Army, a
'full Accompt of the Necessities that induced
'us, to consent to the Return of the Secluded
'Members to the exercise of their Trust; and
'our Resolutions to that Cause we have so
'long contended for, and to the Parliament in
'the prosecution of it: And (notwithstanding
'the Information you pretend to have receiv-
'ed, I cannot in my own observation discern
'any Grounds for such Aprehensions of Affairs
'here as you seem to entertain: nor has there
'appeared a discontent in any one Regiment
'of the Army, except part of Colonel Rich's
'Regiment, which is since reduced: wherefore
'(although you pretend not to be too precipi-
'tate in your proceedings) your dispersing Co-
'pies of your Letter before you sent it, may 'reasonably make me judge otherwise: And
'if you prosecute the matter further, I cannot
'but interpret your Action as tending to divide
'the Army, by withdrawing their Obedience
'from the Parliament, and consequently to in'volve the Nations in a new and Bloody War.
'So that to avoid all occasions of this nature,
'I desire that within twenty four hours after
'this Letter comes to your hands, you set for'ward from Hull towards London, to give me
'an accompt of the present posture of that
'Garrison; And that within six hours after
'this comes to you, you signifie to Colonel
'Fairfax, and Colonel Bethel, your Compliance
'herein, and the Day wherein you intend to 'begin your Journey, and be with me here,
'where I shall expect you within a Week af'ter your departure from Hull. I have writ-
'ten to Colonel Fairfax more particularly con'cerning the Peace and Safety of the Northern 'parts, and of the Garrison of Hull; and if he
'communicates any orders from me to you, I
'expect your obedience to them:

Yours,

GEORGE MONK.

Colonel Overton was surprized at the receipt of this Letter; but finding himself in no capacity to dispute the Order for his delivery up of Hull, he submitted to it; and sent to Colonel Fairfax to acquaint him with that his resolution; and himself at a Eleven a Clock the same Night, began his Journey towards London to the General. The Colonel submits to the Generals Orders.

The General about the same time gave his Commission to Mr. Clarges to be Commissary-General of the Musters of England, Scotland, and Ireland; and to Mr. Morrice, to be Governour of Plymouth; and to Major-General Morgan, to be Commander in Chief of the Army in Scotland.

Morgan was already upon the place, but wanted sufficient Authority, till he had his Commission sent to him; and all the Army there submitted to the General's Actions in reference to the Secluded Members, except a Company in Garrison in the Isle of Orkney, commanded by one Watson, which was reduced by Captain Man, and Watson, and his Officers imprisoned, and his Company disbanded. The Army in Scotland well satisfied with the General's Actions.

Many private Overtures were made to the General by some of the Peers that sate in the Lords House a little before the death of the late King, to be admitted to Sit; but he thought it inconvenient and hazardous, in regard the Army was already so Jealous upon the Sitting of the Secluded Members, that he had difficulty enough to moderate them. Yet at the Request of the Earl of he sent Commissary-General Clarges to confer with him.

A Conference between Commissary Clarges and a Peer of the Land, about the Sitting of the Lords House.

The Earl told him, 'The Sitting of the Lords
'would be very advantagious to the good of the 'Kingdom, and to the Souldiers in particular;
'for that they would joyn in an ACT for the 'Confirmation of their Estates: And if it should 'be thought convenient for the good of the 'Kingdom to receive the King, he could not
'upon any Conditions with so much safety be 'restored, as such as should be made by Act of 'Parliament.

To this Clarges replied, 'That the General
'was very well satisfied, that the Parliament
'was Dissolved by the Death of the late King,
'and that the present Sitting of the Members,
'was a Constitution rather taken up upon Ne'cessity, than Right, which was but to make 'way for another Parliament; That one great
'Argument for the Admission of the Secluded
'Members; was their Consent to a quick Disso'lution; which could not be, if the Lords should 'Sit: For they would then think themselves in'vested in that perpetuity which some fancy is
'of right in this Parliament still. But that which 'was most convincing, was, That the Army was 'not yet in temper for it.

Every

Every Poſt brought the General Addreſſes from all the Regiments in England, of their conſent to his Actings: And Sir Charles Coot in Ireland had with many other Officers, upon the ſame day that the Secluded Members were admitted, declared at Dublin for them, and had ſecured Sir Hardreſs Waller, that had diſſented from him.

An Act propoſed for the ſetling of Hampton-Court upon the General.

Thoſe of the former Members who ſtaid in the Houſe after the admiſſion of the Secluded Members, that they might ingage the General againſt the King, promoted an ACT for the ſetling of Hampton-Court, with all the Parks and ſome other Lands upon him and his Heirs for ever; which ſo troubled him, that he uſed all the Friends he had to divert it; and at laſt an Expedient was found out by giving him by Act of Parliament, a Preſent of twenty thouſand pounds in Money, and the Cuſtody or Stewardſhip of that Houſe, and the Parks for his Life: They alſo conferred upon Commiſſary Clarges the Hamper-Office; and about the thirteenth of March they Ordered, that the Engagement, appointed to be taken by each Member of Parliament in theſe words, (viz.) I do declare and promiſe, that I will be true and faithful to the Common-wealth of England, as the ſame is now eſtabliſhed without King or Houſe of Lords, ſhould be taken off the File, and made null.

The Engagement abrogated.

Scot, Haſterig, and ſome others, (whoſe names we ſhall forbear to mention, becauſe they are yet living, and have repented of the raſhneſs of their former proceedings) were much alarm'd at this proceeding, which they took to be an inevitable Prognoſtick of introducing the King; and though they ſo much affected Power, as to endure no Rivals in it, they choſe rather to have the General take the Dominion of the Three Kingdoms upon himſelf, than to have the King reſtored. They conſulted privately with ſome of the Officers of the Army, whom they truſted moſt, and theſe approved ſo well of the Expedient, that the General was Treated with about it in White-Hall, where Haſterig told him, 'That 'many of his Friends were much troubled at the 'Parliaments Actions, which tended both to the 'ruine of him, and all the good people of the 'Nation, ſince it was evident, that by what they 'had Voted the day before, nothing was intend-'ed but the Reſtitution of the King. His over-'throw, they ſaid, muſt needs ſucceed the admi-'ſſion of the King; for a Merit too great to be 'rewarded, could have no recompence but 'death; whereof frequent Examples are to be 'found in all Hiſtory, and in none more preg-'nant than our own; where it is recorded, That 'the ſame Stanley who placed the Crown upon 'Henry the Sevenths Head, had his own ſtruck 'off, upon a very frivolous pretence, when the 'reaſon was only exceſs of Merit. They told him likewiſe, They found a Common-wealth-Govern-'ment not agreeable with the diſpoſition of the 'People who are always bad Judges of what is 'beſt for themſelves; and therefore ſince a Single 'Perſon was neceſſary, there could not be one 'fitter than he for that Office. To which they 'had very good grounds to believe all the good 'People of the Nation would concur with them.

The Common-wealth Faction deſire the General rather to take the Government upon himſelf than to bring in the King. They Treat with him about it.

The General told them, 'He himſelf was not 'well pleaſed at the late unneceſſary Vote of Par-'liament concerning the Engagement, but many 'of the moſt diſcreet Members had been with 'him, and ſatisfied him, that had no deſign in 'it, but to keep themſelves free againſt the next 'Parliament; for in regard (they ſaid) that he 'had conſented that the final determination of 'Government ſhould be referred to that, they 'were unwilling to anticipate their Counſels by 'determining of it by that Engagement, which 'would be too great a Snare unto them: Still 'urging, 'That they knew not any cauſe he 'ſhould have of fear, for that the very Writ of 'Summons of the next Parliament, did ſuffici-'ently defend the Government, in reſtraining 'their Debates to it. As for the Government in 'his own Perſon, he ſaid, The experience of 'Cromwel's Fate gave him Reaſons to avoid the 'Rock on which that Family was ſplit.

They replyed, 'That Oliver Cromwel uſurped 'the Dominion againſt the ſuffrage of the Ar-'my, and the conſent of all the good people; 'whereas he ſhould have it by their unanimous 'conſent, and under what Name and Title he 'pleaſed to accept it.

The General refuſeth their Offer.

The General would by no means hear more of theſe temptations, reſolving not to loſe the Honour derived to him from as Ancient a ſtock of Gentry as any was in England, by ſo treacherous a Proſtitution of it.

A little before theſe Men went to the General, Commiſſary Clarges had been tampered with by them, to the ſame purpoſe; and obſerving them to go from him to his Lordſhip, he deliberated how to extricate from further Applications of this kind, and puniſh the Inſolency of theſe Undertakers.

Commiſſary Clarges gives intimation of theſe proceedings to the Council of State.

The Council of State Sitting at the time of this private Conference, and within two Chambers of the place where it was tranſacted, he ſent in to the Council to Sir Anthony Aſhley-Cooper, and informed him of what he knew, and what he further ſuſpected: Upon which it was agreed, That as ſoon as the General ſhould depart from them, and come into the Council, he ſhould move, That all Clerks and Attendants, that were not Counſellors, ſhould withdraw, and the Doors be locked, and then declare, That he had had Information of a dangerous Deſign in ſome ſeditious perſons, who were contriving to make diſturbances in the Nation, and that they had proceeded ſo far, as to make ſome indecent Overtures to him, of which he deſired that the Council might receive a full diſcovery, that thereupon they might apply themſelves to prevent the Conſequences of it.

The General in favour of thoſe Perſons mitigates the matter.

But the General being unwilling to expoſe thoſe men to ruine, though they deſerved not his favour) becauſe his purpoſes were deſigned to be effected by the moſt peaceable ways, told the Council, That there was not ſo much danger in agi-tation as they apprehended; but that it was true, ſome had been with him to be reſolved in ſcruples concerning the preſent Tranſactions in Parliament, but they went away from him well ſatisfied.

Thus

They yet attempted to make a Mutiny in the Army.

Thus the goodneſs of the General was abuſed, for theſe unreaſonable men, when they ſaw they could not allure him to their ends by the temptation of power, attempted to make a Mutiny in the Army; wherein they prevailed ſo far, as that the Officers had had one Meeting, and had appointed another. In their firſt they were ſo heated, that a Declaration was immediately prepared, and brought by ſome of them to the General, to oblige him with his Army to declare for a Common-wealth, and ingage againſt all them that ſhould attempt the ſetting up of a Single Perſon; and that he ſhould ſend to the Parliament to joyn with them in this Declaration.

A Declaration brought by the Officers to the General to ſign.

Commiſſary Clarges and Mr. Clark, the General's Secretary, were with him when this was brought to him, and obſerving great trouble in his Countenance at the reading of it, moved, That he would defer the ſigning or giving any opinion of it till the next Morning, becauſe then the Officers of the Army were to have a General Council. This was done, that the General might have time to provide himſelf of Arguments againſt it, and prepare ſome of his Friends to joyn with him: One of the chief Motives that induced him to make Mr. Morrice an Officer of the Army, was to have his aid in Conſultations at ſuch times as theſe: For there were frequent Meetings of Officers, and one of ſo good Judgment and Elocution, as he, could not but perſwade much: So that he had been the fitteſt Perſon that could been thought on, had not his being unuſed to ſuch Aſſemblies made him not care to be preſent at them.

Okey's Speech at the Council of Officers.

The next Morning a great concourſe of Officers met at S. James's, and Colonel Okey opened the Council, with a long Speech, of the fears they were in of an Inundation of Evils breaking in upon them, to invade their Civil and Religious Liberties; and if great care was not uſed to prevent it, Charles Stuart would be introduced: And that the beſt Expedient that could be thought of, was to ſend immediately to the Parliament, to oblige them to declare and ingage for a Free State and Common-wealth, without a King or Houſe of Lords: And if they refuſed to do it, to take ſuch a Remedy as God ſhould put into their hearts to ſave the Nation from deſtruction.

Commiſſary Clarges his Anſwer.

Commiſſary Clarges anſwered, That he ſaw no cauſe for thoſe fears that were inſinuated; and that if they ſent to the Parliament in ſuch a manner, they would find no pleaſing return from them; for if theſe Men would have been terrified by the Army, there would not have been fourteen of them Impeached at one time of Treaſon, and two hundred ſecluded at another; and they firſt thing the would probably do, upon the receipt of ſuch a Meſſage, would be to diſſolve themſelves, and then there would be no Government; but inſtead of the Single Perſon they were ſo much afraid of, they muſt neceſſarily have recourſe to Richard Cromwel, and expoſe themſelves to his Revenge, for the Indignities they had lately with ſo much ſcorn put upon him and his Family.

And as for the General (applying himſelf to him) he ſaid, He knew he would not aſſume the Government, having heard him profeſs, (on occaſion of theſe Alterations) he would rather be drawn in pieces with wild horſes, than be ſo treacherous to the Nation.

The General concluded, and told them, 'The 'time of this Parliaments ending was ſo near, 'they could not do the ills ſome of them (he 'hoped) cauſleſly feared. And that from the 'next Parliament he doubted not they would re- 'ceive better ſatisfaction than they had in this, 'ſince it was provided in the ACT for their 'Aſſembling, that none ſhould be Elected that 'had been againſt the Parliament ſince 1641. 'Withal, He confirmed what Comiſſary Clarges 'had ſaid, That if by this violent proceeding 'they ſhould make the Parliament haſtily diſ- 'ſolve themſelves, and leave the Nation in con- 'fuſion, they muſt not expect he would take 'upon him the Government, which he had ra- 'ther loſe his life than accept.

The General's determination of the Latter.

After this, there was little moved by any of the Officers; onely one ſaid, That nothing could be hoped from Qualifications for a new Parliament, for they themſelves being to be Judges of them, it might ſo happen, that the major part might be of ſuch as were not themſelves Qualified.

The General knew this to be an unanſwerable Argument, (and it was for this reaſon he preſſed for a new Parliament on any terms) but was unwilling to hear more diſcourſe of this kind, and therefore told them, Nothing was more injurious to Diſcipline, than their meeting in Military Councils to interpoſe in Civil things. And from that time he forbad them to aſſemble again; and within a few days after, that is to ſay, on the 17th of March, the Parliament by Act diſſolved it ſelf, having before ſummoned a Parliament to ſucceed them the twenty fifth day of April following; and paſſed two Votes to keep the Royal Party out of both Houſe and Army. The firſt concerning the Militia, where no perſons was to be admitted for a Commiſſioned Officer, without declaring in theſe words following. I do acknowledge and declare, that the War undertaken by both Houſes of Parliament in their defence, againſt the Forces raiſed in the name of the late King, was Juſt and Lawful; and that Magiſtracy, and Miniſtry, are the Ordinances of God. Secondly, Reſolved, that all and every Perſon who have adviſed, or voluntarily aided, abetted or aſſiſted in any War againſt the Parliament, (ſince the firſt day of January 1641.) his, or their Sons, unleſs he or they have ſince manifeſted their good affections to this Parliament, ſhall be uncapable to be elected to ſerve as Members of the next Parliament. The Royal Party, who had ſuffered ſo much in the Defence and Service of the Government, and who had behaved themſelves ſo Honourably in their endeavours of extinguiſhing all Animoſities, upon this hopeful change of Affairs; little, I ſay, did they expect to ſee themſelves turn'd out of Doors by ſuch a preclusion from Publick Office, or Imployment, upon the very Teſt of their Fidelity to their Sovereign. But Theſe Votes were little heeded by the Electors, the People having ſo great an eſteem for the Royal Party, that almoſt generally whereſoever they ſtood, they carried it; and kept their places too in the Houſe of Commons, notwithſtanding a contrivance there alſo, to have ejected them after they were met.

Mounſieur

The Conference between Monsieur de Bordeaux, and Commissary Clarges.

Mounsieur de Bordeaux the French Embassador then Resident in London, was very desirous to interess Cardinal Mazarini, in this great Revolution of Government, and having had acquaintance with Clarges, expected by him to discover all the Generals Designs, and in order thereunto, sent his Secretary to him, To desire him to move the General, to have Licence to give him a visit, and to confer about some overtures he had to make to him.

Clarges, upon this intimation, went to the Embassador, who carried him into his Closet, and they two being alone, he told him, 'That is was 'visible to all, that the General had some great 'Design in projection, and that most wise men 'believed it was, either to advance himself to the 'Monarchy of these Nations, or introduce the 'King; and that in either of these, he had the advantage of being more serviceable to him then 'any other; for if he should use any Englishman 'in so important an Intrigue, if he should not 'have success, that would be brought in evidence 'against him to his destruction: Whereas he as 'a stranger, and a publick Minister could not 'be questioned. He further said, What he propos'd, was not only in reverence to himself, but 'to Cardinal Mazarini, who would be glad to 'have the honour of his friendship, assist him 'faithfully in all his purposes. He said moreover, 'That he could not undertake to determine, 'Whether it was not best for him to dignifie his 'Family with the Empire of these Kingdoms, or 'to restore the King to them; They were both 'actions of much glory; and if the latter were as 'easie, the honour of it would be as great: But 'that he might be confident of the Cardinal he 'did assure him, that Oliver Cromwel kept so strict 'a League with him, that he did not assume the 'Government without his privity, and was directed step by step by him in the progress of that 'action: And therefore, if he resolved on that 'course, he should not only have the Cardinals 'friendship and counsel in the attempt, but a safe 'retreat and honourable support in France, if he 'failed in it. Or if he would admit the King, and 'put them anner of it into the Cardinals hands, 'whatever he would desire for himself of Security, or honour from the Crown, he would undertake to obtain, and in such a manner, that it 'should rather seem by the Cardinals advice, 'then his particular Inclinations; and the King 'would gladly receive it, and France should be 'the place to which (if he agreed) the King 'should presently retreat; where he should have 'a Train provided proportionable to his greatness, that his People here might, with greater 'Reverence, apply themselves to him; and by 'this way (he said) the General might not only 'oblige the King of England, but the King his 'Master also, by making him a Mediator and Instrument in his Restauration.

To this Clarges answered, That the matter 'was too deep for him to be involv'd in, in regard (as he himself had acknowledged) of the 'danger of having such a secret known to any 'second Person a Native of England.

'But nevertheless, to satisfie him, he assured 'him, That the General did not intend to take 'upon him the Government, but submit all to 'the determination of the next Parliament.

He then Replyed, 'That a Parliament in Eng- 1659.
'land was a kind of tumultuary Council, so vari-
'ous in their Debates, that no certain measure 'could be taken from them, & therefore for not 'taking this course which he advis'd, he might 'be hurried by their froward proceedings, to 'some sudden Enterprise, neither safe for himself, 'nor good for the people; & that with him, in a-'ny misfortune, all his Relations would be ruin'd.

To this Conference, Clarges put an end, by telling him, 'He would take a suddain occasion 'to sound the Generals Inclinations, and though 'he would not directly tell him what had pass'd 'betwixt them, he should nevertheless guess, 'whether it might be fit for him to impart it 'to him; the only difficulty that remain'd, was 'the Generals want of the French-Tongue; 'Which the Ambassador said, 'Was not neces-'sary, for, that he had English enough to be un-'derstood, and to understand all that should be 'said to him; and thus they parted.

The General refuseth to treat with the Embassador, or the Cardinal.

Clarges told all that pass'd to Mr. Morrice, and to the General himself, who absolutely refus'd to have any Commerce with the Ambassador or the Cardinal; nevertheless, that he might not appear uncivil, he was contented to receive his Visit, but on Condition, That he should not propose any thing to him in reference to the publick Affairs of Government.

This was signified to the Ambassador, and he came that Evening to complement the General, making great professions of his Services to him, on all occasions, without descending to particulars.

The manner of Sir John Greenvil's application to the General.

Much more successful was the Application made by Sir John Greenvil, who being an active Agent for the King, and a neer Kinsman to the General, was therefore by his Majesty thought a fit person to be imployed to him; but he knowing the wary temper of the General, was much troubled how to get access to him; till bethinking himself of Mr. Morrice, his Neighbour in the Countrey, a person often conversant with the General, he concluded by his mediation to do it, and thereupon requested him to let the General know he had something of great Importance to impart to him, and desired he would give him the opportunity to do it.

When Mr. Morrice inform'd the General of this, he receiv'd it with much strangeness; for althought Sir John was his near Relation, yet by reason of his youth, and the Generals long absence from his Countrey, they had little acquaintance with each other, and therefore he told Mr. Morrice, Except he would send him information by him, of the nature of his business, he could not admit of any intercourse with him.

Mr. Morrice told him, He had already desired to know that, but Greenvil refused it. The General in his mind, liked well of this reservedness in Sir John, and bid Mr. Morrice acquaint him, That if he came the next day at nine in the evening to St. James's, he would speak with him. And accordingly Greenvil came to him, at the appointed time, which was the next evening, after the dissolution of the Parliament.

His Reception.

When he came, after he had requested Pardon for the Importunity of his visit, he desired his permission to deliver a Message he had to him from 1659. from his Majesty. The General seem'd surpriz'd at this saying; but seeing that there was no body in the Room but Mr. Morrice, and he at a good distance from them, he bid him say what he pleas'd.

He delivers his Message.

He then presented to him a Letter from the King, and told him, 'That his Majesty had great 'Confidence in his affections to him, and since 'he had complyed so far with the desires of all 'the sober part of the Kingdom, for the admis-'sion of the Secluded Members, in order to a 'free Parliament; The consequences of that 'could not but give sufficient evidence of his In-'clinations to his Majesties Service and Restitu-'tion, which would naturally flow from his En-'deavours, in Conjunction with their Councels.

The General's Answer.

The General replyed, 'That he had long la-'mented the miserable distraction of his Native 'Countrey, and waited a fit occasion to contri-'bute his assistance to the Redemption of it. 'And when Lambert and those with him had in-'terrupted the Parliament; Considering that the 'Army had been newly in a great measure by 'that Parliament modell'd, he supposed by a De-'claration for their Restitution he might gain a 'Power in his hands for better purposes, and, as 'the better to bring these his purposes about, he 'resolv'd if by his Arms the Parliament should 'be restored, together, with those few Members 'which sate at their interruption, to admit those 'also who had been secluded; intending to that 'end, by degrees, to put his Army into such 'hands as would favour his intentions: That it 'was well known to all, How he was disappoin-'ted in that design, and through what difficul-'ties he arrived to the Station he was then in, 'nor was he even at that time secure from great 'danger of disappointment, if he should not man-'age his Affairs with more than ordinary secresie.

'As to the Kings Majesty (he said) None wish'd 'him greater felicity than he, nor desired his Re-'stauration with more passion; but if it were not 'cautiously attempted, it would be out of his 'Power to serve him in it, since in Counsels of so 'nice concernment, there would not be room for 'two Errors. The People he told him, had been 'long seduc'd by seditious insinuations, and the 'Army in the hands of such, as had always been 'against his Royal Father, and many of them e-'ven against Monarchy it self; but nevertheless, 'he hoped, if they might find the same security 'under his Majesties Government, as they had 'under the Usurpers of it, he might not despair 'of their reduction to obedience. And to effect 'this, it was his humble advice, that his Majesty 'should prevent their fears, by declaring a free 'and general Pardon to all his Subjects, and en-'gage himself to give it under the Great-Seal, to 'all that should submit to his Authority, except 'such as should be exempted by the Parliament.

'And that he would consent to any Act or Acts 'of Parliament, that should be presented to him 'for the settlement of publick Sales and Dispo-'sitions of Lands, to Officers, Souldiers, and o-'thers; and the payment of the Souldiers Ar-'rears; As also for toleration of Liberty of Con-'science to all his Subjects; And that none should 'be punished for differences in matters of Reli-'gion who should not disturb the publick Peace.

A farther discourse between them confirming the sincerity of the General's Intentions

Sir John asked him, 'What he would give 'him in Command for himself, and if he would 'write to his Majesty? Which he excused at 'that time, saying, 'If his Letter should be in-'tercepted before he had compleated the Refor-'ming the Armies, it would be impossible for 'him to keep them in temper, or hinder the 'subversion of all he had hitherto done; Adding, 'That he sought not his own advantage in his 'Endeavours for the publick benefit of his Coun-'try; and that having with much hazard, brought 'matters near to a fair issue, in pursuance of the 'general suffrage of the Nations, he was unwil-'ling, by indiscretion, to venture a relapse, but 'would choose to involve himself in the same 'Condition with the generality of the People, 'in expectation of what the next Parliament 'should bring forth, to the happiness of his Ma-'jesty, and all his Kingdoms.

Sir John Greenvile writ down the substance of this Discourse, and repeated it to the General, to be the better able to retain it in his Memory; but as soon as he had read it, he entreated him to tear it in pieces, and conjur'd him to acquaint no person whatsoever with their Conference, except the King himself, and to request him also to conceal it. But above all things, he intreated him, To desire his Majesty from him, to go out of the King of Spains Dominions to Breda, or some other place under the Government of the States of the United Provinces; for that he had certain Intelligence, he would be detained by the King of Spain's Ministers, if he stayed in his Dominions.

And at Sir John's Parting from him, he told him, He was glad that this occasion of presenting his Duty to the King, was an effect of his diligence, whom he was glad to find so industrious and vigilant in his Masters Service: of which he had before some experience when his Brother Nicholas came from him into Scotland.

He promis'd to observe all the General's Instructions; and when he came to Ostend (where he arriv'd the 23d. of March) he put all that had passed betwixt them into Writing, and digested it into form, to be presented to his Majesty. And in the Conduct of the whole affair, he was so secret, that the Lord Mordant, who went over with him to his Majesty, knew nothing of it.

He gives his Majesty an account of his Negotiation, and the effects thereof.

At Bruxels he retired to a private house, to which his Majesty (upon intimation) very secretly repaired, and with great satisfaction receiv'd the Inteligence he brought, but because he could not prosecute the General's desire (as to his removal) without advice for the manner of executing it, he consulted the Marquess of Ormond, the Lord Chancellor, and Mr. Secretary Nicholas, being persons in whom, from just reason and experience, he had most intire confidence, by whose assistance the matter was so order'd, that in two or three days, he took his Journey to Breda; where we shall leave his Majesty in Consultation to return to the Transactions in England of that busie time.

The King removes to Breda.

The Council of State took care to have the Act put in speedy execution throughout England, for the Election of Members to serve in Parliament, and for putting the Militia into sober hands: And because many seditious People were endeavouring to debauch the Army, they published lished a Proclamation to forbid all Persons whatsoever, to correspond with any of the Officers & Souldiers of the Army in the way of agitating, or otherwise, whereby any dissatisfaction might be raised towards the present Government, to endanger the Peace of the Nation, giving power to all Officers, both Military and Civil, to seize upon any Persons offending as aforesaid: And for the better encouragement of all whom it should concern, they declared and promised to give to the discoverer of any such person, who should apprehend and secure such offenders, the summe of ten pounds. And this Proclamation was ordered to be published in the Head of every Regiment, Troop and Company of the Army, to the intent, the same should be the better taken notice of, and put in more effectual execution: And the General sent it to every Regiment to be proclaimed accordingly. But this did not sufficiently prevent the ill humours amongst the Souldiers, which made Commissary Clarges consult privately with the General, about some other more effectual course; he propos'd to frame an Engagement for all to subscribe, to acquiesce in whatsoever the next Parliament should do, and to displace all that should refuse: His Lordship liked very well of this Proposition, but thought it very hard to be executed; nevertheless, he encouraged him to go on, and that night alone he fram'd it, and immediately advis'd with Colonel Howard, Sir Anthony Ashley-Cooper, Mr. Ansty, and Colonel Knight (who all of them with one consent approved it, being all Persons of great Credit with the General) about putting it in execution. Colonel Knights undertook by the next day at noon, to get it Signed by all the Officers of his own Regiment, and the Generals Regiment of Horse, and the Life-Guard; & Colonel Howard did the like for his Regiment which lay about Croydon, for he had so modell'd it, that he was sure of all his Officers; all which by the foresaid time being accordingly effected, they met together at Sir Anthony Ashley Coopers Lodging, and glad to see their business so well advanc'd by the subscription of these three Regiments, they, in the next place, thought it expedient to have the Officers of all the Regiments, in London, to be summon'd to meet that Evening at St. James's, which was accordingly done: and they being all met, It was mov'd to them by Colonel Knight,

That at this time, when several Imputations lay upon the Army of Inconstancy, and that many Disaffected Persons were endeavouring to divide them, it was requisite they should give some publick testimony of their Affections and Inclinations, and in order thereunto, some Officers having shew'd him an Address, which they had framed to be presented to the General, to testifie their Resolution of Obedience and Duty to the Powers God hath placed over them; He could not but approve so well of it, as readily by himself, and all his Officers, to give their Attestations to it, and some more had done the like, it being intended by those who had first advis'd it, to be tendered to every Regiment of the Army; of which, there being a great part here, they had by the Generals Permission invited them thither, to communicate what was done, and to desire their Concurrence with them in it.

Colonel Knight and Clarges had before prepared most of the Officers of the Regiments which came from Scotland, so that they made no difficulty of it, especially seeing a Subscription of other Regiments to induce them: Moreover, it was intimated, That their Meeting was by the privity and permission of the General, which Obligation they knew none would offer to oppose. The Address was immediately read, being in these Words:

The Form of the Armies engagement.

WEE the Officers of the Army under your Excellencies Command, whose Names are hereunto written, being truly sensible of the merciful and wonderful Providence of Almighty God, in bringing Us, after so many Revolutions and Changes, into an hopeful way of Settlement; and perceiving, to our great grief, that there are too many, who seeking more their own private Interest, than the Publick Good, are endeavouring to reduce us again to our old Necessities and Confusions; and that they have proceeded so far, as to cause Jealousies in the Council of State, in whom the Supream Power and Trust, now, till the Meeting of the Parliament, is residing, Do hold it our Duties, for the preventing of all such Jealousies for the future, and for the strengthning of your Excellencies Hands, in the carrying on of this Good Work, in which it hath pleased God to make you so highly Instrumental, humbly to make this Address unto your Excellency, in the Name of our Selves, and all the Souldiers under our Command, and to Declare, That We shall, according to our Duties, carry and behave our selves, as Officers of an Army, instructed by your Examples and Discipline, to obey, and not to dispute the Orders of our Superiours, and shall freely and readily observe such Commands, as we shall receive from your Excellency, or the Council of State, or the Parliament when Assembled: And in particular, we shall, according to the late Proclamation of the Council of State, of the seventeenth of March, decline any Meeting or Meetings, for the contriving or carrying on of any Declarations or Subscriptions, concerning Affairs of State, or Government, thereby avoiding those Mischiefs, which made many lately in Arms, so justly distastful to the People, by making themselves a divided Interest from the rest of them. And we are the more willing to make this Address at this time, to evince to all the World the Integrity of our Obedience, because of the great Expectation of the next Parliament, from whom we hope for a happy Settlement to all the Nations; And that they may have no ill Apprehensions of Us, We are resolved, as it becomes Us in Duty, to submit to whatsoever the Lord shall bring forth from their Consultations, knowing that Parliaments only can secure Us in our Religions and Civil Rights: And forasmuch as many Representations heretofore made to Persons in Eminent Authority, have been too frequently contriv'd in the Name of the Army, which were done rather in Formality, (as we perceive by the Event) than otherwise; We do solemnly desire, that this may be Recorded as a Testimony and Witness against Us, if ever We shall be guilty of any such Backslidings.

The Address signed by all the Officers about London; and those of two other Regiments

At that very time, this Engagement was signed by Lieutenant Colonel Morgan, and all the Officers of the Generals Regiment of Foot; by Colonel Hubblethorn, and all the Officers of his Regiment; by Colonel Cloberry, Colonel Lydcott, Colonel Read, and the rest, with all their

Also, Colonel Fairfax, and Colonel Bathel, who upon the first Consultation of this Matter had been sent unto, in four days had return'd the Subscriptions of themselves, and all their Officers; after which it was agreed, That Colonel Howard, with fourty Officers, should present it to the General, which was done at St. James's the 9th. Day of April, and was with much satisfaction and content received by him: It was also afterwards recommended to Major-General Morgan in Scotland, to have it subscribed by his Officers there, and likewise to all the Regiments in England, with an Accompt of what had bin done in London, and the Names of all those Regiments that had concur'd in it.

Presented to the General by Col. Howard. Sent into Scotland to M. General Morgan.

And because he heard that some disaffected Persons were tampering to seduce the Souldiers in Scotland, he sent another Regiment of Horse, and a Regiment of Foot thither, who were of such as Major General Morgan might confide in, to assist him, if need were, to model the rest. In conclusion, this Address was subscribed by all the Regiments, and the Subscriptions return'd to the General; only some Officers refus'd it, and were immediately displac'd, and the General took that opportunity, of giving to the Lord Faulconbridge, Colonel Rossiter, and General Mountagne, to each of them a Regiment of Horse, and to Colonel Sheffield a Regiment of Foot. And whilst he was thus employ'd in ordering the Army, the Council of State was active in forming the Militia, in all the Cities and Counties of England and Walet, wherein such care was taken, to have the Arms in good Hands, that from all Parts the Lists of the Officers were sent to the Council of State, to be by the General and them approv'd.

Two more Regiments sent to Scotland.

All disaffected Officers displac'd, and others put in their rooms.

These preparations engaged many Factious People to design against the Government, insomuch, that on the Evening of that Day, wherein Colonel Howard presented the above-mentioned Address to the General, Colonel Lambert having made an Escape out of the Tower, was conceal'd by some of that Party, that had been lately ingaged against General Monk, and some others of Fanatick Principles: These held a Council in London, but were not so private in their Consultations, but the General had from time to time intimation of much of their Proceedings. They sent some busie men to all the Regiments in England, and these Officers that refus'd the Address, had inticed many of the Troopers to steal after them; but such was the vigilance of the rest of the Officers, that there got not above Seven or Eight Troops of Horse in a Body to joyn with Lambert, and but one Company of Foot.

Lambert escapes out of the Tower.

On Wednesday the 18th. of April, the General, upon Advice from Colonel Streater of Lamberts hovering in the North-Parts, and of the want of Horse in his Quarters, sent for Colonel Ingoldsby to him, and told him, He must be at Northampton with his Regiments on the Saturday following; and that he should receive Orders to take any of Colonel Rossiter's Troops to his Assistance, which quartered in those Parts: He also told him, That Colonel Streater, a Person whom he could Trust, was with some of his Companies at Northampton, whom he would find ready to joyn with him. The Colonel told him, That his Regiment was dispersed in Norfolk and Suffolk, but he would do his endeavours to get them together. And he was so diligent herein, that by the Fryday following he got his Regiment to Cambridge, and on Saturday in the Evening to Northampton.

The General also sent Colonel Howard with his Regiment, and some other select Troops, towards Worcestershire and Warwickshire, to hinder any Defection of the Troops in those Parts, and to have an Eye towards Coventry, which Lambert had design'd to Garrison; and indeed he had done it, had not the Care of the General prevented it, by Ordering three Companies of Colonel Streater's Regiment to Quarter in that City: The Colonel also sending one Company more to strengthen that Place, who in their March met with a Party of Horse, among whom was one who having been Major to that Regiment, shewed them Lambert's Orders, to march back again: But the Lieutenant that was intrusted with the Command of that Company, observing the Colonel's Orders, marched intire with great speed, stood upon his defence, and opposed them twice in his march thither.

The Council of State by Proclamation declar'd Lambert and his Adherents Traytors, and the General was careful the very next day after his getting out of Prison, to give Notice of it to all the Regiments and Troops, to prevent his Design of seducing them, and to command them to seize on him: By which Diligence, and the sending these Parties out, his Confederates were interrupted in their Endeavours. One Merry, a Disbanded discontented Officer of Col. Smithson's Regiment had inticed forty of Captain Peverel's Troop to revolt, with Design to seize on York, but by the care of other Troops they were dissipated; and one Everard, and Captain Lockier, two discontented Officers that had been lately in Custody, and releas'd upon their Engagement, not to act any thing in Disturbance of the Publick Peace, did nevertheless march through Nottingham, with a Seditious Troop of their Companions.

The General takes great care for the suppressing of Lambert.

Whereof Captain Sherman of Colonel Sanders his Regiment having notice, drew out his own Troop, and that of Captain Craddocks of Hackers Regiment, to engage them; but immediately Craddocks Troop joyned with the Enemy, which made Sherman (finding himself too weak for them) to retreat to Nottingham, to secure that place, where the Mayor, Aldermen, and Gentry, gave him ready assistance. This News made the General give Orders, That the late Address signed by the Officers, should be tendred to all the private Souldiers also, which made so thorough a Reformation, that in many Regiments Thirty of a Troop disbanded, rather than they would consent to it, and many in the Foot Companies also left their Arms: But in all the General's Regiments in London, that marched with him from Scotland, there were but two Dissenters.

On Easter-Eve, Colonel Ingoldsby joyned with Colonel Streater at Northampton where he was at that time, and had been some days before; The Earl of Exeter, who with several Loyal Gentlemen of that County, to the number of near near one hundred Horſe, with much Reſolution offered to aſſiſt Colonel Streater: Likewiſe the Trained Bands of that Town were in Arms at the ſame time, in order to the ſecuring thereof, in a caſe of a neceſſity of Colonel Streater's attending Lambert's Motion; The Colonel purpoſing that Night, if need had been, to have mounted 400 Foot of his Regiment with the Horſes that came into the Town that day (againſt the Fair on Monday following) and to have beaten up Lambert's Quarters.

Col. Ingoldsby and Col. Streater march againſt Lambert

On Eaſter Day early Intelligence was brought to Colonel Ingoldsby and Colonel Streater, That Lambert was at Daventry; upon which they marched towards him: When they came to Daventry, they heard Lambert was marched two miles from thence, and therefore haſtened to meet him; which they did in a plain Field, where a little Brook parted them. Lambert had with him beſides the Troops of Horſe before mentioned, theſe Perſons, viz. Colonel Okey, Colonel Axtel, Colonel Cobbet, Lieutenant-Colonel Young, Major Creed, Captain Timothy Clare, Captain Gregory, Captain Spinage, beſides divers private Souldiers, who were Anabaptiſts.

The two Parties fac'd one the other near four hours; during which time, Colonel Ingoldsby, and Colonel Streater ſpent their time, partly in their vigilant obſervation of the Intention of the Enemy, and partly in encouraging of the Horſe and Foot under their command, whereby they begot a more than ordinary reſolution in both Horſe and Foot: In the mean time, Lambert ſent out ſeveral Scouts towards them; but Ingoldsby would not permit any of his to leave their Ranks, only he himſelf riding up towards them, had many Diſcourſes with them: Ingoldsby was not known to the Scouts, but appearing to them as a private Souldier dealt ſo effectually with them, by laying open the danger of their Action, that 25 Troopers, with a Quarter-Maſter, came over to him. The Colonel diſmounted and diſarm'd them for the preſent, becauſe they were unwilling to engage in his party, but afterwards reſtored their Horſes and Arms to them.

Lambert's delay in Engaging being obſerved by Col. Streater, he adviſed that both Horſe and Foot ſhould immediately advance, and put the Buſineſs to an Iſſue, out of the Confidence he had of the Foot eſpecially: And withal deſired Col. Ingoldsby, That if he ſhould be routed, he would rally with what ſpeed he could; For that he ſhould be confident to find the Foot to maintain their Ground. Colonel Streater's Foot being about Five Hundred; two compleat Companies, the reſt commanded Men out of ſeveral Companies, moſt Pikes, which in that Champion-ground would ſerve well to ſecure the Body againſt the Horſe.

When the two Bodies came near juſt as Col. Ingoldsby was going to charge, Colonel Streater commanded ſix Files of Muſqueteers to advance, one File gave fire and hurt one or two of Lambert's Horſe; his Drums beat, and in good Order he advanced, having given ſtrict command that his Muſqueteers ſhould not fire till they came as near as puſh of Pike. But Lambert's men held the Noſes of their Piſtols towards the ground, and Nelthrop's Troop came off to Ingoldsby; Haſterig's Troop having deſerted him before; for Colonel Ingoldsby ſending Captain Elſmore before him with a party, as he march'd to find Lambert, met Captain Haſterigg, and took him priſoner, but releas'd him upon his Parole, to ſend his whole Troop over to joyn with Ingoldsby, which he faithfully perform'd, ſending it to them by his Quarter-maſter, but retir'd himſelf: Colonel Ingoldsby told Lambert, He was his Priſoner: Whereupon Creed and the reſt earneſtly intreated him, to do what he pleaſed with them, but to permit Lambert to eſcape; acquainting him, That his Life could be of no advantage to him, Which Ingoldsby abſolutely refuſed telling them, He would not be treacherous to thoſe that had commanded him by ſuch an ingenerous Act: Lambert then turned about his Horſe, and attempted to eſcape, but Ingoldsby purſued him ſo cloſe, that he came quickly up to him, and vow'd to piſtol him, if he did not immediately yield. Lambert in great depreſſion of Spirit, twice pray'd him to let him eſcape, but when he ſaw he could not prevail, ſubmitted as all the reſt did except Okey, Axtel, and Clerk, who eſcaped.

Defeats his Party, and takes him Priſoner.

General Montague, who had been ſome time before by the Generals advice, made one of the Generals at Sea, (General Monk being himſelf the other) and ſent to take charge of the Fleet, ſent an accompt to the Council of State, of the condition of it, how that Vice-admiral Lawſon, and with him the whole Navy, had received him with great ſatisfaction, and were all fix'd in obedience to their Authority, with reſolution to ſubmit to the Determination of the next Parliament.

Gen. Montague acquaints the Council of State with the condition of the Fleet.

The Tueſday after this defeat of Lambert, all the Militia of the City of London drew into Hide-Parke; there were ſix Trained-Band Regiments, the Red, the White, the Green, the Blew, the Yellow, and the Orange, beſides ſeveral Regiments of Auxiliaries: The Red was commanded by Colonel Bateman Alderman, the White by Col. Wale Alderman, the Green by Col. John Robinſon Alderman, the Blew by Col. William Vincent, the Yellow by Col. William Broomfield, and the Orange by Col. Thomas Bloodworth, all men of courage and good Affections to the Peace and Felicity of their Native Country. They made up in all twelve thouſand Men: The General, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and a great concourſe of Noble-men and Gentlemen, were preſent at the Appearance. And that Evening, Colonel Lambert, Colonel Cobbet, and Major Creed, were brought Priſoners to the Council of State, and committed to the Tower. And the next day the reſt of the Priſoners were brought by Captain Parry to the General, and by him committed to the Marſhal-General.

The Appearance of the City Militia in Hide-Parke.

Col Lambert, Col. Cobbet, and others ſent Priſoners to the Tower.

The defeat of Lambert did not make the Phanatiques leave the purſuit of their Miſchiefs, ſeveral Seditious Pamphlets being publiſhed in Print, to deprave the Minds of the People, and Tickets were thrown into the Courts of Guard in the Night to debauch the Souldiers. But none of them appear'd to have been pen'd with more Virulency and Malice, than that vile ſuppoſititious Paper which they ſcatter'd about, carrying in its Frontice-piece, A Letter from Bruxels, &c. with which ſome of his Majeſties moſt implacable Enemies attempted to poyſon, or palliate the now high Expectations, and Impreſſions

Several Seditious pamphlets publiſh'd and diſperſt.

1660. of his good Subjects: and it was in truth ſo fatally tim'd, and ſo ſubtily contriv'd, that it had like to have done a great deal of Miſchief amongſt ſome, who not acquainted with the innate, and unparalell'd inclination of his Majeſty to Clemency, began to apprehend their forwardneſs for his Reſtauration, and to remit of their former zeal: But this Hydra was dextrouſly cut off by Mr. Evelyn, whom we formerly mention'd, in a Reply which was Printed, to the intire ſatisfaction of all that read it. I take pleaſure to mention the Particular, becauſe upon another occaſion, long before, he publiſh'd, with no ſmall hazard of his Life and Liberty, that his Apology to the Royal Party, in anſwer to that Remonſtrance, Entituled, the Plea of the Army, (contriv'd and ſet forth by that Phanatick Power, immediately upon their Dethroning of Richard) as being it ſeems no longer able to ſupport the common, but unjuſt Reproaches of his Majeſties Cauſe, by Arguments deriv'd from their ill Conduct, and Fatal Succeſs of divers of his ſuffering Party; and becauſe I take it to be the boldeſt Piece (not excepting even the famous Killing no Murther; written, as we ſince learn, by Captain Titus) that ever durſt ſee the light in that raging Period; and for that it was no leſs than thrice re-printed (an Honour which the Pamphlets of that Age did ſeldom arrive to) and obſerv'd to have won more Proſelytes to the King, than any thing of that nature had done before it; which, was a Service the greateſt that Conjuncture was capable of, and none of the leaſt to his Majeſties Advantage all along; as thoſe who ſhall pleaſe to call to mind the Effects of thoſe Paper-Weapons, muſt needs acknowledge, by warming and inſpiriting the Hearts of an oppreſſed People, in danger of being Poyſon'd by the perpetual Venome of his Majeſties Adverſaries, whoſe Pens as well as Swords, were daily ſharpened againſt him, but for ſuch ſeaſonable Antidotes, as upon all occaſions encountered their Libels, and inſidiary Diſcourſes; amongſt which there were alſo ſeveral Letters ſent to the General from unknown Hands, to ſubvert his Allegiance likewiſe; and to Clarges it was written, That notwithſtanding his Practices, to introduce the King and his Family, all his Endeavours were blaſted by Morrice, who had aſcribed to himſelf alone the Reputation of that Service, and diſperſed to all the Royal Party, that he had no Credit with the General, and therefore to him only Application ſhould be made, as to one in whom the General repoſed his greateſt truſt. But theſe and all other Artifices were too poor to ſubvert the Loyalty of one, who valued not to whom the good of his Services was attributed, if the Effects he deſired were produced by them: But nevertheleſs, theſe Practices, to divide the Generals Friends, made the Council of State, the General, and all his Officers more watchful for the Publick Peace, and more diligent in their Duties: The Officers began more and more to be convinced of their former Errours, by ſeveral publique and private Diſcourſes of the Clemency and other Royal Endowments of his Majeſty: That which they moſt apprehended, was from Rumours which had been diſperſed amongſt them, of the implacability of all thoſe of his Party, of whom it was ſaid, If they had Power they would ſhew themſelves full of Rancour and Revenge againſt all that were ingaged in the late War againſt them: and obſerving that moſt of the Members of Parliament were ſuch, notwithſtanding all the Qualifications for their Elections, many ſtrange Doubts poſſeſſed them; and amongſt other Effects of their Diſeaſed Imaginations, they fancied, the Parliament (when met) would rather hinder, than promote his Majeſties Goodneſs and mercy towards them: But whileſt they were in the midſt of theſe various Inquietudes, the Royal Party, in all the Counties of England, publiſhed ſeveral excellent Declarations, which fully ſatisfied and appeaſed their Minds, wherein they Declared, That they reſolved to adhere to the largeſt Aſſurances of amicable Agreement with all Perſons, and that they would never put any Difference betwixt ſuch as ſhould now unite with them, and thoſe who firſt engaged in the ſame Perſwaſion with themſelves. Of all which, we ſhall only herein publiſh one, they being all to the ſame purpoſe: It was Intituled,

A Declaration of the Nobility and Gentry, that adhered to the late King in and about the City of London; Which was expreſſed in theſe words.

The Declaration of the Nobility and Gentry about London.

A*Fter the Miſeries of a Civil War, and the many and fruitleſs Attempts towards Settlement, upon ſeveral Intereſts, and imaginary Forms of Governments, it having pleaſed Almighty God, by unexpected and wonderful means, to give theſe Nations a probable hope of being reſtored to thoſe Laws and Priviledges, which have been tranſmitted to them from their Anceſtors; We do Declare, That we think our ſelves obliged, next to Divine Providence, to attribute this Gracious Work to his Excellency the Lord General* Monck, who, as he had the Courage to aſſert the Publick Liberty, and the Prudence to carry it on againſt ſo many Difficulties, has alſo had the Happineſs, to lead Us thus far through the Wilderneſs of Confuſion, without paſſing the Red-Sea of Blood: And becauſe the Enemies of the Publique Peace, have endeavoured to repreſent thoſe of the Kings Party, as men implacable, and ſuch as would Sacrifice the Common Good to their own private Paſſions; We do ſincerely profeſs, That we do reflect upon our paſt ſufferings as from the Hands of God, and therefore do not cherish any violent Thoughts or Inclinations, againſt thoſe who have been any way Inſtrumental in them: And if the Indiſcretion of any hot ſpirited Perſons, tranſports them to Expreſſions contrary to this our ſenſe, we utterly diſclaim them; and deſire, that the Imputation may extend no further, than the fault of the Offenders. And we further Declare, That we intend by our quiet and Peaceable Behaviour, to teſtifie our ſubmiſſion to the preſent Power, as it now reſides in the Council of State, in expectation of the future Parliament: upon thoſe Wiſdom and Determinations, we truſt God will give ſuch a Bleſſing, as may produce a perfect Settlement, both in Church and State.

'And

'And as his Excellency hath not chosen the Sandy Foundations of Self-government, but the firm 'Rock of National Interest, whereon to frame a 'Settlement; It is our hope and prayer, That 'when the Building comes to be raised, it may 'not like Rome, have the beginning in the Blood 'of Brethren, nor like Babel, be interrupted by 'Confusion of Tongues: but that we may all 'speak one Language, and be of one Name; 'That all mention of Parties and Factions, and 'all Rancour and Animosities may be thrown in, 'and buryed like Rubbish under the Foundation.

This and the other Declarations of the same nature, were wholesome Preparations to usher in the Parliament, which met at Westminster, on the 25th. day of April. The Lords chose the Earl of Manchester to be their Speaker, and the House of Commons Sir Herbert Grimstone; where after the appointment of the usual Committees for Priviledges, and other essential matters usual at their first Assembling, They gave all due acknowledgments to General Monk, for his Eminent Services and great Wisdom in subduing his Enemies without Blood, magnifying the Mercies of God, That made him so Instrumental to keep up the Nations from sinking, when no way appeared whence Deliverance should arise. The Parliament assembles.

Sir Arthur Hasterig was by the General suspected to have contributed towards the Insurrection of Lambert, but upon notice thereof, he came to him, and gave him evident proofs to the contrary, and promised to live peaceably at home; having before quietly submitted his Regiments of Horse and Foot to the General's disposal, together with the Garrisons of Berwick, Newcastle, Carlisle, and Tinmouth. Sir Arthur Hasterig being suspected by the General clears himself.

On the 27th. of April, Sir John Greenvill attended the General, and presented to him a Letter from his Majesty, to be communicated to the Officers of the Army, and the Council of State, with a Commission from his Majesty to Constitute him Captain-General of all the Armies of England, Scotland, and Ireland; Informing him likewise, That he had Letters from his Majesty to both Houses of Parliament, the City, and the Navy. Sir John Greenvill presents the General with a Commission from his Majesty, and a Letter for the Council of State.

His Excellency received the Commission with all Humility and Respect; but in regard the Parliament was Adjourn'd for three days, advis'd him the next day to deliver that Letter which was to be by him imparted to the Council of State, to the Council at their next Sitting; which he accordingly did, but they would not presume to open it without the Parliaments directions, and took caution of Sir John Greenvill to attend the House at their next Sitting. At which time, by the General's advice, he went, without acquainting them, to the House of Lords, to inform them he had a Letter from the King; who being acquainted that Sir John Greenvill attended at the door with a Letter from his Majesty, The Earl of Manchester went down to the Clerk and received it. The Letter had a Declaration inclosed in it; which were both read in the House. The Letter first, which was in these words:

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty and Right Welbeloved Cousin, and Right Trusty and Welbeloved Cousins, and Trusty and Right Welbeloved; We Greet you well. We cannot have a better reason to promise Our self an end of our Common Sufferings and Calamities, and that Our Own Just Power and Authority will with Gods Blessing be restored to Us, Than that We hear You are again acknowledged to have that Authority and Jurisdiction which hath always belonged to You by Your Birth, and the Fundamental Laws of the Land: And we have thought it very fit and safe for Us to call to you for your help in the Composing the Confounding Distempers and Distractions of the Kingdom, in which your Sufferings are next to those We have undergone Our Selves; And therefore you cannot but be the most proper Counsellors for removing those Mischiefs, and for preventing the like for the future. How great a Trust We repose in you, for the procuring and establishing a blessed Peace and Security for the Kingdom, will appear to you by Our inclosed Declaration; Which Trust, We are most confident you will discharge with that Justice and Wisdom that becomes you, and must always be expected from you; and that upon your experience, how one violation succeeds another, when the known Relations and Rules of Justice are once transgressed you will be as Zealous for the Rights of the Crown, and for the Honour of your King, as for your selves. And then you cannot but discharge your Trust with good success, and provide for, and establish the Peace, Happiness and Honour of King, Lords and Commons, upon that Foundation which can only support it, and We shall be all happy in each other. And the whole Kingdom will bless God for you all, for we shall hold Our Self obliged in an especial manner to Thank you in particular, according to the affection you shall express towards Us. We need add no more to you upon this Subject, because We have likewise writ to the House of Commons, Which We suppose they will communicate to you. And We pray God to bless your Joynt Endeavours for the good of us all. And so We bid you Heartily farewel.

Given at Our Court at Breda, this 14 day of April, 1660. In the Twelfth Year Our Reign.

The Declaration was next read, which was Intituled,

His Majesties gracious Declaration to all His loving Subjects.

CHARLES R.

His Majesties Declaration

CHARLES by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all our Loving Subjects of what Degree or Quality soever, Greeting. If the general Distraction and Confusion which is spread over the whole Kingdom, doth not awaken all men to a desire and longing, that those wounds which have so many years together been kept bleeding, may be bound up, all We can say will be to no purpose. However after this long silence, We have thought it Our Duty to declare how much We desire to contribute thereunto? And that as we can never give over the hope in good time to obtain the possession of that Right which God and Nature hath made Our due; so we do make it Our daily Suit to the Divine Providence, that he will, in Compassion to Us and our Subjects, after so long Misery and Sufferings, remit, and put Us into a quiet and peaceable possession of that our Right, with as little Blood and Damage to our People as is possible. Nor do we desire more to enjoy what is Ours, then that all Our Subjects may enjoy what by Law is theirs, by a full and intire administration of Justice thorowout the Land, and by extending Our Mercy where it is wanted and deserv'd.

'And to the end that the fear of Punishment may not engage any Conscious of themselves of what is past, to a perseverance in Guilt for the future, by opposing the Quiet and Happiness of their Country in the Restoration both of King, Peers, and People, to their Just, Ancient, and Fundamental Rights, We do by these Presents declare, That We do grant a Free and General Pardon, which we are ready, upon demand, to pass under Our Great Seal of England, to all Our Subjects of what degree or quality soever, who within forty days after the publishing hereof, shall lay hold upon this Our Grace and Favour, and shall by any publique Act declare their doing so, and that they return to the Loyalty and Obedience of good Subjects; Excepting only such Persons as shall hereafter be excepted by Parliament: Those only excepted, Let all our Subjects, how faulty soever, rely upon the Word of a King, solemnly given by this present Declaration, That no Crime whatsoever committed against Us, or Our Royal Father before the Publication of this, shall ever rise in Judgment, or be brought in Question, against any of them, to the least Endamagement of them either in their Lives, Liberties, or Estates, or (as far forth as lies in our Power) so much as to the prejudice of their Reputations, by any reproach, or term of distinction from the rest of any of Our best Subjects; We desiring and ordaining, That henceforth all Notes of Discord, Separation, and Difference of Parties, be utterly abolished among all Our Subjects, whom We invite and conjure to a perfect Union among themselves, under our Protection, for the resettlement of Our Just Rights and Theirs, in a Free Parliament, by which upon the Word of a King We will be advised.

'And because the passion and uncharitablenes of the times have produced several Opinions in Religion, by which men are ingaged in Parties and Animosities against each other, which, when they shall hereafter unite in a freedom of Conversation, will be composed, or better understood; we do declare a Liberty to tender Consciences, And that no man shall be disquieted or called in question for differences of Opinion in matters of Religion, which do not disturb the Peace of the Kindom, and that We shall be ready to consent to such an Act of Parliament, as upon mature deliberation shall be offered to Us, for the full granting that Indulgence.

And

'And because in the continued distractions of 'so many Years, and so many and great Revolutions, many Grants and Purchases of Estates have 'been made to and by many Officers, Souldiers, 'and others, who are now possessed of the same, 'and who may be liable to Actions at Law, upon 'several Titles; we are likewise willing that all 'such differences and all things relating to the 'said Grants, Sales and Purchases, shall be determined in Parliament, which can best provide for 'the Just satisfaction of all men who are concerned.

'And we do further declare, that We will be 'ready to consent to any Act or Acts of Parliament to the purposes aforesaid, And for the full 'satisfaction of all Arrears due to the Officers 'and Souldiers of the Army, under the Command 'of General Monk, and that they shall be received into our Service upon as good Pay and Conditions as they now enjoy.

Given under our Sign Manual and Privy Signet at our Court at Breda this 14 day of April, 1660. in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

After the Reading of these, the Lords Ordered Thanks to be given to Sir John Greenvil, for bringing that Gracious Declaration and Letter, and Resolv'd by Vote, That they do own and declare, That according to the Ancient and Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, the Government is, and ought to be, by King, Lords and Commons.

The Vote of the House of Lords upon the reading of the Kings Letter and Declaration.

Sir John Greenvill came then to the House of Commons, who were before his Coming acquainted with the Letter he delivered to the Council; upon Notice of his being at the Door, he was admitted, and presented a Letter to them from his Majesty. The Letter had in it a Duplicate of the same Declaration which was inclosed in the Letter to the Lords: The Letter and it were both read, and the Letter was Superscribed;

'To Our Trusty and Well-beloved, the Speaker of the House of Commons.

CHARLES R.

His Majesties Letter to the House of Commons.

'TRusty and Well-beloved, We Greet you well. 'In these great an insupportable afflictions 'and Calamities under which the poor Nation 'hath been so long exercised, and by which it is 'so near exhausted, We cannot think of a more 'natural and proper Remedy, than to resort to 'those for Counsel and Advice, who have seen and 'observed the first beginning of our Miseries, the 'Progress from bad to worse, than the mistakes 'and misunderstandings which have produced 'and contributed to Inconveniences which were 'not intended, and after so many Revolutions, 'and the observation of what hath attended them, 'are now trusted by Our good Subjects to repair 'the Breaches which are made, and to provide, 'proper Remedies for these Evil, and for the 'lasting Peace, Happiness and Security of the 'Kingdom.

'We do assure you upon Our Royal Word, 'That none of Our Predecessors have had a greater Esteem of Parliaments, than we have in Our 'Judgment, as well as from our Obligations; We 'do believe them to be so vital a part of the Constitution of the Kingdom, and so necessary for 'the Government of it, that We well know neither Prince nor People can be in any tolerable degree happy without them: And therefore you 'may be confident, That we shall always look 'upon their Counsels as the best We can receive, 'and shall be as tender of their Priviledges, and 'as Careful to preserve and protect them, as of 'that which is most neer to Our Self, and most 'necessary for Our Own Preservation. 1660.

'And as this is Our Opinion of Parliament, 'That their Authority is most necessary for the 'Government of the Kingdom: So We are most 'Confident, that You believe and find, that the 'preservation of the Kings Authority is as necessary for the preservation of Parliaments; and 'that it is not the Name but the right Constitution of them, which can prepare and apply proper 'Remedies for those Evils which are grievous to 'the People, and which can thereby establish their 'Peace and Security. And therefore we have not 'the least doubt, but that you will be as Tender 'in, and as Jealous of, any thing that may infringe Our Honour, or impair Our Authority, 'as of your own Liberty and Property; which 'is best preserv'd by preserving the other.

'How far We have trusted You in this great 'Affair, and how much it is in your Power to restore the Nation to all that it hath lost, and 'to redeem it from any Infamy it hath undergone, 'and to make King and People as happy as they 'ought to be, You will find by Our inclosed Declaration, a Copy of which We have likewise sent 'to the House of Peers; and you will easily believe that We would not voluntarily, and of 'Our Self have reposed so great a Trust in you 'but upon an intire Confidence that you will not 'abuse it, and that you will proceed in such a 'manner, and with such due consideration of Us 'who have trusted you, that we shall not be asham'd of declining other Assistance (which We 'have assurance of) and repairing to you for more 'natural and proper Remedies for the Evils We 'would be freed from, nor sorry that We have 'bound up Our Own Interest so intirely with 'that of Our Subjects, as that we refer it to the 'same Persons to take care of Us, who are trusted to provide for them.

'We look upon you as wise and dispassionate 'Men, and good Patriots, who will raise up those 'Banks and Fences which have been cast down, & 'who will most reasonably hope, that the same 'Prosperity will again spring from those Roots 'from which it hath heretofore & always grown; 'Nor can we apprehend that you will propose any 'thing to Us, or expect any thing from Us, but 'that We are as ready to give as you to receive.

'If you desire the Advancement and Propagation of the Protestant Religion, We have, by 'Our constant profession and Practice of it, given sufficient Testimony to the World, that neither the unkindness of those of the same Faith 'towards Us, nor the Civilities and Obligations 'from those of a contrary Profession, (of both 'which We have had abundant Evidence) could

in

1660 'in the leaſt degree ſtartle Us, or make Us Swerve 'from our zeal and affection for it, to which We 'will not readily conſent. And we hope in due 'time Our ſelf to propoſe ſomething to you for 'the Propagation of it, that will ſatisfie the 'World, that We have always made it both Our 'Care and Our Study, and have enough Obſerved 'what is moſt like to bring diſadvantage to it.

'If you deſire ſecurity for theſe, who in theſe 'Calamitous times either wilfully or weakly have 'tranſgreſſed thoſe bounds which were preſcri- 'bed, and have invaded each others Rights, We 'have left to you to provide for their Security and 'Indempnity, and in ſuch a way as you ſhall think 'Juſt and Reaſonable; And by a Juſt Computa- 'tion of what men have done, and ſuffered, as 'near as is poſſibly, to take care that all men be 'ſatisfied, which is the ſureſt way to ſuppreſs and 'extirpate all ſuch uncharitableneſs and animoſi- 'ty, as might hereafter ſhake and threaten that 'Peace which for the preſent might ſeem Eſta- 'bliſhed.

'If there be a crying Sin for which the Nati- 'on may be involv'd in the infamy that attends 'it, We cannot doubt but that you will be as ſo- 'licitous to Redeem and Vindicate the Nation 'from the Guilt and Infamy, as we can be.

'If you deſire that Reverence and Obedience 'may be paid to the fundamental Law of the 'Land, and that Juſtice may be equally and im- 'partially adminiſtred to all men, it is that which 'We deſire to be ſworn to our Self, and that all 'Perſons in Power and Authority, ſhould be ſo 'too.

'In a word, there is nothing which you can 'propoſe, that may make the Kingdom happy, 'which We will not contend with you to com- 'paſs; and upon this Confidence and Aſſurance, 'we have thought fit to ſend you this Declaration, 'that you may, as much as is poſſible, at this di- 'ſtance, ſee Our heart, which when God ſhall 'bring Us nearer together (as we hope he will do 'ſhortly) will appear to you very agreeable to 'what We have profeſſed; and we hope that We 'have made that right Chriſtian Uſe of Our Af- 'fliction, and that the Obſervation and experience 'We have had in other Countries, hath been ſuch, 'as that We, and We hope all Our Subjects, 'ſhall be the better for that We have ſeen and 'ſuffered.

'We ſhall add no more, but our Prayers to Al- 'mighty God, that He will ſo bleſs your Counſels, 'and direct your endeavours, that his Glory and 'Worſhip may be provided for, and the Peace, 'Honour and Happineſs of the Nation may be e- 'ſtabliſhed upon thoſe Foundations which can 'beſt ſupport it. And ſo we bid you farewel, Given at Our Court at Breda, this 14 day of April, 1660. In the twelfth Year of Our Reign.

After the reading of this Letter and the Declaration, his Excellency the Lord General deſired the Letter that was directed to him, to be Communicated to the Council and the Army, might alſo be read, which was agreed. In that Letter there was alſo the former Declaration incloſed, and the Addreſs of the Letter was:

To Our Truſty and Well-beloved General Monk, to be by him Communicated to the Preſident and Council of State, and to the Officers of the Armies under his Command.

CHARLES R:

His Majeſties Letter to the General, to be communicated to the Officers of the Army, and Council of State.

TRuſty and Well-beloved, We Greet you well: It cannot be believ'd, but that We have 'been, are, and ever muſt be, as ſolicitous as 'We can, by all endeavours to improve the af- 'fections of Our good Subjects at home, and to 'procure the aſſiſtance of Our Friends and Allies 'abroad, for the recovery of that Right, which 'by the Laws of God and Man is unqueſtionable, 'and of which We have been ſo long diſpoſſeſſed, 'by ſuch force, and with thoſe Circumſtances, as 'We do not deſire to aggravate by any ſharp ex- 'preſſions, but rather wiſh, that the memory of 'what is paſſed, may be buried to the World: 'That we have more endeavoured to prepare, and 'to improve the Affections of Our Subjects at 'home, for Our Reſtauration, than to procure 'Aſſiſtance from abroad, to invade either of Our 'Kingdoms, is as manifeſt to the World, and We 'cannot give a better Evidence, that We are ſtill 'of the ſame mind, than in this Conjuncture, when 'common reaſon muſt ſatisfie all men, that We 'cannot be without Aſſiſtance from abroad, We 'choſe rather to ſend to you, who have it in your 'own power to prevent that Ruine and deſolati- 'on which a War would bring upon the Nation, 'and to make the whole Kingdom owe the 'Peace, Happineſs, Security, and Glory it ſhall 'enjoy to your Vertue; and to acknowledge that 'your Armies have complied with their Obliga- 'tions for which they were firſt raiſed, for the 'preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, the Ho- 'nour and Dignity of the King, the Priviledges 'of Parliament, the Liberty and Property of the 'Subject, and the fundamental Laws of the Land; 'and that you have vindicated that Truſt, which 'others moſt perfidiouſly abuſed and betrayed.

'How much we deſire and Reſolve to contri- 'bute to thoſe good ends, will appear to you by 'Our encloſed Declaration, which We deſire you 'to cauſe to be publiſhed for the Information and 'Satisfaction of all good Subjects, who do not de- 'ſire a further effuſion of precious Chriſtian 'Blood, but to have their Peace and ſecurity 'founded upon that which can only ſupport it; 'an Unity of Affections amongſt our ſelves, an 'equal adminiſtration of Juſtice to men, reſto- 'ring Parliaments to a full Capacity of provi- 'ding for all that is amiſs, and the Laws of the 'Land to their due Veneration.

'You have been your ſelves witneſſes of ſo 'many Revolutions, and have had ſo much ex- 'perience, how far any Power and Authority 'that is only aſſum'd by Paſſion and Appetite, 'and not ſupported by Juſtice, is from providing 'for the happineſs and peace of the People, or 'from receiving any obedience from them, with- 'out which no Government can provide for 'them; and that you may very reaſonably be- 'lieve, that God hath not been ſo well pleaſed 'with the attempts that have been made, ſince he 'hath uſually increaſed the confuſion, by giving 'all the ſucceſs that hath been deſired, and brought

'brought that to pass without effect, which the 'designers have propos'd as the best means to 'settle and Compose the Nation: And therefore 'We cannot but hope and believe, that you will 'concur with us in the Remedy, We have ap- 'plyed, which to humane understanding, is only 'proper for the ills We all groan under; and that 'you will make your selves the Blessed Instru- 'ments to bring this Blessing of Peace and Re- 'conciliation upon King and People; it being the 'usual method in which Divine Providence de- 'lighteth it self, to use and sanctifie those very 'means which ill Men design for the satisfaction 'of private and particular ends and ambition, 'and other wicked purposes, to wholsome and 'publick ends, and to establish that good which 'is most contrary to the designers: which is the 'greatest manifestation of God's particular kind- 'ness to a Nation that can be given in this world. 'How far we resolve to preserve your Interests, 'and reward your Services, We refer to Our 'Declaration, And we hope God will inspire you 'to perform your duty to Us, and to your Na- 'tive Country, whose happiness cannot be sepa- 'rated from each other.

'We have intrusted Our Well-beloved Ser- 'vant Sir John Greenvill, one of the Gentlemen of 'Our Bed-Chamber, to deliver this unto you, 'and to give us an accompt of your reception 'of it, and to desire you, that it may be pub- 'lished. And so we bid you farewel.

Given at our Court at Breda this 14 of April, 1660. in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

After the Reading of these Letters, his Excellency desired their permission to answer it, and to Communicate that his Majesties Declaration to the Officers of the Army; which was readily consented to.

The Parliament present his Majesty and his two Brothers, with the Sum of 65000 l.

And then they took into their Consideration, That his Majesty having been deprived of his Revenue, could not but be in want of Monies; and therefore Ordered, That the Sum of Fifty thousand pounds should be presently raised and presented to his Majesty from that House, and Ten thousand pounds to his Royal Highness the Duke of York, and Five thousand pounds to the Duke of Glocester.

The Lords sent down a Message to the Commons, with the Vote of Recognition formerly mentioned, which was agreed to, and each of the Houses appointed Committees to draw up their several Answers to his Majesties Letters, and Resolv'd that the Superscription should be,

To the King's most Excellent Majesty.

And the Commons Ordered, That all the Journals should be search'd, and those Acts and Orders razed out, which were inconsistent with the Government of King, Lords and Commons; These were the chiefest Transactions in Parliament that day.

Col. Lydcot's Speech upon the reading of his Maiesties Letter and Declaration.

In the Evening his Excellency summoned all his Officers that were in and near the City, and Communicated to them his Majesties Letter and Declaration; upon the reading whereof, Colonel Lydcot first spake; addressing himself to his Excellency then present; He said, They were all bound to bless God for the happiness of that day, which made them Witnesses of his Majesties great goodness and clemency to all his Subjects expressed in that Declaration, and for his particular kindness to them manifested in his most Gracious Letter. 1660.

He said, It was most true, that they had been Witnesses of many Revolutions (as it is therein expressed) and experienced to their sorrow the inconveniencies of them; That at the beginning of the Wars, the safety of the Kings Person, Protestant Religion, Privileges of Parliament, and Liberty of the Subjects, were Principles that many good Men with them thought they might safely engage for, but by degrees after they came into Blood, some implacable Spirits improved their Successes to make the Divisions irreparable, and many Men were forc'd to continue their Arms, more for their own Security, than the Justice of them: But that which was his comfort, and ought to be all theirs, was, That they had now, by the Prudence of their ever to be honoured General, the opportunity to comply with the Obligations for which they were first raised, and they were these whom his Majesty was pleas'd to own in their Submission to his most Just and Lawful Authority, to be the Instruments to bring the Blessing of Peace and Reconciliation upon the King and People.

This Speech was approv'd by all them that heard it; but Colonel Knight desired they might give some written Testimony of their acknowledgments of his Majesties Authority over them, to be presented to his Excellency the Lord General; That since his Majesties Letter was by him communicated to them, he might, in his Answer to it, return their humble Sense of it.

This motion produc'd a Reference to a Committee of Officers, to draw up an Address to his Excellency, in Compliance with his Majesties Letter and Declaration, to be prepared against six of the clock the next morning, and to desire his Excellencies leave, that they might then meet to give their Consents, and subscribe their names to it; which his Excellency readily approved. And the next Morning, the Address being prepared, was read to the Council of Officers, and Signed by them, and presented to his Excellency.

The Title was,

To his Excellency the Lord General Monk, Captain General of all the Armies and Forces in England, Scotland and Ireland, and one of the Generals at Sea.

The humble Address of the Officers of your Excellencies Army, in the Name of themselves and their Brethren.

The Officers Address to his Excellency, in Compliance with his Majesties Letter and Declaration.

'ALthough we cannot doubt of your Excel- 'lencies Confidence in our Affections, and 'our Faithfulness to your Excellency, and that 'Discipline which by your good and prudent 'Conduct, hath been exercised over us, whereby 'we are instructed to an intire obedience to your 'Excellency, and that Authority which the Lord 'shall place over us, which we hope we have 'manifested in our last Actions under your Ex- 'cellency, against all persons whatsoever, in 'any ways disturbing the Peace and Settlement 'of the Nations; although some of them have 1660. 'been our Brethren formerly engaged in the 'ſame Cauſe with Us. As alſo in our late Re- 'monſtrance and Addreſs to your Excellency, 'wherein as it becomes Us in Duty, we have ſo- 'lemnly declared to acquieſce in what the Lord 'ſhall bring forth from the Conſultations of this 'preſent Parliament.

'Yet in regard your Excellency hath been 'pleaſed to communicate to Us, a Letter and 'Declaration from the Kings Majeſty, full of gra- 'cious Expreſſions, we cannot but acknowledge 'that the matter of it gives a great meaſure of 'quiet to our minds, and more than ordinary 'expectations of the enjoyment of much tran- 'quility and happineſs under his Majeſties Go- 'vernment.

'The free and general Indempnity offered by 'his Majeſty, with a liberty to tender Conſci- 'ences, ſatisfaction of Arrears, his readineſs to 'conſent to a Confirmation of Sales, and other 'Grants and Purchaſes of Eſtates to all Perſons 'now in poſſeſſion of the ſame, is that of which 'we cannot doubt of the real performance, be- 'ing left by His Majeſty to the Parliaments de- 'termination; ſo we believe it is the moſt pro- 'bable way to bring the Nations to their deſired 'Settlement. And we hope to evince to his Maje- 'ſty, and all the world, That we are his Maje- 'ſties Loyal Subjects, and that your Excellency, 'and the Armies under your Command, have 'Complyed with the Obligations, for which they 'were firſt raiſed, for the preſervation of the 'true Proteſtant Religion, the Honour and Dig- 'nity of the King, the Priviledges of Parliament, 'the Liberty and Proſperity of the Subject, and 'the Fundamental Laws of the Land.

It is ready by the Commons, and approved.

In the morning, at the firſt ſitting of the Commons-Houſe, the General acquainted them that he had communicated his Majeſties Letter, and the Declaration in it encloſed, to the Officers of the Army; and that thereupon they had preſented an Addreſs to him, which he deſired they would be pleaſed to read, which was ordered, and after the reading, it was well approved of.

Commiſſary Clarges appointed by the General to wait upon his Majeſty with this Addreſs.

His Excellency then told them, He intended to prepare a Letter, to be ſent to his Majeſty, and did with their leave, purpoſe to ſend that Addreſs to him, that his Majeſty might thereby perceive, the Armies were at his devotion; and deſigning to ſend it by Commiſſary Clarges, who was as well a Member of their Houſe, as an Officer of the Army, he requeſted their permiſſion for him to go.

The Houſe then Ordered, he ſhould have leave to go from his Excellency to the King; and they gave five hundred Pounds to Sir John Greenville, to buy him a Jewel, as a Teſtimony, of the Reſpects of the Houſe to him.

After this Alderman Robinſon inform'd them, That the ſaid Sir John Greenville, with the Lord Mordant, had preſented a Letter from his Majeſty, to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, and they Commanded him to ask their leave to return an Anſwer to it. Which after the reading it in the Houſe was granted; In that Letter alſo his Majeſties Declaration was encloſed: The Letter it ſelf was directedi

To Our Truſty and Well-beloved, the Lord Mayor Aldermen, and the Common-Council of Our City of London.

CHARLES R.

His Majeſties Letter to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London.

TRuſty and Well-beloved, We greet you well: In theſe great Revolutions of late hapned in that Our Kingdom, to the Wonder and Amazement of all the World, there is none that We have looked upon with more Comfort, than the ſo frequent and publick manifeſtations of their affections to Us in the City of London, which hath exceedingly raiſed Our Spirits, and which no doubt hath proceeded from the Spirit of God, and his extraordinary mercy to the Nation, which hath been encouraged by you, and your good Example, to aſſert that Government, under which it hath ſo many hundred years enjoyed as great felicity as any Nation in Europe, and to diſcountenance the Imaginations of thoſe, who would ſubject Our Subjects to a Government they have not yet deviſed, and to ſatisfie the Pride and Ambition of a few ill men, would introduce the moſt arbitrary and tyranical Power that was ever yet heard of. How long we have all ſuffered under thoſe and the like devices, all the World takes notice, to the no ſmall reproach of the Engliſh Nation, which We hope is now providing for its own Security and Redemption, and will be no longer bewitch'd by thoſe Inventions: How deſirous We are to contribute to the obtaining the Peace and Happineſs of Our Subjects without effuſion of blood; and how far we are from deſiring to recover what belongs to Us by a War, if it can be otherwiſe done, will appear to you by the incloſed Declaration, which together with this Our Letter, We have inſtruſted Our Right Truſty and Well-beloved Couſin, the Lord Viſcount Mordant, and Our Truſty and Well-beloved Servant, Sir John Greenville Knight, one of the Gentlemen of Our Bed-Chamber, to deliver to you; to the end, that you, and all the reſt of Our good Subjects of that Our City of London (to whom We deſire it ſhould be publiſhed) may know how far We are from the deſire of revenge, or that the Peace, Happineſs, and Security of the Kingdom, ſhould be raiſed upon any other Foundation than the affections and hearts of Our Subjects, and their own Conſents. We have not the leaſt doubt of your juſt ſenſe of theſe Our Condeſcenſions, or of your zeal to advance and promote the ſame good end, by diſpoſing all men to meet Us with the ſame affection and tenderneſs, in reſtoring the Fundamental Laws to that Reverence that is due to them, and upon the preſervation whereof all Our happineſs depends. And you will have no reaſon to doubt of enjoying your full ſhare in that happineſs, and of the improving it by Our particular Affection to you. It is very natural for all men to do all the good they can for their native Countrey, and to advance the Honour of it: And as We have that full affection for the Kingdom in general, ſo We would not be thought to be without ſome extraordinary Kindneſs for Our Native City in that particular, Which We ſhall manifeſt on all occaſions, not only by renewing their Charter, and confirming all thoſe Priviledges, which they have received from Our Predeceſſors; but by adding and granting any new Favours, which may advance the

Trade

Trade, Wealth and Honour of that Our Native City, for which We will be so solicitous, that We doubt not but that it will in due time receive some benefit and advantage in all those respects, even from Our own Observation and Experience abroad. And We are most confident, We shall never be disappointed in Our Expectation, of all possible Service from your Affections; and so We bid you farewel. Given at Our Court at Breda, the 14 day of April, 1660. In the Twelfth Year of Our Reign.

We must not omit to commemorate the Cities joyful Resentment of this Letter, and the Declaration in it, expressed by the Grateful Duty of the Common-Council; who immediately upon the reading of them, ordered ten thousand pounds to be presented to his Majesty, a thousand pounds to the Duke of York, and a thousand pounds to the Duke of Glocester; and that Alderman Langham, Alderman Reynaldson, Alderman Brown, Alderman Thompson, Alderman Frederick, Alderman Wale, Alderman Adams, Alderman Bateman, Alderman Robinson, Mr. Recorder Wild, Sir Nicholas Crisp, Mr. Vincent, Mr. Bidolph, Mr. Foord, Mr. Bloodworth, Sir James Bunce, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. William Bateman, should from that City attend his Majesty, with a Presentment of their most Dutiful Acknowledgments for his Clemency and Goodness towards them. His Excellency took care, that the Address presented to him by the Officers, together with Copies of the Kings Letter and Declaration, should be sent to all the Regiments and Garrisons in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Dunkirk; requiring all to return their Subscriptions to him, and the Names of Dissenters (if any were.) But it appeared by the Returns made, that the Army was so well purged by the Remonstrance that went before, that all readily and dutifully comply'd with this.

Divers Aldermen, and other Eminent Citizens, sent from the City to his Majesty.

The Lords House nominated the Earls of Oxford, Warwick, and Middlesex, and the Lord Viscount Hereford, the Lord Brook, and the Lord Berkly, to attend his Majesty from that House; and the Commons appointed the Lord Fairfax, Lord Bruce, Lord Falkland, Lord Castleton, Lord Herbert of Worcester, Lord Mandeville, Sir Horatio Townesend, Sir Anthony Ashley-Cooper, Sir George Booth, Sir John Holland, Sir Henry Cholmley, and Denzill Hollis Esquire, to attend his Majesty from that House; who were ordered to make the quickest preparation they could for their Journey, to desire his Majesty to make a speedy return to his Parliament to the Exercise of his Kingly Office.

Six of the House of Lords, and Twelve of the Commons sent to attend upon his Majesty.

His Majesties Letter and Declaration to the Fleet, by the diligence of General Mountague, had the same success there, as that in the Army, being gratefully received by all the Commanders and Sea-Men.

The Letter it self was in these words:

CHARLES R.

His Majesties Letter to the Officers of the Fleet.

'TRusty and Well-beloved, We greet you well: It is no small comfort to us, after so long and great Troubles and Miseries which the whole Nation hath groaned under, and after so great Revolutions, which have still increased those Miseries, to hear that the Fleet and Ships, which are the Walls of the Kingdom, are put under the Command, of two Persons so well disposed to, and concerned in the Peace and Happiness of the Kingdom, as we believe you to be; and that the Officers and Sea-men under your Command, are more inclined to return to their Duty to Us, and put a period to these Distempers and Distractions which have so impoverished and dishonoured the Nation, than to widen the Breach, and to raise their Fortunes by Rapine and Violence; which gives Us great incouragement and hope, that God Almighty will heal the Wounds by the same Plaister that made the Flesh Raw; that he will proceed in the same method, in pouring his Blessings upon Us, which he was pleased to use when he began to afflict Us; and that the Manifestation of the good Affection of the Fleet and Sea-men towards us, and the Peace of the Nation, may be the Prologue to that Peace which was first interrupted by the mistake and misunderstanding of their Predecessors, which would be such a Blessing upon Us all, that We should not be less delighted with the manner, than the matter of it: In this Hope and Confidence, We have sent the inclosed Declaration to You, by which you may discern how much We are willing to contribute towards the obtaining the General and Publique Peace: In which, as no man can be more, or so much concern'd; so no man can be more solicitous for it. And We do earnestly desire you, that you will cause the said Declaration to be published to all the Officers and Sea-men of the Fleet; to the end, that they may plainly discern, how much We have put it into their Power, to provide for the Peace and Happiness of the Nation, who have been always understood by them, to be the best and most proper Counsellors for those good Ends. And you are likewise further to declare to them, That We have the same Gracious purpose towards them, which We have expressed towards the Army at Land; and will be as ready to provide for the payment of all Arrears due to them, and for rewarding them according to their several Merits, as We have expressed to the other; and We will always take so particular a care of them, and their condition, as shall manifest Our kindness towards them. And so depending upon Gods Blessing, for infusing those good Resolutions into your and their Hearts, which are best for Us all, We bid you farewell. Given at Our Court at Breda, this 14 day of April, 1660. in the Twelfth Year of Our Reign.

Subscribed,

To Our Trusty and Well-beloved General Monck, and General Mountague, Generals at Sea: To be communicated to the Fleet.

Clarges on the fifth day of May began his Journey to his Majesty; and at his parting from the General, he gave him no other Instructions, but to give the King all manner of assurance of his Fidelity to him, and his Resolution to improve all his Opportunities to his Service; desiring him

The General Instructions to Clarges, when he began his Journey.

1660. him not to move any thing to his Majesty, either for himself, or him, or any other in his Company, That his Majesty might see that both he, and those so nearly concern'd with him in his Restauration, sought more the Publique Good of their Country, than their own private Honour or Profit: which he did faithfully observe at that time, and ever after.

The Solemn manner of proclaiming his Majesty in London and Westminster.

And three days after the Lords and Commons having agreed upon a Proclamation to that purpose, his Majesty was proclaimed with great Solemnity in the Cities of London and Westminster, the Lords and Commons, and the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London being present; the manner was as followeth:

The Lords came out of their Houses into the Painted-Chamber, where they continued till they were placed in Order; the Earl of Manchester first, then the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Oxford, &c. Thus they walked out along with the Heralds before them, through the Court of Requests, and Westminster-Hall, to the Palace, where they staid before the Hall-Gate, whilest Mr. Bish, one of the Heralds, and Mr. Ryly that officiated as King at Arms, with a loud Voice, proclaimed the King in these words.

'ALthough it can no way be doubted, but that 'his Majesties Right and Title to his Crown 'and Kingdoms, is, and was every way compleat'ed by the Death of His most Royal Father of 'Glorious Memory, without the Ceremony or 'Solemnity of a Proclamation: Yet since Procla'mations in such cases have always been used, to 'the end that all good Subjects might, upon this 'occasion, testifie their Duty and Respect; And 'since the Armed Violence, and other the Cala'mities of many years last past, have hitherto 'deprived Us of any such Opportunity, wherein 'we might express our Loyalty and Allegiance to 'his Majesty; We therefore the Lords and Com'mons now Assembled in Parliament, together with 'the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council 'of the City of London, and other Free-men of 'this Kingdom now present, do according to 'Our Duty and Allegiance, heartily, joyfully, and 'unanimously acknowledge and proclaim, That 'upon the Decease of Our late Soveraign Lord 'King Charles, the Imperial Crown of the Realm 'of England and of all the Kingdoms, Dominions, and Rights belonging to the same, did by 'Inherent Birth-right, and lawful and undoubted Succession, descend and come to his 'most Excellent Majesty CHARLES the Second; as being Lineally, Justly, and Lawfully next Heir of the Royal Blood of this Realm; 'And that by the Goodness and Providence 'of Almighty GOD, He is of England, Scot'land, France and Ireland, the most Potent, 'Mighty, and Undoubted King: And thereunto 'we must humbly and faithfully do submit, and 'oblige Our Selves, our Heirs and Posterities.

The Proclamation being ended, the Lords and Commons took their Coaches, and proceeded in this Order; First, the Head-Bayliff of Westminster, and his Servants, did ride along with white Staffs to prepare the way; Then followed a gallant Troop of the Officers of the Army, and other Gentlemen, with Trumpets before them; Then the Life-Guard, commanded by Captain Philip Howard, very well mounted, and richly cloath'd; after them a Class of Trumpets, and three Heralds; then a Herald between the Serjeant to the Commons, and the Mace of the Council; Next, Ryly King at Arms, in a rich Coat of the Kings Arms, betwixt Serjeant Norfolk, and Serjeant Middleton; after whom came the Usher of the Black-Rod, and Mr. Bish. These thus Ushering the way, the Earl of Manchester followed in his Coach and six Horses, the Speaker of the House of Commons in his, then his Excellency General Monck in his; after which followed both Houses of Parliament in Coaches, and after them a Troop of Horse: in this manner they came to White-Hall, where they proclaimed his Majesty, a second time; and then proceeded to Temple-Bar, where the Gates being shut, the King at Arms, with Trumpets before him, knocked, and demanded entrance: The Lord Mayor appointed some to ask, Who it was that knock'd? The King at Arms reply'd, That if they would open the Wicket, and let the Lord Mayor come thither, he would to him deliver his Message. The Lord Mayor came then on Horseback richly habited, in a Crimson-Velvet Gown, to the Gate, and then the Trumpets sounded; and after silence being made, Alderman Bateman, by order of the Lord Mayor, demanded of the Herald, Who he was, and what was his Message? To which he answer'd, with his Hat on, We are the Heralds at Arms, appointed and Commanded by the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament, to demand Entrance into the Famous City of London, to proclaim Charles the Second King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, and we expect your speedy Answer to this Demand. To which after a little consultation amongst themselves, Alderman Bateman answered, Their Message was accepted, and the Gates should be immediately opened; which was done accordingly.

The King at Arms entred first, Trumpets sounding before him, and was joyfully received by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, and all the Officers of the City Militia gallantly accoutred, both sides of the streets were lin'd by the Trained-bands of London, from Temple-Bar to the Old-Exchange, who stood all with their Swords drawn: The City-Troops march'd next to the Life-guard, then the Lord Mayor and Aldermen; after whom the Heralds, and the rest, as before: When they came to Chancery-lane end, they proclaim'd his Majesty a third time: And from thence they march'd to Cheap-side, where he was proclaim'd a fourth time; and from thence to the Old-Exchange, where he was again proclaim'd. The shouts and acclamations of the people, at this gallant and orderly Procession, were very great, and their demonstrations of joy, at the several Stations, when the Ceremony, of proclaiming was performing, not to be expressed; sometimes they lookt upwards, and then presently cast their eyes towards the General, as if they intended at one time to pay a Tribute of Thankfulness to Heaven, and his Excellency, who had done an action so glorious and transcendent, that this present Age cannot but admire, and our Posterity will with difficulty believe: And then again they cry'd out, God save King Charles the Second; as if they acknowledged that days joy, as a recompence sufficient sufficient for all their Pressures and Grievances; so excellent a Tutor is the want of that, which long Fruition makes us imperfectly understand.

The Guns from the Tower were all shot off, and all the Streets that Evening were fill'd with Bone-fires, and the Air with the sound of ringing of Bells; and all seem'd too little to celebrate the content and exultation of the people, at that days Solemnity.

Commissary Clarges made such speed in his journey to his Majesty, that on Tuesday the 8th of May in the morning, which was the day after the happy making of this Proclamation, he arrived at Bergen-ap-Zome in Holland, half a days journey from Breda: There the Governour gave him a very Honourable Reception, and accommodated him with his Coach and six Horses to Breda; and a League before he came to the Town, the Lord Gerrard met him with two Coaches and six Horses, and accompanied him to his Majesty, who received him with most Gracious Expressions of satisfaction, as well that he was the first Authorized Messenger, that came to him with the News of the intire Submission of his Kingdoms and Army to his Obedience; as for his Relation to that most Renowned General, from whose prudent Conduct and Courage principally, all that Happiness was derived to his Majesty, and his People, Commissary Clarges his arrival at Breda, where he is graciously received by his Majesty.

He presented to his Majesty a Letter from the General, in Answer to his Majesties sent before to him; and in it was inclosed the Address of the Officers of the Army.

The General's Letter to his Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

THE Parliament being Sitting at my receipt of your Majesties gracious Letter to me, 'I thought my self obliged in duty to present it 'to the House of Commons; whose sense of it, and 'of that other your Majesty was pleased to send 'to them by Sir John Greenvill, I doubt not but 'your Majesty will receive an accompt of by some 'of their own Members: I have also communi-'cated your Majesties Letter and Declaration to 'as many of the Chief Officers of the Army as 'were present in or about London, who resented 'your Majesties Clemency and Grace to them 'with very great Duty and Affection, as your 'Majesty may perceive in the inclosed Address, 'which within few hours after their Convention, 'they deliver'd to me.

'By all which circumstances, I hope I may as-'sure your Majesty, That as the Army hath been 'very Instrumental in their Endeavours to fur-'ther the Settlement, Peace and Prosperity of 'your Majesties Kingdoms and Dominions; so 'nothing will be dearer to them and me, than 'to be found in our Generations pursuing those 'good Ends, which may render us serviceable 'and acceptable to our Country, to give unto 'Cæsar the things that are Cæsars, and to God the things which are Gods.

May the 5th.

May it please your Majesty,
Your Majesties most humble, and Obedient Servant and Subject,

George Monck.

This Letter was dictated by his Excellency in the presence of many Officers of the Army; but he writ another short Letter with his own hand: Wherein he acquainted his Majesty, 'That he 'chose to send Mr. Clarges to him, because he 'was the only Person he trusted in the neerest 'Concernments and Consultations for his Re-'stauration, as one to whom he desired his Ma-'jesty to give Credit to what he should say on 'that behalf.

After the reading of these Letters, and the Address inclosed in the former of them, his Majesty Knighted him, and by many kind expressions demonstrated his sense of his Merit and Service to him; and after he had been about an hour with his Majesty, he had his permission to attend his Royal Highness the Duke of York, and the Duke of Gloucester, who received him with that affability which was inherent in them, the most accomplished and most generous Princes in the world. From them he waited on the Princess of Orange, who expressed great content at his Relation of the News he brought; and at his parting from her, she gave order he should with his whole Retinue be entertained at her Charge whilest he staid in Breda, and have a Coach and six Horses of her Highnesses, with Equipage suitable, to wait on him when he should give order for it. He went then to visit the Lord Chancellour, and from him the Marquess of Ormond, as those deservedly (next the Royal Family) in greatest Credit with his Majesty, both of them receiving him with that respect, as the import and relation of his Message and Person did deserve.

Clarges Knighted by his Majesty, presents himself to the two Dukes, the Princess Royal, and others of the most Eminent of the Court.

The Two Houses of Parliament having perfected the Instructions for their Commissioners, and the Letter to his Majesty, they were delivered to them, and they began their Journey towards the Hague (at which place his Majesty intended to meet them) on the 11th of May, the time prefix'd in the Instructions for their Journey.

Instructions for Aubry Earl of Oxford, Charles Earl of Warwick, Lionel Earl of Middlesex, Lycester Viscount Hereford, George Lord Berkley, Robert Lord Brook; the Lord Herbert, the Lord Mandevel, the Lord Bruce, the Lord Castletowne, the Lord Falkland, the Lord Fairfax, Denzel Holles Esquire, Sir Horatio Townsend, Sir John Holland, Sir Anthony Ashley-Cooper, Sir George Booth, Sir Henry Cholmley.

The Instructions were thus; (Viz.)

The Parliaments Instructions to their Commissioners, who were sent to wait upon his Majesty.

YOu are to begin your Journey towards his Majesty on Friday next, and make a speedy repair to such place where his Majesty shall 'be, and humbly to present the Letters where-'with you are respectively intrusted by both 'Houses of Parliament.

'You are to acquaint his Majesty with what 'great Joy and Acclamation he was proclaimed in 'and about the Cities of London and Westminster, 'upon the eighth day of May instant, and pre-'sent the Proclamation it self to his Majesty, and 'to acquaint him with the Orders of both Hou-'ses to have the same proclaimed throughout the 'Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and the Do-'minion of Wales, and the Town of Berwick up-'on Tweed.

'And that both Houſes have Ordered,

'That all and every the Miniſters throughout 'the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, be in- 'joyned in their Publick Prayers to pray for his 'Moſt Excellent Majeſty, and for the moſt Illu- 'ſtrious Prince James Duke of York, and the 'reſt of the Royal Progeny. And alſo have or- 'dered, That the aſſumed Arms of the late pre- 'tended Commonwealth, where-ever they are 'ſtanding, be taken down; and that his Maje- 'ſties Arms be ſet up inſtead thereof: And 'you are to communicate to his Majeſty the Re- 'ſolution of both Houſes relating to theſe In- 'ſtructions.

'You are to acquaint his Majeſty with the 'earneſt deſire of both Houſes, that his Majeſty 'will be pleaſed to make a ſpeedy return to his 'Parliament, and to the Exerciſe of his Kingly 'Office; and that in order thereunto, both Hou- 'ſes have given direction to General Mountague, 'one of the Generals at Sea, and other Officers of 'the Fleet, to obſerve ſuch Commands as his Ma- 'jeſty ſhall pleaſe to give him or them for diſpo- 'ſal of the Fleet, in order to his Majeſties return. 'And you are to communicate to his Majeſty the 'reſolution of both Houſes relating to this In- 'ſtruction.

John Brown, Cl. Parl.

The Houſe of Commons added one more Inſtruction to the Commiſſioners; which was, To beſeech his Majeſty, that the Parliament may know where he purpoſeth to take Shipping, and to Land at his coming over, that preparation may be made for his Reception; and which of his Majeſties Houſes he intended to make uſe of at his firſt coming to London; And whether he will come all the way by Land after he comes on Shore, or whether he will pleaſe to come by Water from Graves-End to London? And that his Majeſty will declare in what manner he is pleaſed to be Received.

The Parliament and City Commiſſioners have their Audience from his Majeſty at the Hague.

All theſe Commiſſioners in three days after their departure from London, arrived at the Hague; And on Wedneſday the ſixteenth of May, our Stile, they had their ſeveral Audiences by his Majeſty who received them all with a ſweet and ſerene Countenance, and a Heart full of content and good inclinations towards them; and all the City Commiſſioners were Knighted by him. He gave that Evening his Diſpatch to Sir Thomas Clarges, and Commanded him to acquaint the General, He intended to take Shipping at the Bay of Scheveling on Monday after, and to Sayl to Dover, and Land there; from whence he would immediately go to Canterbury, and ſtay there ſome time to determine of the manner of Entrance into London. The Fleet was ſome days before in purſuance of the Orders of both Houſes in the ſaid Bay.

Sir Thomas Clarges returns with intimation of his Majeſties Reſolution.

On Thurſday early in the Morning, Sir Thomas Clarges attempted by Boat from Scheveling, to get on Board the Admiral, but the Weather was ſo ſtormy he could not do it, till towards the Evening; and then General Mountague ordered the Norwich Frigate for his Tranſportation: The Winds were ſo contrary, and the Weather ſo ſtormy, that the Pilot could not make any Land in Engl[illegible] till Monday morning, at which time he Landed at Aldbrough in Suffolk, and immediatety from thence ſent an Expreſs to the General, and the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, with intimation of his Majeſties Reſolutions: Whereupon his Excellency with a great and gallant Company of the chiefeſt of the Nobility and Gentry of England, ſet foward from London the 22th of May; and for the more conveniency of Quartering ſo numerous a Company, he adviſ'd them to divide themſelves into Troops according to the ſeveral Counties, and the intereſt of the Noble-men preſent.

At Rocheſter Sir Thomas Clarges met the General, and preſented unto him his Majeſties Letter, with Royal and moſt indear'd Aſſurances of Eſteem from the Beſt of Kings, to the Worthieſt and moſt deſerving of Subjects. The Letter was dated the 26th of May. Directed,

To Our Truſty and Well-beloved General Monck, to be communicated to the Officers of the Army.

CHARLES R.

His Majeſties Letter to the General.

TRuſty and Well-beloved, We Greet you well. You will eaſily believe that your 'Letter of the fifth of this Month by Sir Tho- 'mas Clarges, was very welcom to us: And that 'as we muſt always acknowledge the infinite 'Mercy of God Almighty in diſpoſing the Hearts 'of the Army in ſuch an intire obedience to 'you, for the promoting and carrying on Our 'Service, and the Peace of the Kingdom; So 'We can never be without a Juſt Eſteem of ſuch 'a great and well-diſciplin'd Army, upon which 'the Eyes of the World are ſo much fixed. We 'muſt deſire you to return Our very hearty 'Thanks to the Officers and Souldiers for their 'Affection and Obedience to Us; and to aſſure 'them from Us, that we ſhall always have an in- 'tire Confidence in them, and ever acknowledge 'them to be the great Inſtruments of reſtoring 'Us the Peace, and Happineſs, and ſecurity to 'Us all: And therefore they may not only with 'all imaginable confidence aſſure themſelves, that 'We will punctually perform whatever We 'have promiſed to them into Our Declaration or 'Letter, but that We will take them into Our par- 'ticular Care and Protection. And if the Licence 'and diſtemper of the Time ſhall ſo far tran- 'ſport any men, as to preſume upon memory of 'former animoſities, and of what is paſt, to 'uſe any reproaches towards them, We will 'look upon ſuch Perſons as Diſturbers of the 'Peace and Security of the Kingdom, and ſhall 'cauſe them to be proſecuted accordingly. And 'towards this Settlement and Compoſure, and 'for the prevention of many inconveniencies 'which may fall out, We think nothing ſo neceſ- 'ſary as our Preſence with you, by which (in a 'very ſhort time) every Member of the Army, 'who ſhall faithfully adhere to you in advance- 'ment of the Publick Peace, ſhall with the Bleſ- 'ſing of God, find himſelf ſecured and provided 'for, to his ſatisfaction. And longing for that 'bleſſed time, We bid you heartily farewel.

His Excellency being in his Journey, had no opportunity to communicate this Letter to any any more of his Officers than those that were present with him.

But the Fame of his Majesties transcendent Vertues had prevented this written discovery of them, and made indelible impressions of duty and affection in the Army.

The King intended to have taken shipping on Monday, but the Crosnes of the Winds forc'd him a little to defer it. His Royal Highness the Duke of York, went on Monday and Tuesday to the Fleet, to take Charge thereof as Lord High Admiral: And on Wednesday the 23 his Sacred Majesty, the Queen of Bohemia, the Princess Royal of Orange, the Dukes of York and Glouceſter, and the Prince of Orange, went on board the Naseby, (which his Majesty now named the Royal Charles (where after a Re-past, The Queen of Bohemia, the Princes Royal, and the Prince of Orange, her Son, took leave of his Majesty, and then the Fleet set sail for England: His Royal Highness the Duke of York came in the London, and the Duke of Glouceſter in the Swiftsure, now called the James.

The King and the Dukestake Shipping for England.

During the time his Majesty had remain'd at the Hague, and all the way thither from Breda, the States of Holland entertain'd him with great Magnificence; and at his departure they presented him with a rich Bed, of the Value of Seven Thousand pounds Sterling; and as much Linnen as was valued at a Thousand pounds.

His Majesties Entertainment from the States of Holland.

On Friday about three of the Clock in the Morning, the Fleet was in sight of Dover, whereupon an Express was sent to the General (then newly come to Canterbury) to hast to Dover; which he presently did, and about ten of the Clock came thither.

His Excellency before he came from Canterbury, advising with the Earl of Lindsey, and some of the other Noble-men that accompanied him, about the conveniency of his Majesties stay at Dover, was informed that he could have no accommodation there for a fourth part of his Train, and those that came to wait on him, and therefore he resolv'd humbly to move him, at his Landing, to proceed on directly to Canterbury.

His Majesty Lands at Dover.

About One in the Afternoon, his Majesty Landed at the Beech near Dover-Peer, with the Duke of York, and the Duke of Glouceſter, and many Noble-men an Gentlemen. All that were present put themselves into Posture, to see the Meeting of the King and the General. The Admirers of Majesty, were Jealous on His Majesties Behalf, of too low Condescension; and the Lovers of Duty fearful on the other Side of an Ostentation of Merit: But such an humble Prostration was made by the General, and so generous a Reception by his Majesty kissing and imbracing him, that all Parties were satisfied, to admiration. And his Excellency from that time received so great an Impression of the marvellous Goodnes of his Majesty, that he resolv'd what before he had perform'd out of bounden Duty to his Liege-Lord, should be for ever continued with the same observing, out of Loyal Affections to his Gracious Soveraign.

His Reception there.

His Majesty walked from the Water-side, towards the Town, with the General, a Canopy being carried over his Head, and a Chair of State by him; and upon his Excellencies Motion, for his going to Canterbury, for the Reasons before expressed, he hasted to his Coach; in his Passage to which, he was met by the Mayor and Aldermen of the Town, with Mr. Reading their Minister, who presented his Majesty with a large Bible, with Gold Clasps: At one end of the Coach next the King, sate the Duke of York, and at the other the Duke of Glouceſter, and the General, and the Duke of Buckingham sate in the Boot. About two miles from Dover, his Majesty took Horse, his Royal Brothers rode on his right hand, and the General on his left; After whom the Duke of Buckingham, and several other Noble-men and Gentlemen follow'd in gallant Equipage. 1660.

At his Majesties Entrance into Canterbury, he was met by the Mayor and Aldermen, and Mr. Lovelace the Recorder, who made an eloquent Speech to him; the Mayor also presented him with a Tankard of Massie Gold, and then conducted him to the Palace, where he remained till Monday.

His Majesty confers the Order of the Garter, upon the General, and the Honour of Knighthood upon the Earl of Winchelsea, the Lord Mordant and divers others.

The next day after his Arrival at Canterbury, his Majesty Dignified his Excellency with the Honour of the Garter; he was brought up to the King by the Earl of Winchelsea, and the Lord Mordant, who were both Knighted with him; and his Royal Highness the Duke of York, and the Duke of Glouceſter, in great Testimony of Respect to him, assisted at the Ceremony, and put on the Garter, and the George; Mr. Morrice was also Knighted, and Declared Secretary of State; and that Evening his Majesty sent the General a Warrant to be Master of his Horse.

His Majesty likewise at Canterbury, conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Major-General Massey, Alderman Robinson, Mr. Daniel Harvey, Mr. Thomas Stewkley, Colonel Rossiter, Captain Philip Howard, and Mr Robert Paston. Moreover, his Excellency, the Earl of Southampton, and Mr. Secretary Morrice, were Sworn of the Privy-Council.

He is entertained at Rochester by Col. Gibbons.

On Monday following, his Majesty came into Rochester, where, after he had a little refreshed himself, he went, to Chatham, to see the Royal Soveraign, and returned that Night to Colonel Gibbons his House, where he lay, and was by the Colonel presented with a most Dutiful and Loyal Address from him and his Regiment which was then Quartered in Rochester.

The Army being drawn up on Black-Heath welcomed his Majesty with great joy and acclamation.

From thence his Majesty marched to Black-Heath, where the Army was drawn up, and was much pleas'd with the sight of it; for indeed they seem'd all men of one age, and one mind, and were for their number, as gallant Troops as were to be seen in the World.

Colonel Knight there most humbly presented to his Majesty a Writing, which contained the most humble and obedient Declaration of the Armies joy, for the Honour of his Majesties presence amongst them; wherein after many dutiful expressions of exalted gladnes for his Majesties Restauration, they besought, That his Majesty would, have now his great Council about him, who had already given proof of their Loyalty and Wisdom both to his Majesty and all his People. They also declared, That as they had not been altogether useless in the Restauration of his Sacred Majesty, to his Crown and Kingdom, and his People to their just Rights thereby; so they should for the future chearfully sacrifice their Lives,

1660. or whatsoever could be more dear unto them, in the service of his Majesty, against all opposers whatsoever, and by a ready Obedience to his Majesties Commands, express themselves better than in words.

The manner of his Majesties Triumphal Cavalcade through the City of London.

When his Majesty came to St. George's Fields, the Lord Major and Aldermen humbly on their knees Reverenc'd him, and the Lord Major presented his Sword, which his Majesty gave back to him; and after a little Collation in a Tent, provided by the Lord Major, his Majesty went towards White-Hall in this manner.

All the Streets were richly adorn'd with Tapistry, from London-Bridge to White-Hall; and as far as Temple-Bar, were equally ranked in good order, the Trained-Band-Forces on the one side of the Street, and the several Companies in their Liveries on the other: From Temple-Bar to White-Hall, the Trained-Bands of Westminster, and the parts adjacent on one side, and some Companies of the Army on the other, to whom was joyn'd a gallant Company of the late King's Officers, Commanded by Sir John Stowell.

The Procession was led by Major General Brown, who had a Troop of Three hundred, all in Cloth of Silver Doublets; then followed Twelve hundred in Velvet Coats, with Foot-men and Liveries attending them in Purple; Then another Troop led by Alderman Robinson, in Buff-Coats with Cloth of Silver-sleeves, and very rich Green Scarfs; and after these a Troop of above a Hundred and fifty with blew Liveries, laced with Silver Lace; with six Trumpeters, and seven Foot-men in Sea-green and Silver: Then a Troop of Two hundred and twenty, with Thirty Foot-men in Gray and Silver Liveries, and four Trumpeters richly Cloathed; Then another Troop of one hundred and five, with Gray Liveries, and six Trumpets: and another of seventy with five Trumpets: And then three Troops more, two of Three hundred, and one of One hundred, all richly habited, and bravely mounted. After these came two Trumpets with his Majesties Arms; The Sheriffs Men in red Cloaks richly Laced with Silver Lace, to the number of Fourscore, with half-Pikes in their hands: then followed six hundred of the several Companies of London on Horseback, in black Velvet Coats, with Gold Chains, each Company having Foot-men in Liveries attending.

After these came a Kettle-Drum, five Trumpets, and Three Streamers, and many rich Red Liveries with Siver Lace: After these Twelve Ministers, and then another Kettle-Drum, and four Trumpets, and his Majesties Life-guard of Horse, Commanded by the Lord Gerrard; Then three Trumpets in rich Coats, and Satin Doublets, and the City Marshal, with eight Foot-men in French-Green, Trim'd with Crimson and White: The City Waits, and all the City Officers in order: Then the two Sheriffs, and all the Aldermen of London in Scarlet Gowns, and rich Trappings, with Footmen in Liveries, Red Coats Laced with Silver, and Cloth of Gold and Silver. The Heralds and Maces in rich Coats. Then the Lord Major carrying the Sword bare, and next to him the Duke of Buckingham, and the General, and then the Kings Majesty betwixt the Dukes of York and Glocester. Then followed a Troop of Horse with white Colours, and after them, the General's Life-guard, led by Sir Philip Howard: Then five Regiments of the Army-Horse, led by Colonel Knight: And after them, two Troops of Noblemen and Gentlemen.

Thus was his Majesty conducted to his Royal Palace at Whitehall, on the Nine and twentieth day of May, His Birth-day; and with him, Peace and Happiness remain'd to His Kingdoms and People, which all good Men desire may be for ever continued to them, under the happy Government of Him and his Posterity.

His Majesties Reception by the Lords and Commons in Parliament.

When the Lord Major had taken leave of him, he went to the Lords, where he was entertained with a Grave but Eloquent Speech of the Earl of Manchesters, and from thence to the Banquetting-House, where the whole House of Commons attending him, the Speaker, in their Names, expressed the Joyful Sence they all had, to behold his Majesty returned in safety, and thereby an end was put to that Tyranny and Slavery his good People had endured.

He expresseth in brief his Gracious Intentions to them.

The King told them, He was so disordered by his Journey, and with the Noise still sounding in his Ears, (which nevertheless He confess'd was pleasing to him, because it expressed the Affections of his People) that he was thereby unfit to make such a Reply as he desired; But added, That he took no greater Satisfaction to himself in this his Change, than that he found his heart really set to endeavour by all means the restoring of these Nations to their Freedom and Happiness; which he hoped by the Advice of his Parliament to effect: And that, next to the Honour of God, from whom he chiefly owned the Restauration to his Crown, he would study the Welfare of his People; and not only be a true Defender of the Faith, but a Just Assertor of the Laws and Liberties of his Subjects.

After the conclusion of these Ceremonies, he intended to go to Westminster-Abby to offer up a Thanksgiving to GOD for all his Deliverances and Mercies towards him; but by the Weariness he had contracted through the Toil, (however grateful) of that Days Action, he was diverted from his Intention of going thither; yet would he not, for any consideration, be withheld from his Devotion, and his Oblations of Thanks to God, which at that time he made in his Presence-Chamber, because his Chappel was not yet prepared for his Reception.

The two Dukes and other Peers take their Seats in the House of Lords.

The next day the Dukes of York and Glocester took their Places in the House of Peers, as did a while after several other Peers who were made by his Majesty beyond the Seas, and Summoned by Writ; viz. Henry Jermin Earl of St. Albanes, and Baron of St. Edmonds-Bury; John Mordant, Viscount Mordant of Aveland: Sir Marmaduke Langdale, Baron Langdale of Holm; Charles Crofts, Baron Crofts; Sir John Barklay, Baron Barklay.

The chief Officers of State, and of the King's Houshold.

In the first place, after his Majesties Arrival, were appointed the chief Officers of State, and of his Majesty's Houshold, His Highness the Duke of York was Invested with the Office of Lord High-Admiral of England, and Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports. The Lord General Monk was continued Captain-General of all the Forces of the Three Kingdoms, and made Master of the Horse to His Majesty: Sir Edward Hide

Hide (afterwards Earl of Clarendon) was conſtituted Lord High-Chancellour of England: The Earl of Southampton Lord High Treaſurer of England: Sir Edward Nicholas, and Sir William Morrice, Chief Secretaries of State. The Marqueſs of Ormond was appointed Lord Steward: and the Earl of Mancheſter, Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſties Houſhold: Sir Frederick Cornwalis, Treaſurer of the Houſhold; and Sir Charles Barkley Comptroller: and Sir George Carteret Vice-Chamberlain of the Houſhold, and afterwards Treaſurer of the Navy: Beſides ſeveral others, who, for their Eminent Loyalty and good Services, were advanced to Places of Higheſt Truſt and Dignity in Court and Commonwealth. Moreover, His Majeſties Privy-Council conſiſted of theſe Perſons following:

The Lords of His Majeſties Privy-Council.

The Duke of York.
Lord Chancellour.
Marqueſs of Ormond.
Marqueſs of Dorcheſter.
Earl of Lindſey, Lord High-Chamberlain of England.
Earl of Berkſhire.
Earl of Southampton.
Earl of Norwich.
Lord Say and Seal.
Lord Wentworth.
Lord Seymour.
Mr. Denzell Hollis.
Sir Frederick Cornwallis, Treaſurer of His Majeſties Houſhold.
Sir Edward Nicholas.
Sir George Carteret, Vice-Chamberlain to His Majeſty.
Sir Anthony Aſhley-Cooper.
Colonel Charles Howard.
The Duke of Glouceſter.
Lord General Monck.
Marqueſs of Hertford.
Earl of Mancheſter, Lord Chamberlain of the King's Houſhold.
Earl of Northumberland.
Earl of St. Albans.
Earl of Leiceſter.
Lord Culpepper.
Lord Roberts.
Mr. Arthur Anneſly.
Sir Charles Barkley Comptroller of His Majeſties Houſhold.
Sir William Morrice.
General Mountagu.

Military Commands conferred upon ſeveral Lords and Gentlemen.

The Clerks of the Privy-Council were Sir Richard Brown Knight and Baronet, (who having been 19 Years Reſident in the Court of France for His Majeſty and His Royal Father, managed that Imployment with extraordinary Prudence, Addreſs and Integrity, and in whoſe Chappel at Paris the Liturgy of the Church of England had been ſolemnly kept up during its Eclipſe at home) Sir Edward Walker Garter King of Arms. John Nicholas Eſq; Eldeſt Son to the Secretary of State; And Sir George Lane, Secretary to the Marqueſs of Ormond.

In the next place, ſpecial Care was taken for the committing of all Military Offices of higheſt Truſt, as well as the Civil already mentioned, into the hands of ſuch Perſons as were judged moſt faithful to the King's Service; ſo that the Governments of all the moſt Important Caſtles, Fortreſſes and Iſlands, and the firſt Commands of the ſeveral Regiments of the Army, were by the Lord General conferred upon ſuch Lords and other Perſons of Honour, as the King was pleas'd to recommend unto him to that effect, until ſuch time as the Army could conveniently be disbanded. Likewiſe, for the farther ſetling of the Militia of the Nation, there were of the Chief Nobility of the Land Conſtituted Lord-Lieutenants of the ſeveral Counties, each having under them, as Deputy-Lieutenants, ſuch Gentlemen of the ſame Counties as had moſt eminently ſhewn their affections to his Majeſty. 1660.

The Commons ſet upon the Act of General Pardon.

The Houſe of Commons in the mean time, applied themſelves to the perfecting of an Act of General Pardon, which was read Twice in the Houſe the One and Thirtieth of this Moneth, thereby complying with that great Clemency and Indulgence of His Majeſty to His People, expreſſed in his moſt Gracious Letter from Breda. They had in the firſt Propoſition of this Act, deſigned to except from Pardon ſeveral of the Judges of the late King, and others Inſtrumental in the Perpetration of that horrid Treaſon: of which they had in Cuſtody Eight perſons, (viz.) Harriſon, Carew, Clement and Jones, of the Judges; Cook who was the Proſecutor, Hacker Captain of the Halberdeers, and Colonel Axtel, alſo Hugh Peters the Miniſter, a virulent Incendiary in the Action, who, for a while, had been ſculking up and down in ſecret, was at length taken in Southwark: There were others that had been ſeduced into that Treaſon, (viz.) Colonel Richard Ingoldsby, Francis Laſſels, and John Hutchinſon; but ſo much was ſaid in the Houſe in their favours, that they were not made culpable with the reſt. As for Ingoldsby, it was made to appear, that Oliver Cromwell, without his conſent, ſet his Hand and Seal to the Warrant for Execution of the King: Beſides that, by many Actions of his Loyalty ſince, and his Engagement in Sir George Booth's buſineſs, and againſt Lambert, (as is before related) he had given eminent teſtimony of his Abhorrency of ſo foul a Crime. Laſſels had never been in the High Court of Juſtice, and but once at any Meeting with them, and at that time he declared his diſſent to their proceedings. And Hutchinſon had been a very early Convert, and appeared much againſt that execrable Oath of Abjuration of the King's Perſon and Poſterity, in that part of the Parliament which ſate at the time of General Monck's March into London.

The King comes to the Parliament, and gives his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Bills.

This Act of General Pardon had ſo many particulars in it of different nature, that it took up very much time; but nevertheleſs, the Parliament omitted not to perfect ſome neceſſary Laws for the ſafety of the Government. On the Second of June, the Parliament having the day before intimated to the King, that they had prepared Three Bills for Him, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and having ſent to the Houſe of Commons to attend him, there gave his Royal Aſſent to them; (viz.) To an ACT for Confirmation of an Ordinance made by the Lords and Commons in his abſence for the raiſing of Seventy Thouſand Pounds a Month for Three Months. An ACT for Confirmation of the preſent Parliament.

1660. And, An ACT for the Continuance of Proceſs in Judicial Proceedings. Which laſt was for avoiding of Diſcontinuances in the Courts of Weſtminſter, becauſe the firſt four Returns of Eaſter-Term could not be conveniently kept, and to prevent the Abatement of Writs that were not iſſued in the King's Name before his Return to the Exerciſe of Government. 1660.

His Majeſty alſo preſt them (as well by his particular Charge, as by the Lord Chancellor's Speech) to haſten their paſſing of the Bill of Indemnity, which (as well as all other Bills of Publick Concernment) he was ready to Sign; whereupon this Bill was from thenceforth the Grand Buſineſs of both Houſes until it was finiſhed: Nor could it be finiſhed till after ſome conſiderable time, and many large and ſerious Conſultations. In the mean time, the Two Houſes themſelves deſired to lay hold upon this Amneſty in the Name of the whole Nobility and Commonalty of the Nation: which being eaſily granted by the King, the Ceremony was performed in the Banquetting-Houſe, where they waited upon his Majeſty to that end.

About this time came forth a Proclamation, whereby it was declared, That all ſuch of the late King's Judges as did not render themſelves, ſhould be Excepted out of the General Pardon: And thereupon Adrian Scroop, and Nineteen others of them, Concealed in ſeveral parts, Preſented themſelves to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and were Committed to Cuſtody. The Lord Grey of Grooby, and Four and twenty more were dead, and Thomas Scot, and Nineteen others eſcaped beyond the Seas, but were attainted by Act of Parliament, as ſhall be hereafter expreſſed; And Scot was, ſhortly after his Eſcape, taken at Bruxels, and by the diligence of the King's Agent there ſent into England, and ſent to the Tower.

The Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance taken by both Houſes of Parliament.

On the 4th of June, the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance to the King were tendered to all the Members of both Houſes of Parliament, with the King's Servants and Officers of his Houſhold, by the Lord Steward, and the Lord Chamberlain: And, by Order of Parliament, of the 4th of the ſame Month, the Lord General was deſired to take an effectual Care, that the ſame Oaths ſhould be Adminiſtred to all the Officers and Soldiers of the Armies under his Command. And the Lord Chancellor to that end was alſo deſired to Iſſue forth Commiſſions under the Great Seal of England, to ſuch Perſons as the Lord General ſhould nominate and appoint, for adminiſtring the ſaid Oaths to the Officers and Soldiers accordingly. This Order was with all imaginable Care executed both by the General and the Chancellor: And to ſettle the Army ſo as it might be moſt ſerviceable to His Majeſty, he removed ſeveral Colonels and other Officers, and placed divers of the Loyal Nobility and Gentry in their places.

His Majeſties Arrival Congratulated by the People from all parts of the Nation.

As the Generality of the People had a little before, upon the concluſion of His Majeſties Admiſſion into his Dominions, and His preparation to come over, given great demonſtrations of their Affection and Loyalty to him, by their univerſal alacrity in Proclaiming him throughout the Three Nations; So likewiſe, immediately after he was come, they were no leſs forward to manifeſt their Duty and Allegiance by Congratulatory Addreſſes from all parts of the Kingdom, (the like duty being perform'd by ſeveral of the Nobility and Gentry both of Scotland and Ireland: alſo thoſe Towns and Corporations that had bought out their ſeveral Fee-Farm-Rents belonging Formerly to the Crown, and by the late Common-wealth alienated from it, ſent their Deputies to His Majeſty, to make a voluntary Surrender of them back again unto Him. Others preſented him with ſumms of Gold, and other Gifts according to their abilities: But the City of London, as being the firſt, the richeſt and moſt Honourable, and the Seat of Kings for many Ages, judg'd themſelves oblig'd in point of Duty and Reputation, to exceed all the reſt in the glory of their performances toward their Soveraign; and therefore to the ſplendour of their former preparations at his firſt Reception, and Triumphal Extrada, they added the Coſt of a moſt Magnificent Entertainment at Guild-Hall, (which was for that very purpoſe richly beautified and adorn'd) to which the King, the two Princes his Brothers, the Lords of the Privy-Council, the Two Houſes of Parliament, and the Chief Officers of State being ſolemnly invited, were, on Thurſday the 5th of July, conducted thither in very great Pomp by the Lord Major and the Grandees of the City, where they were Treated in a Royal Manner with the choiceſt of Delicacies, with exellent Muſick, and whatever elſe could be thought on, or delightful for ſo illuſtrious an Aſſembly.

His Entertainment at Guild-Hall.

Nor was His Majeſty wanting on the other ſide to give ſuch publick Teſtimonies of his Vertue and Prudence, as might render him deſervedly glorious in the eſteem of all ſober and moderate Perſons, and that by ſeveral wholſom Edicts, eſpecially by that ſeaſonable Proclamation which he Publiſhed, one of the firſt things he did after his Arrival, for the diſcountenancing and puniſhing of Debauchery, Profaneneſs, and all manner of Vice: Dated the 31 of May 1660.

He ſets forth a Proclamation againſt Debauchery and Prophaneneſs.

The King ſate very frequently in Council about the great Affairs of Government; and upon Information that many Iriſh Rebels had in unuſual numbers reſorted from beyond the Seas to England and Ireland, and were ſo inſolent as to diſpoſſeſs many Soldiers, and Adventurers in Ireland, who had poſſeſſion of their forfeited Eſtates; at the humble Requeſt of the Parliament, the King publiſh'd a Proclamation, Commanding all Iriſh Rebels (ſuch only excepted as by Articles had the Liberty of reſiding in his Majeſties Dominions, and have not forfeited the ſame,) that ſtill ſtay in, or ſhall reſort to, England or Ireland, to be apprehended and proceeded againſt as Rebels and Traytors: And that the Adventurers and Soldiers ſhould not be diſturbed in their Poſſeſſions, until the King, by Advice of Parliament, ſhall take further Order, or they be Legally Evicted. And requiring all Officers both Civil and Military, to ſee the ſaid Proclamation put in Execution.

The Kings Proclamation concerning the Iriſh Rebels.

But notwithſtanding his Majeſties great Care and Zeal to Settle and Compoſe all publick Differences, many ill-affected People in Pamphlets aſperſed his Actions, maliciouſly endeavouring to inſinuate, that he intended nothing leſs than the performance of his Promiſes from

Breda

Breda, which made him send a Message to the House of Commons by Sir William Morrice, to quicken their Debates about the Act of General Pardon and Indemnity, as that which would best quiet the minds of his Subjects.

The Kings Message to the House of Commons about the Act of General Pardon.

He told them, 'He had too ample a manifestation of their affections and duty towards him, (the good Effects of which was notorious to the World) to make the least doubt of the continuance and improvement thereof, or in the least degree to dislike what they had done, or to complain of what they had left undone: And that he knew well the Weight of those Affairs, which depended upon their Counsels, and the time that must unavoidably be spent, where there must be naturally difference of Opinions and Judgments amongst those, whose desires of the Publick Peace and Safety were the same. And that neither he nor they must be over much troubled, if they found their good Intention, and unwearied pains taken to reduce those good Intentions into real Acts for the quiet and security of the Nation, mis-represented and misinterpreted, by those who are in truth afflicted to see the Publick Distractions, by Gods Blessing, so near an end; and by others, upon whose weakness, fears and jealousies, the activity and cunning of those ill men hath had too great an Influence.

'That how wonderful and miraculous soever the great harmony of affections between him and his Subjects is, (it being so visible to the World, that there scarce appears the view of any Cloud to over-shadow or disturb it) yet it is not to be thought that God Almighty had wrought the Miracle to that degree, that a Nation so miraculously divided for so many years, would be so soon and intirely united in their affections and endeavours as were to be wished; but that the Evil Consciences of many continued so awake for mischief, that they would not be willing to take rest themselves, or suffer others to take it: And that they all had too sad Experience of the unhappy effects of fears and jealousies (how groundless and unreasonable soever) nor to think it very necessary to apply all timely and proper Remedies to those Distempers, and to prevent the inconveniences and mischiefs which so naturally flow from thence: That he well foresaw, that the great violation which the Laws of the Land had for so many years sustained, had filled the hearts of the people with a terrible apprehension of insecurity to themselves, if all they had said and done should be liable to be examined and punished by those Laws which had been so violated; and that nothing could establish the security of King and People, but a full Provision, that the returning to the reverence and obedience of the Law, (which is good for all) should not turn to the ruine of any, who were willing and fit to receive that Protection hereafter from the Law, and to pay that subjection to it which were just and necessary; and therefore, he said, he made a free Offer of a General Pardon in such a manner as was expressed in his Declaration; and how ready and desirous he was to make good the same, appeared by his Proclamation issued out upon and according to their desire: However, it was evident, that all 'he had offered, or did offer, did not enough 'compose the minds of his people; not in their 'Opinions could their security be provided for, 'till the Act of Indemnity and Oblivion were passed. He said, He found great industry used (by those who did not wish that Peace to the Kingdom they ought to do) to perswade his good Subjects that he had no mind to make good his Promises, which he desired to perform for his own sake, as well as theirs. And that therefore he did very earnestly recommend it to them, that all expedition might be used in the passing that most necessary Act; whereby his good Subjects generally would be satisfied, that their security was in their own hands, and depended upon their future actions, and that they were free for all past; and so all the endeavours of ill men would be disappointed, who would perswade them not to do well now, because they had done amiss heretofore. And that he was the more ingag'd to this his recommendation, because upon the reflection of their Eminent Zeal and affection for his Service, and hearty Concurrence with him in all things desired from them, men were apt to perswade others (though not believing it themselves) that the passing of this Act was therefore not desired, because he did not enough press the dispatch of it; which he did desire from his heart, and was confident they would the sooner do it, upon his earnest recommendation. 1660.

This Message did so much quicken their Debates, that they dispatch'd the Bill in a very short time, and sent it up to the Lords, and the Peoples minds were much composed thereby; and the more, for that his Majesty by a Proclamation after it, did declare a kind of impatience for the delay thereof.

General Monck created Duke of Albemarle.

About the beginning of July, General Monck was by Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, made Duke of Albemarle, Earl of Torrington, Baron, Monk of Potheridge, Beauchampe, and Teyes, and summoned by Writ to the House of Peers. The Titles of Albemarle and Beauchampe, were conferred on him, because he was descended from Margaret, one of the Daughters and Co-heirs of Richard Beauchampe, Earl of Albemarle and Warwick, who was married to the Famous Warriour John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, well known in France, whose Son John had only one Daughter married to Edward Grey Viscount Lisle, whose Daughter and Heir Elizabeth Grey was married to Arthur Plantagenet, a Natural Son of King Edward the Fourth, who was in her right Viscount Lisle; and Frances, one of the Daughters and Co-heirs of the said Viscount Lisle, was married to Sir Thomas Monk Great Grand-father to the present Duke of Albemarle.

General Mountague made Earl of Sandwich.

And a few days after, Mr. Edward Montague, one of the Generals at Sea, was made a Knight of the Order of the Garter, and by Letters Patents dignified with the Honours of Earl of Sandwich, Viscount Mountague of Hinchingbrook, and Baron of S. Neots. And the Marquess of Ormond was made Earl of Brecknock, and Baron Butler of Lanthony; and these two in the same Order they were created, had Writs to summon them to the House of Peers. Which Marquess was afterwards created the Duke of Ormond.

The Lords in Parliament were in Conſultation to except all from Pardon that had been Judges in any High Court of Juſtice, which was no more than ſuch men deſerved, who could ſo maliciouſly contribute to the Subverſion of the good Laws and Government of their Native Country: But the King's Clemency extended to all who were not guilty of his Fathers Murder, and obſerving thoſe Debates to obſtruct much the ſpeedy perfecting that Bill he ſo earneſtly deſired to have finiſhed, on the 27th of July he went to the ſaid Houſe, and in a handſom and moſt gracious Speech, expreſſed his Zeal for it in the following words:

My Lords,

The Kings Speech to the Parliament to haſten the perfecting of the Act of Oblivion.

'When I came firſt hither to you, which 'was within two or three days after I 'came to White-Hall, I did with as much earneſtneſs as I could, both by my ſelf, and the Chancellour, recommend to you and the Houſe of Commons, the ſpeedy diſpatch of the Act of Indemnity, as a neceſſary Foundation of that Security We all pray for: I did ſince, by a particular Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons, again preſs them to haſten that important work. And did likewiſe by a Proclamation publiſh to all the Kingdom, That I did with impatience expect that that Act would be preſented to me 'for my Aſſent, as the moſt reaſonable and ſolid Foundation of that Peace, Happineſs, and Security I hope and pray for to my ſelf, and all my Dominions. I will not deny it to you, I thought the Houſe of Commons too long about that work; and therefore now it is come up to you, I would not have you guilty of the 'ſame delay. I thank God I have the ſame intentions and Reſolutions, now I am here with 'you, which I had at Breda, and believe that I owe my being here, to Gods bleſſing upon the 'intentions and Reſolutions I then expreſſed to 'have. I will read to you what I then ſaid:

'And to the end that the fear of Puniſhment may not engage any, Conſcious to themſelves 'of what is paſſed, to a perſeverance in Guilt for the future, by expoſing the quiet and happineſs of their Country in the Reſtauration both of King, Peers and People, to their juſt, Ancient and Fundamental Rights; We do by theſe Preſents declare, That we do grant a 'Free and General Pardon, which We are ready upon demand, to paſs under Our Great Seal of England, to all Our Subjects of what 'Degree or Quality ſoever, who within forty 'days after the publiſhing hereof, ſhall lay 'hold upon this Our Grace and Favour, and 'ſhall by any publick Act declare their doing ſo; 'And that they return to the Loyalty and Obedience of good Subjects (excepting only ſuch perſons as ſhall hereafter be excepted by Parliament.)

'Thoſe only excepted, let all Our loving 'Subjects, how faulty ſoever, relye upon the 'Word of a King, ſolemnly given by this preſent Declaration, That no Crime whatſoever committed againſt Us or Our Royal Father, before the Publication of this, ſhall ever riſe in Judgment or be brought in Queſtion againſt any 'of them, to the leaſt endamagement of them, either to their Lives, Liberties, or Eſtates, or (as far forth as lies in Our power) ſo much as to the prejudice of their Reputations, by any reproach or term of diſtinction from the reſt of 'Our beſt Subjects: We declaring and ordaining, 'That henceforward all Notes of Diſcord, Seperation and Difference of Parties be utterly abolliſht among all Our Subjects, whom We invite and conjure to a perfect Union among themſelves under Our Protection, for the re-ſettlement of Our juſt Rights, and Theirs, in a Free Parliament; by which, upon the Word of a King, We will be advized.

'My Lords, If you do not joyn with Me in 'exting uiſhing this Fear, which keeps the hearts 'of men awake, and apprehenſive of ſafety and 'ſecurity, you keep me from performing my Promiſe, which if I had not made, I am perſwaded neither I nor you had been now here. I pray 'let us not deceive thoſe who brought or permitted us to come together. I knew well there 'were ſome men who could neither forgive themſelves, nor be forgiven by Us; and I thank you for your juſtice towards thoſe, the immediate Murtherers of my Father. And I will deal 'truly with you, I never thought of excepting any other. I pray think well upon what I have offered, and the benefit you and I have received 'from that offer; and incourage and oblige all 'other perſons, by not excluding them from the 'benefit of this Act. This Mercy and Indulgence is the beſt way to bring them to a true repentance, and to make them more ſevere to themſelves, when they find we are not ſo to them. 'It will make them good Subjects to me, and 'good Friends and Neighbours to you, and we 'have then all our ends, and you ſhall find this the ſecureſt Expedient to prevent future miſchief. 'Therefore I do earneſtly deſire and conjure you, 'to depart from all particular animoſities and revenge or memory of paſt provocations, and 'that you will paſs this Act without other Exceptions, than of thoſe who were immediately 'guilty of that Murther of my Father.

'My Lords, I have told you my Opinion, and 'I hope you will be of the ſame. If any perſons appear of ſuch dangerous and obſtinate 'Principles, that the Peace of the Kingdom cannot be preſerved whilſt they have Liberty in 'it, ſome other courſe may be taken, that they 'ſhall not be able to do hurt; and I aſſure you, 'there is nothing can inable them to do ſo much 'harm, as the deferring the paſſing this Act.

'I hope I need ſay nothing of Ireland, and that 'they alone ſhall not be without the benefit of 'my Mercy. They have ſhewed much affection 'to me abroad, and you will have a care of my 'Honour, and of what I have promiſed to them. 'I do again conjure you, that you will uſe all 'expedition in the diſpatch of this Bill.

This Speech did not only expedite the paſſing of this Act in the Houſe of Peers, but give a general ſatisfaction to the people, who were exceedingly quieted in their minds with the Kings reſolute care on the behalf of all his Subjects; nor was his mind ſo intent on this neceſſary Affair, as to neglect the other Concerns of Government: But obſerving, that the late Differences of his People had created many Animoſities sities amongst them, which occasioned frequent Duels, he thought fit to prevent the inconveniencies thereof by a Proclamation, whereby he manifested so great a dislike of Duels, as strictly to command all his Subjects whatsoever, neither by themselves, nor any other by Message, Word or Writing, or other ways or means to Challenge, procure to be Challenged, any person or persons to fight in Duel, nor to carry, accept, nor conceal any Challenge, nor actually to fight, on pretence to any election.

And he further declared, That every person offending against his Commands herein, should not only incur his Displeasure, but be incapable of holding any office in his Service, and never after be permitted to come to Court, or preferr'd, besides the suffering such punishment as the Law should inflict on such Offenders; and all persons that should accept or know of such Challenges, and not reveal the same to one of the Privy Council, or the next Justice of Peace, should be liable to the same Penalties. And further, he was so severe in this matter, as to forbid any Intercession to be made for Offenders against this Proclamation.

By this good Government, a general tranquility appear'd in all the King's Dominions; and to lessen the Publick Charge, the Parliament were providing Money to disband the Armies, and pay off such of the Ships as were more than needful for the guard of the Seas. And in order hereunto, the General was so provident, as to give order to the Muster-Master-General to admit of no new Souldiers in any Troop or Companies, and the Officers likewise had Charge to entertain none upon any vacancies.

The English Commissioners in Scotland having been imployed as Judges for the Government of that Nation, and having had their Commissions continued in force for some time after the Kings coming in, they were at length by the Letters from the Duke of Albemarl acquainted with the Kings pleasure, That from the 21 of August they should cease to act any more in this their Judicatory Power, in regard that Kingdom was thenceforth to be reduc'd to its ancient form of Government; in order to which Proclamation was made in the Kings Name, for the speedy Convening of the Committee of the Three Estates of Scotland; a Parliament also being to be called there within a few Months: And in the interim, the Chief Ministers of State were Constituted: The Earl of Glencarn was made Lord Chancellour; the Lord Crauford-Lindsey Lord Treasurer; the Earl of Cassiles Justice-General, the Earl of Lauderdale Chief Secretary of State, and General Middleton the Kings Commissioner, with several others.

A Committee of Estates Convened in Scotland.

The chief Ministers of State Constituted in Scotland.

The Committee of Estates being assembled, made it their first care to keep all things in peace and quiet, and obedience to the present Government; for notwithstanding the late unanimous concurrence of the people at Edenburgh, (as well as other places) in the publick Proclaiming of his Majesty, yet after a short while there began to discover it self a spirit of discontent among certain Scotch Ministers, who were of the principal Sticklers of the Kirk-party, as appear'd by their meeting together at a place appointed, for the drawing up of a Remonstrance concerning certain things wherein they thought themselves aggrieved; which the Committee of Estates having notice of, sent forthwith to apprehend them, and clapt them up in Prison; and for the prevention of the like disturbances for the future, set forth a Proclamation against all Unlawful Meetings, and Seditious Rapers.

Certain Scotch Ministers imprisoned by Order of the Committee of Estates.

Also the same thing that befel these Ministers, happen'd also to their Country man the Marquess of Argyle, who notwithstanding that he came to Court with others of the Nobility and Gentry of Scotland, upon pretence of tendring his service to his Majesty, yet he had not it seems carried himself so blamelessly, but that a sufficient cause was found for the laying of High Treason to his Charge, and committed him thereupon a Prisoner to the Tower; and together with him were committed the Marquess of Atholl, Sir Henry Vane, and Sir Arthur Hasterig, besides several others that follow'd soon after.

The Marquess of Argyle, and others, sent to the Tower of London.

In Ireland the Convention that had assembled there upon the change of Government, as soon as they had taken order for the settling of things in that Nation, in conformity to the Kings Authority, (Colonel Eytes, who endeavour'd to raise a Party in opposition to it, being reduc'd by Sir Charles Coot) and had appointed from among them certain Commissioners to wait upon his Majesty with their Gratulations and desires, thought fit to dissolve themselves, in expectation of the Kings Pleasure for the calling of a full Parliament, and to make way for the Ancient Constitution of the Government by a Lord Lieutenant, as had been determin'd by the King and his Council.

The Convention in Ireland dissolve themselves.

The Act of Indempnity was sent from the Lords to the Commons with several alterations, to which the Commons were very unwilling to agree; for they had subjected twenty that were not the Kings Judges, to be liable to such pains and penalties, not extending to life, as should be inflicted by another Act to be passed in this Parliament: Whereas the Lords finding the Kings Inclination to tend towards the pardoning of all but such as were his Fathers Judges, or otherwise Actors in his Murther they disagreed to that part of the Act, as to all those named by the Commons, except Sir Arthur Hasterig, Sir Henry Vane, and Colonel John Lambert, who were esteemed to be so maliciously active in opposition to his Majesties Government, as to be excepted from any conditions of Pardon. The Commons for some time adhered to their first Resolutions; but after several Conferrences, they agreed with the Lords in all things, except some little alterations to their frame of the Act; Vane and Lambert were excepted, but Hasterig remained liable to such pains, penalties, and forfeitures as should be inflicted on him, not extending to life; and the rest of those put under the same Qualification by the Commons that were not of the Kings Judges were made only with others incapable of Offices, as shall be hereafter shewn, when we come to write of the parts of that Act.

The Debate between the Lords and Commons concerning the Act of Indempnity.

That which put Sir Arthur Hasterig under so favourable a Qualification, was an Engagement made to him by the Duke of Albemarl; for Hasterig coming to him, when he perceiv'd the Revolution [illegible] towards the Restauration

Sir Arthur Hasterig pardoned, upon the Mediation of the Duke of Albemarl.

1660. stauration of the King and his Government, he expostulated with him about it, in reference to the security of his own Condition: The Duke was unwilling to make him desperate, because he had at that time a Regiment of Horse, and a Regiment of Foot in the Garrisons of Newcastle, Tinmouth, Berwick, and Carlisle, under his Government, which (if he had opposed) could not have been reduced to obedience without the effusion of Blood, which his Excellency much endeavoured to avoid in all the progress of his Actions; and therefore told him, If he would quietly give up his Command, and retire to his house he would endeavour to secure him in his Life and Estate, and doubted not to effect it. This being made known at a Conference by the House of Commons, was justified with great modesty by the Duke in the House of Peers, and his Life was thereupon pardoned in the Act; and a small time after his Estate also was at the mediation of the Duke, granted to his Heir, a man averse to his Fathers disloyal Principles: Sir Arthur himself a while after his Imprysonment, dying of a Feaver in the Tower.

An Instance of his Majesties Affection to his People.

At this last Conference of the Lords and Commons, the Lord Chancellour took occasion to speak of the Kings Affection to his people, by a very remarkable Instance, saying, That he being imployed in an Embassy to Spain, had it strictly given him in charge by his Majesty to avow and declare, That the horrid Murther of his Royal Father, was not the Act of the Parliament, or People of England, but of a very wretched and little company of Miscreants in the Kingdom. Which was so pleasing to the House of Commons, that upon the report of it to them, they ordered such of the Privy Council as were Members of that House, to present to his Majesty the humble and thankful Sense they had of his Justice and Favour for that Just Defence he had been graciously pleas'd to make in behalf of the Parliament, and People of England.

A few days after this, that is to say, the 29th of August, the King had notice that there were five Acts prepared for his Royal Assent, and he therefore repaired to the Lords House, and sent for the Commons to him, where he assented to them. The Acts were;

Several Acts Signed.

1. An Act for Confirmation of judicial Proceedings. 2. An Act for a speedy Provision of Money to pay off and disband all the Forces of this Kingdom both by Sea and Land. 3. An Act for the restraining the taking of Excessive Usury. 4. An Act of General Pardon, Indemnity, and Oblivion. 5. An Act for a Perpetual Anniversary Thanksgiving on the Twenty Ninth day of May, the day of his Majesties Nativity and Restauration.

At the passing of which ACTS, he express'd himself in these words;

My Lords, and Gentlemen of the House of Commons.

The Kings Speech in Parliament at the passing of those Acts.

'I Have been here sometimes before with you, but never with more willingness, than I am at this time. And there be few men in the Kingdom, who have longed more impatiently to have those Bills passed, then I have done to pass them; and I hope they will be the Foundation of much security and happiness to us all. I do very willingly pardon all that is pardoned by this Act of Indemnity, to that time which is mentioned in the Bill; Nay, I will tell you, that from that time to this day, I will not use great Severity, except in such Cases where the Malice is notorious, and the Publick Peace exceedingly concern'd: But for the time to come, the same Discretion and Conscience, which disposed me to the Clemency I have expressed, which is most agreeable to my Nature, will oblige me to all Rigour and Severity, how contrary soever it be to my Nature, towards those who shall not now acquiesce, but continue to manifest their sedition and dislike of the Government, either in action or words.

'And I must conjure you all (my Lords and Gentlemen) to concur with Me in this just and necessary severity; and that you will in your several Stations be so jealous of the Publick Peace, and of my particular Honour, that you will cause exemplary Justice to be done upon those who are guilty of Seditious Speeches or Writings, as well as those who break out into Seditious Actions: And that you will believe those who delight in reproaching and traducing my Person, not to be well affected to You and the Publick Peace.

'Never King valued himself more upon the affections of his People than I do; nor do I know a better way to make my self sure of your affections, than by being just and kind to you all: And whilest I am so, I pray let the world see that I am possessed of your affections.

'for your Pole-Bill, I do thank you as much as if the Money were to come into my own Coffers; and wish with all my heart, that it may amount to as great a sum as you reckon upon. If the Work be well and orderly done to which it is designed, I am sure I shall be the richer by it in the end: and upon my Word, if I had wherewithall, I would my Self help you, so much I desire the business done.

'I pray very earnestly, as fast as Money comes in, discharge that great burthen of the Navy, and disband the Army as fast as you can; and till you can disband the rest, make a provision for their support. I do conjure you, as you love me, let me not hear the noise of Free-quarter, which will be imputed to my want of Care and Government, how Innocent soever I am; and therefore be sure you prevent it.

'I am so confident of your affections, that I will not move you in any thing that immediately relates to my self; and yet I must tell you, I am not richer, that is, I have not so much Money in my Purse as when I came to you: The truth is, I have lived principally ever since upon what I brought with me, which was indeed your Money, for you sent it to me, and I thank you for it. The Weekly expence of the Navy, eats up all you have given me by the Bill of Tonnage and Poundage. Nor have I been able to give my Brothers one Shilling since I came into England, nor to keep any Table in my House, but what I eat my Self. And that which troubles me most, is to see so many of you come to me to White-Hall, and to think you must go some where else to seek your Dinner.

'I do not mention this to you, as any thing that troubles me; do but take care of the Publick,

'lick and for what is neceſſary for the Peace and 'Quiet of the Kingdom, and take your own time 'for My Own particular, which I am ſure you 'will provide for with as much affection and 'frankneſs as I can deſire.

Act for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings.

The ACT for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings, was as neceſſary at this Juncture, as the Act of General Pardon, ſince without this, beſides many other Inconveniencies, ſo great a Concuſſion would have been in moſt mens Eſtates, as would have made them ſubject to perpetual Incertainties.

1. 'By this Law, All Proceedings in Law or 'Equity in all or any of the Courts at Weſtmin- 'ſter, or in Wales, or in the County Palatine, or 'Dutchy of Lanchaſter, or Berwick, or other in- 'feriour Courts, and all things done by the 'Judges and Officers in purſuance thereof, or of 'the Court of Admiralties, Delegates, Juſtices of 'Aſſize, Niſi Prius, Commiſſion of Sewers, Bank- 'rupts, or Charitable Uſes, and all proceedings 'thereupon had in England ſince the firſt of May, '1642. were Confirm'd, notwithſtanding any de- 'fect of Legal Power, or difference in Style or 'Title.

2. 'All Fines Levied without paying the Kings 'Silver, or without entry of Money given for 'the Concord, or before one Judge only, were 'made good and effectual; And all Fines, Reco- 'veries, Judicial Proceedings in the Common- 'Pleas, ſince the Death of the late King, of Lands 'in Demeſne were confirm'd.

3. 'Whereas ſince the Firſt of May, 1641. 'and before the 20th of Auguſt, 1660. divers 'who adhered to both Houſes of Parliament had 'been Indicted for Treaſon, and others alſo who 'adhered to His Majeſty or his Father, were Im- 'peached in like manner: All ſuch Indictments 'and Proceedings thereupon, and Grants made 'of any Lands forfeited by reaſon thereof, and 'Title to the mean profits claimed in that re- 'ſpect, were henceforth diſcharged, and reſtitu- 'tion to be made to the reſpective perſons and 'their Heirs.

4. 'All Recognizances, Bonds, and Securities 'made to the late Keepers, or Protector, not par- 'doned, or diſcharged, were to be proſecuted 'in the Name, and to the uſe of His Majeſty, his 'Heirs and Succeſſors.

To the Fourth Branch, ſuch Securities were excepted as had been given to the late Powers by any for their adherence to the King or his Father, or relating to the late Troubles, which was by this Act made void; as likewiſe were all Obligations, Bonds, and Securities by Order of any Council of State, Committee of Safety, Major General, Decimators, or any other Military Power.

5. 'After the 8th of May, 1660. no Judges at 'Weſtminſter, Serjeants at Law, Commiſſions of 'Sewers, or of Bankrupts, or of Charitable U- 'ſes, Conſtituted by any of the late Uſurped 'Powers, were to be continued.

6. 'No non-claim upon, or after any Fine by 'this Act confirmed, ſhall extend to bar any 'Perſon or their Heirs (other than the Parties to 'the ſaid Fines, and their Heirs and Truſtees) 'for ſuch Rights as they had by colour of any 'Act or pretended Ordinance of Parliament, 'ſince the firſt of May, 1642. and before the '25th of April, 1660. as of Crown-Land, or of 'Church-Lands, or as the Lands of any perſon 'for adhering to the King, or his Father, or in 'relation to the late Troubles, ſo as ſuch per- 'ſons and their Heirs purſue their Claims by 'Actions or Entry within 5 years after the 29th 'of May, 1660. 1660.

7. 'The Name and Styles of the Uſurped 'Power and Authorities were declared to be 'Rebellious.

8. 'All Proceedings of High-Treaſon for Le- 'vying War againſt Oliver Cromwell, or any o- 'ther late Uſurped Power, were made void; as 'likewiſe all Aſſurances, Recognizances, and 'Judgments for Debt, or Damages heretofore 'had or ſuffered by any perſon whoſe Convicti- 'on, Outlawry, or Attainder, was by this Act 'diſcharged.

This Act of Confirmation was nevertheleſs not to extend to confirm any illegal proceedings of the late High-Courts of Juſtice, nor to confirm any Sales or Eſtates made by any pretended Act of Parliament ſince the firſt of May, 1642. nor to debar any Perſon grieved, from having a Writ of Error, or Bill of Review, in ſuch manner as formerly, Except ſuch Errours and defects as were not by this Act remedied.

The Act for Proviſion of Money to pay off the Armies and Navy, was by Poll, and was a very great Tax, becauſe many Orders of Men were included in it, which were not mentioned in any former Act of the like kind.

The ACT for Pole-Money.

The Act of Indemnity.

'The ACT of General Pardon, Indemnity 'and Oblivion, Pardons all the King's Subjects of 'England and Ireland, Wales, Guernſey, Jerſey, 'and Berwick, of all Treaſons, Miſpriſions of 'Treaſons, Murthers, Felonies, Offences and 'Crimes whatſoever, from the Firſt of January '1637. to the 24th of June, 1660. (not therein 'excepted) Committed by virtue or colour of 'any Command or Authority from the King or 'his Father, or any of the late Powers, and 'from all Pains of Death, pains Corporal, and 'Pecuniary; and generally from all other things, 'Cauſes, Suits, and Executions, which may, or 'can be by the King in any wiſe, or by any 'means Pardoned. And alſo all perſonal Actions, Suits and Perſecutions whatſoever, by 'reaſon of the late Troubles; And the Act may 'be pleaded for any thing therein pardoned, 'without any Fee to the Officers for entring 'Judgment or Cauſe concerning ſuch Plea. And 'if any Officer or Clerk in any of the King's 'Courts iſſue out any Writ or Proceſs, or moleſt any in their Bodies or Eſtates, for any 'thing herein Pardoned, or if any Sheriff, or 'Eſcheator, or other Officer whatſoever, levy, 'receive, take, or with-hold any thing hereby 'pardoned, they ſhall pay to the Party grieved 'treble Damages beſides Coſts, and pay to the 'King Twenty Pounds, and ſuch Writs or Proceſs ſhall be void.

1. 'Excepted out of this Act all Murthers 'not herein Pardoned, Pyracies, Buggers, Rapes, 'and Raviſhments of Women, and all Offence, made Felons by an Act, Intituled, An 'Act to reſtrain Perſons from Marriage, till their 'former Wives or Husbands be dead: And all 'Witchcrafts and Conjurations, as alſo all Accompts of Treaſurers, Receivers, Farmers, or 'Collectors (other than Sub-Collectors of Pariſhes or Towns for their Receipts before the '14th. of June, 1659.) who had received any 'Cuſtomes, Prize-Goods, Aſſeſsments, or any 'other Publick Monies or Rents of the Crown-'Lands, or Biſhops and Dean and Chapter-'Lands, which had been paid to them ſince

'January,

'January 1642. and of all Moneys grown due or 'contracted upon the Sale or diſpoſition of ſuch 'Lands, or the Lands of Popiſh Recuſants, Con-'vict or other Sequeſtred Lands.

1. 'The Heirs and Executors of any Accomp-'tants excepted, and deceaſed, not to be lyable, 'except for ſuch Moneys as are due upon Ac 'compts already ſtated.

2. Moneys received for Fees, and Salaries or 'Wages, or diſburſed for publick uſe, are not 'to be charged.

3. No Military Officer of the Armies, or 'Officers of the Navies, who before March 1652. 'received Moneys for his Pay, or the Pay of o-'thers, or for Contingencies of the Souldiers or 'Garriſons, to be called to accompt therefore.

4. 'Likewiſe none were to be called to Ac-'compt for any of the Matters of this Exception, 'after the 24th of June 1662.

5. 'All Briberies and Perjuries are Excepted 'out of this Act. And all Subornation of Perju-'ry, or Witneſſes and Forgery, and alſo all Of-'fences in detaining or imbezelling any Goods, 'Moneys, Chattels, or Jewels of the late King, 'Queen or Prince, or their Shipping and Am-'munition of War, and other ſuch Goods or 'Chattels, as have been ſold or diſpoſed to any 'Servants or Creditors of the late King for pay-'ment of their Debts or Wages; And all Ac-'compts of the Revenues of Churches in Wales 'and Monmouthſhire, and all Judgments of Diſ-'charge or Quietus eſt thereupon had.

This laſt Exception, as to the Churches in Wales, was inſerted by the Parliament in this Act, upon Information, that ſome Factious People had, in the time of the late Uſurpation, procured to themſelves an Authority to Sequeſter all thoſe Revenues, upon pretence to imploy them more equally to illiterate Preachers, for the better propagation of the Goſpel in thoſe parts, but kept the greateſt part to their own uſe, leaveing moſt of the Churches unſupplied.

3. All publick Duties levied by any Sheriff or 'other Officer for the uſe of the late King, or 'the late Powers, or the King in being, not ac-'compted for or diſcharged, are excepted.

4. 'As alſo all Offences done by any Jeſuit, Se-'minary or Popiſh Prieſt, contrary to the Statute 'of the 27th of Elizabeth. It is provided.

1. 'That a Writ of Capias may be made a-'gainſt perſons Outlawed, pardoned by this Act, 'to Compel the Defendant to anſwer to the 'Plaintiff, at whoſe Suit they were Outlawed, 'may have a Scire facias againſt the party before 'the Pardon ſhall be allowed.

2. 'This Pardon is not to extend to pardon 'Outlawries upon any Writ of Capias ad Satis-'faciendum, till the party Outlawed ſhall ſatisfie 'or agree with the party,

5. 'All Informations and Proceedings de-'pending about, High-Ways and Bridges ſince 'January, 1648. are excepted, and alſo all Re-'cognizances, Bonds and Securities given or en-'tred into ſince the 25th of March, 1640. by any 'Receiver, Bayliff, Collector or other Accomp-'tant in the Exchequer.

6. 'And perſon within three years that ob-'jected againſt another, any words of reproach, 'tending to revive memory of the late differen-'ces, was to pay ten pounds, if a Gentleman, 'and forty ſhillings, if one of a more Inferiour 'degree. 1660.

7. 'The Act gives no benefit to any who had 'any hand in Plotting the Rebellion of Ireland, 'nor to any that have ſtoln any Goods or Mo-'neys ſince the 24th of March, 1649.

8. 'Nor extends to diſcharge any from making 'reſtitution of thoſe Rents, Moneys, Horſes, 'Cattle or other Goods, which ſince the 25th of 'July, 1659. have been by any perſon wrongful-'ly received or taken away (which by a preten-'ded Act, Intituled, An Act of Repeal of two Acts 'of Parliament for Sequeſtration are to be repealed.)

9. 'All publick Moneys paid in to any pub-'lick Uſe are pardon'd, and Parties concern'd, 'ſo far as their acquittances extend into, are to 'be diſcharged for the ſame. Nevertheleſs, thoſe 'are not diſcharged that received any Money 'for the Tax of Decimation, or upon the Ac-'compt of any Militia ſince 1648. not paid 'over and diſcharged by any that had a Legal 'or pretended authority to diſcharge the Recei-'vers thereof.

10. 'The Kings menial Servants, or any that 'had directions from him, whom whilſt they 'pretended to act in his Service were treache-'rous thereunto, were exempted from the benefit 'of this Act, if they were Outlawed and Con-'victed within Two Years from the 25th of 'April, 1660.

11. 'Exciſe for Goods whereof Entry had 'been made in the Cuſtom-Houſe ſince the 25th 'of March, 1658. not pardoned, nor Moneys 'due to the Farmors of Exciſe ſince the 25th of 'March, 1658.

12. 'The Act gives no benefit to Owen Rowe, 'Auguſtine Garland, Edmund Harvey, Henry 'Smith, Henry Martain, Sir Hardreſs Waller, Ro-'bert Titchborne, George Fleetwood, James Tem-'ple, Thomas Wait, Simon Mein, William Have-'ningham, Iſaac Pennington, Peter Temple, Ro-'bert Lilborn, Gilbert Millington, Vincent Pot-'ter, Thomas Wogan, John Downs, Adrian Scroop, 'John Liſle, William Say, Valentine Walton, Tho-'mas Harriſon, Edward Whally, John Barkſtead, 'Edmund Ludlow, Sir Michael Liveſey, John Okey, 'John Hewſon, William Goffe, Cornelius Holland, 'Thomas Challoner, John Carew, John Jones, 'Miles Corbet, Gregory Clement, Thomas, Scott, 'William Crawley, Nicholas Love, John Dixwell, 'Daniel Blagrave, John Cook, Andrew Brough-'ton, Edward Dendy, William Hewlet, Hugh 'Peters, Francis Hacker, Daniel Axtell, or any 'of them, nor to thoſe Two or either of them 'diſguiſed upon the Scaffold the Thirtieth of 'January, 1648, erected before White-Hall. 'All which Perſons, for being Inſtrumental in 'the Murther of the late King, are wholly ex-'cluded.

But in regard the Nineteen firſt mentioned rendred themſelves, according to a Declaration of the 6th of June, 1660. and thereby pretended to ſome Favour, it is Enacted, That if the ſaid 'Owen Rowe, and the reſt ſo firſt mentioned

1660. are Attained, their Execution ſhould be ſuſpended, until the King and Parliament ſhould order the ſame, (Only Adrian Scroop, though he was one of thoſe that rendered themſelves according to the foremention'd Declaration, yet in regard at the time of preſenting himſelf to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons in purſuance thereunto, in a Diſcourſe with Sir Richard Brown, then Lord Major Elect of London, and a Member of that Houſe, he uttered ſome words tending to a Juſtification of the Murther of the King, wherewith Brown acquainted the Parliament, he was therefore put under the ſame Qualification as thoſe that had not ſo rendred themſelves, becauſe of his Impenitency.)

13. 'Oliver Cromwell, Henry Ireton, John 'Bradſhaw, and Thomas Pride, though dead) 'were excepted, and the Lands and Goods, 'Rights and Truſts of them, and of One and 'Twenty others deceaſed, (viz.) Iſaac Ewer, Sir 'John Danvers, Sir Thomas Maleverer, William 'Pureſoy, John Blackiſton, Sir William Conſtable, 'Richard Dean, Francis Allen, Peregrine Pelham, 'John Moor, John Aired, Humphrey Edwards, 'Sir Gregory Norton, John Ven, Thomas Andrews, 'Anthony Stapeley, Thomas Horton, John Fry, 'Thomas Hammond, Philip Skippon, and Sir John 'Bourchier, were made ſubject to ſuch Penalties 'and Forfeitures as by another Act to be paſſed 'ſhould be ordained.

14. 'Moreover, William Lord Mounſon, Sir 'Henry Mildmay, Sir James Harrington, and 'Robert Wallop, were reſerved to ſuch Pains, 'Penalties and Forfeitures, as by the ſaid Act 'to be paſſed ſhould be inflicted on them, not 'extending to life.

Theſe were of the number of the Kings Judges but in regard they did not Sign the Warrant for Summoning the pretended Court, nor the Warrant for the Execution of his Majeſty, their Lives were ſpared.

Phelps who was a Clark in that Court, was put into to the ſame Condition, as alſo Sir Arthur Haſlerigg; who though he was not one of the Actors in that Tragedy, was as malicious an Enemy to the King, as any of the reſt.

15. 'Hutchinſon and Laſſels, two others of 'the Judges, were made uncapable to execute 'any place of Truſt, and Laſſels to pay to the 'King one Years value of his Eſtate. Which Favours were extended to them for reaſons before expreſſed.

16. 'Oliver S. John who had been Chief Ju'ſtice of the Common-Pleas to Oliver Cromwell, 'and Seventeen others named in the Act, active 'Inſtruments in the late Uſurpations, were to be 'excluded from any benefit by this Act, if they 'accepted or ſhould execute any Office Eccleſia'ſtical, Civil or Military, in England, Wales, or 'Berwick, from the Firſt of September in the Year '1660.

'And all that had given Sentence of Death in 'any of the late Illegal High-Courts of Juſtice, 'or Signed any Warrant for Execution of any 'perſon there condemned (except Colonel Ri'chard Ingoldsby, and Colonel Matthew Thom'linſon) were diſabled from being Members in 'any Parliament after the ſaid Firſt day of Sep'tember, or bear any Office in England or 'Wales.

17. 'All Truſtees in a pretended Act made in 'the Year 1649 concerning Tythes appropriate, 'Free-Farm Rents, and Firſt-Fruits, &c. and 'their Heirs, were to be accomptable for ſuch 'of the ſame as had not been imployed accord'ing to the ſaid Act; nevertheleſs, no Miniſter 'or School-Maſter, or other perſon for whoſe 'benefit the ſaid Act was made, were to be ac'comptable.

18. 'The Act Pardons not bonds taken in his 'late Majeſties Name before 1642 for ſecuring 'any proper debt of any Servant, or Receiver of 'the Kings Revenues, if they had not been paid 'to, or by order of ſome lawful or pretended 'authority: Nor no perſon, his Heirs, Execu'tors, &c. who had not paid their proportion 'of a Summ of 150000*l.* (agreed to be paid as 'a Compoſition from the Farmers of ſeveral 'Cuſtoms illegally taken) or ought to have been 'contributary thereunto; but that the Eſtates of 'the dead as well as of the living, of ſuch perſons 'who ought to have been Contributary, in 'whoſe poſſeſſion ſoever (Purchaſers Bona fide 'upon valuable conſiderations only excepted,) 'ſhall be chargeable with their Proportions, as 'if the Act had never been made.

'Likewiſe all Arrears of Exciſe of Beer, Ale, 'or other Inland or Native Commodities, ſince 'the 24th of June, 1659. are unpardoned, and 'all Monies due from any Officers or Souldiers 'for Free-Quarter, ſince the 20th of July in the 'ſame Year or Monies borrowed by Officers for 'preventing of Free-Quarter.

19. 'No Conveyance or Bargain or Sale, 'Eſtate, Intereſt, or Truſt, or Limitation of Uſe 'or Uſes of any manner of Lands, Tenements 'or Hereditaments not being Crown-Lands, or 'Church-Lands, nor Lands ſold or diſpoſed for 'pretended Delinquencies by pretence of any 'Act or Ordinance ſince the firſt of January '1641. nor any Statute, Judgment, or Recogni'zance had, made, acknowledged, or ſuffered to 'any perſon or perſons, Bodies Politick or Cor'porate, before the 29th of September, 1659. by 'any of the perſons in this Act by name expreſ'ſed or their Heirs, or by any claiming by, 'from, or under them, (other than the Wives, 'Children or heirs of ſuch perſons) or any of 'them for Monies Bona fide to them or any of 'them paid or lent, nor any Conveyance or E'ſtate made before the 25th of April, 1660. by 'any perſons to any ſuch perſon excepted by 'name as aforeſaid, in Truſt or for the benefit of 'any Perſons, Bodies Politick or Corporate (not 'excepted by name as aforeſaid) ſhall be de'feated, impeached, or made void.

20. 'Laſtly, no perſons were to be indempni'fied who had entred into any Lands, Tene'ments and Hereditaments, called Fabrick-Lands, 'or poſſeſſed themſelves of any Rents or Reve'nues given for the repair of any Cathedral or 'other Church, or whoſe ſacrilegiouſly enriched 'themſelves by the converting of the Plate, U'tenſils, and Materials of or belonging to ſuch 'Churches, to their private uſe, for or in reſpect 'of the ſaid Crimes only.

The ACT for Obſervation of a perpetual Anniverſary.

The Act for a perpetual Anniverſary does Enact, 'That in all ſucceeding Ages, the 29th of May be Celebrated in every Church and 'Chappel for his Majesties Restauration.

'Chappel in England, and the Dominions thereof, by rendring thanks to God for the King's peaceable Restauration to the actual possession and exercise of his Legal Authority over his Subjects. And all Ministers are to read the Act at Morning-Prayer the Lords Day next before that Day, to give notice for the observation thereof.

A time prefixt by his Majesty for the Adjournment of the present Parliament.

The King after the passing these Acts, gave the Parliament notice, that on the 13th of September, he would have them to Adjourn to the sixth of November following; whereupon they were very diligent to compleat some Bills under consideration. That which was of most importance for the Peace of the Kingdom, was a Bill for the speedy disbanding the Army and Garrisons, which they were very earnest in. The King intended to have made it a Sessions by Prorogation; but upon application made to him, to shew the inconvenience thereof at that time, because of many Bills and other matters of great Concernment depending, which would thereby be vacated, he consented to an Adjournment.

The Parliament having taken notice of the Kings Wants, intimated in his last Speech at the passing of the forementioned Acts, provided for his Supply: In the next place they likewise took care that the Army should be supplied with Pay till they were disbanded; which was another of the particulars of that Speech.

Twenty two Acts more; 14 private, & 8 publick, Sign'd by his Majesty.

And now all things being ready for an Adjournment, the King on the 13th of September, which was the day appointed, came to the House of Lords, and there gave his Royal Assent to 14 private, and 8 publick Acts of Parliament.

The Private were.

1. An Act for the restoring of the Marquess of Hertford to the Dukedome of Somerset.

2. An Act for the necessary Maintenance of the Work of Draining the great Level of the Fens.

3. An Act to restore the Earl of Inchequin all his Honours and Lands in Ireland.

4. An Act for to restore to William Marquess of Newcastle, all his Estate whereof he was in possession the 20th of May, 1642. or at any time since.

5. An Act for settling the Priory of Watton, and other Lands in Yorkshire, belonging to the Earl of Winchelsea, in the hands of Trustees, to pay his Debts.

6. An Act for the restoring of Sir George Lane to the Mannours of Rachline and Lisdruff, and other Lands in Ireland.

7. An Act to restore Charles Lord Gerrard, Baron of Brandon, to all his Estate whereof he was in possession the 20th of May, 1642. or at any time since.

8. An Act for the restoring to the Lord Culpeper, Baron of Thorsway, all the Estate whereof his Father was possessed on the 20th of May, 1642. or at any time after, which have not been since sold or aliened by his said Father by Acts and Assurances to which himself was party and consenting.

9. An Act to inable Augustine and William Skinner to sell Lands for payment of Debts.

10. An Act for the incorporating the Master and Wardens of Haberdashers, London, to be Governours of the Free-School and Alms-House in New-port in Shropshire, of the Foundation of William Adams, and for setling Lands on them for the Maintenance thereof, and other Charitable Uses. 1660.

11. An Act for inabling Sir George Booth, Baronet, to make Leases and Sales of part of his Estate.

12. An Act for Regulating of the Trade of Bay making in the Dutch Bay Hall in Colchester.

13. The other two private Bills, were one of them to Naturalize Dorothea Helena Countess of Derby, Emelia Countess of Ossery, Margaret Lady Culpeper, and a Son and a Daughter of Katherine Stanhop Countess of Chesterfield, by John Kirkhoven Lord of Henslet in Holland.

14. And the other for Naturalizing Peter de la Pierre alias Peters, and John de la Pierre alias Peters.

Of these Acts, we think it unnecessary to name more than the Titles, as being not of publick Concernment: and every of the Titles are not here exactly inserted, it being sufficient for publick use, to describe so much of them as may inform Posterity of their tendency, and that such Acts were then passed; whereby those that are concerned, may be directed to a more curious search.

The Publick ACTS were:

1. An Act for the speedy Disbanding of the Army and Garrisons.

The Title of this Act does so much expres the use of it, that we shall omit to mention more of it here; and the rather, because it was in a few Months fully executed.

2. An Act for the supplying and explaining certain defects in an Act for the speedy provision of Money for Disbanding and Paying off the Forces of this Kingdom both by Sea and Land.

We have already given you an abbreviation of that Act, whereof this last is Explanatory, (which was the Pool-Bill lately described) and to which this being only relating, in reference to the supply of some of its defects, we shall not need to enlarge thereon.

3. An Act for raising Sevenscore thousand pounds for the compleat disbanding of the Army.

The Parliament finding the Pool-Bill to rise much short of expectation, from the failure of a due and exact execution of it they passed this Act, which ordained the Money to be raised in two Months from the first of November, 1660. (viz. 70000 l. per Mensem.

4. An Act for the speedy raising of 70000 l. for the present supply of his Majesty.

This Money was to be paid in one Month from the 29th of September following.

5. An Act to prevent Frauds and Concealments of his Majesties Customes and Subsidies.

This Act was but to continue in force till the end of the first Session of the next Parliament.

6. An Act for the Confirming and Restoring of Ministers.

This Act stopt the Clamours of many Ecclesiastical persons that had defective Titles to their Cures; and the goodness of the King was very much celebrated by his Consent to it. Wherefore it will not be amiss to give a brief touch of the Heads thereof.

1660.

An Act for Confirming and Restoring of Ministers.

It Enacts, 'That every Ecclesiastical person 'or Minister Ordained by any Ecclesiastical persons before December the 25th last past, being '24 years of age, having not renounced his Ordination, who hath been since January the first, '1642. placed in, and in actual possession of any 'Ecclesiastical Benefice, with the Cure of Souls, 'in England, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed, 'which hath been void by death, or any other 'avoidance, since that time, and before the 25th 'of December last past, and was then in possession, and received the Profits being in the Kings 'gift, or of his Father, or of any Arch-Bishop, 'Bishop, Dean and Chapter, Prebend, Arch-'Deacon, Body Politique or Corporate, or other person, other than such hereby restored, 'is declared lawfull Incumbent.

'Every voluntary Resignation of a Benefit to 'the Patron, or any pretended Power since the 'said first day of January, to be good, as if 'made to the Competent Ordinary.

'No Presentation is to be construed to be an 'Usurpation in Law, to the prejudice of any 'that shall have right to Present.

'Every Ecclesiastical person formerly Sequestred or Ejected after lawful Presentation and 'perception of the profits, that hath not subscribed any Petition to bring the late King to Try-'al, or by any act endeavoured or justified the 'Murther of the said King, or declared his Judg-'ment against Infant-Baptism, by Preaching, 'Writing, Printing, or constant refusal to Baptize, shall be restored to the possession thereof, 'at or before the 25th day of December next ensuing; and every Ecclesiastical person to be removed, may enjoy the profits to that day.

There be many other Clauses and Provisions in this Bill, too long to be here inserted; and so much the less important, in regard by some subsequent Laws, the greatest part of the whole was in a manner repeal'd.

The substance of the Act for incouraging of Navigation.

7. 'An Act for incouraging Shipping and Navigation: Wherein it is Enacted, That from 'the first of December, 1660. No Commodities 'shall be imported or Exported out of any Lands, 'Islands, Plantations or Territories, belonging 'unto, or which may belong to his Majesty, his 'Heirs and Successors, in Asia, Africa, or America, in any other Vessel but such as belong unto 'the people of England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick, or are of them built, or do belong to them, 'as the right Owners, and whereof the Master 'and three fourths of the Mariners are English, 'under penalty of the loss of all the Goods imported or Exported in other Vessels, as also of 'the Vessels, with all its Guns, Furniture, Tackle, Ammunition and Apparel, one third to his 'Majesty, his Heirs and Successors; one third 'to the Governour of such Lands, Islands, Plantations or Territories, in case the Ship or Goods 'be there seized; and the other third part unto 'him that shall seize, inform, or sue for the same 'in any Court of Record, by Bill, Information, 'Plaint or Action, wherein no Essoin, Protection, 'or Wager of Law shall be allowed. And all 'Captains, and Commanders at Sea, by Commission from the King or his Successors, are required to bring in all Ships and Vessels so offending, and deliver them into the Court of Admiralty to be proceeded against; and in case of 'Condemnation, one Moiety is to be divided to 'the use of the Admiral and Commander, and 'their Companies, according to the Rules in case 'of Prize, and the other to the King and his Successors. With many other Clauses and Provisoes tending much to the advancement of the English Manufacture.

8. The Eighth Publick Act was, An Act for inabling Souldiers of the Army to exercise Trades. A very grateful Law to many of the Inferiour Officers and Souldiers, and a good preparatory to their Disbanding; for many of them had been Apprentices, and without some such Provision, might have been left without any way of subsistence, when Arms were out of their hands.

The King made a short Speech to both Houses of Parliament at the passing of these Bills, full of Sweetness, according to the affable temper of his Nature.

The Kings Speech to the House at the Passing of the said Bills.

He thanked them for their general Care of the Publick, and other particular respects to him, in that for his Satisfaction they had made provision to pay off the Army whilest they were Disbanding, thereby to prevent Free-Quarter: Adding, That though he kindly accepted their Present of Money, he would not imploy any of it for the supply of his own occasions, till he should be assured the Publick had no need of it. He likewise took notice of the Bill concerning the Duke of Somerset, who, he said, had merited as much of the King his Father, and himself, as a Subject could do; and that he was none of those who think that Subjects by performing their Duties in any extraordinary manner, do not oblige their Princes to reward them in an extraordinary manner: Nevertheless, he said, it seemed to be of an extraordinary nature; and indeed we do not remember any President in Story of the like: But the King was pleased to add, That he hoped no man would envy this Duke, because he had done what a good Master should do to such a Servant.

After which, his Majesty referr'd to the Chancellour to speak of many other things which he had to recommend to them: For in this time of their Recess, the Army was to be Disbanding, whereof many discourses had been spread abroad by disaffected persons. Some said the King would keep them up; and others that they would not suffer themselves to be disbanded. And though he had passed an ACT to confirm Ministers, yet farther order was to be taken in reference to Church-Government; and particularly in respect to tender Consciences: as likewise about purchases and sales of Publick Lands, which had without any issue much taken up the time of both Houses; and therefore since the Parliament Adjourned before any thing in these Affairs was effected, it was expedient to satisfie the People with the Kings Intentions therein: Of which, and many other matters of great Concernment to the good and quiet of the Kingdom, the Chancellor in a most Excellent Speech expressed himself as followeth.

My Lord Chancellors Speech to the Two Houses.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE King tells you, He hath Commanded me to say many Particulars to You: and 'the truth is, he hath charg'd me with so many, 'that

'that I have great reason to fear, that I shall stand 'in much need of his Mercy, for omitting many 'things he hath given me in Command, at least, 'for delivering them in more disorder and con- 'fusion, than matters of such moment and impor- 'tance ought to be to such an Assembly, for which 'the King himself hath even a kind of Reverence, 'as well as an extraordinary Kindness.

'I am to mention some things, he hath done 'already, and many things he intends to do du- 'ring this Recess, that you may see how well 'content soever he is, that you should have 'Ease, and Pleasure, and Refreshment, he hath 'designed work enough for himself.

'The King hath thanked you for the provision 'you have made, that there may be no Free- 'quarter during the time the Army shall be dis- 'banding; and hath told you what he will do 'with that Money you have given him, if there 'should want werewith to disband it. And now 'I hope you will all believe that his Majesty will 'consent to the disbanding. He will do so; and 'yet he doth not take it unkindly at their hands, 'who have thought that his Majesty would not 'disband this Army. It was a sober and rational 'jealousie; no other Prince in Europe would be 'willing to disband such an Army; an Army to 'which Victory is intailed, and which, human- 'ly speaking, could hardly fail of Conquest 'wheresoever he should lead it: And if God had 'not restored his Majesty to that rare felicity, as 'to be without appprehension of danger at home, 'or from abroad, and without any ambition of 'taking from his Neighbors what they are pos- 'sessed of, Himself would never disband this Ar- 'my: An Army, whose order and discipline, 'whose sobriety and manners, whose courage 'and success, hath made it famous and terrible 'over the whole World: An Army of which 'the King and his Two Royal Brothers may say, 'as the Noble Grecian said of Æneas,

——— Stetimus tela aspera contra
Contulimusque manus; experto credite, quantus
In Clypeum assurgat, quo turbine torqueat hastam,

'They have all three, in several Counties, found 'themselves ingaged in the midst of these Troops 'in the heat and rage of Battle; and if any com- 'mon Souldiers (as no doubt many may) will 'demand the old Romans Priviledge for having 'encountred Princes single, upon my Conscience 'he will find both Favour and Preferment. They 'have all three observ'd the discipline, and felt, 'and admired, and loved the courage of this Ar- 'my, when they were the worse for it: And I 'have seen them in a season when there was lit- 'tle else of comfort in their view, refresh them- 'selves with joy that the English had done the 'great Work, the English had got the day; and 'then please themselves with the Imagination 'what Wonders they should perform in the 'Head of such an Army.

'And therefore when his Majesty, is so entirely 'possessed of the affection and obedience of this 'Army, and when it hath merited so much from 'him, can it be believ'd or imagined, that he can 'without some regret part with them? No, My, 'Lords and Gentlemen, he will never part with 'them, and the only way never to part with 'them, is to disband them: Should it be other- 'wise, they must be exposed to the daily importu- 'nity of his great Neighbours and Allies; and 'how could he refuse to lend them his Troops, 'of which he hath no need himself? His Majesty 'knows they are too good Englishmen, to wish 'that a standing Army should be kept up in the 'Bowels of their own Country, that they who 'did but in Bello Pacis gerere Negotium, and who 'whilst an Army liv'd like good Husband-men 'in the Country, and good Citizens in the City, 'will now become really such and take delight 'in the benefit of that Peace they have so honest- 'ly and so wonderfully brought to pass. The 'King will part with them as the most indul- 'gent Parents part with their Children for their 'Education, and for their Preferment; he will 'prefer them to disbanding, and prefer them by 'disbanding; and will always retain such a 'kindess for them, and such a memory of the 'service they have done him, that both Officers, 'and Souldiers, after they are disbanded, shall 'always find such countenance, favour, and re- 'ward from his Majesty, that he doubts not but 'if he should have occasion to use their service, 'they will again resort to him with the same a- 'lacrity, as if they had never been disbanded: 'And if there be any so ill amongst them (as 'there can be but very few, if any) who will 'forfeit the Favour and Protection they may 'have from him, by any withstanding his Maje- 'sties Commands, and the full and declared 'Sense of the Kingdom, his Majesty is confident 'they will be as odious to their Companions, as 'they can be to any other honest men. 1660.

'My Lords and Gentlemen, I am in the next 'place by the Kings Command, to put you in 'mind of the Act of Indempnity, not of any Grants 'or Concessions, or Releases he made to you in 'that Act; (I have nothing of that in Charge: 'No Prince hath so excellent a Memory to forget 'the Favours he doth;) but of what he hath 'done against you in that Act, how you may be 'undone by that Act, if you are not very careful 'to perform the Obligations he hath laid upon 'you in it: The Clause I am to put you in mind 'of is this; And to the intent and purpose that all 'Names and Tearms of distinction may likewise be 'put into utter Oblivion; be it further Enacted by 'the Authority aforesaid, That if any person or per- 'sons within the space of three years next ensuing, 'shall presume maliciously to call, or alledge, or object, 'against any other persons, any Name or Names, or 'other words of reproach, any way leading to revive 'the memory of the late differences, or the occasion 'thereof, that then every such person so, as afore- 'said, offending, shall forfeit, &c. It is no mat- 'ter for the Penalty, it is to cheap a one, the 'King wishes it had been greater, and therefore 'hath by his Just Prerogative (and 'tis well for 'us he hath such a Prerogative) added another 'Penalty more insupportable, even the high dis- 'pleasure against all who shall swerve from this 'Clause in the Act: Give me leave to tell you, 'That as any name or names, or other words of 'reproach, are expresly against the Letter, and 'punishable accordingly; so evil and envious 'looks, murmuring and discontented hearts, 'are as directly against the Equity of this Sta- 'tute, a direct breach of the Acts of Indempnity and 1660. 'and ought to be punished too, and I believe they 'may be so. You know Kings are in some sense 'called Gods, and so they may in some degree be 'able to look into mens hearts; and God hath gi-'ven us a King, who can look as far into mens 'hearts as any Prince alive; and he hath great 'skill in Physiognomy too; you would wonder 'what Calculations he hath made from thence: 'and no doubt if he be provoked by evil looks to 'make a further inquiry into mens hearts, and 'finds those corrupted with the passions of envy 'and uncharitableness, he will never chuse those 'hearts to trust and rely upon. He hath given us 'a Noble and Princely example, by opening and 'stretching his Arms to all who are worthy to 'be his Subjects, worthy to be thought English-'men, by extending his Heart with a Pious and 'grateful joy to find all his Subjects at once in 'his Arms, and himself in theirs; and shall we 'fold our Arms towards one another, and con-'tract our hearts with envy and malice to each 'other by any sharp memory of what hath been 'unneighbourly or unkindly done heretofore? 'What is this but to Rebel against the Person 'of the king, against the excellent Example and 'Virtue of the King, against the known Law of 'the Land, this blessed Act of Oblivion?

'My Lords and Gentlemen, The King is a 'Suitor to you, makes his Suit very heartily, 'that you will joyn with him in restoring the 'whole Nation to its Primitive temper and In-'tegrity, to its old good Manners, its old good 'Humor, and its old good Nature, Good Nature, 'a Virtue so peculiar to you, so appropriated by 'God Almighty to this Nation, that it can be 'translated into no other Language, hardly prac-'tis'd by any other People; and that you will by 'your Example, by the Candor of your Conver-'sation, by your Precepts, and by your Practice, 'and by all your Interest, teach your Neighbours 'and your Friends, how to pay a full obedience 'to this Clause of the Statute, how to learn this 'Excellent Art of Forgetfulness.

'Let them remember, and let us all remember 'how ungracious, how indecent, how ugly the 'insolence and fierceness, the bruitishness of 'their Enemies appeared to them, and we may 'piously and reasonably believe, that Gods In-'dignation against them, for their want of Bow-'els, for their not being English-men, (for they 'had the hearts of Pagans and Infidels) sent a 'Whirl-wind in a moment to blow them out of 'the World; that is, out of a capacity to do 'more mischief in the World; except we pra-'ctice their Vices, and do that our selves, which 'we pretend to detest them for.

'Let us not be too much ashamed; as if what 'hath been done amiss, proceeded from the Hu-'mour, and the Temper, and the Nature of our 'Nation. The Astrologers have made us a fair 'Excuse, and truly I hope a true one, All the 'Motions of these last twenty years have been unna-'tural, and have proceeded from the evil influence 'of a Malignant Star; And let us not too much 'despise the influence of the Stars. And the same 'Astrologers assure us, that the Malignity of the 'Star is expired, the good Genius of this King-'dom is become Superiour, and hath mastered 'that Malignity; and our own good old Stars 'govern us again; and their influence is so strong, 'that with our help they will repair in a year, 'what hath been decaying in twenty: And they 'only shall have no excuse from the Star, who 'continue this Malignity, and own all the ill that 'is past to be their own by continuing it, and 'improving it for time to come.

'If any body here, or any-where else, be too 'much exalted with what he hath done, or what 'he hath suffered, and from thence thinks him-'self warranted to reproach others, let him re-'member the Story of Nicephorus; it is an ex-'cellent Story, and very applicable to such di-'stempers; he was a Pious and Religious man, 'and for his Piety and Religion was Condem-'ned to the Fire: When he was led to Executi-'on, and when an old Friend who had done him 'injury enough, fell at his feet, and asked his 'pardon, the Poor man was so Elated with the 'Triumph he was going unto, with the Glory 'of Martyrdom, that he refused to be reconci-'led unto him; upon which he was disappoint-'ed of his end; and for his uncharitableness, 'the Spirit of God immediately forsook him, 'and he Apostatized from the Faith.

'Let all those who are too proud of having 'been as they think, less faulty than other men, 'and so are unwilling to be reconciled to those 'who have offended them, take heed of the A-'postacy of Nicephorus, and that those fumes of 'Envy, and Uncharitableness, and Murmuring, 'do not so far transport and intoxicate them, 'that they fall into those very Crimes, they va-'lue themselves for having hitherto declined.

'But, My Lords and Gentlemen, whilest we con-'spire together to execute faithfully this part of 'the Bill, to put all old Names and Tearms of 'distinction into utter Oblivion, let us not find 'new Names and Tearms to keep up the same, 'or a worse distinction: If the old reproaches 'of Cavalier, and Roundhead, and Malignant, be 'committed to the Grave let us not find more 'significant and better words, to signifie worse 'things, let not Piety and Godliness grow into 'tearms of reproach, and distinguish between 'the Court, and the City, and the Country; and 'let not Piety and Godliness be measured by a 'morosity in manners.

'An affection of Gestures, a new mode and tone 'of speaking, at least, let not our Constitutions 'and Complexions make us be thought of a con-'trary party, and because we have not an affected 'austerity in our looks, that we have no Piety in 'our hearts; very merry men have been very god-'ly men, and if a good Conscience be a continual 'Feast, there is no reason but men may be merry 'at it.

'You, Mr. Speaker, have this day made a No-'ble Present to the King; do you think that if 'you and your worthy Companions had brought 'it up with folded Arms, down-cast looks, with 'sighs, and other instances of desperation, it 'would not have been a very Melancholick Pre-'sent? Have not your frank and dutiful expres-'sions, that chearfulness and vivacity in your 'looks, render'd it much more acceptable, much 'more valuable?

'No Prince in Christendom loves a chearful 'giver so well as God Almighty does, and he 'of all gifts a Chearful heart; and therefore I pray

'pray let not a cloudy or discontented face be 'the only or the best sign of Piety and Devotion 'in the heart.

'I must ask you pardon for misplacing much of 'this Discourse, which I should have mentioned 'when I came to speak of the Ministers Bill; 'They, I hope, will endeavour to remove those 'new marks of Distinction and Reproaches, and 'keep their Auditors from being imposed upon 'by such Characters and Descriptions. The King 'hath passed this Act very willingly, and done 'much to the end of this Act before, yet hath 'willingly admitted you to be sharers and Part-'ners with him in the Obligation: I may say 'confidently, his Majesty hath never denied his 'Confirmation to any man in possession who 'hath asked it; and they have all had the effect 'of it, except such who, upon examination and 'inquiry, appeared not worthy of it, and such 'who though they are Pardoned, cannot yet 'think themselves worthy to be preferr'd. His 'Majesty well knows that by this Act he hath 'gratified and obliged many worthy and Pious 'men, who have contributed much to his Restau-'ration, and who shall always receive fresh evi-'dences of his Majesties Favour and Kindness; but 'he is not sure that he may like likewise have 'gratified some who did neither contribute to his 'coming in, nor are yet glad he is in; how comes 'it else to pass, that he receives such frequent 'Information of Seditious Sermons in the City 'and in the Country, in which all Industry is used 'to alienate the affections of the People, and to in-'fuse Jealousies into them of the King and his 'Government? they talk of introducing Popery, 'of Evil Counsellours, and such other old Calum-'nies as are pardoned by this Act of Indempnity.

'His Majesty told you, when he was last 'here, That Rigour and Severity he will here-'after use, how contrary soever it is to his Na-'ture in these cases, and conjured you, My 'Lords and Gentlemen, to concur with him in 'this Just and Necessary Severity; which I am 'sure you will do with your utmost Vigilance; 'and that you will believe that too much ill 'cannot befal those who do the best they can to 'corrupt his Majesties Nature, and to extinguish 'his Mercy.

'My Lords and Gentlemen, I told you I was to 'acquaint you with some things his Majesty in-'tends to do during this Recess, that you may see 'he will give no intermission to his own Thoughts 'for the Publick good, though for a time he 'dispenses with your assistance.

'He doth consider the infinite importance the 'improvement of Trade must be to this King-'dom, and therefore his Majesty intends to esta-'blish a Council of Trade, consisting of some Prin-'cipal Merchants of the several Companies, to 'which he will add some Gentlemen of Quality 'and Experience. And for their greater Honour 'and Encouragement, some of my Lords of his 'own Privy Council.

'In the next place, his Majesty hopes, that by 'a well-settled Peace and Gods great Blessing 'upon him and You, this Nation will in a short 'time flourish to that degree that the Land of 'Canan did, when Esau found it necessary to 'part from his Brother; For their Riches were 'more than that they might dwell together, and 'the Land wherein they were could not bear 'them, because of their Cattel. We have been our-'selves very near this Pinacle of Happiness; and 'the hope and contemplation that we may be so 'again, dispose the King to be very solicitous for 'the Improvement and Prosperity of his Planta-'tions abroad, where there is such large room for 'the Industry and Reception of such who shall 'desire to go thither. And therefore his Majesty 'intends likewise to Erect and Establish a Council 'for those Plantations, in which persons well-qua-'lified, shall be wholly intent upon the good and 'advancement of those Plantations. 1660.

'There are two other Particulars which I am 'commanded to mention, which were both men-'tioned and recommended to You by his Maje-'sty in his Declaration from Breda: The one, for 'the confirmation of Sales, or other recompence 'for Purchasers: The other for the Composing 'those differences and distempers in Religion 'which have too much disturbed the Peace of the 'Kingdom. Two very weighty Particulars, in 'which his Majesty knows you have spent much 'time, and concerning which he should have 'heard from you before this time, if you had 'not met with great difficulties in the disquisi-'tion of either.

'For the First, his Majesty hath not been 'without much thought upon the Argument, and 'hath done much towards the accommodation 'of many particular persons; and you shall not 'be at your Journey's end, before his Majesty 'will put that business concerning Sales into such 'a way of dispatch, that he doubts not, you will 'find a good progress made in it before your 'coming together again; and I believe the per-'sons concerned will be very much to blame if 'they receive not good satisfaction: and some of 'you, who stay in Town, shall be advised and 'consulted with, in that Settlement.

'The other of Religion, is a sad Argument 'indeed, it is a consideration that must make eve-'ry Religious heart to bleed, to see Religion, 'which should be the strongest Obligation & Ce-'ment of Affection, and Brotherly Kindness and 'Compassion, made now, by the perverse wrang-'lings of passionate & froward men, the ground 'of all Animosity, Hatred, Malice and Revenge. 'And this unruly and unmanly passion (which no 'Question the Divine Nature exceedingly abhors) 'sometimes, and I fear too frequently, transports 'those who are in the right, as well as those who 'are in the wrong, and leaves the latter more ex-'cusable than the former, when men, who find 'their Manners and dispositions very conform-'able in all the necessary obligations of humane 'Nature, avoid one anothers conversation, and 'grow first unsociable, and then uncharitable to 'each other, because one cannot think as the o-'ther doth: And from this separation We entitle 'God to the Patronage of, and concernment in, 'our fancies and distinction, and purely for his 'sake hate one another heartily.

'It was not so of old, when one of the most 'Ancient Fathers of the Church tells Us, That 'Love and Charity was so signal and eminent 'in the Primitive Christians, that it even drew 'admiration and envy from their adversaries.

Vide

1660. '(Vide inquiunt) ut invicem se diligunt! Their Adversaries, in that in which they moſt agreed in, 'their very proſecution of them, had their paſſions 'and animoſities amongſt themſelves; they were 'only Chriſtians that Loved, and Cheriſhed, and 'Comforted, and were ready to die for one ano-'ther. Quid nunc illi dicerent Chriſtiani, ſi noſtra vi-'derent tempora? ſays the incomporable Grotius? 'How would they look upon our ſharp and vi-'rulent Contentions in the Debates of Chriſtian 'Religion, and the bloody Wars that have pro-'ceeded from thoſe Contentions, whilſt every one 'pretended to all the marks which are to attend 'upon the true Church except only that which is 'inſeparable from it, Charity to one another.

'My Lords and Gentlemen, this Diſquiſition 'hath coſt the King many a Sigh, many a ſad 'hour, when he hath conſidered the almoſt irre-'parable reproach the Proteſtant Religion hath 'undergone from the Diviſions and Diſtractions 'which have been ſo notorious within this King-'dom; What pains he hath taken to compoſe 'them after ſeveral Diſcourſes with Learned and 'Pious men of different Perſwaſions, you will 'ſhortly ſee by a Declaration he will publiſh upon 'that occaſion; by which you will ſee his great 'indulgence, to thoſe who can have any Pro-'teſtion from Conſcience to differ with their 'Brethren. And I hope God will ſo bleſs the Can-'dor of his Majeſty in the Condeſcenſions he 'makes, that the Church as well as the State will 'return to that Unity and Unanimity, which will 'make both King and People as happy as they 'can hope to be in this World.

'My Lords and Gentlemen, I ſhall conclude 'with the King's hearty Thanks to you, not only 'for what you have done towards him, which 'hath been very Signal; but for what you have 'done towards each other, for the Excellent 'Correſpondence you have maintain'd for the 'very ſeaſonable deference and condeſcenſion 'you have had for each other, which will reſtore 'Parliaments to the veneration they ought to 'have. And ſince his Majeſty knows that you all 'deſire to pleaſe him, you have given him ample 'evidence that you do ſo; He hath appointed me 'to give you a ſure receipt to attain that good 'end; it is a Receipt of his own preſcribing, and 'therefore it is not like to fail.

'Be but pleaſed your ſelves, and perſwade 'others to be ſo; contrive all the ways imagina-'ble for your own Happineſs, and you will 'make Him the beſt pleaſed and the moſt happy 'Prince in the World.

After this Speech the King retired, and both Houſes of Parliament Adjourned themſelves to the ſixth of November.

In the ACT for the ſpeedy Disbanding of the Army and Garriſons, That Affair was committed two Twelve Commiſſioners, (Six whereof were Lords and Six Commons) or to any Three of them, whereof one of the Commiſſioners named by the Lords, and one named by the Commons, were to be Two: And that they might not go far about for the Money, The Treaſurers at War, and Treaſurer named in the Act for the ſpeedy Proviſion of Money for Disbanding the Army, were to Iſſue Moneys upon their Warrant.

All the Regiments and Garriſons were Diſbanded by Lot, except four Companies in Hull, four in Berwick, and four in Carliſle, which were reſerved to be laſt reduced: And the Regiments belonging to the Duke of York and Glouceſter, and the Lord General, were not to be Disbanded till after all the other Regiments and Garriſons except the Three before-mentioned. There were Disbanded in England and Wales, Eighteen Regiments of Foot, conſiſting of a Thouſand Souldiers in each Regiment, beſides Officers and thirteen Regiments of Horſe, having ſix hundred Souldiers in each Regiment beſides Officers, together with the General's Life Guard of Horſe, conſiſting of Two Hundred, and about Fifty Garriſons which had not in them leſs than 5000 Souldiers, beſides Officers. And in Scotland Three Regiments and Two Companies of Foot, and Two Regiments, except one Troop of Horſe, and about Thirteen Garriſons; but moſt of theſe Garriſons were not under particular Eſtabliſhment, as thoſe in England, but were mann'd by Companies out of the reſpective Regiments. The King, out of his own Bounty, gave a Weeks Pay over and above their full Arrears to all the Troops and Companies Disbanded; Which was very Thankfully accepted by them.

Moreover, he was ſo well ſatisfied with the Services of many of his Subjects in Ireland, who Joyned with the Duke of Albemarle, for his Reſtauration, that he Conferred Rewards and Honour upon many of them according to the report of their merit; amongſt theſe, Sir Charles Coot was made Earl of Montrath; Roger Lord Broughhil advanced to the Dignity of Earl of Orrery; Colonel Richard Coot, a Brother to the Earl of Montrath, was created Baron of Collowney: and Sir John King, Baron of Kingſton; and ſhortly after Sir John Clotworthy was made Viſcount Maſſarine.

The KING complemented by the Embaſſadours and Agents of Forain Princes.

Beſides the many Addreſſes that were made to the King by his own Subjects generally from all parts of his Dominions, there alſo came over Forrain Agents and Embaſſadours from ſeveral of the greateſt Princes and States of Europe, to Complement his Majeſty in the Name of their Maſters, touching his happy Reſtauration to his Royal Dignity and Government: from the Marqueſs of Brandenburg came the Baron of Pelnitz, Maſter of the Horſe to his Highneſs. From Frederick Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Cozen-German to his Majeſty of England, came Chriſtopher Cloſs of Keiſembergh, Captain of his Guards. From the King of Denmark came the Lord Frederick Van Alefeld, Deputy-Governour of the Dukedoms of Sleſwick and Holſtein. But never did any Embaſſadour arrive in England in a more Splendid and gallant Equipage than the Prince of Ligne, who being ſent Embaſſadour to our King from the King of Spain, ſeems to have come only upon a Gratulatory and Complemental Addreſs, in regard there needed no Negotiation about any Peace between England and Spain, foraſmuch as upon the coming in of his preſent Majeſty, there follow'd by conſequence a reviving of that Peaceful & Friendly Correſpondence which had formerly been between theſe Two Crowns

Peace renewed with Spain.

Crowns in the time of the late King. And to this purpose his Majesty set forth a Proclamation, Requiring, that (whereas the King of Spain had Commanded throughout his Dominions a Cessation from all Hostility towards this Crown, and had proposed, that the Publication thereof might be on both sides agreed on by a fixt day) all Acts of Hostility should likewise cease on our parts, towards the Subjects of that Crown; which Cessation was to be reckoned as taking beginning from the day of his Majesties Arrival in England, being the 25th of May, and that all Goods and Merchandizes which had been taken from that time should be restored.

As the occasion of the Prince de Ligne's coming over was only Gratulatory and Complemental, so his stay here was but short; and after his Departure, there remained here as the King of Spain's Lieger or Embassador in Ordinary, the Baron of Battevill. In the same manner, on the part of the French was the Count of Soissons, succeeded by Monsieur d' Estrade, who had not been long here, ere an Occasion hapned, which manifested, that the late concluded Peace between these two Kings had not any whit lessened the Jealousie of Honour between them and their old pretensions in point of Precedence: Many troublesome Contests there have formerly been between the Embassadors of these two Crowns in the Courts of Forrain Princes and States, when they have chanced to be Resident together at the same place; but none more remarkable than that upon Tower-Hill, at the Landing of an Embassador from Sweden, on the 30th of September: Which since it was so prepared and premeditated a Business on both sides, that his Majesty foreseeing it would come to a Quarrel, and out of his accustomed Civility willing to carry himself with an equal and impartial Indifference toward them both, and so far to gratifie their Intentions, as to permit them to put their Retinue into such a posture as they should think fittest, and most becoming their respective pretences: Yet in the mean time taking order for strict guards to be kept upon the place, for the preventing, as much as might be, of all, disturbances; and severely prohibiting any of his own Subjects to intermeddle in the difference, or to take part with either side; was pleased to Command, That the formerly mention'd Mr. Evelyn should, after diligent Enquiry made concerning the Carriage and Success of that whole Affair, render him a particular Accompt thereof by drawing up a full Narrative of every Circumstance of that Rencounter: Which being a matter of so rare a kind, and great Importance, We have here thought meet to insert from that Gentleman's more sedulous and ample Collection, as it was by him presented to his Majesty in this following relation:

The manner of the encounter between the French and Spanish Embassadors, at the Landing of the Swedish Embassador.

Upon Monday last, being the 30th of September, about ten in the Morning, the Spanish Embassadours Coach (in which were his Chaplain, with some of his Gentlemen attended by about Fourty more of his own Servants in Liveries) was sent down to the Tower-Wharf, and there placed it self near about the Point, where the Ranks or Ordnance determine towards the Gate leading into the Bulwark. Next after him came the Dutch, and (Twelve a Clock past) the Swedish Coach of Honour, disposing of themselves according to their places. About two hours after this (in company with his Majesties Coach Royal) appeared that of the French Ambassadors, wherein were Le Marques de Strade, Son to the French Ambassador, with several more of his Gentlemen, and as might be computed, near an Hundred and fifty in Train, whereof above Fourty were Horsemen well appointed with Pistols, and (some of them) with Carabines, Musquetoons or Fuzies: In this posture and Equipage stood they expecting upon the Wharf, and as near as might be, approaching to his Majesties Coach, which was opposite to the Stairs. About three in the Afternoon, the Swedish Ambassador being Landed, and received into his Majesties Coach, (which moved leisurely before the rest, and was followed by that of the Swedes) The French Ambassadors Coach endeavoured to go the next, driving as close as possibly they could, and advancing their party with their Swords drawn, to force the Spaniards from the Guard of their own Coach, which were also putting in for Precedency next the King. His Majesties Coach now past, the Spaniards (who held as yet their Rapiers undrawn in their hands) stepping nimbly on either side of the hind-most Wheels of their Masters Coach, drew their Weapons, and shouted, which caused the French Coach-horses to make a Pause: But, when they observed the advantage, which by this the Spanish Ambassadors Coach had gained, being now in file after the Swedes, they came up very near to the Spaniards, and at once, pouring in their shot upon them, together with their Foot (then got before their Coach) fell to it with their Swords; both which the Spaniards received, without removing one jot from their Stations.

During this Demesle (in which the French received some repulse, and were put to a second stand) a bold and dextrous Fellow, and (as most affirm) with a particular Instrument, as well as address, stooping under the bellies of the French Ambassadors Coach-Horses, cut the Ham-strings of two of them, and wounded a third; which immediately falling, the Coach for the present was disabled from advancing farther, the Coachman forced out of his Box, and the Postilion mortally wounded, who falling into the arms of an English Gentleman that stepped in to his succour, was by a Spaniard pierced through his Thigh. This disorder (wherein several were wounded, and some slain) caused those in the French to alight, and so enraged their Party, that it occasioned a second brisk Assault both of Horse and Foot; which being received with extraordinary Gallantry, many of their Horse retreated, and wheel'd off to St. Katherines.

It was in this Skirmish that some Brick-bats were thrown from the edg of the Wharf, which (by a mistake) are said to have been provided by the Spanish Ambassadors Order the day before. But that they were not cast by any of the English, is attested by the general consent of all the Spectators.

In this Interim then (which was near half an hour) the Spanish Coach went forward after his Majesties, with about Twenty of its Retinue following, who still kept their Countenances towards the French, as long as they abode on the

1660. Wharf, and that narrow paſſage of the Bullwark, (where the Conteſt was very fierce) without diſorder: So as the firſt which appear'd on Toner-Hill (where now they were entring) was His Majeſties Coach, followed by the Swedes Ambaſſadours, and next, by that of Spain, with about twenty four, or thirty of his Liveries, ſtill diſputing it with a leſs number of French, who came after them in the Rear.

And here, (beſides what were ſlain with Bullets on the Wharf, and near the Bulwark, whereof one was a Valet de Chambre of the Spaniſh Ambaſſadours, and ſix more, amongſt which a poor Engliſh Plaiſterer, and near Forty wounded) fell one of the French, who was kill'd juſt before his Highneſſes Life-guard, no one perſon of the numerous Spectators intermedling, or ſo much as making the leaſt noiſe, or tumult, People or Soldiers, whereof there were three Companies of Foot which ſtood oppoſite on the Hill to the Guards of Horſe, 'twixt whom the Antagoniſts lightly skirmiſh'd, ſome freſh Parties of French coming out of ſeveral places, and protected by the Engliſh, amongſt whom they found ſhelter, till the Spaniſh Ambaſſadors Coach having gained and paſſed the Chain which leads into Crochet-Friers, they deſiſted, and gave them over.

What-ever diſadvantage the French came off with in this Rencounter, wherein, except one Man that ſought among the Spaniards with a Half-Pike, not any of the Engliſh were ſeen to act any thing that might contribute to the ſucceſs of one ſide more than another, till a few of the multitude which ſtood on that ſide of the Wharf, being inraged by the Wounds which they receiyed from the ſhot that came in amongſt them, and whereof, 'tis ſaid, ſome of them afterwards died, were forced to defend themſelves with what they found at hand: For ſo careful was Sir Charles Berkley, Captain of his Royal Highneſſes Life-guard, to put in execution what he had in ſtrict Charge from his Majeſty, that not a Man of the Spectators was ſuffered with impunity ſo much as with a Switch in his hand. The French King, from this occaſion, gained an advantage to the Prerogative he ſtood upon, greater than if this conteſt had not hapned; for whereas this buſineſs of Precedence had been hitherto in Controverſie between him and Spain, in ſo much that to prevent all inconveniences, an Accord had been lately made here between the Spaniſh Embaſſador and the Count of Soiſſons, that they ſhould aſſiſt at no Publick Ceremonies, but upon all ſuch caſual Encounters, paſs on their way as they fortuned to meet: The King of France countermanding this Agreement, and ſending poſitive charge to de Strade, not to abate any thing of thoſe Pretenſions formerly ſtood upon; and hearing what enſued upon his Ambaſſadours executing of his Injunctions, was ſo incenſed thereat, that the quarrel had proceeded to an abſolute breach of the late concluded Peace between the two Kingdoms, had not the King of Spain condeſcended to agree, that thence-forward Precedence ſhould be yielded to the French upon all ſuch like occaſions, without any diſpute.

The Princeſs Royal comes over into England.

On the 23d of this Month, the Princeſs-Royal of Great Britain having recommended the Intereſts of her Son the Prince of Aurange to the care of the Lords States of the Netherlands, (who now at length had agreed among themſelves to admit this young Prince to the ſame Dignity and Truſt which his Anceſtors formerly held in that Commonwealth, of which they had ſo highly merited) came over into England, invited by his Majeſty, and willing once again to ſee her Native Country from which ſhe had ſo many years been abſent: But her joy to ſee the King her Brother peaceably Inthroned, was very much allayed by her ſorrow for the loſs of her Third Brother, Henry of Oatlands Duke of Glouceſter, who in the 21 year of his age (to the great grief of the King his Brother, and all thoſe that knowing and admiring the Princely Vertues of his Youth, had promiſed Wonders to the World from the hopes of his Elder Age) departed this Life on the 13th of September, being the ſame day the Parliament adjourned, which was near the ſpace of Four Months after his Arrival in England; ſo that he ſurvived little longer than juſt to attend upon his Brother to his Throne. He was a Prince excellently accompliſh'd, Religious, Learned, Valiant, Wiſe above his Years, a dutiful and affectionate Brother, a wiſe Councellor, a good Maſter, and a true Friend. And as if Fate had ſo provided, that being himſelf, of the moſt Noble, he ſhould alſo in death be accompanied by the moſt Noble; there died much about the ſame time, two of the ſame Order with himſelf, and next him in Quality, Eſme Duke of Lenox, and Richmond, and William Marqueſs of Hertford, who was alſo not long before his death reſtored by his now Majeſty to the Ancient Dignity of his Anceſtors, being created Duke of Somerſet, and alſo to the Honour he had merited in the time of his late Majeſty of being Lord Chancellour of the Univerſity of Oxford: In which laſt Dignity he is ſucceeded by Sir Edw. Hide, Lord High Chancellour of England.

The death of the Duke of Glouceſter.

Of the Dukes of Lenox and Somerſet.

Commiſſioners having been appointed by the Parliament to pay off and disband the Army and Navy, a ſpeedy and effectual courſe having been by them taken, as hath been already mentioned, for the paying off and disbanding the ſeveral Regiments and Ships as faſt as Money came in by the Act of Poll-money, and the other Acts of Aſſeſſements made to that end by the Parliament before their Adjournment: In lieu of theſe diſbanded Forces, all the ſeveral Counties of the Nation under the Conduct of certain Noblemen, who were conſtituted the Kings Lieutenants over them, according to the Ancient Cuſtom, were armed with their own Militia or Trained Bands; not ſo much in any apprehenſion of diſquiet from the Soldiers, for they had ſo good Officers placed over them by the Lord General, that there was no fear of diſorder from them; but leaſt any ſeditious perſons might think themſelves capable of making diſturbance, if no armed Force ſhould be ready to prevent their miſchiefs.

Commiſſioners appointed to Disband the Army and Navy.

The Militia ſettled in the ſeveral Counties.

And by this means, the Country was both ſettled into ſuch a poſture of Military Defence, as to be able at a ſhort warning to appear in Arms, and alſo Freed from the continual charge of maintaining a ſtanding Army, whereof there would be no apearance, except in caſe of emergent danger.

As matters of Civil, ſo likewiſe thoſe of Eccleſiaſtical concernment were had in ſerious regard regard by his Majesty, who judging the Form of Church-Government which had been establish'd in England from the time of the Reformation, till the late Troubles, to be the most Ancient and decent way of Worship and Discipline, and most tending to Uniformity in Religion, made it one of his first business to restore the late extruded Episcopacy to the Dignity and Authority they formerly exercised in the Church of England: To which end, he speedily proceeded to the nomination of such Persons as were approved to be of the most Eminent for Learning and Piety, for the supplying of those Bishops See's, which were become vacant since the first time of the Abrogation of their Power.

Episcopacy revived in England.

In the Month of October, Owen Row, Augustine Garland, and 27 more of the Regicides Murderers of the late King, excepted out of the Act of Indempnity and Oblivion, were Arraigned at the Old-Baily upon a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, directed to Thomas Allen, Knight and Baronet, Lord Mayor of London, Sir Edward Hide, Lord Chancellour of England.

The Earl of Southampton, the Duke of Somerset, the Duke of Albemarle, the Lord High Steward, the Earl of Lindsey, Earl of Manchester, Earl of Dorset, Earl of Berkshire, Earl of Sandwich, Lord Roberts, the Lord Finch, Denzel Hollis Esquire, Sir Frederick Cornwallis, Knight and Baronet, Sir Charles Berkley Knight, Mr. Secretary Nicholas, Mr. Secretary Morrice, Sir Anthony Ashley-Cooper, Arthur Annesly Esquire, Sir Orlando Bridgeman Lord Chief Baron, Mr. Justice Foster, Mr. Justice Mallet, Mr. Justice Hide, Mr. Baron Atkins, Mr. Justice Twisden, Mr. Justice Terrell, Mr. Baron Turner, Sir Harbottle Grimston, Knight and Baronet, Sir William Wilde, Knight and Baronet, Recorder of London, Mr. Serjeant Brown, Mr. Serjeant Hale, John Howell Esquire.

The Prosecutors on behalf of his Majesty were Sir Jeffery Palmer, his Majesties Attorney-General, Sir Heneage Finch his Majesties Sollicitor General, Sir Edward Turner, Attorney to his Highness the Duke of York, and Wadham Windham Esquire, Edward Shelton Esquire, attended the Clerk of the Crown.

The Prisoners being called, they all pleaded Not Guilty, except Sir Hardress Waller, and Mr. George Fleetwood, who pleaded Guilty: But the Crimes were so odious, and the Proof so clear, that the Jurors scarce ever went from the Bar to deliberate, but found them all Guilty; And ten of them were Executed, viz. Harrison, Carew, Scot, Clement, Jones, Scroop, Cook, and Peters, at Charing-Cross; and Hacker and Axtell at Tyburn: William Hulet (who was also found Guilty, being accused to be one of those that in a Frock and Vizard assisted in the horrid Execution of the King, and therefore accepted from Pardon, though not by name) in regard that the Evidence seemed not so clear to the Court, upon their report to the King he had his Reprieve; and all the rest were respited, till the King and Parliament should order their Execution according to the direction in the Act of Indempnity in that behalf.

The King summons a Parliament in Scotland.

The King thought it high time to settle the Peace of Scotland, as well as that of his other Dominions; and in order thereunto, he summon'd a Parliament to meet at Edenburgh the 12th day of December; and by his Proclamation in that Kingdom, signified to all that he relied so much on the Loyalty, Prodence, and Care of his Parliament, as absolutely to commit to them the Trying and Judging of the Carriage of his Subjects during the late Troubles, concerning which he would receive Addresses and Informations only from his Parliament, or Committee of Estate: To whom in the mean time he recommended the ordering and preparing of that affair, and to whom alone any of his People that were interessed, might freely and should only make their Applications, assuring them, that his own Honour once vindicated, and the Ancient Prerogatives of the Crown asserted, he would grant such a full and free Pardon, an Act of Indempnity, as might witness, that he desired nothing more than that his People should be settled with abundance of Happiness, Peace, and Plenty, under his Government. 1665.

New Officers Constituted in Ireland.

For the Government of Ireland, he made Sir Maurice Eustace Knight, Lord Chancellour of Ireland, Roger Earl of Orrery Lord President of Munster, and Charles Earl of Montraith, Lord President of Connought, to be Justices; who governed Affairs there with great Candour and Moderation.

The Sitting again of the Parliament of England drew very near; in the Interim whereof, the King, to manifest his vigilance for the good of his Subjects, according to his Promise at their Adjournment the latter end of October, published his Declaration concerning Ecclesiastical affairs, filled with many gracious Concessions to allay the distempers in Religion of that time; which because it was but temporary, till the Parliament should offer something further to him in reference to those matters, we forbear to mention the particulars thereof. He likewise a few days after emitted a Commission under the Great Seal of England, to several Persons of great Honour and Integrity, to Treat with all Purchasers of Crown and Church-Lands, that none of his People might want any satisfaction which in reason could be allowed them.

The King sets forth a Declaration concerning Ecclesiastical affairs.

The Two Houses of Parliament met the sixth of November, and applied themselves to the making of several Laws for the augmentation of the Kings Revenue, and other matters of great Consideration, in which they were the more diligent and speedy, for that they received intimation from the King, that he intended to dissolve them on the 19th of December. In the mean time, they ordered, that the several Bodies of Oliver Cromwel, John Bradshaw, Henry Ireton, & Thomas Pride, should be taken out of their Graves, and drawn on a Hurdle to Tyburn, to be buried under the Gallows: And on Christmas-Eve, the King went to the House of Lords, and there gave his Royal Assent to two Acts of Parliament; viz. To an Act for a Grant of certain Impositions upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for the increase of his Majesties Revenue: and an Act for the taking away the Court of Wards, and Liveries, and Tenures in Capite, and, by Knights Service and Purveyance, and for settling a Revenue upon his Majesty in Lieu thereof.

The Parliament meets again.

The Bodies of Cromwell, Bradshaw, Ireton, and Pride, ordered to be buried under the Gallows.

The King passes the Act for settling of Excise, and taking away the Court of Wards.

The Act for a Grant of certain Impositions, &c. is by several Rates, as Excise upon Beer, Ale, Sider, 1660. Sider, Perry, Metheglin, Strong-Water, or Aqua-Vita, Coffee, Chocolate, Sherbet, and Tea; (Viz.) for Beer, Ale, and ſuch of theſe as are not Forreign Liquors, they are to be paid by the Brewer, or other perſon that ſhall ſell the ſame; And all Forreign Liquors, by the Merchant, or Importer, in ready Money upon Entry, made before the Landing thereof, and theſe Impoſitions are to continue by this Law during the Kings Life: But by another Statute made in the ſame Seſſion, for taking away the Court of Wards and Liveries, and Tenures in Capite, and by Knights Service, and Purveyance, and for ſettling a Revenue upon his Majeſty in lieu thereof; the ſaid Impoſitions and Rates are in recompence thereof to be paid to his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors for ever.

The Reaſons alledged in this Statute, for taking away the Court of Wards, in the Preamble thereof were, becauſe Tenures by Knights Service, either of the King or others, or by Knights Service in Capite, or by Soccage in Capite of the King, and the Conſequence upon the ſame had been much more burthenſome, grievous, and prejudicial to the Kingdom, than beneficial to the King: and ſince the intermiſſion of the ſaid Court from the 24th of February, 1645. many perſons had by Will and otherwiſe made diſpoſal of their Lands held by Knights Service, whereupon divers Queſtions might ariſe, unleſs ſome ſeaſonable Remedy ſhould be taken to prevent the ſame, by taking away from the ſaid 24th of February, 1645. the Court of Wards and Liveries, and all Wardſhips, Liveries, Primer Seiſins, and all Ouſter le mains, Values, and Forfeitures of Marriages, by reaſon of any Tenure of the King, or of any other by Knight Service, and all mean Rates and Gifts, Grants or Charges, &c.

The Death of the Princes of Aurange.

Whilſt the King was paſſing theſe two Acts, his Siſter the Princeſs Mary, Princeſs of Aurange, died at White-Hall, a Lady of admirable Virtues, and all Princely Endowments; and five days after (viz.) on the 29th day of December in the Evening (which was the day of the diſſolution of the Parliament) was buried in King Henry the Sevenths Chappel at Weſtminſter.

The Parliament diſſolved, and 32 Acts more paſſed by the King.

Upon which day in the Morning, the King came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to twenty private, and twelve publick Acts of Parliament. The private were theſe following:

4 'No Conveyance, Aſſurance, Grant, Bargain, Sale Charge, Leaſe, Aſſignment, Surrender by Copy, Eſtate, Intereſt, Truſt, Limitation of Uſes, or out of any Lands, Tenements or Hereditaments, (not being the Lands of the late Kings, Queen, Prince, or any of the Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters,) nor any Statute, Judgment or Recognizances had, made acknowledged or ſuffered to any perſon or perſons which before the 24th day of September, 1659. by any of the Offenders in the Act mentioned, or their Heirs, or any other perſons claiming by, from, or under them, other than the Wife or Wives, Child or Children, Heir or Heirs, of ſuch perſon or perſons to any of them for Money bona fide to them or any of them paid or Lent, nor any Conveyance, Grant, or Eſtate, made before the 25th day of April, 1660, by any perſon or perſons aforeſaid, in truſt and for the benefit of any other perſon or perſons not being of the Offenders aforeſaid, ſhall be impeached, defeated, made void or fruſtrated hereby, or by the Convictions or Attainders aforeſaid, but ſhall be enjoyned by the Purchaſers, Grantes, Leſſees, their Heirs, Executors, Adminiſtrators and Aſſigns reſpectively, as if this Act had not been made; ſo as the ſaid Conveyances, Grants, Aſſurances, which are and ought to be held and enjoyed, as aforeſaid, before the firſt of January, 1662. be enter'd and enrolled of Record in the Exchequer, and not otherwiſe. 1660.

5 'All and ſingular the Mannours, Lands and Hereditaments, which heretofore were the Lands, &c. of Henry late Marqueſs of Worceſter, Edward now Marqueſs of Worceſter, and Henry Lord Herbert, Son to the ſaid Edward Marqueſs of Worceſter, whereof the ſaid Oliver Cromwell, or any other perſon in truſt for him or to his uſe, or any other the perſons attainted by this Act, or otherwiſe, or any other perſon in truſt for them, or any of them, had at any time before or ſince the deceaſe of the ſaid Oliver Cromwell, are veſted and ſeiſed in, and ſhall be held and enjoyed by the ſaid Marqueſs of Worceſter, and Henry Lord Herbert, in ſuch manner, and for ſuch Eſtates, or ſuch Powers and Priviledges, as they formerly had in the ſame, ſaving the Eſtates, Rights, Titles and Intereſts of Strangers, not derived by and from any of the ſaid Offenders ſince the 25th day of March 1646.

1. It is provided nevertheleſs, 'That thoſe who have received any of the Rents or Mean Profits of, in, or out of any the Lands, Chattels Real, or poſſeſſions of any of the Offenders in this act mentioned before the 11th of February, 1659. and have paid or accompted for the ſame before that day unto the ſaid Offender or Offenders, or their Aſſigns, or any other perſon claiming from or under them, ſhall be for ever acquitted and diſcharged of and from the ſame, againſt the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors.

2. And alſo, 'That Richard Ingoldsby may keep, ſell or diſpoſe of all the Goods and Chattels formerly belonging to Sir Hardreſs Waller in Ireland, until 2000 l. (for which the ſaid Ingoldsby in the year 1658. ſtood joyntly bounden with the ſaid Sir Hardreſs Waller unto James Brooks of the City of York Alderman, and was then Counter-ſecured by a Judgment upon his Lands, and ſince by a Deed of Bargain and Sale of the ſaid Goods and Chattels in Ireland,) be fully paid, together with the Intereſt thereof, the ſaid Ingoldsby paying the Over-plus to the King.

The Kings Favour to this Gentleman, grounded upon ſo notable a Foundation of Merit, as is before related, did oblige the Parliament in this and many other occaſions, to ſhew their reſpect to him

1660.

The Act for raiſing and eſtabliſhing a Poſt-Office, brought a Revenue of one and twenty thouſand pounds a year to the Crown; which was an Improvement firſt made in the time of Cromwell's Uſurpation.

The Act for the better ordering of the ſelling of Wines by Retail, was to prohibit any from ſelling of Wines, but ſuch as ſhould be licens'd by the Kings Agents, and from retailing mingled, corrupted, or abuſed Wines: as alſo for limiting and bringing down the prices thereof.

The Act for the prohibiting the planting, ſetting or ſowing of Tobacco in England and Ireland, did under ſtrict penalties forbid the ſetting or planting any Tobacco in ſeed, plant, or otherwiſe, in England, Wales, the Iſland of Jerſey and Guernſey, and the Town of Berwick, except it be in any Phyſick-Garden of either of the Univerſities, or other private Garden for Phyſick or Surgery, ſo as the quantity ſo planted, exceed not one half of a Pole in any place or Garden.

The Act for prohibiting the Exportation of Wool, Wool-fells, Fullers-Earth, or any kind of ſcouring Earth, was made to preſerve the Manufacture of Woolen-cloth in England, which was, one of the Staple-commodities of this Kingdom, and that which brought moſt Trade and advantage of any to it, till of late years that the Hollander, French, and others of our Neighbours, by Exportation of our Materials, had almoſt gain'd all the Trade thereof from us: And although theſe materials, as Wool, Wool-fells, and Fullers-Earth, had been by former Laws prohibited to be Exported to any Forreign parts, on pain of forfeiture, or other pecuniary Mulcts, thoſe Laws could not prevent the offences, for they were frequently by ſtealth or connivance exported. Wherefore this Statute was thought fit to be made, for the re-inforcing of thoſe former Laws, and preventing the like abuſes for the future.

After the King had given the Royal Aſſent to the before-mentioned Acts, he made a Speech to both Houſes, full of gracious and pleaſing Expreſſions: and amongſt others, he ſaid, This Parliament ſhould be called to all Poſterity, The Healing and the Bleſſed Parliament, And that it ſhould be a Rule to his Actions and Counſels to conſider, What is a Parliament like to think of this Action, or this Council? Adding, That he would Religiouſly himſelf obſerve the Act of Indempnity, and would exact the Obſervation of it from all others.

And after he had ended, the Lord Chancellour (according to the Cuſtom, for none ever in his Place had greater Eloquence) excellently ſet forth the Happineſs of the King and his People, which only ſtrove which ſhould expreſs more affection to each others, to the joy of all his good Subjects, and the terrour of Evil Doers. And with this Speech he concluded the Parliament; for then it was diſſolved. And we may truely ſay, never did King and Parliament in this Kingdom better agree, never was there any Parliament aſſembled with greater Expectation, and ended with greater Satisfaction to all the People; of which we may not improperly inſert in this place a Stanza, out of that Excellent Ode upon the Kings Reſtauration and Return, made by the moſt Celebrated of our Engliſh Poets, Mr. Abraham Cowly, now living, a little before its Diſſolution; in the 18th Page whereof is ſung this paſſage,

And ill ſhould We deſerve this Happy Day,
If no acknowledgment we pay
To You Great Patriots of the Two
Moſt truly other Houſes now;
Who have redeem'd from Hatred and from Shame,
A Parliament's once Venerable Name;
And now the Title of a Houſe reſtore
To that which was but Slaughter-Houſe before;
If my advice, Ye Worthies, might be tane,
Within thoſe Reverend Places
Which now your Living Preſence graces,
Your Worthy Statues always ſhould remain,
To keep alive your Uſeful Memory,
And to your Succeſſors th' Example be
Of Truth, Religion, Reaſon, Loyalty.
For though a firmly ſettled Peace,
May ſhortly make your Publick Labours ceaſe,
The grateful Nation will with joy conſent,
That in this Sence, you ſhould be ſaid
(Though yet the Name ſounds with ſome dread)
To be the Long, the Endleſs Parliament.

The Inſurrection of Venner, and his Fifth-Monarchy-men.

Of all the manifold Sects and Separations that ſprung up from the licence of the late War, and the Anarchy that reign'd from that time, till the time of his Majeſties Reſtauration, there were ſcarce any that dreaded not the Name of Monarchy, as apprehending the conſequence thereof to be a tendency to Uniformity in Church and State; and therefore no marvel if they who heretofore were profeſs'd Enemies to the King and his Right Government, were after his coming in agitated with a Reſtleſs ſpirit of impatience and diſſatisfaction, which forbore not ſeveral times to manifeſt it ſelf in ſuch Attempts, as had not a timely ſtop been put unto them, by the prudent foreſight and vigilant care of his Majeſty and his Council, might very much have endanger'd the imbroiling of the Nation in a new Civil War. The firſt Alarm that was given, was by the Fifth Monarchy-men, (they at leaſt were the only hardy men that openly appear'd) a Generation of people however ſo call'd, the moſt inveterate Enemies to the Ancient ſettled Monarchy of the Nation, of all the whole Hydra; of theſe about 50 or 60 mad perſons, reſolving to venture Neck or nothing, broke forth into open Hoſtility and Rebellion, under the Conduct of one Thomas Venner, a Cooper, that had lived for ſome time in New England, and was of the principal of the Fifth Monarchy, and a Preacher to a Conventicle of thoſe of that Opinion, who uſually met in Coleman ſtreet. That which firſt gave him and his Partakers a pretence to their Treaſon, was the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, (which all good Subjects are oblig'd by the Law to take) exclaiming not only againſt them in particular, but againſt all Oaths in general: And when ſome amongſt them, more Ingenious than the reſt, adviſed their Companions not to diſpute what was commanded by their Superiours, ſince ſubjection was naturally due to thoſe Powers from whence they expected Protections; they were anſwered by the Seditious, That they had no Protection in the exerciſe of their Religion, but were for the practice thereof expoſſed to all manner of Contempts and Miſeries. As if a Juſt Reſtraint from Extravagancies in Divine Worſhip, were to be eſteem'd Oppreſſion.

The

The madneſs of theſe Men extended ſo far, as to believe they and the reſt of their Judgment were called by GOD to Reform the World, and make all the Earthly Powers (which they called Babylon) ſubſervient to the Kingdom of King Jeſus; and in order thereunto, never to ſheath their Sword till the Carnal Powers of the World became a hiſſing and a Curſe: And by a miſguided Zeal, they were ſo confident in their undertaking, that they were taught and believ'd one ſhould ſubdue a Thouſand, making account when they had led captive Captivity in England, to go into France, Spain, Germany, and other parts of the World, there to proſecute their holy deſign.

The place where they conſulted and continued their Conſpiracy, was the Meeting-place for their Devotion, and thither they had at ſeveral times conveyed Arms. On Sunday the Sixth of January, which was the day before their Excurſion, (his Majeſty at that time being gone to accompany his Royal Mother the Queen-Dowager of Great-Britain, and his Siſter the Princeſs Henrietta Maria, part of their Journey toward France,) they were very late at their Aſſembly, which made one Martin, the Landlord of the Houſe, but not of their Party, ſomewhat inquiſitive after their doings; and as he was going into the Chamber to them, he met Venner, who ſeeing him troubled, told him, He perceiv'd he thought their ſtay too long, and that in half an hours ſpace, after they had ſought God in their Prayers, they would diſperſe; Martin's jealouſie of their actions, made him conſult with a Friend about their unuſual manner of Aſſembling, and he was adviſed to Liſten at their Door, or peep through ſome Chink to hear or ſee what they were about, which he did, and found them Arming themſelves with Back, Breaſt and Head-Piece; and thereupon he immediately gave Notice thereof to ſome of the next Officers: But within half an hour of this, they came down, and being met by the Miſtreſs of the Houſe great with Child, who in amazement would have ſhut the Door upon them, they offer'd to ſhoot her with a Muſquet; upon which in great terror ſhe left them. The Rebels firſt march'd to St. Thomas Apoſtles, to call ſome of their party, and from thence to Biſhops-Gate, and after to White-Croſs-Street. Sir Richard Brown the Lord Major, having notice of their being abroad, got together ſome Files of the Trained Bands, but not ſufficient, as was ſuppoſed, to make any impreſſion upon them, they being imagin'd more numerous than they were, by which means they had opportunity to eſcape to S. Johns Wood, and from thence to Cane-Wood, betwixt High-Gate and Hampſtead.

By this time the Alarum being come to White-Hall, and the General's Regiment drawn up, the Duke of York and he, with the Earl of Oxford, and ſome others, and ſome of the Guards, march'd into London, where they were informed all the Rebels were diſperſed, except a party of them that were ſeen to go towards Cane-wood, whither Sir Thomas Sandys was ſent with ſome of the Guards, and a Company of Foot: But by the darkneſs of the Night they got away, and on Wedneſday morning came again into London, and divided themſelves into two Parties, one whereof about 5 and 6 in the morning appear'd about Leaden-Hall, and from thence march'd to Little-Eaſtcheap, where they fought obſtinately enough, but were diſperſed by the Train'd-Bands. Venner and another Party came to my Lord Major's Houſe, thinking to have taken him Priſoner; but miſſing him, they march'd into Wood-ſtreet, where they were met by Colonel Corbet, and about twenty Horſe. Corbet and nine of his party charged through the Rebels, and broke them, whereby the Train'd Band Foot that ſeconded them, had little more to do, than to purſue them. They fought with courage to admiration: and if they had not been hindred by the care of the Lord Major from increaſing their numbers, a Thouſand men ſo reſolv'd, might have cauſed ſuch a diſturbance in the City, as might have had an influence much further. Venner himſelf was very much wounded before he was taken, and about five or ſix kill'd that refuſed quarter, of which ſome of them were ſo obſcure, that their Names were not known. And about eight or ten days after, Venner, with about ſixteen or ſeventeen of the moſt notorious, were arraigned at Juſtice-Hall in the Old-Baily, found guilty, and executed in ſeveral parts of London. 1660.

Thus ended this deſperate Enterpriſe of a formidable Army of threeſcore men, who were inſenſated to that heighth of Enthuſiaſtick Valour, that they thought themſelves ſtrong enough to encounter the whole Armed force of one of the Greateſt and moſt Populous Cities in the World; the Princes Guards, the General's Troops, the City Train'd-Bands, were all ſwallow'd up in Conceit, by theſe Men of Mickle Might, and Little Wit; and I have heard ſay, they were ſo Infatuated with their golden Dreams, and ſo Cock-ſure of ſucceſs, that they had promis'd to themſelves the Partage of the whole Empire of the World among them; Thirty being deſign'd for the ſubduing of the Eaſtern Parts: and Thirty of the Weſtern: But we have ſeen what diſaſter they met with by the Way.

With the Suppreſſing of this Inſurrection, and the bringing the Authors thereof to exemplary puniſhment, together with the deceaſe of Sir Arthur Hazlerig in the Tower, who is thought to have died with very Anguiſh of Mind, to ſee all his great deſigns in an inſtant brought to nothing, and himſelf at the Mercy of a Power o're which he had ſo long Triumph'd; We ſhall conclude this Year, as with the Solemn Coronation of his Majeſty; our preſent Hiſtory not thinking it enough to have ſeen him reſtor'd to his Throne and rightful Inheritance, without ſeeing him alſo inveſted with thoſe Enſigns, and Formalities of Regal Dignity, by which all his Predeceſſors were confirm'd and eſtabliſh'd Kings of England.

The Pomps and Proceedings whereof, in regard they may very well be conceiv'd to have exceeded the Magnificences of all former Coronations, as being perform'd for a PRINCE ſo miraculouſly reſtor'd to his People, We judge not impertinent to be here inſerted; following herein the Obſervations and Collection (according to the Original unmutilated Copy ſet forth by himſelf, and with his own Name prefix'd to the Title) of Elias Aſhmole Eſq; Windſor Herald at Arms; a moſt judicious and Curious Inquirer into all Antiquities of this Nature, and exactly vers'd 1661. vers'd in the publick Ceremonies of State, especially in the Rites and Customs of the most Noble and Illustrious Order of the Garter: The Names and order of the Companions whereof, as they were settled in their Stalls the 16th of April, 1661, were as followeth.

66. Sir Steven Hales.
67. Sir Ralph Bassh.
68. Sir Whitmore.

* Son of that Sir Robert Ducy, who in the dangerous times of difficulty and tryal, chose rather to contract the Envy of his Brethren, than to recede from those Principles of Allegiance which inspir'd him to adjudge God and Cæsar their Due.

Which Knights of the Bath, were first dubbed Knights-Bachelors, were Knighted by the King with the Sword of State, and then every one of them was adorned with the Red-Ribbond of Knight-hood of the Bath, with a Medal adjoyning unto it of Three Crowns, with an Inscription about it of Tria juncta in uno; which words till King James's Coronation, were Tria numina juncta in uno, from The Holy Trinity, but at that time the word Numina was left out, which is supposed to be, that from that time it might be lookt on to be an order of Knigh-hood in allusion unto the union of the Three Kingdoms of England

England, Scotland, and Ireland, as Tria Regna juncta in uno.

The Commiſſioners appointed for the calling together of theſe perſons to be Knighted, were the Duke of Ormond, the Earls of Northumberland, Suffolk, Lindſey, and Manchester.

The Twelve Perſons Advanc'd unto the Titles of Earls and Barons, were Edward Baron Hide of Hindon, Lord High Chancellor of England, created Earl of Clarendon. Arthur Baron Capell, created Earl of Eſſex. Thomas Baron Brudenell, Earl of Cardigan. Arthur Viſcount Valentia, Earl of Angleſey. Sir Frederick Cornwallis Knight and Baronet, Baron Cornwallis of Eye in Suffolk. Sir George Booth Baronet, Baron de la Mere of Dunham Maſſey. Sir Horatio Townſend Baronet, Baron Townſend of Lyn-Regis. Sir Anthony Aſhley-Cooper Baronet, Baron Aſhley of Winton St. Giles. John Crew Eſq; Baron Crew of Stene. Who were ſo created Earls and Barons on Saturday in the Afternoon, the 20. of April 1661, in the Banqueting-Room in Whitehall, three days before the King's Coronation.

On Monday the 22d of April, his Majeſty, according to the Ancient Cuſtom, made his Cavalcade from the Tower to Weſtminſter, in ſuch a glorious and ſplendid manner, that it ſeem'd to outvye whatever had been ſeen before of Gallantry and Riches, the gorgeouſneſs of Apparel, the ſparkling of Gems, the luſtre of Gold, in a continued Train ſo dazling the ſpectator's ſight, as if both the Indies had been ſummon'd over to attend at that Day's Triumph; in preparation to which Four very ſtately and magnificent Triumphal Arches had been Erected by the City, (according as their Charter obligeth them upon ſuch an occaſion) for his Majeſty to paſs through to his Coronation.

The firſt in Leaden hall-ſtreet, near Lime-ſtreet end, made after the Dorick Order, repreſenting his Majeſty's happy Arrival in England.

The ſecond, being a Naval Repreſentation, was near the Exchange in Cornhill.

The third, conſiſting of the Corinthian and Compoſite Order, and repreſenting the Temple of Concord, was plac'd in Cheapſide, near Wood-ſtreet end.

The fourth, conſiſting of the Dorick and Ionick Orders, and repreſenting the Garden of Plenty, ſtood in Fleet-ſtreet, near White Fryars.

All four of them being deſcrib'd at large in a Treatiſe particularly ſet forth to that purpoſe by Mr. John Ogilby.

1661. The Proceedings on the day of His MAJESTIES Coronation, were as followeth.

UPon Tuesday the 23d of April, being St. George's Day, about half an hour after seven in the Morning, the King enter'd into his Rich Barge, took Water from the Privy-Stairs at Whitehall, and Landed at the Parliament-Stairs: From whence he proceeded up to the Room behind the Lords House, called the Princes Lodgings, where after he had repoſed himſelf for a while, he was array'd in his Royal Robes of Crimſon-Velvet, furr'd with Ermine: by which time the Nobility being aſſembled, robed themſelves in the Lords House and Painted Chamber.

The Judges alſo, with thoſe of the Long Robe, the Knights of the Bath, and Gentlemen of the Privy-Chamber, met in the Court of Requeſts.

After ſome ſpace, the King's Heralds, and Purſuivants, began to ſet the Proceedings in order, each of them taking his ſhare aſſigned in Chapter, (held at the Heralds-Office the Evening before) and thence directed all the before-mentioned Degrees (except the Nobility) down into Weſtminſter-Hall, where the reſt of the Proceeding attended, and from whence the March began.

About half an hour after Nine, the Nobility (having been firſt called over in the Painted Chamber) proceeded each according to his Rank and Dignity, in their Robes and Coronets, before the King, through the Court of Requeſts, into Weſtminſter-Hall, aſcended up to the State, which was raiſed at the Weſt-end, and placed themſelves upon each ſide thereof.

His Majeſty being ſet in his Chair, under a rich Cloth of State; Firſt, Sir Gilbert Talbot, the Maſter of the Jewel-Houſe, preſented the Sword of State, as alſo the Sword called Curtana, and two other Swords, to the Lord High-Conſtable, who took and delivered them to the Lord High-Chamberlain, and he (having drawn the laſt) laid them upon the Table before the King.

Then the ſaid Maſter of the Jewel-Houſe delivered likewiſe the Spurs to the Lord High-Conſtable; and he again the ſame to the Lord High-Chamberlain, who alſo placed them upon the Table.

Immediately after the Dean and Prebends of Weſtminſter, (by whom the Regalia had been brought in proceſſion from the Abbey-Church into Weſtminſter-Hall) being veſted in rich Copes, proceeded from the lower end thereof, in manner following:

The Serjeant of the Veſtry in a Scarlet Mantle.
The Children of the King's Chapel, being Twelve in number, in Scarlet Mantles.
The Quire of Weſtminſter in Surplices.
The Gentlemen of the King's Chapel, being Thirty three in number, in Scarlet Mantles.
The Purſuivants, Heralds, and Provincial Kings.
The Dean, carrying St. Edward's Crown.
Doctor Heylyn, the Scepter with the Croſs.
Doctor Heywood, the Scepter with the Dove.
Doctor Nicholas, the Orb with the Croſs.
Doctor Killegrew, King Edward's Staff.
Doctor Jones, the Chalice and Patena.
Doctor Dowty, the Spoon.
Doctor Busby, the Ampulla.

All ſtanding towards the lower end of the Hall, ready to proceed, they made their firſt Reverence together; then coming to the middle of the ſaid Hall, they made there a ſecond; and thence going a little further, both the Quires fell off, and ſtood on either ſide, through which Lane the Purſuivants, Heraulds, and Kings paſſing, fell likewiſe off on either ſide, the Seniors ſtill placing themſelves uppermoſt towards the Throne: after whom the Dean and Prebends proceeded, and arriv'd at the foot of the Stone-ſteps aſcending to the Throne, where they made another Reverence.

This being done, the Dean and Prebends, with Garter Principal King of Arms before them, (he having waited their coming thither) aſcended the Steps, and approaching near to the Table before the King, made their laſt Reverence.

The Dean firſt preſented the Crown, which was by the Lord High Conſtable, and Lord Great Chamberlain ſet upon the Table; who afterwards took from each of the Prebends that part of the Regalia which they carried, and laid them alſo by the Crown: which done, they retired.

Then the Lord Great Chamberlain preſenting the Regalia ſeverally to the King, His Majeſty thereupon diſpoſed of them unto the Noblemen hereafter named, to be carried by them in the Proceeding to the Abbey-Church, viz.

St. Edward's Staff to the Earl of Sandwich.
The Spurs to the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery.
The Scepter with the Croſs to the Earl of Bedford.
The Pointed Sword (born on the left hand of Curtana) to the Earl of Derby.
The Pointed Sword (born on the right hand thereof) to the Earl of Shrewsbury.
The Sword called Curtana to the Earl of Oxford.
The Sword of State to the Earl of Manchester.
The Scepter with the Dove to the Duke of Albemarle.
The Orb with the Croſs to the Duke of Buckingham.
St. Edward's Crown to the Duke of Ormond.
The Patena to the Biſhop of Exeter. And laſtly,
The Chalice to the Biſhop of London.

And becauſe the Spoon and Ampulla were not to be born in the Proceeding, and therefore ought not to have been brought thither, but placed upon the High Altar in the Abbey Church, there to lye in readineſs; they were not preſented to the King, but commanded to be ſent back thither, and laid thereon.

All things being thus prepared, and it being about ten a clock, the Proceeding began from out the ſaid Hall into the Palace-Yard, through the Gate-Houſe, and the end of King-ſtreet, thence along the Great Sanctuary, and ſo to the Weſt-end of the Abbey-Church, all upon blew Cloth, which was ſpread upon the Ground, from the Throne in Weſtminſter-Hall, to the great Steps in the Abbey-Church, by Sir George Carteret Knight, Vice-Chamberlain, appointed by the King to be his Almoner for this Day.

When the Proceeding had entred the Abbey-Church, all paſſed through the Quire, and thence went up the ſtairs towards the great Stage, and as they arrived at the top thereof, were 1661. disposed by the Heralds into two Galleries, built on either side the upper end of the Quire.

That on the North side received the Aldermen of London, the Judges, and Gentlemen of the Long-Robe, the Quire of Westminster, the Gentlemen and Children of the Kings Chappel, (excepting twelve Gentlemen, four Children, and one Organist, who went into a Gallery raised on the South-side of the upper Quire, peculiarly appointed for them:) and in the Gallery on the South-side, were seated the Knights of the Bath, and Gentlemen of the Privy-Chamber.

The King being entred the West-Door of the Abbey-Church, was received with an Anthem, begun by the Quire of Westminster; who with the Dean, and Prebends, had before fallen off from the Proceeding, a little on the left hand of the middle Isle, and stayed there to attend his coming, where also a Fald-stool, and Cushions were laid ready for his Majesty to kneel at.

The Anthem sung, was the first, fourth, fifth, and sixth Verses of the 122 Psalm:

I was glad when they said unto me, We will go into the House of the Lord, &c.

The King arriving at the Fald stool, kneeled down, and used some private Ejaculations, which being finished, he thence proceeded into, and through the Quire, up to the great Theatre (erected close to the four high Pillars, standing between the Quire and the Altar) upon which the Throne of Estate was placed, (being a Square raised on five Degrees) at the Entrance whereof were set a Chair, Foot stool, and Cushion, covered with Cloth of Gold, whereon he reposed himself.

Immediately after the Bishop of London (who was appointed to Officiate, in part, that day; for the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, whose Age and Weakness rendred him uncapable of performing his whole Duty at the Coronation) having the Lord High-Constable, the Earl-Marshal, the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Lord High-Chancellour and Lord Chamberlain of the Houshold before him, went first to the South, next to the West, and lastly, to the North side of the Theatre; and at every of the said three sides, acquainted the People, that he presented to them King CHARLES, the Rightful Inheritour of the Crown of this Realm; and asked them, if they were willing to do their Homage, Service, and Bounden Duty to Him.

As this was doing, the King rose up, and stood by the aforesaid Chair, turning his Face still to that side of the Stage where the said Bishop stood, when he spake to the People; who signified their willingness, by loud Shouts and Acclamations.

The same Question was likewise put by the said Bishop to all the Nobility present.

Immediately after, this following Anthem was sung by the Gentlemen of the Kings Chappel:

Let thy Hand be strengthened, and thy right Hand be exalted. Let Justice and Judgment be the Preparation of thy Seat, and Mercy and Truth go before thy Face.

In which time, a large Carpet was spread by a Groom and Page of the removing Wardrope, from the Altar, down below the half-Paces thereof, and over that a Silk-Carpet, and Cushion laid by the Gentleman-Usher of the Black Rod, and Mr. Kinnersley: Whereupon the Bishop of London went down from the Stage towards the Altar; and having made his Reverence, placed himself at the North-side thereof.

Then the King descended from his Throne, and proceeded towards the Altar, being supported by the Bishops of Duresme, and Bath, and Wells, with the four Swords, the grand Officers, the Noble-men and Bishops, that carried the Regalia before him, the Dean of Westminster also attending. Being arrived at the steps of the Altar, he kneeled down upon the Cushion, there laid ready for him, having first offered the Pall, (which was of Cloth of Gold, and born by the Earl of Sandwich) as also a Wedge of Gold, of a pound weight (presented unto his hands by the Lord Cornwallis, Treasurer of his Household) both which were received from the King by the Bishop of London, who laid them reverently upon the Altar. Immediately after, his Majesty retired to a Chair of State, set on the South side of the Altar, a little below the Traverse of Crimson Taffety.

After this, the Bishops and Noble-men that carried the Regalia, drew near to the Altar, and presented every particular to the said Bishop of London, who placed them also upon the Altar; and having so done, they retired to their Seats. Whereupon the King kneeled at a Fald-stool (set on the right side of his Chair of State) whilest the Bishop of London said this Prayer.

O God, which doth visit those that are humble, and dost comfort us by thy Holy Spirit, send down thy Grace upon this thy Servant CHARLES, that by Him we may feel thy Presence among us, through Jesus Christ, Amen.

This Prayer ended the Bishop of Worcester went up into the Pulpit, placed on the North-side of the Altar, opposite to the King, and begun his SERMON, the Text being taken out of the 28th Chapter of the Proverbs, and the second Ver.

From the beginning of the aforesaid Offering to this time, the KING was bare; but now he put on his Cap, made of Crimson Velvet, turn'd up with Ermines; with which he sate covered all the Sermon-time.

On the Kings right hand stood the Bishop of Duresme, and beyond him the Noble-men, that carried the Swords, who held them naked, and erect. The Duke of York sate a little behind him on his left hand; next to whom stood the Bishop of Bath and Wells, together with the Lord Great Chamberlain.

The Lord High Chancellour, and Lord High Treasurer, sate on a Form behind the Duke of York; and behind them, in a Gallery, sate the Dutchess of York.

In the same Gallery also were placed.

Baron Batville, Ordinary Ambassadour from Spain.

Prince Maurice of Nassau, Extraordinary Ambassadour from the Elector of Brandenburgh.

Monsieur Weyman, the Electors Chancellour, who was joyned in Commission with him.

The Count Coningsmark, Envoy from Sweden.

Monsieur Friesendorf, Resident of Sweden.

Monsieur

Monſieur Petcum, Reſident of Denmark.
Monſieur Pleſſis Bellievre, Envoy from Monſieur the Duke of Orleans.
Signieur Giavarina, Reſident of Venice.
Signieur Bernarde, Reſident of Genoa.
Monſieur La Motte, and Monſieur Frays, Envoys from the Peince Elector.
Monſieur Gormers, Deputy-Extraordinary from Hamburgh.
An Envoy from the Cardinal of Heſs.
The Marqueſs de Montbrun, with ſeveral other Gentlemen-ſtrangers.

But Don Franciſco de Mello, the Ambaſſador of Portugal, was placed in the Lord Chamberlains Box.

On the North-ſide of the Altar ſate the Biſhop of London, directly oppoſite to the King in the Arch-Biſhops Chair, covered with Purple-Velvet; the reſt of the Biſhops were placed on Forms behind him.

And higher, towards St. Edward's Chappel, ſtood Grater, Principal King of Arms, with the Officers of the ſtanding and moving Ward-robe, viz. Mr. Rumbal, and Mr. Townesend, and Mr. Kinnerſley, in Scarlet-Gowns, having a Crown; embroidered with Gold on their left ſleeves, the Groom and Page of the Ward-rope having Scarlet-Gowns alſo, but not the badg of the Crown; the Serjant of the Veſtry whith his gilt Verge, and other Vergers: With them alſo ſtood Mr. Aſhburnham, M. Seymour, Mr. Elliot, Mr. Progers, and Mr. Chiffinch, with ſome other of the Kings Servants, who attended to do Service.

Oppoſite to them, on the South-ſide of the Altar, ſtood the Dean and Prebends of Weſtminſter.

St. Edward's Ancient Chair, (covered all over with Cloth of Gold) was placed upon the North-ſide of the Altar, a little lower than that belonging to the Arch-Biſhop, but ſomething nearer the middle of the Iſle, and between the Kings Chair of State and the Pulpit.

Near the Pulpit ſtood the Maſter of the Jewel Houſe, and the Lord Mayor of London.

The Nobility, not formerly named, (who were ſeated upon Forms round about the in-ſide of the Stage) when Sermon begun, drew near to that ſide thereof which faced the High Altar, and ſtood there.

On the Corners of the Stage, near the High Altar, adjoyning to the two uppermoſt Pillars, were places railed in for the Provincial Kings, Heralds, and Perſuivants.

The Serjeants at Arms, being ſixteen in number, ſtood with their Maces on their Shoulders within the Rails, on either ſide the Entrance of the Stage from the Quire.

Over the Door, and at the Weſt-end of the Quire, ſtood the Drums and Trumpets.

Sermon being ended, the King uncovered his Head, and immediately the Biſhop of London aroſe from his Seat, and drew near to the Kings Chair of State, and asked him his willingneſs to take the uſual Oath to confirm the Laws to the People, and namely the Franchiſes granted to the Clergy by St. Edward the Confeſſor, to maintain the Goſpel eſtabliſhed in the Kingdom, to keep Peace, execute Juſtice, and grant the Commons the rightful Cuſtoms, unto every of which Queſtions his Majeſty made particular Anſwers That He would.

Then the Biſhop of Rocheſter read the Biſhop's Petition to the King; the Prayer whereof was, That he would preſerve unto them, and the Churches committed to their Charge, all Canonical Privuledges, due Law, and Juſtice, and protect and defend them, and the Churches under their Government: Which his Majeſty moſt graciouſly by a large Anſwer (which repeated the words of the Petition) granted, and promiſed to perform. 1661.

Afterwards the King, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Dureſme, and Bath and Wells, was led from his Chair up to the Altar (the Sword of State being born before him, and the Lord Great Chamberlain attending) where he took an Oath to perform, and keep what he had promiſed.

Which Oath taken, the King was led in like manner back to his Chair of State, and immediately the Biſhop of London begun the Hymn, Come Holy Ghoſt, Eternal God, &c. the Quires ſinging the reſt of it.

And a little before the ending thereof, the Fald-ſtool was ſet again at the Kings right hand, whereat (as ſoon as the Hymn was finiſhed) he kneeled, the Biſhop of London ſtanding before him, and ſaying the following Prayer:

We beſeech thee, O Lord, Holy Father, Almighty and Everlaſting God, for this thy Servant Charles &c.

The Prayer ended, the Biſhop of London went to the North ſide of the Altar, the King ſtill kneeling and forthwith the Biſhops of Peterborough, and Glouceſter, went and kneeled on the upper hault-place of the Altar, where they began the Letany, the Quire ſinging the Reſponſes; the Dean of Weſtminſter kneeling all the while at the Kings left hand.

After the Letany, followed three Prayers, ſaid by the Biſhop of London at the North-ſide of the Altar: and a little before the laſt of them was ended, the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury came out at the North door of St. Edward's Chappel, veſted in a rich ancient Cope.

At the ending of the third Prayer, the ſaid Arch Biſhop ſtanding before the Altar, began the Verſicle:

Lift up your Hearts.
Reſp.
We lift them up to the Lord.
Arch-Biſhop.
Let us give thanks unto the Lord our God.
Reſp.
It is meet and right ſo to do.
Arch-Biſhop.
It is very meet, and right, and our bounden duty, that we ſhould at all times, and in all places, give thanks unto thee, O Lord, Holy Father, &c.

This Preface being finiſhed, the King aroſe from before the Fald ſtool, and went to the Altar ſupported by the aforeſaid Biſhops of Dureſme, and Bath and Wells; where he was diſrobed by the Lord Great Chamberlain of his Royal Robes, which were immediately carried thence into the Traverſe erected in St. Edward's Chappel.

Whilſt this was in doing, the Chair that was before placed at the entrance of the Stage, was 1661. was removed, and ſet on the North-ſide of the Altar, betwixt it and St. Edward's Chair, whereunto the King came, ſate down, and was anointed by the ſaid Arch-Biſhop, (while the Dean of Weſtminſter held the Ampulla, and poured the Oyl out into a Spoon) firſt in the Palms of both his hands in manner of a Croſs, the Arch-Biſhop as he anointed him, pronouncing theſe words:

Let theſe Hands be anointed with Holy Oyl, as Kings and Prophets have been anointed, and as Samuel did anoint David to be King, that Thou mayeſt be bleſſed, and eſtabliſhed KING in this Kingdom, and this People, whom the Lord thy God hath given Thee to rule over: which he vouchſafe to grant; who, with the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, Three in Perſon, and One in Unity, be bleſſed, and praiſed, now, and for evermore. Amen.

After which the Quire ſung this Anthem,

Sadoc the Prieſt, and Nathan the Prophet anointed Solomon King, and all the People rejoyced and ſaid, God ſave the KING.

At the end of which Anthem, the Arch-Biſhop ſaid this Prayer:

Look down, Almighty God, with thy favourable Countenance upon this Glorious KING, &c.

And then proceeded with his anointing the Kings Breaſt, between his Shoulders, on both his Shoulders, the two bowings of his Arms, and on the Crown of his Head, in manner aforeſaid.

Which being done, the Anointing was dried up with fine Linnen, and the Loops of his Shirt cloſed up by the Dean of Weſtminſter, and then the Arch-Biſhop ſaid theſe two Prayers,

God, the Son of God, Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, who is anointed of his Father with the Oyl of Gladneſs above his fellows, &c. God which art the Glory of the Righteous, and the Mercy of Sinners, &c.

During the time of Unction, a rich Pall of Cloth of Gold, (brought from the great Wardrobe by Mr. Rumball) was held over the Kings Head by the Dukes of Buckingham and Albemarle, the Earls of Berks and Sandwich, as Knights of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter.

After theſe Prayers, the Lord Great Chamberlain delivered the Coif to the Arch-Biſhop, who put it on the Kings Head, and immediately after the Dean of Weſtminſter put the Coif, with the Colobium Sindonis, or Surplice, upon the King: Whereupon the Arch-Biſhop ſaid this ſhort Prayer;

O God, the King of Kings, and Lords of Lords, by whom Kings do Reign, and Law-givers do make good Laws, vouchſafe, we beſeech thee, in thy favour, to bleſs this Kingly Ornament, and grant that thy Servant Charles, our King, who ſhall wear it, may ſhine in thy ſight with the Ornament of a good Life and holy Actions; and after this life ended, He may for ever enjoy that Life and Glory which hath no end, through Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

This ſaid, the Dean of Weſtminſter having likewiſe fetched the Tiſſue-Hoſe and Sandals from the Altar, he arrayed the King therewith, as alſo with the Super-tunica, or cloſe Paul of Cloth of Gold, and girded the ſame about him.

But the Taffety red Shirt was not made uſe of at all.

After all this, the ſaid Dean took the Spurs from off the Altar, and delivered them to the Lord Great Chamberlain, who touched the Kings Heels therewith and forthwith ſent them back to the Altar.

Then the Arch-Biſhop received the Sword of State in the Scabbard from the Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold, and laid it upon the Altar, ſaying this Prayer.

Hear our Prayers, we beſeech thee, O Lord, and vouchſafe by thy right hand of Majeſty, to bleſs and ſanctifie this Sword, wherewith thy Servant Charles deſireth to be girt, that it may be a Defence and Protection of Churches, Widows and Orphans, and all the Servants of God, againſt the ſavage cruelty of Pagans, and Infidels; and that it may be a Fear and Terrour to all thoſe that lie in wait to do miſchief, through Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

This Prayer finiſhed, the Arch-Biſhop and Biſhops aſſiſting, delivered the Sword back to the King, ſaying, Accipe gladium per manus Epiſcoporum. Whereupon the Lord Great Chamberlain girt it about the King, and the Arch-Biſhop ſaid, Receive this Kingly Sword, which is hallowed for the defence of the Holy Church, and delivered unto Thee by the hands of the Biſhops, though unworthy, yet Conſecrated by the Authority of the Holy Apoſtles, &c.

After this, the Dean of Weſtminſter took the * Armil, made of Cloth of Tiſſue, (brought thither by Mr. Rumbal, on the behalf of the Earl of Sandwich, Maſter of the great Ward-robe) and put it about the Kings Neck; and tyed it to the bowings of his Arms, the Arch-Biſhop ſtanding before the King, with the Biſhop of London on his right hand, and ſaying,

* Armillæ ſunt in modum ſtolæ, & ab utraque ſcapula uſque ad Compages Brachiorum erunt dependentes, in ipſis Compagibus laqueis ſe- vicis connexæ.

Receive the Armil of Sincerity and Wiſdom, as a Token of Gods imbracing, whereby all thy works may be defended againſt thine Enemies, both Bodily and Ghoſtly, through Chriſt our Lord.

Next the Mantle or open Pall, being made of Cloth of Gold, and lined with red Taffety, was put upon him by the ſaid Dean; the Arch-Biſhop likewiſe uſing the words of ſignification, viz. Receive this Pall, which is formed with four Corners, to let thee underſtand, that the four Corners of the World are ſubject to the Power of God; and that no man can happily reign upon the Earth who hath not received his authority from Heaven.

In the next place, the Arch-Biſhop took Saint Edward's Crown, and bleſſed it, ſaying, God, the Crown of the Faithful, &c. bleſs and ſanctifie this Crown, that as the ſame is adorned with divers precious Stones, ſo this thy Servant that weareth it may be filled with thy manifold Graces of all precious Vertues, through the King Eternal, thy Son our Lord. Amen.

In

In the mean time St. Edward's Chair was removed into the middle of the Isle, and set right over-against the Altar, whither the King went and sate down in it, and then the Arch-Bishop brought St. Edward's Crown from the Altar, and put it upon his Head.

Whereupon all the People, with loud and repeated shouts, cryed, God save the KING; and by a signal then given, the great Ordnance from the Tower were also shot off.

At the ceasing of these Acclamations, the Archbishop went on, saying,

God crown thee with a Crown of Glory and Righteousness, with the honour and work of Fortitude, that thou, by thy Ministry, having a right Faith, and manifold Fruit of Good Works, mayest obtain the Crown of an everlasting Kingdom, by the Gift of him whose Kingdom endureth for ever. Amen.

Adding thereunto this Prayer:

O God of Eternity, &c. Bless this thy Servant, who * boweth his Head unto thy Majesty, &c.

* At which words the King bowed his Head.

After the Prayer, the Archbishop read the Confortare.

Be strong, and of a good courage, and observe the Commandments of the Lord, to walk in his ways, &c.

In the mean while the Quires sung this Anthem.

The King shall rejoice in thy Strength, O Lord. Exceeding glad shall he be of thy Salvation, &c.

Upon this, the Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, and Viscounts put on their Coronets, the Barons their Caps; and divers of them came and stood about the KING, who still sate in St. Edward's Chair.

Mr. Garter and the Provincial Kings put on their Crowns also.

Then the Master of the Jewel-House delivered to the Archbishop the Ring, who Consecrated it after this manner, saying,

Bless, O Lord, and sanctifie this Ring, that thy Servant, wearing it, may be sealed with the Ring of Faith, and by the Power of the Highest be preserved from Sin, and let all the Blessings, which are found in Holy Scripture, plentifully descend upon him, that whatsoever he shall sanctifie, may be holy; and whatsoever he blesseth, may be blessed. Amen.

After which, he put it upon the Fourth Finger of the King's right Hand, and said,

Receive this Ring of Kingly Dignity, and by it the Seal of Catholick Faith, that as this day thou art adorned the Head and Prince of this Kingdom and People, so thou mayest preserve as the Author and Establisher of Christianity, and the Christian Faith; that, being rich in Faith, and happy in Works, Thou mayest Reign with Him that is King of Kings; to whom be Honour and Glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

And then began this Prayer: 1661.

O God, to whom belongeth all Power and Dignity, give unto thy Servant Charles the Fruit of his Dignity, wherein grant He may long continue and fear Thee always, and always labour to please Thee, through Christ our Lord. Amen.

When this Prayer was finished, the Linnen Gloves were delivered to the KING by the Lord Great Chamberlain; who, going to the Altar, ungirt his Sword, and offered it at the Altar in the Scabbard; which being redeemed by the Lord Chamberlain of the Household, was drawn out of the Scabbard, and carried naked by him all the following part of the Solemnity.

Then the Archbishop took the Scepter, with the Cross, from off the Altar, and delivered it into the King's right Hand, saying, Receive this Scepter, the Sign of Kingly Power, the Rod of Kingdoms, the Rod of Virtue, that thou govern thy Self aright, and defend the Holy Church, a Christian People, committed by God unto thy Charge, punish the Wicked, and protect the Just, and lead them in the ways of Righteousness, and that from this Temporal Kingdom thou mayest be advanced to an Eternal Kingdom by his Goodness whose Kingdom is Everlasting. Amen.

Whilst this was pronounced by the Archbishop, Mr. Henry Howard delivered to the King a rich Glove, which he put on his right Hand, and then received the Scepter; and after that, the Archbishop said this Prayer:

O Lord, the Fountain of all good things, &c. Grant, We beseech Thee, to this thy Servant Charles, that He may order aright the Dignity which he hath obtained, &c.

During which time, the said Mr. Howard perform'd the service of supporting the Kings right Arm, according as it was adjudged to him by the Court of Claims, by vertue of holding the Manor of Worksop in the County of Nottingham

Next of all, the Archbishop took the Scepter with the Dove, and gave it into the King's Hand also, saying,

Receive the Rod of Virtue, and Equity, learn to make much of the Godly, and to terrifie the Wicked, shew the way to those that go astray, offer thy Hand to those that fall, repress the proud, lift up the lowly, that Our Lord Jesus Christ may open to Thee the Door, who saith of himself, 'I am the Door, by me if any man 'enter, he shall be safe. And let Him be Thy help, who is the Key of David, and the Scepter of the House of Israel, 'who openeth, and no 'man shutteth, who shutteth, and no man, 'openeth; who bringeth the Captive out of 'Prison where he sate in darkness, and in the 'shadow of death. That in all things thou mayest follow him of whom the Prophet David saith, 'The 'Scepter of thy Kingdom is a right Scepter, 'thou hast loved Righteousness, and hated Iniquity; wherefore God, even thy God, hath 'anointed thee with the Oyl of gladness above 'thy fellows, even Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

After

1661. After which the KING kneeled, holding both the Scepters in his Hands, whilſt the Archbiſhop thus bleſſed him:

The Lord bleſs thee, and keep thee; and as he hath made thee King over his People, ſo be ſtill proſper thee in this World, and make thee partaker of this Eternal Felicity in the World to come. Amen.

Then the KING aroſe, and ſet himſelf again in St. Edward's Chair, whilſt the Archbiſhop and Biſhops preſent, one after another, kneeled before him, and were kiſſed by him.

In the mean time, the King's Chair of State, wherein he was anointed, was ſet above the upper Steps, at the entrance upon the Theatre, whither the KING went, as ſoon as he had performed the Ceremony of kiſſing the Biſhops, having now four Swords born naked before him, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and great Officers attending: at his arrival there the Archbiſhop ſaid this Prayer, the King kneeling,

Grant, O Lord, that the Clergy and People gathered together by thine Ordinance, for this ſervice of the KING, may by the moſt gracious aſſiſtance of thy goodneſs, and the vigilant care of thy Servant Our KING, be continually governed, and preſerved in all Happineſs.

Then the King aroſe, and repoſed himſelf in the ſaid Chair, whilſt both Quires ſung Te Deum.

When Te Deum was ended, the King aſcended his Throne placed in the middle of the Theatre, the Swords, and Great Officers, ſtanding on either ſide; as alſo the Biſhops, ſome in Copes, others in Rochets, the Archbiſhop then ſaying, Stand, and hold faſt from henceforth that Place, whereof hitherto You have been Heir, by the Succeſſion of your Forefathers, &c.

After this, the Biſhops and Nobility did their Homage to the King in manner following.

And firſt the Archbiſhop of Canterbury kneeled down before the King's Knees, and ſaid,

I William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ſhall be Faithful and True, and Faith and Truth bear unto You, our Sovereign Lord, and Your Heirs, Kings of England, and ſhall do, and truly acknowledg the Service of the Land, which I claim to hold of You, in the right of the Church. So help Me God.

The like did all the other Biſhops, that were preſent.

Then came up the Duke of York, with Garter principal King of Arms, before him and his Train born by two Gentlemen, who, being arrived at the Throne, kneeled down before the King, put off his Coronet, and did his Homage; at which the Drums beat, Trumpets ſounded, and all the People ſhouted.

The like did the Dukes of Buckingham and Albemarle, for themſelves, and the reſt of the Dukes.

So alſo did the Marqueſſes of Worceſter, and Dorcheſter.

Next the Earl of Oxford did homage after the ſame manner for himſelf, and all the reſt of the Earls, who attended upon him to ſignifie their Conſents.

After him Viſcount Hereford did the like for himſelf and the reſt of the Viſcounts; and then the Drums beat, and Trumpets ſounded again, and the People ſhouted.

Laſtly, Baron Audley in like manner did homage for himſelf and all the Baronage, who alſo accompanied him to the Throne, in teſtification of their Conſents; which being finiſh'd, Drums, Trumpets, and Shouts follow'd.

Note, That the words of Homage were ſaid by every one of the Nobility that kneeled down, viz.

I, N. N. do become your Liege-man of Life, and Limb, and of Earthly Worſhip; and Faith and Truth I ſhall bear unto you, to live, and dye, againſt all manner of Folks: So help Me God.

Afterwards the Duke of York, and all the Nobility ſingly aſcended the Throne, and touched the King's Crown, promiſing by that Ceremony to be ever ready to ſupport it with all their power.

During the performing of this ſolemn Ceremony, the Lord High Chancellor went to the South-weſt and North ſides of the Stage, and proclaimed to the People the King's General Pardon, being attended by Mr. Garter to the South ſide, and by a Gentleman Uſher and two Heralds to the other two ſides.

And at theſe three ſides, at the ſame time, did the Lord Cornwallis, Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Houſhold, fling abroad the Medals, both of Gold and Silver, prepared for the Coronation, as a Princely Donation, or Largeſs, amongſt the People.

The King being thus enthronized, the Gentlemen of his Chapel began this following Anthem, Behold, O Lord, our Defender, and look upon the Face of Thine Anointed.

The Violins, and other Inſtrumental Muſick, (who were robed in Scarlet Mantles, and plac'd in a Gallery erected over againſt them, on the North ſide of the Altar) anſwering alternately: at the ending of which Anthem, the Trumpets ſounded, and Drums beat again. In which time the King took off his Crown, and deliver'd it to the Lord High Chamberlain to hold; the Scepter with the Croſs to Mr. Henry Howard, and that with the Dove to the Duke of Albemarle.

The Epiſtle (taken out of the Firſt Epiſtle of St. Peter, the ſecond Chapter, and beginning at the eleventh Verſe) was read by the Biſhop of Chicheſter.

The Goſpel (being part of the twenty ſecond Chapter of St. Matthew, beginning at the 15th Verſe) by the Biſhop of Ely.

After

After which the Nicene Creed was begun by the Biſhop of London, and ſung by the Gentlemen of the Chapel, with Verſe, and Chorus, (that and the reſt of the ſpecial Muſick, for the Solemnity, being ſet by Captain Cook, Maſter of the Children of His Majeſty's ſaid Chapel.) The Violins, and other Inſtrumental Muſick placed in the Gallery over-againſt them, alternately playing.

All which time the King ſtood by his Throne.

But towards the end of the Creed he took again his Crown from the Lord Great Chamberlain, and put it on his Head; as alſo the Scepter with the Croſs, from Mr. Howard, and that with the Dove from the Duke of Albemarle, and prepared for his deſcent from his Throne towards the Altar, to receive the Communion.

And, as ſoon as the ſinging of the Creed was fully ended, the King deſcended with the Crown on his Head, and Scepters in both Hands (the Biſhops of Dureſm, and Bath and Wells, ſupporting him) with the four Swords naked before, and all the great Officers attending.

In the time of this Proceeding the Quire ſung,

Let my Prayer come up into thy preſence as the Incenſe, and the lifting up of my Hands be as an Evening Sacrifice.

Here the Archbiſhop of Canterbury retir'd from the Ceremonies into St. Edward's Chapel, and thence went home, leaving the remainder of his Duty to be perform'd by the Biſhop of London.

At the King's approach to the Altar, the Biſhop of Ely delivered unto him Bread and Wine, which he there offer'd, and then return'd to the Faldſtool, on the ſouth ſide of the Altar, near his Chair of State, before which he kneeled down, and laid his Crown upon the Cuſhion before him, towards his right Hand; and the Scepter with the Dove on his left; and gave again to Mr. Howard the Scepter with the Croſs, who held it, kneeling on the Kings right Hand: the Grand Officers, and the Noblemen, with the four Swords naked, and erect, ſtanding about him.

Then the Biſhop of London ſaid this Prayer,

Bleſs, O Lord, we beſeech thee, theſe thy Gifts, and ſanctifie them unto this holy Uſe, &c.

At the end of which the Lord Cornwallis, Treaſurer of the Houſhold, preſented the King with another Wedge of Gold, which goeth under the name of the Mark of Gold. This the King offer'd into the Baſon, kneeling ſtill at his Faldſtool, whilſt the Biſhop of London ſaid the following Prayer.

Almighty God give Thee the dew of Heaven, and the fatneſs of the Earth, and abundance of Corn and Wine, &c.

And next pronounced this Bleſſing:

Bleſs, O Lord, the virtuous carriage of this King, and accept the Work of his Hands: repleniſh the Realm with the Bleſſings of Heaven, of the Dew, of the Water, and of the Deeps.

Then the Biſhop proceeded to the Conſecration of the Sacrament; which being finiſh'd, he firſt Received; next, the Dean of Weſtminſter; then the Biſhop of Bath and Wells; and laſtly, the Biſhop of Dureſm. 1661.

Theſe four Prelates having communicated, Preparation was made for the King's Receiving, who kneeled all this while before his Faldſtool.

The Towel was brought thither by Mr. Rumbal, on the behalf of the Maſter of the Wardrobe, and preſented to the Biſhops of Hereford and Carliſle, who held it before the King while he Received.

The Biſhop of London gave the King the Bread, and the Dean of Weſtminſter the Cup.

As ſoon as the King had Received, this Anthem was begun by the upper Quire,

O hearken unto the voice of my calling, my King and my God, &c.

In the mean while, the King returned to his Throne upon the Theatre, with the Crown on his Head, and bearing the Scepters in his Hands.

When he came thither, he put off his Crown, and deliver'd it to the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Scepter with the Croſs to Mr. Howard, and that other with the Dove to the Duke of Albemarle.

And then the Biſhop of London went on with the Communion, which being finiſh'd, the King (attended as before) deſcended from his Throne Crowned, with both the Scepters in his Hands.

The reſt of the Regalia (which lay all this while on the Altar) being delivered to the Noblemen that brought them in the Proceeding to the Church, were carried before him, and thence the King proceeded into St. Edward's Chapel, the Organs playing all the while.

Where being arriv'd, he took off St. Edward's Crown, and deliver'd it to the Biſhop of London, who immediately laid it upon St. Edward's Altar; all the reſt of the Regalia were given into the hands of the Dean of Weſtminſter, and laid there alſo.

Afterwards the King entred into the Traverſe erected in the middle of the Wall, on the backſide of the High Altar, and there retir'd, whilſt he was diſrobed of St. Edward's Robes by Mr. Seymer and Mr. Aſhburnham, Grooms of the Bedchamber, on the behalf of the Lord High Chamberlain, Mr. Eliot, Mr. Progers, Colonel Philips, and Mr. Chiffinch aſſiſting.

Theſe Robes were laid on St. Edward's Altar by the Biſhop of Dureſm, and afterwards deliver'd to the Dean of Weſtminſter, to lay up with the Regalia.

After this, the King was array'd in his purple Robes, and then came near to St. Edward's Altar, where the Biſhop of London ſtood ready with the Imperial Crown in his Hands, and ſet that upon the King's Head; thereupon the King took the Scepter with the Croſs in his right Hand, with the Globe in his left, and immediately the proceeding (order'd alſo by the Heralds) began thence into Weſtminſter-Hall, the ſame way that he came, and attended after the ſame manner, ſaving that the Noblemen, and Biſhops, which brought the Regalia to the Abbey-church, went not now immediately before the King, as they did then, but were ranked in places according to their Degrees and Conſe-1661. crations; all the Noblemen, with their Coronets and Caps on their Heads. The Kings of Arms marched likewise with their Crowns on.

The Proceeding being enter'd into Weſtminſter-Hall, the Nobility, and others who had Tables aſſigned them, went, and placed themſelves thereat; but the King (attended with the great Officers) withdrew into the Inner Court of Wards, for halt an hour.

In the mean time, all the Tables in the Hall were ſerved (viz.) before the King's Service came up, and were placed in this manner:

On the right hand of the King's Throne below in the Hall were ſet two Tables, one beneath the other: at the upper end of the firſt next the State (which had two Side-Tables to ſerve it) ſate the Biſhops, and below them the Judges, with the reſt of the Long-Robe.

At the ſecond Table (which had two Side-board Tables likewiſe to ſerve it) ſate the Maſters of the Chancery, and the Six Clerks.

And here, at this Table, were the Barons of the Cinque-Ports neceſſitated to ſit, although the upper end of the firſt Table was appointed for them.

The Occaſion this: No ſooner had the aforeſaid Barons brought up the King to the foot of the Stairs in Weſtminſter-Hall, aſcending to his Throne, and turned on the left hand (towards their own Table) out of the way, but the King's Footmen moſt inſolently and violently ſeized upon the Canopy, which the Barons endeavouring to keep and defend, were by their number and ſtrength dragged down to the lower end of the Hall, nevertheleſs ſtill keeping their hold; and had not Mr. Owen YORK-Herald been accidentally near the Hall Door, and ſeeing the Conteſt, cauſed the ſame to be ſhut, the Footmen had certainly carried it away by force. But in the interim alſo (ſpeedy notice hereof having been given the King) one of the Quarries were ſent from him, with command to impriſon the Footmen, and diſmiſs them out of his ſervice, which put an end to the preſent Diſturbance.

Theſe Footmen were alſo commanded to make their ſubmiſſion to the Court of Claims, (which was accordingly done by them the 30th of April following, and the Canopy then deliver'd back to the ſaid Barons.)

Whilſt this Diſturbance happen'd, the upper end of the aforeſaid Table was taken up by the Biſhops, Judges, &c. and hereupon it came to paſs, that the Barons of the Cinque-Ports loſt their Places, and were neceſſitated to ſit down at the ſaid ſecond Table, with the Maſters of the Chancery, &c. where there was room left by ſome of the Long Robe, that ſate at the upper Table.

Upon the left hand of the King's Throne, below, on the other ſide of the Hall, was placed likewiſe a long Table, which reached down near to the Common-Pleas Court, whereat the Nobility dined; and this Table had four Side-Board Tables to ſerve it.

And behind this, cloſe to the Wall, at a ſhorter Table, ſate the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, and twelve chief Citizens of London, who had alſo two Side-Tables to ſerve them.

Laſtly, within the Court of Common-Pleas was a Table with one Side-Table to ſerve it, ſet for the Officers of Arms, whereat they alſo dined. Each Table was furniſh'd with three Courſes, anſwerable to that of the King's, beſides the Banquet.

A little before the King returned to Dinner two Eſquires of the Body, viz. Ferdinando Marſham and Henry Norwood, took their Seats upon two little Foot-ſtools, on either ſide of the foot of the King's Chair, (placed in the middle of the Table) and there ſate until the King came in to Dinner; when riſing, and performing their Duty, in placing the King's Robes for his better conveniency of ſitting, they ſate down again at the King's Feet a good part of Dinner-time, and until the King gave them leave to riſe; he accepting that time of Seſſion in full performance of their ſervice.

On the right ſide of the Throne was erected a Gallery for the Kings of Arms, Heraldi, and Purſuivants; and oppoſite to that, on the other ſide another for the Muſick; and below, on the old Scaffolds, next the Court of Common-Pleas, ſtood the King's Trumpeters.

1661.

The Proceeding at Carrying up of the First Course to the KING's Table.

SIR George Barker, Sir William Boreman,

Clerks Comptrollers:

Mr. Stephen Fox. Sir Henry Wood.

Clerks of the Green-Cloth:

All four in black Velvet Gowns, trimm'd with black Silk, and Gold Lace, with Velvet Caps raised in the Head.

William Ashburnham Esquire, Cofferer.

Six Serjeants at Arms, two and two.

The Earl-Marshal on the left Hand. The Lord High-Steward. The Lord High Constable on the right Hand.

All three mounted on Horseback in their Robes, and with their Coronets on their Heads: having their Horses richly trapped.

Six Serjeants at Arms, two and two.

Comptroller of the Houshold, Treasurer of the Houshold,

With their White Staves.

Earl of Dorset, Sewer.
Earl of Chesterfield, his Assistant.
The Knights of the Bath.

Who carried up the Service, two and two to a Dish, which was set upon the Table by the Earl of Lincoln Carver, assisted by the Earl-sewers.

In the Rear came up three Clerks of the Kitchin, (viz.) Mr. Leonard Pinkney, Mr. John Clements, and Mr. Henry Firebrass, all suited in black Fugar'd Satin Gowns, and Velvet Caps, in fashion like those worn by the Clerks Comptrollers.

Dinner being set on the Table, the King came forth from the Inner Court of Wards, in his Royal Robes, with the Crown on his Head, and Scepter in his Hand, having the three Swords born naked before him, and went directly to his Chair at the Table, wherein he sate down to Dinner, the Bishop of London saying Grace. The Bason and Ewer were brought up, and presented by the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, assisted by the Lord Paget, and the Serjeant of the Ewery.

On the King's right hand, the Noblemen that carried the three Swords stood, holding them naked, and erected, all the Dinner while; at his left hand stood the Lord High Chamberlain, to whom the King had given the Scepter to hold; and at the Tables end, on the King's left hand, sate the Duke of York in his Robes and Coronet.

Soon after Dinner was begun, the Lord Allington carried to the King his first Draught of Drink in a silver gilt Cup, being assisted by the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Viscount Montague, and the Lord Paget, his Assistants.

The Office of Cup-bearer, as also the Fee, having been by the Court of Claims adjudged to him, as being seized of the Manner of Wymmondley in the County of Hertford; and when the King had drank, the said Lord Allington received the Cup for his Fee.

Next, Thomas Leigh Esquire was brought up to the Table with a Mess of Pottage, called Dillegrout, this Service being adjudged unto him by the aforesaid Court of Claims in right of the Manner of Addington, in the County of Surrey; whereupon the Lord High Chamberlain presented him to the King, who accepted the Service, but did not eat thereof.

Afterwards, a little before the second Course was ready, Sir Edward Dymock (to whom the Court of Claims had adjudged the Office of the King's Champion, as being seized of the Manner of Scrivelsby, in the County of Lincoln) entred the Hall on a goodly white Courser, and armed at all points in rich Armour, having a Plume of blew Feathers in his Helm; he there made a stand for some time, and then advanced in manner following, way being made for him by the Knight-Marshal.

First, two Trumpets.
The Serjeant-Trumpeter.
The Serjeants at Arms.
An Esquire carrying a Target, having the Champion's own Arms depicted thereon.
An Esquire, carrying the Champion's Lance upright.
Mr. Owen York-Herald.
The Earl-Marshal on his left Hand.
The Champion.
The Lord High Constable on his right Hand.
Both likewise on Horseback.

1661. At the lower end of the Hall, YORK-Herald proclaimed the Challenge, in these words following:

The Form of the Challenge, however omitted in Mr. Ashmoles Original, being in all the rest more Compleat and Correct, we have supplyed out of the other Narrative which was since done, and extracted out of his.

IF any Person, of what degree soever, high or low, shall deny, or gain-say Our Sovereign Lord King CHARLES the Second, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, Son and next Heir to our Sovereign Lord CHARLES the First, the last King deceased, to be Right Heir to the Imperial Crown of this Realm of England, or that he ought not to enjoy the same; here is his Champion, who saith, that he lieth, and is a false Traytor, being ready in Person to Combat with him, and in this Quarrel will adventure his Life against him, on what day soever he shall be appointed.

Thereupon the Champion threw down his Gantlet, which lying some small time, and no body taking it up, it was delivered unto him again by York Herald. Then all advanced forward, until the Champion came to the middle of the Hall, where York Herald made the like Proclamation, and the Gantlet was thrown down, taken up, and returned to the Champion; who advanced to the foot of the ascending steps to the State, and at the top of the said steps, the said Herald proclaimed the said Challenge the third time; whereupon the Champion threw down his Gantlet again, which no body taking up, it was delivered unto him.

This being done, the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, (assisted, as before) presented on the Knee to the King a Gilt Cup with a Cover, full of Wine, who drank to his Champion, and by the said Earl sent him the Cup; and he, after three Reverences, drank it all off, went a little backward, and so departed out of the Hall, taking the said Cup for his Fee, according as had been adjudged him by the said Court of Claims.

When this Solemnity was Finished, the Kings Heralds and Pursuivants descended from their Gallery, and went into the Hall, to the lower end of the Noble mens Table, and there all together made their Reverence. Thence they proceeded a little further, and there made a second Reverence; and the like Reverence at the steps ascending to the State: Where all standing still Garter Principal King of Arms, cried Largess thrice, and proclaimed the King's Style in Latin, French and English, making Reverence betwixt every Style. At the finishing of which, they all retired backward into the midst of the Hall, and there, after crying Largess again thrice, he proclaimed the Kings Style, as before. Lastly, they went yet backwards to the end of the said Noble-mens Table, and did the same again; and from thence into the Common-Pleas-Court, to Dinner.

Immediately after this, the second Course was brought up by the Gentlemen-Pensioners, with the former Solemnity.

And the last Dish being carryed by Erasmus Smith Esquire, he having delivered the same to the Table, presented the King with three Maple-Cups, on the behalf of Robert Bernham Esquire, who was seized of the Mannour of Nether-Bilsington in the County of Kent.

Lastly, The Lord Mayor of London presented the King with Wine in a Golden Cup, having a Cover; of which the King having drank, the said Lord Mayor received it for his Fee.

By this time the day being far spent, the King (having Water brought him by the Earl of Pembroke, and his Assistants) washed, and rose from Dinner before the third Course was brought in; and retiring into the Inner-Court of Wards, he there disrobed himself; and from thence he went privately to his Barge, which waited for him at the Parliament-Stairs, and so to the Privy Stairs at White-Hall, where he landed.

It is a thing very memorable, that towards the end of Dinner-time, (although all the former part of the day, and also the preceding day, in which the King made his Cavalcade through London, were the only fair days that we enjoyed of many, both before, and after) it began to Thunder and Lighten very smartly; which, however some sort of People were apt to interpret as ominous, and ill-boding, yet it will be no difficult matter to evidence from Antiquity, that Accidents of this nature, tho happily they might astonish and amaze the common Drove of Men, were by the most Prudent and Sagacious looked upon as a prosperous and happy presage. And of this, Virgil gives us a very pertinent example (in the Eighth Book of his Æneids) where Evander, having addressed himself in a Speech to Æneas for aid against the Hetrurians, and he being sollicitous how to answer his request, mark what Sign was immediately sent from Heaven.

Namque improviso vibratus ab Æthere fulgor
Cum sonitu venit, &c.

For suddenly from Heaven a brandished Flash with Thunder came, &c.

And presently after the Poet adds,

Obstupuere animis alti, sed Troius Heros
Agnovit sonitum, & Divæ promissa Parentis.

While others stood amaz'd, the Hero knew
His Mothers Promise by the Sound that flew.

The same Author, in another place * mentions the same thing, as a testimony of Prayers heard, and answered; as when Old Anchises seeing the Lambent flame upon his Grand-child Julus his head, lifted up his hands to Heaven, and prayed to Jove for help and direction, he was thus answered, * lib. 2.

Vix ea fatus erat Senior, subitoque fragore
Intonuit lævum, &c.

Scarce had the grave Sire spoken, when suddenly it thundered prosperous, &c.

For so Intonuit lævum is interpreted by Servius, according to the Maxim of the Ancient Augurs, who interpret Thunder from the North, that is, (as they, contrary to the common Astronomers, accounted it) the left part of Heaven, for a prosperous Omen.

But,

But, in reference to our present purpose, we may proceed to a larger Interpretation, and conclude, that the Heavens, with the Volleys of Thunder, and nimble Flashes of Lightning, seemed to give a Plaudite and Acclamation to this grand and sacred Solemnity, in like manner as we Mortals use to close our greater Triumphs with Fire-works, Bonfires, and the loud Report of our great Ordnance; this Terrestrial Thunder being but the Imitator and Counterfeit of the Heavenly Artillery.

And so I observe it expounded by Claudian in these * Verses,

* Claud. de Cons. Probini & Olybrii vers. 205.

Ut sceptrum gessere manu, membrisque rigentes
Aptavere togas, Signum dat summus bivlca
Nube Pater, gratamque facem per inane rotantes
Prospera vibrati sonuerunt Omnia Nimbi.

As soon as Rob'd and Scepter'd, Jove aloud
His signal Favour thunders from a Cloud,
Successful Lightning through Heav'ns Arches shines;
Both at his Coronation happy Signs.

Thus having travell'd through a HISTORY fraught with Troubles and Confusions, an Unnatural and Intestine War, succeeded by a long time of Usurpation and Mis-rule; and now having at length arriv'd to such a point of settlement, and Right restor'd, as promises a long continued Calm and Peaceful Government, we, glad to have found such a convenient Haven, shall here chuse to cast our Anchor; and tho' several things have hapned from the Coronation to this present time (as the King's Marriage with the Daughter of Portugal, the Transactions of the present Parliament, with other matters sufficiently memorable) yet in regard we cannot close at a more happy period, we shall reserve as well something of what is past, as what is yet to come, for a farther Continuation; as likewise the observation of that Method which our Historian ever observes at the end of every King's Reign, that time only admitting of the said Method. And if the last Part of our HISTORY somewhat exceed in bulk what may be thought proportionable to the rest, it will, no doubt, be in a great measure excus'd by the consideration of what manner of Times we have had to set forth an Interval of such Wonders, such strange and capricious Revolutions as are scarce to be parallel'd by any Age or Kingdom, hoping that the Intricate Turns and Labyrinths of Fortune being now at length run out, the course and stream of the History will run more smooth and clear through all the subsequent Years (which God grant may be many and prosperous) of his present Majesty's Reign; than whom never was any Prince likely to prove a more glorious President to those that after him shall sit at the Helm of State, both in respect of his innumerable other Vertues and Regal Endowments, and particularly of his admirable skill and understanding in that which is the Bulwark of the Nation; the improvement whereof so mainly imports his own Glory and Renown above all other Princes of the World, and the Reputation and Enrichment of his Subjects; a thing wherein he hath ever shew'd himself to be most zealously concern'd. 1661.

Soon after the Coronation, began the first Parliament called by the King's Writ; an Essential Wanting to the last Parliament, by reason of the Difficulties and Exigencies which then lay upon the Nation, (as the words of the Statute are) and therefore the Acts made by that, were confirmed by this. The Parliament met according to the Returns of the Writs, on the 8th of May 1661. The King's Speech to the Lords and Commons contained, 'That he was very glad to meet them on this 'appointed Day, which, without Superstition, 'may be loved and prefer'd before another, in 'memory of that great Affection the whole 'Kingdom shew'd him this day twelve month; 'That he is sure they will concur with Him, 'and he with Them, in all things which may 'advance the Peace, Plenty, and Prosperity of the 'Nation: That he had caused to be prepared 'two Bills for confirmation of all that was 'enacted at the last meeting: That he is reso-'lute against the Infringing the Happy Act of 'Indempnity and Oblivion; and concludes with 'acquainting them with his intended Marriage, 'News that he thinks very acceptable to them, 'presuming they do not desire to see him an 'Old Batchellor; and that he had fix'd his Choice 'on the Daughter of Portugal, with the Advice 'of his Privy Council. After this, the Lord Chancellor proceeded more at large, declaring, 'That they are now called by the King's Writ, 'the only, good, and lawful way to the Meet-'ing of a Parliament; That after so many 'Prodigies in Church and State, we have lived 'to see the King at the Opening of the Parlia-'ment; That we have lived to see our King 'Anointed and Crowned by the Hands of an 'Archbishop, as his Predecessors have been; 'That it is a great part of the Business of 'this Parliament to celebrate the Memory of 'the last, by confirming or re-enacting all 'that was done by that Parliament, which tho' 'it was not called by the King's Writ, may be 'reasonably thought to have been called by 'GOD himself, as the only means to restore 'the Nation to its self: That tho' the last Par-'liament did great and wonderful things, yet 'they have left very great things for this to 'do, in relation to the Revenue which they in-'tended to raise for the King, and in relation 'to the Publick Debts for the discharge of the 'Army and Navy. He recommended to them a Regard to Tender Consciences: 'If the pre-'sent Oaths have any Terms or Expressions in 'them that a Tender Conscience honestly makes 'scruple of submitting to, in God's Name (said 'he) let other Oaths be formed in their places, 'as comprehensive of all those Obligations 'which the Policy of Government must exact: And recommended to their Vigilance and ut-most Severity those Seditious Preachers, who teaching the very Doctrine they set on foot in the year 41, sufficiently declare, that they have no mind that Twenty years should put an end to the Miseries we have undergone. And lastly, he sets forth at large the Negotia-

Stat. 13 Car. 2 C. 7.

The King was then Pro-claim'd.

1661. tions about the Portugal Match; and that the Privy Council, to whom the King had communicated this Affair, had adviſed and beſought him unanimouſly to conclude it, notwithſtanding it had been earneſtly oppoſed by the Spaniſh Ambaſſador.

Soon after this the Commons choſe Sir Edward Turner their Speaker. And on Monday the 13th of May both Houſes attended his Majeſty at Whitehall, with a joynt Vote expreſſing their humble Acknowledgments and Thanks for his free and gracious communication of his Reſolution to marry with the Infanta of Portugal; That they receive it with great Joy and Satisfaction, and with all earneſtneſs beg a Bleſſing upon, and a ſpeedy accompliſhment of it; and that they will upon all occaſions be ready to aſſiſt his Majeſty in the purſuance of thoſe his Intentions againſt all Oppoſitions whatſoever.

By order of this Parliament, the ſolemn League and Covenant was publickly burnt at London and Weſtminſter, by the common Hangman, on the 22th of May, and afterwards all England over; alſo the ignominious Writing call'd, The Act for the Tryal of his late Majeſty King Charles the Firſt, was by the like Order of Parliament burnt in Weſtminſter-Hall, on the 28th of the ſame Month.

The King deſigning this Summer to make a progreſs into ſome parts of his Kingdom, and to begin the ſame, in devotion to the City of Worceſter, to pay his Thanks to God for his Deliverance there, haſten'd the Parliament to diſpatch the Buſineſs before them, which they accordingly did; ſo that they were on the thirtieth of July adjourn'd to the twentieth of November following, the King having firſt paſs'd fifteen publick Acts, among which, An Act for Safety and Preſervation of his Majeſty's Perſon and Government [whereby it was declar'd what ſhall be adjudg'd Treaſon during the King's Life: That to publiſh and affirm, during the King's Life, that he is an Heretick or Papiſt, or endeavours to introduce Popery, renders the Offender diſabl'd to enjoy any Place or Office in Church or State; That the ſolemn League and Covenant was in its ſelf an unlawful Oath, and impoſed upon the Subjects of this Realm againſt the Fundamental Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom, and that none ſhall be indicted, arraign'd, or condemn'd for the Treaſons and Offences aforeſaid, unleſs by the Oaths of two lawful and credible Witneſſes, or by the Party's own voluntary Confeſſion.] An Act declaring the ſole Right of the Militia to be in the King. An Act for confirming Publick Acts; [whereby all the Acts of the laſt Parliament are ratified and confirmed, and enacted and declar'd to have the full force and ſtrength of Acts of Parliament] An Act declaring the Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures impoſed upon the Eſtates and Perſons of certain notorious Offenders excepted out of the Act of Free and General Pardon, Indemnity, and Oblivion.

While theſe things were tranſacting in England, ſome Reparation was made in Scotland to the Memory of the moſt noble Marquiſs of Montroſs, that Great and Glorious Example of Loyalty, who not very many years before had been ſhamefully executed at Edinborough, and his Body unworthily expoſed: But on the 11th of May this year his Body was taken up, and interr'd with great ſtate. The like Funeral Solemnities were on the 7th of June given to the Bodies of Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Liſle, formerly ſhot to death, or rather murder'd in cold Blood, for ſerving their King, at Colcheſter.

On the 20th of November the Parliament met again; ſoon after which, both Houſes addreſs'd to the King, that he would pleaſe to iſſue out a Proclamation for diſarming the diſbanded and caſhier'd Officers and Soldiers, and to command them to depart from, and not to approach within twenty miles of the City of London, for ſuch time as his Majeſty ſhall think fit. And a Proclamation was accordingly publiſh'd. This was occaſion'd by the diſcovery of a Deſign that had been, and then was, ſecretly carrying on by ſome of the diſbanded Army, for new Diſturbances of a high and dangerous nature; ſome of which Conſpirators were apprehended, try'd, condemn'd, and executed the year following.

In this Seſſion of Parliament the Biſhops were reſtor'd to their Rights, and re-inſtated in the Houſe of Lords. About the ſame time Epiſcopacy was reſtor'd in Scotland, and that moſt faithful Subject, and conſtant attender on the King his Maſter in all his Troubles, the Duke of Ormond, was made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, which moſt honourable Office he enjoy'd a great part of this Reign. And this Winter (conformable to the ancient uſage of the Church of England) his Majeſty ſet forth a Proclamation for Reſtraint of killing, dreſſing, and eating of Fleſh in Lent, or on Fiſh-days appointed by the Law to be obſerved.

Among other welcome Gueſts that repair'd into England, at and after the Reſtauration, one was Elizabeth Queen of Bohemia, our King's Aunt, and only Daughter living to King James the Firſt; a Princeſs who had endured many Storms of Fortune, but ſo happy at laſt as to live to ſee her Nephew glorioufly and no leſs wonderfully ſeated in his Father's Throne, after a twelve years Expulſion. She arriv'd here on the 17th of May this Year, and not long after, (on the 13th of February) departed this life, at Leiceſter-Houſe, in the 66th year of her Age, and was privately buried in the ſame Vault with Prince Henry her eldeſt Brother, under K. Henry the Seventh's Chapel.

And now comes on the Conſummation of the Royal Nuptials (formerly intimated to the Parliament). The Match was already concluded with the moſt virtuous Princeſs Donna Catharina, Infanta of Portugal, born on the 14th of Nov. 1638, Daughter of Don Juan the 4th of that Name King of Portugal, the only Siſter of Don Alphonſo the ſixth, and Don Pedro, ſucceſſively Kings of Portugal. The Marriage was ſolemniz'd at Lubon by his Excellency the Earl of Sandwich. She embark'd for England on the 23d of April 1662, and was ſafely conducted to this Kingdom by a Squadron of the Royal Navy. At the Iſle of Wight ſhe was met, and ſaluted with Naval Solemnities, by the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral. At Portſmouth ſhe was receiv'd by the King, to whom in perſon

She was, on the 21*st.* of May, Married, by Dr. Gilbert Sheldon then Biſhop of London. From Portſmouth, the Royal Couple removed to Hampton-Court; and from thence to White Hall, with great Pomp and Magnificence, being received and attended, at Chelſey, by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London. The Portion which the Queen brought with her, was two Millions of Cruſado's, which is about three hundred thouſand Pound Sterling, together with that Important Place of Tangier upon the Coaſt of Africa; and the Iſle of Bombaim in the Eaſt Indies, and a Privilege that any Subjects of the King of England, may Trade freely in the Eaſt and Weſt-Indian Plantations, belonging to Portugal. Her Joynture by the Articles of Marriage was 30000 l. per Ann.

In the mean time the King, on the 19*th.* of May, Prorogued the Parliament to the 18*th.* of February, then next following, paſſing ſeveral Public Bills: In particular, An Act for Preventing Miſchiefs, and Dangers, that may Ariſe by Certain Perſons called Quakers, and others Refuſing to take Lawful Oaths. An Act for the Releif of Poor and Maimed Souldiers, who have faithfully Served his Majeſty, and his Royal Father, in the Late Wars. An Act for Eſtabliſhing an Additional Revenue upon his Majeſty, his Heirs, and Succeſſors, for the better Support of his and their Crown and Dignity. [By this Act an Annual Revenue of 2 s. from every Fire Hearth in the Nation (ſome few excepted) was given to the Crown for ever, from Michaelmas 1662.] An Act for Reverſing of the Earl of Strafford's Attainder. An Act for the Uniformity of Public Prayers, and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies: And for Eſtabliſhing the Forms of Making, Ordaining and Conſecrating Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, in the Church of England. [In relation to this Act, it is to be obſerved, That ſince the Reſtauration, the King had been much Solicited that the Common-Prayer Book might be review'd, for which Purpoſe he appointed Certain Commiſſioners, who conſidering the Objections of the Diſſenting Party, made ſome Alterations (tho' not many, nor very conſiderable) hereupon the New Liturgy was firmly Eſtabliſht by this Act, and no Clergy-man allowed to hold any Eccleſiaſtical Preferment, after the Feaſt of St. Bartholomew 1662. unleſs he read, and publicly declared his unfeigned Aſſent and Conſent, to all and every thing contained and preſcribed in and by the ſaid Book. Alſo all the (then) Preſent Incumbents, School-maſters, &c. Were before the ſaid Day, to Subſcribe a Declaration, That it is not lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King; that they do abhor that Traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are Commiſſioned by him; and that they do hold, there lies no obligation upon them, or any other perſon, from the Oath commonly called the Solemn League and Covenant, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of Government in Church or State, and that the ſame was in it ſelf an unlawful Oath: But rather than do this, many of the Presbyterian and Independent Clergy, choſe to depart from the Livings which they then poſſeſs'd, and were afterwards called Nonconformiſts, and ſome of them continued to Preach in Conventicles.] Beſides theſe, many other Public Acts were paſt at the ſame time, in all 33. 1662.

The Regicides, or ſuch who were more immediately concerned in the Impious Murder of King Charles I. having been already Tryed, Condemned, and ſome of them juſtly Executed (tho the Lives of others were through his preſent Majeſties extraordinary Mercy remitted) the Houſe of Commons did earneſtly Addreſs the King, for bringing Sr. Henry Vane, and John (commonly called Major-General) Lambert, to their Tryal alſo. And accordingly they were both arraigned upon ſeveral Indictments, for compaſſing the Death of the King, and endeavouring to Subvert, and alter the Laws of this Realm. And this was ſaid to be in the 11*th.* year of this King, while he was beyond Sea; and being both found Guilty of High Treaſon, Sir Henry urged for himſelf, That the King being at that time, King de jure only, and not de facto, he could not be Indicted of Treaſon then committed againſt him. But the Court of Kings Bench over-ruled this Exception, as utterly falſe: And they both received Sentence of Death. Sir Henry Vane was beheaded on Tower-hill the 14*th.* of June, but Lambert's Execution was reſpited, and he lived near 30 years after, a Priſoner during life.

Before the Concluſion of this Year, ſome things of Remark from Africa are to be remembred; An honourable Peace, and Commerce was concluded with Tunis, and Tripoly. The King by his Proclamation of November 16. was pleaſed to ſettle a free Port at Tangier. Alſo, to the honour of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, of this Kingdom, let it never be forgot, that a great Sum of Mony was Collected among themſelves, and ſent by two of their Body, a Prebendary of Canterbury, and the Archdeacon of Bath, to Algiers; with which they redeemed 152 Chriſtian-Slaves, Engliſh, Scotch, and Iriſh, from their grievous Captivity there, and in the Parts adjoyning.

On the 18. of February, The Parliament met at Weſtminſter, according to their Prorogation. The King propoſed in his Speech at the beginning of the Seſſions, That ſome Act might be thought of for eaſe of Tender Conſciences, &c. In Anſwer to which the Houſe of Commons, on the 28. of February, preſented an Addreſs, and Reaſons, wherein they humbly offer to his Majeſty's great Wiſdom, That it is 'in no ſort adviſable, that there be any Indulgence to ſuch Perſons who preſume to Diſſent 'from the Act of Uniformity, and Religion 'Eſtabliſht; for theſe Reaſons: It will Eſtabliſh 'Schiſm by a Law, and make the whole 'Government of the Church Precarious: 'It will no way become the Gravity and Wiſdom of a Parliament to paſs a Law at one 'Seſſions for Uniformity, and at the next (the 'Reaſon for Uniformity continuing ſtill the 'ſame) to paſs an other to fruſtrate or weaken 'the Execution of it: It will be a Cauſe of increaſing Sects and Sectaries, whoſe numbers 'will weaken the true Proteſtant Profeſſion,

'so far that it will, at least, become difficult 'for it to defend it self against them; and this 'may, at length, arrive to a General Toleration, and in time some prevalent Sect will at 'last contend for an Establishment, which, for 'ought can be foreseen, may end in Popery. 'Lastly, it is humbly conceiv'd that the Indulgence propos'd will be so far from tending to 'the Peace of the Kingdom, that it is rather 'like to occasion great Disturbance; and on 'the contrary, that the asserting of the Laws, 'and the Religion establish'd according to the 'Act of Uniformity, is the most probable means 'to produce a settl'd Peace, &c.

1663. Not long after another Address was made to the King by both Houses of Parliament, for the issuing out his Proclamation, commanding all Jesuits and Popish Priests to depart the Kingdom, except such foreign Priests as by contract of Marriage are to attend the Persons of the two Queens, and by the Law of Nations to attend foreign Ambassadors. To which Address his Majesty return'd his Answer in Writing, dated April 1. 1663. 'That he would issue out a Proclamation as is desir'd; at the same time declaring, 'That his Lenity and Condescen'tions towards many of the Popish Perswasion, 'were but natural Effects of his Generosity and 'Good Nature, after having liv'd so many 'years in the Dominions of Roman-Catholick 'Princes, and out of a just Memory of what 'many of them had done and suffer'd in the 'Service of his Royal Father of blessed Me'mory, and of some eminent Services per'form'd by others of them towards his Ma'jesty himself, in the time of his greatest 'Affliction. In this Sessions several publick Acts were pass'd; among others, An Act for Repairing the Highways within the Counties of Hertford, Cambridge, and Huntingdon. [For the Repair of this Road (commonly call'd the York-Road) a Toll was establish'd at Wades-mill, Caxton, and Stilton, to continue for the space of eleven years, and no longer.] An Act for the Regulating of select Vestries. An Act for setling the Profits of the Post-Office, and power of granting Wine-Licenses on his Royal Highness the Duke of York, and Heirs-males of his Body. After the passing of these and other Acts, his Majesty was pleased, on the 27th of July, to cause the Parliament to be prorogued to the 16th of March following.

After the Parliament was risen, the King and Queen, attended by their Court, made a progress to the Bath, and in their return, to Oxford; in which places they were receiv'd with great Magnificence, and the unexpressible Joy of the People. But during this time of Quiet and Pleasure in the Southern Parts of England, a Devilish Plot and Conspiracy was carrying on in the North, to raise a new Rebellion; the Insurrection was design'd to be about the beginning of October, but by the Vigilancy of the Government it was prevented, and several of the Conspirators apprehended. In January they were try'd at York before special Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer; their Treason consisted in divers Heads: Among the rest, they designed to seize on several principal Towns, in particular Boston in Lincolnshire, for a Port to receive Succours and Ammunition from Holland. The first of the Criminals that was try'd was one Captain Oates; another Oates there was, who at the Tryals gave Evidence for the King, being, it seems, privy to most of the Proceedings. One and twenty were Condemn'd, upon clear proof, of High-Treason; of which number 16 were executed at York, on the 16th of January, and afterwards 3 at Leeds.

On the 16th of March the Parliament met according to their Prorogation. The Injuries that we had for some time past sustain'd from the Dutch, and the great and continual Complaints of the same, were now consider'd by this great Council of the Nation. Both Houses waited upon the King in April, with an Address, pursuant to a Vote, setting forth, that the Wrongs, Dishonours, and Indignities done to his Majesty by the Subjects of the United Provinces, by invading of his Right in India, Africa, and elsewhere; and the Damages, Affronts, and Injuries done by them to our Merchants, are the greatest obstruction of our Foreign Trade, and humbly pray his Majesty to take some speedy and effectual course for the redress thereof, and prevention of the like in the future; in prosecution whereof they promise, with their Lives and Fortunes to assist His Majesty against all Opposition whatsoever. To this the King return'd in answer, That he is very well pleas'd with the great Zeal they have express'd for the advancement of the Trade of this Kingdom, and removing all Obstructions that may hinder the same, being throughly convinc'd, it is that which will contribute most to the Honour and Glory of this Nation; and, That he will examine the particular Complaints which have been presented to his Parliament, and thereupon appoint his Minister at the Hague to demand speedy Justice and Reparation.

On the 17th of May the Parliament was prorogued to the 20th of August, and from thence to the 24th of November next. During this Session, the King pass'd several Acts; among others, An Act for the Assembling and Holding of Parliaments once in three years at the least, &c. An Act to prevent and suppress seditious Conventicles. An Act against deceitful, disorderly, and excessive Gaming; [whereby it is enacted, That for any person, by Fraud, Cousinage, Deceit, or unlawful Device, to win or obtain any Money at any Game, he forfeits treble as much, to be recover'd in any of the King's Courts at Westminster; and that no person shall play upon Tick for more than 100 l. at one time, &c.]

In order to redress the Injuries complain'd of by the Parliament, the King, during their Recess, order'd his Ambassador at the Hague to deliver to the States a Memorial of the English Merchants Damages sustain'd by the Hollanders; but no satisfactory Answer being return'd, His Majesty was very industrious in viewing and preparing his Royal Fleet to be in a condition to right his Subjects. In the beginning of June he issued out his Proclamation for recalling Seamen from serving any foreign Prince Prince or State; and on the 5th of November another, for encouraging Seamen and Mariners employ'd in the present Service; in which last he granted them several Advantages. And for the carrying on this publick and National Concern, the City of London advanc'd the King a Loan of Two hundred thousand pounds, for which they afterwards receiv'd the Thanks of the whole Parliament.

On the 24th of November the Parliament met. The King in his Speech to both Houses declar'd the present state of his Royal Preparations and Affairs, in relation to the United Provinces; and the very next day the House of Commons voted His Majesty a Supply of Two millions Five hundred thousand pounds, to be rais'd in three years: which being proportion'd and fitted to the several Counties of England, was drawn into an Act, and pass'd by the King on the 9th of February. Several other publick and private Bills were pass'd this Session, after which, on the 2d of March, the Parliament was prorogued to the 21. of June next following.

On the 4th of March the King's Declaration of War against the Dutch was solemnly proclaim'd at London; the Declaration bears date the 22. of February, and imports, That after several Injuries and Affronts done by the East and West-India Companies, and other the Subjects of the United Provinces, to His Majesty's Subjects, and Complaints made, and Reparation and Satisfaction demanded, instead of which de Ruyter had been order'd to do all sorts of Violence and Hostility against His Majesty's People in Africa; His Majesty therefore, by and with the Advice of his Privy Council, declares the said States the Aggressors, and denounces open War against them. This was follow'd with a Proclamation for a General Fast throughout all England, with a Form of publick Prayers, on the 5th of April, to implore the Blessing of Almighty God upon His Majesty's Forces employ'd in this present Expedition against the Dutch.

To pass over lesser Actions at the beginning of this War, as the taking of Prizes, and loss of Ships on both sides; on the 3d of June, our Fleet, under the Command of his Royal Highness the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral of England, came to an Engagement with that of Holland commanded by Opdam. Both sides fought with great Resolution, till Opdam happening to engage with our Admiral, he was in the Conflict blown up, and his Ship sunk. After this, follow'd a glorious Victory on our side, the Dutch losing near 30 of their best Ships, burnt, sunk, or taken; and about 8000 of their Men kill'd and made Prisoners. And this with the loss only of one Ship of ours (formerly taken from them) and not o'er one man, for ten of theirs. The Principal of the English were, the Earl of Falmouth, the Lord Muskerry, and Mr. Boyl, all three kill'd with one Cannon-Shot; the Earls of Portland and Marlborough, Captain Sanson, Rear-Admiral to Prince Rupert, slain in the Fight; and Sir John Lawson, who dy'd of his Wounds not long after.

For this Signal Victory, a day of publick Thanksgiving was appointed, and joyfully observed, in London and Westminster, on the 20th of the same Month, and throughout all England and Wales on the 4th of July.

In May this year began at London a great and terrible Plague (the greatest ever known in that City) for in One Year's time dy'd there 97306 persons, whereof of the Plague only 68596. Which Pestilence some thought to be occasion'd (or at least foretold) by two or three Comets that appear'd in and about the Christmas before; but others more probably believ'd the Contagion to proceed from certain infected Goods imported from foreign places. In June the Queen-Mother thought it expedient to remove from Somerset-house into her native Air of France, being accompanied by her Sons the King and Duke of York to the Bury in the Nore. The King and his Court remov'd first to Salisbury, and then to Oxford, (but the Duke of Albemarle and Earl of Craven remain'd at London). The Parliament continued under several Prorogations till they met at Oxford in October following; to which City also Michaelmas-Term was adjourn'd, and the several Courts began to sit in the Schools there, on the 18th of November. During this mournful Season, a General Fast, with a proper Form of Publick Prayers, was appointed, on the 5th of July, and the First Wednesday in every Month for the future, till it shall please God to assuage the Judgment. Also, by Order of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, dated the 2d day of September, constant Fires were continued in the Streets and Lanes at London, for three Days and Nights, to purifie the Air. 1665.

On the 10th of October the Parliament met at Oxford, (where the Schools were fitted for their reception) and both Houses attended the King at Christ-Church, where His Majesty made a gracious Speech to them proper to the Emergency. And the Lord Chancellour in another gave a large and particular account of the state of our Affairs ever since the Restauration, more especially as they relate to this War. After which the House of Commons voted, That their humble and hearty Thanks be returned to His Majesty for his Care and Conduct in the preservation of his People, and the Honour of this Nation, and that this House will assist his Majesty with their Lives and Fortunes, against the Dutch, or any other that shall assist them in opposition to his Majesty. This Session of Parliament continued to the 29th day of the same Month, when the King pass'd Nine publick Bills, among which, an Act for granting the Sum of 1250000 l. to the King's Majesty, for his present further Supply. An Act for restraining Nonconformists from inhabiting in Corporations. [Whereby it is enacted, That all such Nonconformist Ministers who refuse to Subscribe the Declaration mention'd in the Stat. 14 Car. 2. ch. 4. and also refuse to take and subscribe an Oath, That it is not lawful, upon any pretence whatsoever, to take Arms against the King, &c. and, That they will not at any time endeavour any Alteration of Government, either in Church or State; shall not come (unless passing upon the Road, or Subpena'd to appear) within five miles of any City, or Burrough Town, or of the Town where they have preach'd contra- 1665

ry to Law: Penalty 40 l. Nor ſhall they, or any other refuſing the ſaid Oath, teach any publick or private School, under the like Penalty.] After the paſſing of theſe Acts, the Parliament was prorogued, to meet at Weſtminſter on the 20th of the following February; but they did not then ſit, continuing under ſeveral Prorogations till the 18th of September 1666.

And now, to make the War more conſiderable, France joyns with the Dutch; and that Crown having recall'd her Ambaſſador here, and committed ſeveral Inſults on our Merchant-men in the Mediterranean, and elſewhere, on the 27th of Jan. N. S. open War againſt England was formally proclaim'd at Paris.

On the 1ſt of February the King and Duke of York return'd to Whitehall, (the Peſtilence at London being almoſt determin'd, though continuing in many other parts of England) and were welcom'd with exceeding Joy. And on the 10th of February War was proclaim'd at London with the uſual Ceremonies, againſt France; the King however promiſing Safety both to the Perſons and Eſtates of ſuch French and Dutch as remain in this Kingdom, and ſhall demean themſelves dutifully, and not correſpond with his Majeſty's Enemies; and protection to all ſuch French and Low-Country Subjects, eſpecially thoſe of the Reformed Religion, as out of Affection to his Majeſty's Government, or becauſe of the Oppreſſion they meet with at home, ſhall come hither. For which Protection and Indulgence the French Church in the Savoy attended his Majeſty with their humble Thanks.

1666. Prince Rupert, and the Duke of Albemarle, being appointed his Majeſty's Generals at Sea, in this Summer's Expedition, it happen'd, that part of the Fleet under Command of the Prince were ſeparated from the reſt, on the 1ſt of June, when thoſe under the Command of the Duke fell in with the whole Dutch Fleet, on the Coaſt of Flanders, where for two or three days together he maintain'd a ſharp Fight againſt double his number, and had been hardly put to it, had not the Prince happily come in to his aſſiſtance; after which, they both ply'd the Dutch in ſuch manner, that they obtain'd a ſignal Victory, the Enemy flying before them with very great Loſs both in Ships and Men. Our greateſt Loſs was the Royal Prince, ſtranded unfortunately on the Galloper Sand, and then burnt by the Dutch, and her Commander, Sir George Aſcough, made Priſoner.

After our Fleet had refitted at the Buoy in the Nore, (thoſe Ships which were concern'd in the beginning of the Engagement, under the Duke of Albemarle, being much damnified in their Rigging); and after the Hollanders had repair'd their greater Loſſes at home, both Fleets put out again to Sea, and came to a ſecond Fight on the 25th of July, off of Okſordneſs. The Red and White Squadrons put two of the Dutch Squadrons to flight in a little time, but the Blew had a more obſtinate Engagement with that of Zealand, in which the Reſolution was burnt, being the only Ship we loſt. But at length the Blew alſo prevail'd againſt their Enemy, and there follow'd not only a moſt apparent Victory, but a ſhameful and confuſed Flight of the Dutch, our Fleet purſuing, burning, and taking their Ships to their own Shoars. In this Fight ſeveral of their Admirals, and many of their beſt Captains were kill'd, and in all 4000 Men. From the time of this Glorious Victory our Fleet continued on the Coaſt of Holland, before the Maeſe, and before the Texel, alarming the Country with continual apprehenſions of landing; till on the 7th of Auguſt Sir Robert Holmes was order'd by our two Generals, the Prince and Duke, to land on the Iſland of Schelling in the Vlie; which accordingly he did, and burnt the chief Town there, call'd Bandaris, conſiſting of about a Thouſand Houſes, and at the ſame time burning and deſtroying more than a Hundred and Fifty Ships that lay at Anchor in Vlie Road, among which, two Men of War that endeavour'd to defend the reſt.

Theſe Victories and Succeſſes caus'd great and publick Rejoicings and Thankſgivings in England, and no leſs Troubles and Diſtractions in Holland; De Ruyter and Tromp, two of their greateſt Admirals left alive, became the Heads of two different Factions; the laſt of theſe was accus'd of Miſcarriage, and by the States caſhier'd of his Employments; and diverſe of their Sea Captains try'd for Capital Crimes in the neglect of their Duty.

On the ſecond of September this year (which ſome conceited people, from the Number 666, predicted to be the Year appointed for the Downfal of the Pope, commonly call'd Antichriſt) began that ſad and dreadful Fire at London, of which I can't give a truer Account than from the words of that Latin Inſcription on the Monument, afterwards erected near the place where the Conflagration broke out.

It began about Midnight, and being driven by a high Wind, conſumed not only the adjacent parts but places far remote, and with incredible Noiſe and Fury deſtroy'd 89 Churches (among which the Cathedral of St. Paul's), City-Gates, Guild-hall, many publick Structures, Hoſpitals, Schools, Libraries, a vaſt number of ſtately Edifices, 13200 Dwelling-houſes, 400 Streets; of 26 Wards it utterly ruin'd 15, and left 8 others ſhatter'd, and half-burnt. The Ruins of the City were 436 Acres, extending from the Tower along the Thames-ſide, to the Temple-Church, and from the North-Eaſt Gate along the City Wall to Holborn-Bridge (or Fleet-Ditch). To the Eſtates and Fortunes of the Citizens it was merciful, but to their Lives and Limbs ſo favourable, that it might in all things reſemble the laſt and great Conflagration of the World. The Deſtruction was ſudden; for, in a ſmall ſpace of time the ſame City was ſeen in a moſt flouriſhing condition, and reduced to nothing. After three days, when this fatal Fire had in appearance overcome all means of Reſiſtance and Human Councils, by the Will of Heaven it ſtop'd, and was extinguiſh'd.

To this I may add, That it began in the Houſe of a Baker in Pudding-Lane, behind Fiſh-ſtreet-hill, in the dead time of the Night, between One and Two of the Clock; in the dead time of the Week, Saturday Night, when Traders were retir'd to their Country-Houſes, and none but Servants left at home; in the dead

time of the Year, the Long Vacation; in a long-continued Drought, which had been moſt of the preceding Summer; in a high Eaſterly Wind: All which Circumſtances did aſſiſt the raging Flames to encreaſe to that degree, that the Damage by this terrible Fire was hardly to be computed or credited.

Some thought that this Fire was begun and carried on by a Conſpiracy of Papiſts; but others were of opinion, that there was only the Hand of GOD in this terrible Judgment. One Man, and but one, was ſoon after try'd at the Old-Baily, convicted by his own Confeſſion, and hang'd for it at Tyburn; his Name Robert Hubert a French Hugonot, of Rohan in Normandy; but he is ſaid to be non Compos mentis, and that he had the Dead Palſie on one ſide. Certain it is, that in April (about ſix Months before) one John Rathbone, William Saunders, and ſix others, formerly Officers, or Soldiers in the late Rebellion, were indicted, tryed, found guilty, and executed, for conſpiring the Death of His Majeſty, and Overthrow of the Government, in order to which, the City was deſign'd by them to be fir'd on the 3d of September then next following, as being found by Lilly's Almanack, and a Scheme erected for that purpoſe, to be a lucky day, a Planet then ruling which prognoſticated the Downfall of Monarchy. This being notorious, and printed in the Gazette of April 30. 1666, (Numb. 48.) was, after the Fire, which happen'd at the time predicted, call'd to remembrance by many People, not without admiration.

From the Ruins occaſion'd by this Fire did ariſe the glorious and magnificent Structures which we now ſee, Beauty from Aſhes. The Means and Methods of the City's Reſtauration is briefly expreſs'd in another Latin Inſcription on the aforeſaid Monument, which tells Poſterity, That the King commiſerating the deplorable ſtate of Things, while the Ruins were yet ſmoaking, provided for the Comfort of his Citizens and Ornament of his City; remitted their Taxes, and referr'd the Petitions of the Magiſtrates and Inhabitants to the Parliament, who immediately paſſed an Act, That the Publick Works ſhould be reſtor'd to greater Beauty with Publick Money, to be raiſed by an Impoſition on Coals; the Churches and Cathedral of St. Paul's to be rebuilt from their Foundation with all Magnificence; That the Bridges, Gates, and Priſons be new made, the Shores (or Sewers) cleanſed, the Streets made ſtreight and regular, more level, and thoſe too narrow, wider; Markets and Shambles remov'd to ſeparate places. They alſo enacted, That every Houſe ſhould be built with Party Walls, and all in Front raiſed of equal height, and all their Walls of ſquared Stone or Brick; and that no Man ſhould delay building beyond the ſpace of Seven years. Care was alſo taken by Law to prevent all Suits about their Bounds; Anniverſary Prayers were enjoin'd; and to perpetuate the Memory hereof to Poſterity, they caus'd this Column to be erected. The Work was carried on with Diligence, London is reſtor'd, but uncertain whether with greater Speed or Beauty; Three Years finiſh'd what was ſuppos'd the Buſineſs of an Age.

The Column here mention'd ſtands in New Fiſh-ſtreet, not far from the place where the Fire began: It is of the Dorick Order, 202 foot in height from the Ground, and 15 foot in diameter, all of Portland Stone, with a fair Stair-Caſe in the middle, of black Marble: The Pedeſtal of this Pillar is 21 foot ſquare, and 40 foot high. The whole not unlike thoſe famous Pillars at Rome, erected to the honour of Trajan and Antonimus. 1666.

Notwithſtanding the grievous Diſadvantages which we ſuſtain'd at this time, as well by this Fire as the Plague, (which was not yet quite ceaſed at London, and was very high in ſome other parts of England, as Norwich, &c.) yet our Courage was ſo great, and our Affairs ſo ſucceſsful in relation to the War, the Parliament giving the King 1800000 l. that the Fleet took and brought into Port this year Eighty and odd Prizes, beſides what was taken by Privateers. This made our Enemies deſirous of Peace, to which Motion our King conſenting, Breda was appointed the place of Treaty. In the mean time no Ceſſation of Arms. But before ſuch Peace was effected, many things of note happen'd in this Kingdom.

On the 10th of November, the King, upon the Parliament's Addreſs, iſſued out a Proclamation for Baniſhing all Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuites, except ſuch (not being natural born Subjects) as attend upon the perſons of the Queen-Conſort and Queen-Mother; and for putting the Laws in ſpeedy execution againſt Popiſh Recuſants.

In Scotland a Riot began at Dumfrieze, and encreaſed in rowling about to above 1500, moſt arm'd with Scythes made ſtreight, and faſten'd to long Staves, headed by the Laird Barſcot, and animated by ſome Kirk-Miniſters. Thus they grew to a formal Body of Rebels, but were at laſt, on the 27th of November, ſuppreſs'd by the King's Forces, not without an obſtinate Fight, in which 500 of them were kill'd, and about 100 Priſoners.

On the 18th of January the King paſs'd five publick Bills, among which, An Act for raiſing Money by a Poll, and otherwiſe, towards the maintenance of the preſent War. An Act for burying in Woollen; [Whereby it was enacted, That no perſon ſhould be buried in any Shirt, Shift, or Sheet, other than what ſhall be made of Wool only, under the Penalty of 5 l. except ſuch as dye of the Plague.] On the 8th of February following he paſs'd ſeveral other publick Bills, among others, An Act for Granting the Sum of 1256347 l. 13 s. to His Majeſty, towards the maintenance of the preſent War. An Act for erecting a Judicature for determination of Differences touching Houſes burnt or demoliſh'd by reaſon of the late Fire in London. An Act for rebuilding the City of London; [By which Act ſeveral Rules and Directions are laid down to be obſerv'd in the Building; the 2d of September appointed a Day of Humiliation in the City yearly for ever; a Pillar or Column, with an Inſcription thereon appointed to be erected near the place where the Fire began; and an Impoſition laid upon Coals, for the defraying of publick Charges.] An Act for redreſs of Inconveniencies by want of Proof of the Deceaſes of Perſons beyond the Seas, and abſenting themſelves, upon whoſe Lives Eſtates depend; [Whereby it is enacted, That if ſuch

Persons absent themselves for the space of Seven Years, and no sufficient and evident Proof be made of their Lives, they shall be accounted as naturally dead.] After which the Parliament was Prorogued to the 10*th.* of October following.

Our King having on the 19. of October last, declared War against Denmark for diverse Reasons in his Declaration mentioned, the King of Denmark did in return, this February, Confiscate and seize upon the several Debts owing in his Kingdom to any English Merchants, particularly his own Obligations to the English Company at Hamburgh.

1667. In April, 1667. The Ambassadors of the several Princes and States hitherto in War, (and the Swede, as Mediator) began to Assemble at Breda, our King had appointed the Right honourable Denzil Lord Hollis, and the Honourable Henry Coventry Esq; his Ambassadors Extraordinary for the Treaty there: Who on the 29. of April, began their Journey thither; and Landing on the Coast of Holland, were received with Honour and Ceremony. On the 21. of May, they made their Publick Entry into Breda, in an extraordinary and splendid Manner. On the 8. of June, the Ambassadors of England, France, and Sweden, with the Envoys Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiaries of Denmark, and the Plenipotentiaries of the States-General entred into their several Apartments in the Castle at Breda, the Place appointed to Treat in, and began their Conferences.

But while this Treaty was mannaging at Breda, a Misfortune befel us in England. It had been, at the beginning of the Breach between England and Holland, proposed to the King by several knowing Persons, and especially by Sir John Lawson (that approved Seaman,) that since the whole Life of the Dutch consisted in Trade, a Pyratical War was much the cheaper, and would far sooner undoe them; and though his Majesty was not at first satisfied with this advice, yet now at last after so many Victories, it appearing that certainly the Enemy would conclude a Peace, he judged it prudence to equip only a Light Fleet, which dividing it self into every Quarter, must assuredly make Spoil of their Merchants, and so by continual Losses that way necessitate them to a more speedy Peace. The Great Ships therefore were lay'd up in Chatham-River, unrigged, but secured (as was thought, sufficiently) with an Iron-Chain cross the Medway, and some Works on the Shoar. The Hollanders finding we did not set out our Main Fleet, made ready theirs with all the hast they could; after a vast expence, they set Sail for England, and while our Guard-Ships were remote at Sea, they arrived at the mouth of the River Medway, and having made themselves Masters of the Platform at Sheerness on the 10. of June, on the 11*th.* advanced up the River, broke the Chain, and with their Fire-Ships burnt the Matthias, Unity, and Charles the Fifth, Three Dutch Ships that had been formerly taken from them; greatly damnifyed three others, and carryed off with them the Jonathan a small Dutch Prize, and the Hull of the Royal Charles, which was twice fired by our Men, and as often quencht by the Enemy. This Enterprize cost the Hollanders (besides the great Charge) an infinite number of Men, (destroyed by the Forts and Batteries, especially that from Upner-Castle) and Ten Ships according to our Estimate, tho' they seem not to acknowledge so many.

At this time the Parliament stood Prorogued to the 10. of October, but his Majesty finding his Kingdom invaded during a Treaty of Peace, and esteeming himself ever most safe in the Advice and Affection of his People in Parliament, thought fit, for these and diverse urgent Causes, to issue out his Proclamation on the 16. of June, straightly charing and commanding all and every the Members of both Houses to Re-assemble on the 25. day of July next: At which Day they met, but a general Peace being then concluding, they were again Prorogued to the first appointed 10*th.* of October.

In the mean time the Treaty at Breda went on with such success, that on Sunday the 9. of July, S. N. the Peace was concluded. And on Sunday August 2. S. N. was Signed by all the Plenipotentiaries. And on the 24. of August, with great Solemnity proclaim'd at London.

About this time the Duke of Monmouth, upon the Resignation of the Lord Gerard, was made Captain of his Majesties Life-guard of Horse.

On the 31. of August his Majesty having thought fit to take the Great-Seal from the Earl of Clarendon, late Lord Chancellour, was pleased to give it to the Keeping of the Honourable Sir Orlando Bridgeman, then Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. Which Earl having unhappily fallen under the displeasure of the Parliament, they expresst it so vehemently against him, that when they met on the 10*th.* of October, and both Houses returned their Thanks to the King, for his Gracious Speech at the opening of that Session, they Thank'd his Majesty in a more especial Manner, for having displaced the late Lord Chancellour, and removed him from the Exercise of Public Trust and Employment in Affairs of State. After this the House of Commons drew up, and prefer'd an Impeachment against him, but the Earl thinking fit privately to withdraw himself into France (where he dyed at Roan, 19. of December, 1674.) both Houses of Parliament past a Bill, Entituled, An Act for Banishing and disabling the Earl of Clarendon; which with several other Acts past the Royal Assent, by Commission on the 19. of December, and then the two Houses adjorn'd themselves to the 6. of February following.

On the 7. of February, the King issued out his Proclamation, for the Freedom and Security of Navigation, on these heads. 1. That an inviolable Truce and Cessation be observed in all his Majesties Ports, and Havens, &c. between all Parties and Persons whatsoever, the Ships and Goods of the Aggressors and Offenders, to be ipso facto confiscate. 2. That all his Majesties Officers, and Subjects by Sea and Land do as much as in them lyes, prohibit the roving and hovering of Men of War near the Entry of any of his Majesties Har-bours and Coasts. 3. That if a Man of War of one Party, come into any of his Majesty's Ports, where shall be one or more Merchant-Men of the other party, the Merchant Ships shall, if desired, depart two Tydes before the Man of War; with other Articles relating to a Neutrality, as that none of his Majesties Subjects, shall contract or deal with any foreign Man of War, or others not being known Merchants, for any Wares, Merchandize, Victuals, Ammunition, Tackle; and that no Officer or Mariner being his Majesties Subject, shall put himself into the Martial Service of any foreign Prince, or State, without leave from his Majesty or Royal Highness, Lord High Admiral of England, &c. The same year the King concluded a Peace with Spain, France, and Denmark.

The Parliament being now sitting, the King acquainted them in a Speech on the 10. of February, That since their last meeting he had made a League defensive with the States of the United Provinces, and likewise a League for an Efficacious Mediation of Peace between the two Crowns, and desired an Aid of Mony for the building more Great-Ships, and compleating the fortifying of some of our Ports, which the present Juncture requires; and in time recommended to their serious thoughts some Course to beget a better Union and Composure in the Minds of his Protestant Subjects, in Matters of Religion. On the 10. of March, his Majesty, upon Consideration of the humble Petition of his Loyal Subjects the Commons in Parliament Assembled, that a Proclamation might be issued out, for inforcing the Laws against Conventicles, and unlawful Assemblies of Papists and Nonconformists; issued out his Proclamation accordingly.

1668. To begin the Year 1668. Several Idle and Licentious Persons making an ill use of the Liberty of Easter-Holidays, did on the 25. of March Assemble in a Tumultuous and Riotous Manner, breaking open several Prisons and Pulling down Houses about the Suburbs of London; but upon coming of the Guards, they were dispersed, and several of them taken, of whom eight were afterwards Indicted at the Old Bayly, of High-Treason and Rebellion, found Guilty, and Condemned: And four of those Drawn, Hang'd, and Quarterd at Tyburn.

On the 9. of May, the King past seven Public Bills in Parliament, among which, An Act for raising 310000 l. By an Imposition on Wine and other Liquors. After which the two Houses adjorn'd till the 11. of August next ensuing. At which time they were further adjorn'd to the 10*th.* of November. And then further adjorn'd to the 1st. of March following. On the 18*th.* of December, his Majesty issued out his Proclamation for Proroguing the Parliament from the said 1st. of March, to the 19*th.* of October following.

The Roads being about this time extreamly infested with many Notorious Highway-men, his Majesty issued out his Proclamation on the 23. of December, for the Prevention of Robberies, Murders, and Burglaries, and for the apprehension of Madox, Duval, Swissinix, and twenty others therein named, all Famous Robbers; promising a Reward of 10 l. for every one of the said Persons so Apprehended, and Convicted, to be paid by the Sheriff of the County, and by him set off in his Accounts in the Exchequer. Which Reward by another Proclamation dated the 30*th.* of the said December, was doubled and made 20 l. a Man, to be paid in like manner.

1669. In the Spring of the Year 1669. the Prince of Tuscany (now Great Duke of Florence) arrived in England, having undertaken a Visit to all the Courts of Europe. He was here received with extraordinary Kindness and Magnificence by the King. And accordingly at both Universities, especially Oxford. In the Summer arrived also another Noble Travellour, Prince George of Denmark, who has since been happily grafted into the Royal Stock of this Kingdom.

But this Year was still more Memorable, for the Loss of the Queen-Mother, and General Monk. The Queen Mother, Henrietta-Maria was the youngest Daughter of the Great (King Henry the IV. of France; Born the 26*th.* of November 1609. N. S. Marryed to King Charles I. in the year 1625. And after she had been deprived of her Royal Husband, by the most impious Rebellion and Murder that England ever knew, God was pleased at last to comfort her mournful Condition with the Sight of her Son's wonderful Restoration to his Fathers Crown and Kingdoms. Upon which she came to London after 19 Years Banishment. And having settled he Revenue here, returned with her youngest Daughter the Lady Henrietta, into France, and there bestowed her in Marriage, to the then Duke of Anjou now of Orleans (the Kings only Brother.) In July 1662. she came again to London, and setled her Court at Somerset-House, which she repaired and extreamly beautified; Here she resided till June 1665. and then crossed the Seas again to her Native Country, which after 4 years more became the Place of her Death. She departed this Life in her House at Colombe, four Leagues from Paris, on the 10. of August, N. S. about four of the Clock in the Morning, after a long Indisposion and decay of Health: Her Body was exposed on a Bed of State in her Chamber, the same day, and the next Embalmed. Her Heart was in a Vessel of Silver, inscribed with her Name and Title, carryed on the 10*th.* of September, N. S. with Ceremony, to the Monastery of Chaliot; and on the 12*th.* her Body was conveyed to St. Denys, Accompanyed by Madamoiselle, and Madam de Guise, with a great Train of Flambeaux, carryed by a hundred Pages, and the Queens Guards, where some Funeral Devotions were solemnly perform'd. But the Great Solemnity of the Interment was not till the 20*th.* of November, N. S. at which time the same Form and Magnificence was used as has been at the Funeral of the Queen-Mother of France; The Gates as well as the Body of the Church of St. Denys were hung in Black, with two Breadths of Black-Velvet, and the Quire with three, and a great number of Escutcheons: In the midst of the Quire was erected a stately Hearse, supported by eight Marble Columns, Columns, adorn'd with extraordinary Art; that and the whole Quire fill'd with Tapers; upon the Hearſe was placed the Queens Body, cover'd with a Paol of Cloth of Gold, with a large Croſs of Silver border'd round with Ermins, with large embroider'd Eſcutcheons. At this Solemnity aſſiſted the ſeveral Courts of Parliament at Paris, the Body of the Univerſity, &c. alſo the Ambaſſadors of Venice and Savoy. The Maſter of the Ceremonies, with the King at Arms, and four Heralds, attended with the Princeſſes in deep Mourning, and after them Monſieur and the Princes of the Blood. Here were preſent alſo two Kings (but incognito) viz. his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, and King Caſimir of Poland, who had not long before voluntarily reſign'd that Crown, and retired into France.

This Year the King concluded a Treaty of Friendſhip and Commerce with Savoy.

The Lord General Monk, that Great Inſtrument of the Glorious Reſtauration, and England's Happineſs, (for which he had afterwards confer'd upon him the Title of Duke of Albemarle, and many other deſerved Honours) dy'd at the Cock-pit by Whitehall, on the 3d of January 1669, in the 62 year of his age. After his Body had lain in State for ſome time at Somerſet-houſe, the Funeral was magnificently celebrated in a ſolemn Proceſſion from thence to Weſtminſter-Abby, on the 30th of April 1670, accompanied by many Barons, Biſhops, Earls, and perſons of all Degrees, ſet forth with all Trophies of Honour, Banners and Banneroles; the Effigies in the Habit proper to a General, Duke, and Knight of the Garter, lying in an open Chariot drawn by ſix Horſes capariſon'd with Velvet, the Paol ſupported by three Barons and the Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Houſhold; the principal Mourner was his Son and Succeſſor Chriſtopher Duke of Albemarle, his Train born up, himſelf ſupported by two Dukes aſſiſted by nine Earls and a Baron, all in cloſe Mourning. He was buried on the North ſide of King Henry the Seventh's Chapel. The whole Solemnity was perform'd with extraordinary Pomp and Ceremony, at the King's Expences, as the laſt Mark of his Majeſty's Love and Favour to a perſon of ſo great Merit.

1670. On the 11th of April 1670, the King paſs'd ſeveral publick Acts in Parliament, and then the two Houſes adjourn'd to the 24th of October following; among which Acts were theſe, viz. An Act for the advancing the Sale of Fee-farm Rents, and other Rents. An Act to Suppreſs and Prevent Seditious Conventicles. [Whereby, to be preſent under colour of any Exerciſe of Religion in other manner than according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Church of England, at which Meeting there ſhall be five Perſons, beſides thoſe of the ſame Houſhold, is made penal; for the firſt Offence 5 s. for the ſecond Offence 10 s. and ſo for every other Offence. Limitation for proſecution of which Act is three months.] An Act for authoriſing ſeveral Commiſſioners of the Realm of England to treat with Commiſſioners of Scotland, for the Weal of both Kingdoms. [This was in order to an Union of the two Kingdoms, as had been before endeavour'd in the Reign of K. James the Firſt, but the Deſign was never effected]. An Additional Act for the Rebuilding the City of London, uniting of Pariſhes, and Rebuilding of the Cathedral and Parochial Churches within the ſaid City.

On the 16th of May, her Royal Highneſs the Dutcheſs of Orleans, the King's only Siſter living, arriv'd at Dover from Dunkirk, in a Viſit to her Brother: ſhe was there met by the King, Queen, Duke and Dutcheſs, attended by all the principal Perſons of the Engliſh Court. Here ſhe remain'd till the 2d of June, during which time ſhe was entertain'd with Feaſts, Comedies, and other Diverſions, and all Demonſtrations of Affection and Magnificence that could be there expreſs'd. At the ſame time his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty coming to Dunkirk and Calais, he was complemented by the Lord Buckhurſt, ſent from our King, and Mr. Thinne from his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York. On the 2d of June the Dutcheſs of Orleans return'd to France, and arriv'd the 18th, N. S. at the Court at St. Germain's, where ſhe was receiv'd with great Expreſſions of Joy. But it pleaſed God, that not long after her arrival ſhe dy'd at St. Clou, of a ſudden and violent Diſtemper, which ſeiz'd her but the Evening before, and was by the Phyſicians taken for a kind of bilious Cholick. Which News was receiv'd here by Their Majeſties and Royal Highneſſes with Infinite Affliction, both for the Greatneſs of the Loſs, and the aſtoniſhing Surprize.

On the 29th of October, his Highneſs the Prince of Orange arriv'd at Margate, having two days before embark'd at the Brill, upon one of his Majeſty's Yachts which there attended for his tranſportation; immediately after his landing he took Poſt to Canterbury, and from thence paſſed by Coach to Rocheſter, where he lodg'd that night, and came the next morning to Graveſend, where he was attended by Sir Charles Cotterel Maſter of the Ceremonies, with His Majeſty's Barges, and ſo conducted to Whitehall. In his paſſage he was ſaluted by the great Guns from the Tower: Being landed at Whitehall, he was receiv'd at the Stairs-foot by the Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, and conducted to the preſence of both Their Majeſties, who receiv'd him with all poſſible demonſtrations of Joy and Affection; as did likewiſe their Royal Highneſſes, to whom he was in like manner conducted by the Lord Chamberlain, and thence to the Apartment prepar'd for him in the Cock-pit. On the 10th of November the Lord Mayor, with the Sheriffs and Aldermen of London, came and complemented his Highneſs upon his arrival in England. On the 26th of November, being at Newmarket, he viſited Cambridge, where he was honourably receiv'd by the whole Body of the Univerſity, entertain'd in Congregation, and treated at Dinner by the Provoſt of King's College. On the 6th of December his Highneſs was treated with extraordinary Magnificence by the Lord Mayor and City at Drapers-hall. At his Entry within Ludgate he was attended by the two Sheriffs on Horſeback, and ſome Companies of the Artillery, drawn up in good order to receive him, by whom he was conducted to the ſaid Hall, where the Lord Mayor was ready to com-complement him, and to attend him to the place of Entertainment. On the 18th of December his Highneſs went to Windſor, where he was receiv'd with the diſcharge of the great Guns round the Caſtle; the like next morning at his departure for Oxford: There he was receiv'd at the Eaſt Gate by the Mayor of that City and his Brethren. At St. Mary's he was attended by the Vice-Chancellor, with the Body of the Univerſity in their Scarlet and Formalities. At the great Gate of Chriſt-Church he was receiv'd and complemented by the Dean and Canons and whole Society of that College, and by them conducted to his Apartment there. At this Univerſity he was nobly treated, and in a Convocation held at the new Theatre, was pleaſed to accept of a Degree; as did ſeveral other Honourable Perſons in his Train. On the 13th of February, his Highneſs the Prince of Orange parted from Whitehall, in order to his return for Holland, infinitely ſenſible of the great Tenderneſs and Affection expreſs'd to him by Their Majeſties during the time he ſtay'd in England, and no leſs ſatisfied with the Univerſal Eſteem and Reſpect of the Court and People here. He was attended into Holland by the Earl of Oſſory, as His Majeſty had particularly appointed.

On Monday the 6th of March, the King paſs'd Eight publick Bills in Parliament; among the reſt, An Act to prevent malicious Maiming and Wounding; [Whereby it is enacted, That for any perſon, on purpoſe, and of Malice forethought, to cut out or diſable the Tongue, put out an Eye, ſlit the Noſe, cut off a Noſe or Lip, or cut off or diſable any Limb or Member of any Subject of his Majeſty, ſhall be Felony, without Benefit of Clergy]. This Act was occaſion'd by a violent and inhuman Attempt, committed the 21ſt of December laſt, on the Perſon of Sir John Coventry Knight of the Bath, and a Member of the Houſe of Commons, by a conſiderable number of armed Men, whereby he receiv'd ſeveral Wounds, &c. An Act to prevent the malicious burning of Houſes, Stacks of Corn, and killing or maiming of Cattel. [These Crimes, committed in the Night-time, are made Felony; and beſides, the Party injur'd may recover treble Damages in an Action of Treſpaſs.]

To conclude this Year, His Majeſty, at the Petition of the Parliament, iſſued out his Proclamation, dated the 23d of March, for the Baniſhing of all Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits who are not under any Reſtraint by Impriſonment, other than ſuch as by Contract of Marriage are to attend the Perſon of the Queen, or by the Laws of Nations are to attend foreign Ambaſſadors; and for putting the Laws in due execution againſt all Popiſh Recuſants, and ſuch as are ſuſpected to be ſo, in order to their Conviction.

This Year the King treated with Spain for ſetling Differences in America; and alſo concluded a Treaty of Alliance and Commerce with Denmark.

On Friday the 31ſt of March 1671, her Royal Highneſs Anne Dutcheſs of York dy'd at St. James's, after a long Indiſpoſition of Health. She was the eldeſt Daughter of Edward Earl of Clarendon, late Lord Chancellor; ſhe dy'd in the 34th year of her Age, and was interr'd (with ſeveral of her Children) in the Vault of Mary Queen of Scots, in the Chapel of King Henry VII. Her Body was accompanied from the Painted Chamber at Weſtminſter by his Highneſs Prince Rupert, as Chief Mourner, and by moſt of the Nobility, the Heralds and Officers at Arms attending, with the Solemnities uſually practis'd on the like occaſions. 1671.

On the 22d of April the King paſs'd Eighteen publick Acts in Parliament; among which, An Act for the better ſetling Intaſtates Eſtates. An Act for the better ſettlement of the Maintenance of the Parſons, Vicars, and Curates in the Pariſhes of the City of London, burnt by the late Dreadful Fire there. An Act for veſting certain Fee-farm Rents, and other ſmall Rents in Truſtees; [for Sale, purſuant to a former Act, 22 Car. 2. cap. 6.] An Act for the better preſervation of the Game, and for the ſecuring Warrens not enclos'd, and the ſeveral Fiſhings of this Realm. An Act to prevent the planting of Tobacco in England. After which the Parliament was prorogu'd to the 16th of the following April.

On the 9th of May, one Blood (outlaw'd for the Rebellion in Ireland eight years before) and three others, made a bold and unpreſidented Attempt to ſteal the Crown from the Tower, where it was lodg'd: Being admitted to ſee it, they gag'd and wounded the Keeper, and had carried it away with them to the laſt Centinel; where, upon the noiſe and purſuit, Blood and another were ſeiz'd, and the Crown recover'd. Some of theſe had been concern'd not many Months before, in an outragious and inſolent Attempt on the Perſon of the Duke of Ormond.

This Summer the King being at Newmarket, was pleas'd from thence to make a Progreſs to Yarmouth, Norwich, and ſome other places in Norfolk, in which he was accompanied by his Royal Highneſs. He alſo honour'd the Univerſity of Cambridge with a Viſit, on the 4th of October, where he was nobly entertain'd with a Comedy and Feaſt at Trinity College, and other Academical Welcomes.

And now the City of London being moſt rebuilt, and its publick Buildings reſtor'd out of their Ruins to a Condition of greater Beauty and Splendor than ever, this Year the new Lord Mayor, Sir George Waterman, made an Invitation to both Their Majeſties to honour his Feaſt at Guild-hall; which Their Majeſties received very graciouſly, and were preſent both at the Show (on the 30th of October) and at the Feaſt, together with the Duke of York, the Lady Mary, and the Lady Ann, Prince Rupert, and many principal Lords and Ladies of the Court, and a great Retinue; alſo the foreign Ambaſſadors, Lords of the Council, all the Judges, Serjeants at Law, &c. All which were treated that day in their ſeveral and proper ſtations, in a moſt magnificent and ſplendid manner; this being the firſt Entertainment of this nature ſince the Fire.

On Tueſday the 2d of January the King declar'd in Council, 'That ſeeing all the Neighbouring Princes and States were making great 'pre-

1671. 'preparations for War both by Sea and Land, 'he, for the ſafety of his Government and 'People, look'd upon himſelf as oblig'd to 'make ſuch Preparations as might be propor-'tionable for the Protection both of the one 'and the other, and to that end had given 'Orders for fitting and preparing a very con-'ſiderable Fleet againſt next Spring; and con-'ſidering the great Charges that muſt attend 'ſuch Preparations, and not finding any poſſi-'bility to defray ſuch unuſual Expences, by 'the uſual ways and means of Borrowing Mo-'neys, by reaſon his Revenues were ſo antici-'pated and engaged, he was therefore neceſſi-'tated (contrary to his own Inclinations) upon 'theſe Emergencies, and for the publick Safe-'ty, to cauſe a ſtop at preſent to be made of 'the payment of any Moneys, now being, or 'to be brought into his Exchequer, for the 'ſpace of one Year, ending the laſt day of 'December next, unto any Perſon whatſoever, 'excepting only ſuch Payments as ſhall grow 'due upon Orders on the Subſidy, according to 'the Act of Parliament, and Orders and Secu-'rities upon the Feefarm Rents; but payment 'of Intereſt to be duly made in the mean time 'at 6 per Cent. At the ſame time the King declar'd, that no Perſon whatſoever ſhall be de-frauded of any thing that is juſtly due to him, nor ſhall his Reſtraint continue longer than the aforeſaid laſt day of December.

Not long after this, his Majeſty thought fit to iſſue out his Declaration to all his loving Subjects dated the 14th day of March in the 24th year of his Reign, whereby he declares, That his Care and Endeavours for the Preſer-vation of the Rights and Intereſts of the Church have been ſufficiently manifeſted by the whole courſe of his Government ſince his Reſtaura-tion, and by the frequent ways of Coertion that have been uſed for reducing Diſſenters and for compoſing the Unhappy Differences in Religion which he found among his Subjects at his Return: But it being evident, by the ſad Experience of Twelve Years, that there is little Fruit of all thoſe forcible courſes, he thinks himſelf oblig'd to make uſe of that Su-preme Power in Eccleſiaſtical Matters, which is not only inherent in him, but hath been de-clar'd and recogniz'd to be ſo, by ſeveral Sta-tutes and Acts of Parliament; and therefore he does now accordingly iſſue this his Declara-tion, as well for the quieting the Minds of his good Subjects in theſe points, for inviting Stran-gers to come and live here, and for the better Encouragement of all to a chearful following of their Trade and Callings, as alſo for pre-venting for the future the Danger that might otherwiſe ariſe from private Meetings and ſe-ditious Conventicles.

In the firſt place, he declares his expreſs Re-ſolution, Meaning, and Intention to be, That the Church of England be preſerved and remain entire in its Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Govern-ment, as now it ſtands Eſtabliſh'd by Law; That the Orthodox Conformable Clergy do receive and enjoy the Revenues belonging thereunto; That no Perſon, tho' of a diffe-rent Opinion and Perſwaſion, ſhall be exempt from paying his Tythes, or other Dues what-ſoever; and, That no Perſon ſhall be capable of holding any Benefice, Living, or Eccleſiaſti-cal Dignity or Preferment, in this Kingdom, who is not exactly conformable. Next, That the Execution of all and all manner of Penal Laws in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, againſt whatſo-ever ſort of Nonconformiſts or Recuſants, be imme-diately ſuſpended, and all Judges, Sheriffs, Ju-ſtices of the Peace, Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers whatſoever, Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, to take notice of it, and pay due Obedience there-unto: That he will from time to time allow a ſufficient number of Places, as they ſhall be deſir'd, in all parts of this Kingdom, for the uſe of ſuch as do not conform to the Church of England, to meet and aſſemble in for their pub-lick Worſhip, which places ſhall be open and free to all perſons; but no Meeting to be in any place until ſuch place be allow'd, and the Teacher of that Congregation appointed. And further declares, That this Indulgence, as to the Allowance of the publick places of Wor-ſhip, and Approbation of the Teachers, ſhall extend to all ſorts of Nonconformiſts and Recu-ſants, except the Recuſants of the Roman-Catholick Religion, to whom he in no wiſe allows publick places of Worſhip, but only indulges them their Share in the common Exemption from the Execution of the Penal Laws, and the Exer-ciſe of their Worſhip in their private Houſes only. Laſtly, he declares, That if after this Clemency and Indulgence any ſhall preſume to abuſe this Liberty, and preach ſeditiouſly, or to the Derogation of the Doctrine, Diſcipline, or Government of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, or meet in places not allow'd, they ſhall be puniſh'd with all imaginable Severity.

This Declaration of Indulgence was receiv'd with very great Joy and Applauſe by all Non-conformiſts and Diſſenters; but the Parliament was not ſo well pleas'd with it: Of which more hereafter.

On the 13th of March, ſome of his Majeſty's Frigats, under the Command of Sir Robert Holmes and the Earl of Oſſory, cruiſing by the Iſle of Wight, met with the Dutch Smirna Fleet, and other Ships, of about 50 ſail, convoy'd by ſix Men of War, and of the Merchant-men twenty at leaſt carried between 20 and 40 Guns a-piece, who refuſing to ſtrike and lower their Topſails, a Fight began about Three of the Clock that Afternoon, and laſted till Night, and all the next Day, in which we took five of their rich Merchant-men, and ſunk their Rear-Admiral.

On the 17th, as ſoon as this News arriv'd, his Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to order the publiſhing a Declaration of War againſt the States General of the United Provinces; in which Declaration was contained and ſet forth, That immediately upon his Reſtauration, his firſt Work was, the ſetling Peace and a good Cor-reſpondence between us and our Neighbours, particularly with the States-General, upon ſuch equal terms, as would certainly not have been broken, if any Obligations could have kept them within the Bounds of Friendſhip and Ju-ſtice; That tho' this League was maintain'd inviolable on his part, yet being in the year 1664 ſtir'd up by the Complaints of his Peo-ple, ple, and the Unanimous Votes of both Houſes of Parliament, after ineffectual Endeavours to bring them to Reaſonable Terms, a War enſued in the year 1665, and continued to 1667, during which time our Victories and their Loſſes were memorable enough to put them in mind of being more faithful to their Leagues for the future: That a Peace was no ſooner made, but they return'd to their uſual Cuſtom of Breaking Articles; in particular, not ſending Commiſſioners to London (as they were expreſly engag'd to do by one Article of the Treaty at Breda) about the Regulation of Trade in the Eaſt-Indies: That when we deliver'd up to them Surinam in the Weſt-Indies, they detain'd the Engliſh Colony there, and would not ſuffer them to remove themſelves and Eſtates to ſome other Plantation, contrary to another Article in the ſame Treaty: That there is ſcarce a Town in Holland that is not filled with abuſive Pictures, and falſe Hiſtorical Medals, and Pillars, ſome of which have been expos'd to publick view by Command of the States themſelves, and in the very time when his Majeſty was join'd with them in United Councils, for the Support of the Triple League, and the Peace of Chriſtendom: That they have by their Commanders violated the Right of the Flag, tho' ſo ancient, that it is one of the firſt Prerogatives of his Royal Predeceſſors, and ought to be the laſt from which this Kingdom ſhould depart, and tho' expreſly acknowledg'd in the Treaty at Breda. This his Majeſty calls an Ungrateful Inſolence! that they ſhould contend with him about the Dominion of theſe Seas, who in the years 1635, 1636, & 1637 took Licenſes, and paid a Tribute, to be permitted to Fiſh in them; and who owe their being now in a condition of making this Diſpute to the Protection of his Anceſtors: That while he patiently expected Satisfaction in theſe Particulars, they endeavour'd to provoke the moſt Chriſtian King againſt his Majeſty: Wherefore deſpairing now of any good Effect of a further Treaty, he is compel'd to take up Arms in defence of the ancient Prerogative of the Crown, and the Glory and Safety of his Kingdoms, truſting in God's Aſſiſtance. And hereby declares War both by Sea and Land, againſt the States-General of the United Provinces, and all their Subjects and Inhabitants; further declaring Safety to the Perſons and Eſtates not only of all ſuch of the Dutch Nation as live here, and not correſpond with his Enemies, but to ſuch others as out of Affection to his Government, or becauſe of Oppreſſion at home, ſhall come into this Kingdom. Laſtly, That notwithſtanding the proſecution of this War, he will maintain the true Intent and Scope of the Treaty at Aix la Chapelle inviolable, unleſs provok'd to the contrary.

This Declaration of War was on the 28th of the ſame Month ſolemnly proclaim'd in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, at the uſual places, and with the uſual Ceremonies. And on the 7th of April, S. N. (which was the ſame day with the former) War was proclaim'd at Paris, againſt the States-General of the United Provinces; ſo that after a ſhort Interval, we ſee theſe three Nations in Arms again, as in the year 1667, with this difference, That the French, who then took part with the Hollanders, now ſide with the Engliſh.

Nothing could more aſtoniſh the World than this unexpected Declaration of War againſt Holland; firſt, by Matter of Fact, in falling upon their Smirna-Fleet; and in conſequence of that, by a formal Declaration (contrary to an Article of the late Peace between the Dutch and Us, wherein ſix Months notice was to be given, in caſe of a future War) in which we gave Reaſons for our Quarrel, while France contented themſelves to give no other for their part of it, than only the Glory of that King. The Dutch could never be poſſeſt with a Belief that we were in Earneſt, till the Blow was given, but thought our Unkindneſs and Expoſtulations of late would end at laſt either in Demands of Money, or the Prince of Orange's Reſtitution to the Authority of his Anceſtors. Nor could the neighbouring Princes imagine, that after having ſav'd Flanders out of the Hands of France, we ſhould ſuffer Holland to fall into the like danger: Yea, France it ſelf could ſcarce believe it till the Blow was ſtruck in the attack of the Smirna-Fleet; which Surprize (the Dutch having made no Proviſion for their Defence) made way for prodigious enſuing Succeſſes.

In the Beginning of May 1672, the Engliſh Fleet, commanded by the Duke of York in Perſon, join'd the French, commanded by the Count d' Eſtrée. On the 28th of May, the two Fleets thus join'd, and under the Command of his Royal Highneſs, encounter'd that of the Dutch off of Southwold Bay, with whom they had a ſharp Diſpute for eight hours, but at laſt the Dutch gave way, and ſtood off to their own Coaſt, with great Loſs both of Ships and Men. In this Victory our greateſt Loſs was the Life of the Noble Earl of Sandwich, that Renowned Commander, whoſe Ship was fir'd, and he leaping overboard, was drown'd; his Body was afterwards found, and honourably buried in Henry the Seventh's Chapel. 1672.

But on the Continent the French were ſo ſucceſsful, that they carried their Arms into the very Bowels of their Enemy's Country, and made themſelves Maſters of Arnheim, Zutphen, Derenter, Utrecht, and ſeveral other places of importance; being advanc'd on the 28th of June within four leagues of Rotterdam, and about the ſame diſtance from Amſterdam. This put the Hollanders into ſuch a terrible Confuſion, that in ſome places they cut their Dykes, and laid the Country under Water, as the beſt Defence to their principal Cities. The Common People were every where in mutiny, exclaiming againſt their Magiſtrates, and laying to their charge all their Misfortune. In Dort they broke into the Council-houſe, where their Burgermaſters were aſſembl'd, and forc'd them to put the Town under the Conduct of the Prince of Orange, and ſwear Fidelity to him, as their Governor and Stadtholder: The like in ſome other places. About the latter end of June the Prince came to Dort, where he was entertain'd at Dinner, during which the Burghers ſent to require the Lords, that they would forthwith declare the Prince Stadtholder; 1672. whereupon, by their formal Act dated June 29. 1672, they declar'd his Highneſs Stadtholder, with all the Powers and Authorities, in as ample manner as any of his Anceſtors Princes of Orange have enjoy'd the ſame; renounc'd the Perpetual Edict, (whereby they had oblig'd themſelves never to admit of a Stadtholder) and diſcharg'd his Highneſs of the Oath he had taken, Not to be made ſuch. The like Declaration was made at the Hague and Amſterdam, on the 5th of July; and on the 9th he receiv'd from the States-General at the Hague his Commiſſions of Stadtholder, Captain-General, and Admiral.

But the Popular Commotions and Outrages ended not thus in Holland; for, beſides the plundering and wounding of ſeveral of their Magiſtrates, the Burghers and Common People at the Hague, on the 20th of Auguſt following, ſeiz'd on the Heer John de Wit, late Penſionary of Holland, and his Brother Cornelius de Wit, Ruward van Putten (who had been concern'd in promoting the fore mention'd Perpetual Edict) and not only murder'd them, with the greateſt Fury and Indignation, but drew their dead Bodies up and down the Streets, hung up their naked mangled Carcaſſes by the Heels on a Gallows, and afterwards ſold pieces of their Fleſh about the Town for ten, twelve, fifteen Stivers, or more.

Now, to return to England, on the 19. of September the Duke of York arriv'd at Court, having lain with the Fleet on the Coaſt of Holland moſt part of this Summer.

About this time it was that the King was pleaſed, by Proclamation dated the 16th of Auguſt, to ſuppreſs all Farthings and Half-pence put forth by private perſons, in ſeveral parts of the Nation, and Going only in their Neighborhood, and to cauſe Copper Farthings and Half-pence to be ſtamp'd at the Mint, and to paſs for Currant Money all over the Nation, in all Payments under the value of Sixpence. They were of near the intrinſick Value, and of a curious Impreſſion, having on one ſide the King's Head, and about it Carolus à Carolo; on the Reverſe the Figure of a Woman repreſenting Britain, with this Circumſcription, Quatuor Maria Vindico; but theſe words were ſoon after alter'd, and only Britannia circumſcrib'd in the room.

On the 17th of November, Sir Orlando Bridgman, Lord Keeper, having reſign'd the Great Seal, the King confer'd it to the keeping of Anthony Earl of Shafteſbury, with the Title of Lord Chancellor of England.

The King, not long after, iſſued out a Proclamation dated December the 4th, ſetting forth, That having found it neceſſary, during the preſent War, to raiſe more Soldiers, and to form them into Regiments, and to diſpoſe of them into ſeveral Quarters, he ſtraitly Charges and Commands, That all Officers and Soldiers do take ſtrict Care that no Violence or Injury be offer'd to any of his Majeſty's Subjects, either in their Perſons or Eſtates, nor any kind of Diſorder committed or ſuffer'd in the ſeveral Quarters: And directs how Complaints ſhall be redreſs'd, and the Offenders ſeverely puniſh'd.

This was follow'd by another Declaration, reciting that of January the 2d, laſt Year, whereby Payments of Moneys out of the Exchequer, were ſtop'd till the laſt day of this Inſtant December, and no longer. But now the King declares, 'That in regard of the continuance of 'thoſe inevitable Neceſſities which firſt forced 'him to make that Stop, he is compel'd at pre- 'ſent to continue the ſame until the Firſt day of 'May next.

On the 4th of February the Parliament (which had been continued under ſeveral Prorogations till this day) met, and the Place of Speaker of the Houſe of Commons being void, by the promotion of Sir Edward Turner to the Place of Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, the Commons, by His Majeſty's direction, proceeded to the Choice of a new Speaker, and accordingly choſe Sir Job Charleton, Serjeant at Law, whom they preſented to the King next day in the Houſe of Lords, and had his Approbation. At the ſame time his Majeſty made a Speech, in which he acquainted the Parliament of his having begun a moſt important, neceſſary, and expenſive War; refers them to his Declaration for the Cauſes; recommends the payment of his Debts to their eſpecial Care; acquaints them with his Declaration of Indulgence, and the Nature of it, that there is no more Liberty intended thereby to Papiſts than Freedom of their Religion in their own Houſes only, without any Concourſe of others; That he could not grant them leſs than this, when he had extended ſo much more Grace to others, moſt of them having been Loyal, and in the Service of him and the King his Father; That this Indulgence ſhall not any way prejudice the Church, as now Eſtabliſh'd in this Kingdom. And having ſaid this, He ſhall take it very ill to receive Contradiction in what he hath done; and tells them plainly, He is reſolv'd to ſtick to his Declaration. My Lord Chancellor Shafteſbury was much larger in his Speech, and ſomewhat bitter againſt the Dutch; for he did not only apply to them and their Government, Delenda eſt Carthago, but ſaid expreſly *, That the States of Holland are England's Eternal Enemy both by Intereſt and Inclination. For the carrying on the preſent War, he preſſes for a Supply, and that the King may be enabl'd to revive the Payments out of the Exchequer; for tho' he hath been neceſſitated to put a ſtop to the Trade and Gain of the Bankers, yet he would be unwilling to Ruin them, and Oppreſs ſo many Families as are concern'd in thoſe Debts; beſides, it were too diſproportionable a Burthen upon many of his good Subjects.

* Speech, p. 10.

After which the Houſe of Commons (having firſt Voted the King a Supply) on the 14th of February, made an Addreſs to him, containing their moſt humble and hearty Thanks for his many gracious Promiſes and Aſſurances, to ſecure and maintain the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion, our Liberties and Properties; and crave Leave humbly to Repreſent that they have, with all Duty, taken into Conſideration ſeveral parts of his Majeſties laſt Speech, and withal the Declaration therein mention'd, for Indulgence to Diſſenters dated the 15th of

March

March laſt, and they find themſelves bound in duty to inform his Majeſty, that penal Statutes in matters Eccleſiaſtical, cannot be ſuſpended but by Act of Parliament, therefore moſt humbly beſeech his Majeſty that the ſaid Laws may have their free Courſe until it ſhall be otherwiſe provided by Act of Parliament. To this the King returned an Anſwer in writing, dated the 24th of February, to this effect, That he is very much troubled that that Declaration which he put out for ends ſo neceſſary to the Quiet of this Kingdom, ſhould have proved the Cauſe of Diſquiet in his Houſe of Commons, and give occaſion to the queſtioning of his Power in Eccleſiaſticks, which he finds not done in the Reigns of any of his Anceſtors; that he never thought of uſing it otherwiſe than to the Peace and Eſtabliſhment of the Church of England, and the eaſe of all his Subjects in general; neither doth he pretend to the Right of Suſpending of any Laws wherein the Properties, Rights, or Liberties of any of his Subjects are concern'd, nor to Alter any thing in the Eſtabliſht Doctrine or Diſcipline of the Church of England, &c. To this, the Houſe of Commons reply by another Addreſs of February the 26th, That upon ſerious Conſideration, they find his Majeſties Anſwer to their late Petition is not ſufficient to clear the Apprehenſions that remain in the Minds of his People, by his claiming a Power to ſuſpend Penal Laws in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, and which he ſeems to aſſert in the ſaid Anſwer, to be intruſted in the Crown, and never queſtioned in the Reigns of any of his Anceſtors, wherein they conceive his Majeſty hath been very much miſinform'd, ſince no ſuch Power was ever claim'd or excerciſed by any of his Majeſties Predeceſſors, and if it ſhould be admitted, might tend to the interrupting the free Courſe of the Laws, and altering the Legiſlative Power, which hath always been acknowledged to reſide in his Majeſty, and his two Houſes of Parliament: Therefore humbly pray his Majeſties full and ſatisfactory Anſwer to their ſaid Petition and Addreſs, and that the Proceedings in this Matter, may not be for the future drawn into Conſequence or Example.

After this the King thought fit to revoke and cancel his ſaid Declaration of Indulgence; and not only ſo, but upon the Petition of the Lords and Commons, to iſſue his Proclamation dated the 13th of March, commanding all Jeſuits and Romiſh Prieſts (other than ſuch as are obliged to attend the Queen, or Forraign Ambaſſadors) to depart the Kingdom, and that the Laws be put in Execution againſt all Popiſh Recuſants.

During theſe Debates, Sir Job Charlton, the lately choſen Speaker, finding himſelf under ſome Indiſpoſition of Body, made ſuit to be eaſed of the Burden, which he was no longer able to ſuſtain, whereupon the King ſignifying to the Houſe of Commons his Permiſſion to chuſe a New Speaker, they thereupon made Choice of Edward Seymour Eſq; who was preſented to, and approved by the King.

On the 29th of March 1673. The King Paſs'd ten Publick Bills in Parliament; among which, An Act for raiſing the Sum of 1238750 l. for Supply of his Majeſties extraordinary Occaſions. An Act for the Kings Majeſties moſt Gracious, General, and Free Pardon. An Act for preventing Dangers, which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants. [By which it is enacted that all and every Perſon that ſhall be admitted, or placed into any Office Civil or Military, or ſhall receive any Pay, Sallary, Fee, or Wages of his Majeſty, or ſhall have Command, or Place of Truſt from, or under his Majeſty, his Heirs or Succeſſors, ſhall at the next Term after admittance into his Office or Imployment, in the Court of Kings Bench, or Chancery, or elſe at the next Quarter-Seſſions in his proper County, take the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, produce a Certificate of his receiving the Sacrament in ſome Pariſh Church, atteſted by two Witneſſes, and alſo declare and ſubſcribe a Declaration, That he does believe that there is not any Tranſubſtantiation in the Sacrament of the Lords-Supper, or in the Elements of Bread and Wine, at or after the Conſecration thereof, by any Perſon whatſoever. Penalty for executing any ſuch Office, and not doing as aforeſaid, diſabled to ſue or proſecute any Suit in Law or Equity, to be Guardian to a Child, Executor or Adminiſtrator to any Perſon, or capable of any Legacy or Gift, or to bear any Office within this Kingdom, and alſo forfeit the Sum of 500 l. Out of this Act are Excepted, the Office of any High-Conſtable, Conſtable, Tythingman, Headborough, Overſeer of the Poor, Church-Warden, Surveyor of the High-ways, or any like inferiour Civil-Office, or any Office of Forreſters, or Keeper of any Park, Chace, Warren, or Game, or Bayliff of any Manor or Lands, or any like Private Office.] After the Paſſing of which Acts the Parliament adjorn'd to the 20th of October following. 1672.

On the 28th of May, the Engliſh and French Fleet, under the Command of Prince Rupert, had a ſharp Engagement with the Dutch, on the Coaſt of Holland; which ended with a Conſiderable Loſs on their Side (who were forced to give way and retire within their Sands) and little Damage on ours, two Ships only being diſabled. On the 4th of June, the Fleet had a Second Engagement with the like Loſs to the Enemy, in which we loſt not one Ship, and very few Men. On the 11th of Auguſt happened a Third Engagement, which was very ſharp, both ſides having Fought with great Fury, but the greateſt Loſs fell upon the Enemy. While the Engliſh and French Fleets were thus Victorious at Sea, the French were no leſs Succesful on the Land; for on the 30th of June they took Maeſtricht, after a ſmall Siege, at which the Duke of Monmouth aſſiſted, in the Honourable Poſt of one of the Leiutenant-Generals of France and did Signalize his Valour in a high degree.

On the 9th of November, his Majeſty was pleaſed to take the Great-Seal from the Earl of Shaftsbury, and to give it to Sir Heneage Finch, then Attorney-General, with the Title of Lord Keeper.

A Match having been this Summer treated and concluded, by his Majeſties Conſent and Authority (tho' oppoſed by Petition in two 1673. Addreſes from the Houſe of Commons laſt October,) between the Duke of York, and the Princeſs of Modena, the ſaid Princeſs, accompanyed by her Mother, the Dutcheſs of Modena, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality arrived at Dover on the 21ſt of November, and was there received by his Royal Highneſs. Afterwards they were met by the King, attended by the Principal Nobility, on the River, and arrived at White-Hall on the 26th.

On the 7th of January the Parliament met, having been Prorogued the 4th of November laſt, to this day. And now the King acquainted them with ſeveral Particulars relating to the preſent Juncture: On all which heads, the Lord-Keeper Finch enlarged in a Long and Eloquent Speech, containing what the King hath done for them ſince the laſt Receſs, in bringing all Recuſants under the Penal Laws; in forbidding all Papiſts or reputed Papiſts to come to Court, or to St. James's; in not extending his Prerogative beyond it's due Limits; in leſſening and reducing his Land Forces, and maintaining ſo few extraordinary, to extinguiſh the Fears of a ſtanding Army; in a Rigourous and ſevere Proſecution at Law, of all the Officers and Soldiers of his Standing Guards, when they Misbehave themſelves towards the meaneſt Subject; in abrogating all the Priviledges from Arreſts claim'd by his Servants in Extraordinary, and in the great Induſtry and Application of Mind uſed by him, all along, in hopes to have obtain'd by this time, if it had been poſſible, an honourable and a juſt Peace; and ſhews how the Dutch are in the Fault, that it is not concluded; then Minds them of what the King in Juſtice expects from them, a Speedy and proportionable Supply, as abſolutely neceſſary both for War and Peace; and mentions the Conſideration of the Goldſmiths, which involves ſo many Perſons and Families, That the Concern is little Leſs than National; 'tis an Affair which the King lays very much to heart, and hopes a Proper Time will come when a favourable Regard may be had of it; In fine, he tells them, That the King aſſures himſelf of their Affections, and expects they ſhould do their Endeavours to reſtore and improve the mutual Confidence between him and his People, and extinguiſh all their Fears and Jealouſies; That Religion and Liberty ſtand ſecured by the moſt Sacred Tyes that are, and that the King hath a greater Intereſt in the Preſervation of both than they themſelves; for as Religion, the Proteſtant Religion, commands indiſpenſible Obedience, ſo 'tis a juſt and lawful Liberty which ſweetens that Command, and endears it.

The Houſe of Commons voted Thanks to his Majeſty for thoſe Acts he had done ſince the laſt Prorogation, towards the ſuppreſſing and diſcountenancing of Popery, and for his gracious Promiſes and Aſſurances in his laſt Speech; and Reſolved on the 27th of January, that upon conſideration of his Majeſty's Gracious Speech, and the Propoſals from the States-General of the United Provinces, (which Propoſals he had communicated to both Houſes three days before) this Houſe is of opinion, that His Majeſty be humbly deſir'd to proceed in a Treaty with the ſaid States, in order to a ſpeedy Peace. The Lords alſo made the like Vote, which being deliver'd to the King by way of Addreſs, on the 11th of February, he returned for Anſwer, in the Houſe of Lords, 'That according to their Advice and Deſire, he had 'made a ſpeedy, honourable, and (he hoped) 'a laſting Peace, which is Signed already.

Which Peace had been concluded and ſigned on the 9th of February at Weſtminſter, (after it had been negotiated ineffectually at Cologne) and publickly proclaimed on the 28th, with the uſual Solemnities, at London; as it had been on the 6th of March, N. S. at the Hague. It conſiſted of five Articles: By the firſt the States agreed to the Rights of the Flag to be paid to all our King's Ships. The ſecond was for ſetling Trade in the Indies, &c. The third relates to the Colony of Surinam. By the fourth, both ſides are to reſtore all places taken from each other during this War. And by the fifth the States oblige themſelves to pay our King 800000 Patacoons.

That which facilitated and haſten'd the Conſummation of this Peace, was, that the Prince of Orange, with an Army of Forty thouſand Men, had put a ſudden ſtop to the full Career of the French Conqueſts in thoſe parts, having taken Narden, three leagues from Amſterdam, in ſpight of all oppoſition from either the French or the Seaſon; and leaving his Poſts there well guarded, he march'd to the reſt of his Army, beſieg'd Bon, and took it, which open'd a paſſage for the German Forces over the Rhine, and ſo into Flanders; whereupon the French immediately abandon'd all their Conqueſts upon Holland in leſs time than they made them, and began now to wiſh the War well ended, and were very glad to accept his Majeſty's Mediation.

On the 24th of February the Parliament was prorogued to the 10th of November following; and by Proclamation of the 22d of September, 1674, further prorogued from the ſaid 10th of November to the 13th of the following April. 1674.

A Peace being thus concluded, and no Parliament ſitting, we cannot expect to meet with many Occurrences of great and publick concern this year.

About this time ſome People were very licentious in ſpreading falſe and ſeditious Rumors, and preſumed to cenſure and defame Proceedings of State; of which the King took notice, and in particular of a very falſe Report then put about, as if he intended to diſſolve this preſent Parliament; hereupon he iſſued out a ſevere Proclamation, on the 2d of May, againſt all ſuch who by Writing or Speaking ſhall utter or publiſh any falſe News or Reports, or intermeddle with the Affairs of State and Government, or with the Perſons of any of his Majeſties Counſellors or Miniſters, in their common and ordinary Diſcourſe.

On the 10th of June was iſſued out another Proclamation for the apprehending and tranſportation of Prieſts and Jeſuits, and 5 l. offer'd for the diſcovery of any ſuch.

Sir

Sir Robert Viner being this year ſworn Lord Mayor of London, the King was pleas'd not only to be preſent at his Feaſt in Guild-hall, on the 29th of October, but alſo moſt graciouſly and freely to condeſcend to the acceptance of the Freedom of the City in the Chamberlain's Office; whereupon the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council unanimouſly agreed to expreſs their grateful ſenſe of ſo unparallel'd a Favour and Honour, beyond the Example of all his Progenitors; and accordingly the Lord Mayor, having firſt obtain'd his Majeſty's Leave, did with the Aldermen and Common-Council attend his Majeſty on the 18th of December, in the Banqueting-houſe, where the ſaid Sir Robert Viner Lord Mayor, with the Chamberlain of London kneeling by him, in the Name of the ſaid City, did preſent his Majeſty with the Copy of the Freedom, curiouſly written on Vellum, and adorn'd with Gilding after the beſt manner, in a large ſquare Box of Maſſy Gold, the Seal of the ſaid Freedom hanging at it, incloſed in a Box of Gold ſet all over with large Diamonds, to a conſiderable value. Which the King receiv'd with many Expreſſions of great Kindneſs.

On the 3d of February the King cauſed other ſtrict Orders of Council to be iſſued forth, 1. For the Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants. 2. Againſt Saying or Hearing of Maſs in any places whatſoever, except the Chapels of the Queen and Foreign Miniſters. 3. For the departure of all Romiſh Prieſts out of the Kingdom, except Mr. John Huddleſton, who was eminently ſerviceable to His Majeſty in his Eſcape from Worceſter. 4. That none of his Subjects ſend any Perſon to be educated in any Popiſh College or Seminary beyond the Seas. 5. That no Papiſt preſume to come to Whitehall or St. James's, or other place where the Court ſhall be. 6. That effectual Care be taken for the ſuppreſſing of Conventicles, his Majeſty declaring, that all his Licenſes were long ſince recalled, and that no Conventicle hath any Authority, Allowance, or Encouragement from him. All which was afterwards enforc'd by a Declaration publiſh'd in print, and dated the 12th of February.

This year the King renew'd a Peace with Tunis, formerly made by Sir John Lawſon in 1662.

On the 13th of April 1675, the Parliament met according to the Prorogation. The King made a Speech, containing new Promiſes and Aſſurances to maintain the Eſtabliſh'd Religion and Property according to Law, &c. For which Speech both Houſes voted their Thanks. In the beginning of this Seſſion of Parliament the Houſe of Commons made an Addreſs to the King againſt the Duke of Lauderdale, as having declar'd his Inclinations to Arbitrary Councils, in terror of his Majeſty's good Subjects, &c. And therefore, that his Majeſty would graciouſly be pleaſed to remove the ſaid Duke from all his Employments, and from his Majeſty's Preſence and Councils for ever, as a Perſon obnoxious and dangerous to the Government. To this the King anſwer'd in Writing dated the 7th of May, That the words of which the Duke was accuſed in the Addreſs, if ſpoken, were ſpoken before the laſt Act of General Pardon. And his Majeſty being ſenſible how great a Satisfaction and Security the Inviolable Preſervation of the former Act of Indempnity and Oblivion had been to all his Subjects, cannot but apprehend the dangerous Conſequences of enquiring into any things that have been pardon'd by an Act of General Pardon, leſt the Example of that might give Men cauſe to fear their Security under the firſt Act of Oblivion. 1675.

And now an unhappy Difference ariſing between the two Houſes, in a Caſe of Judicature, and Privileges, occaſion'd by Dr. Shirley's bringing an Appeal in the Houſe of Lords, from a Decree in Chancery, againſt Sir John Fagg, a Member of the Houſe of Commons: The Diſpute was carried on ſo far, that Serjeant Pemberton, Serjeant Peck, Sir John Churchill, and Mr. Charles Porter, being concern'd as Council in this Cauſe, were taken up in Weſtminſter-hall, by the Speaker's Warrant, and committed to the Tower for Breach of Privilege. The King taking notice of theſe Heats, on the 5th of June came to the Lords Houſe, ſent up for the Commons, and made a Speech to this effect: 'That he told them at the meeting of this 'Seſſion no Endeavours would be wanting to 'make the continuance of this Parliament un-'practicable; that he is ſorry Experience has 'ſo quickly ſhew'd the Truth of what he then 'ſaid; That in his Opinion the beſt means of 'coming to a Compoſure between them, is 'ſuch full Conferences, as may either convince 'themſelves, or enable him to judge rightly of 'the Differences; That he is not to ſuffer theſe 'Differences to grow to Diſorders in the whole 'Kingdom; That his Judgment ſhall be al-'ways impartial between his two Houſes of 'Parliament: but while they are in Debate 'about their Privileges, he will not ſuffer his 'own to be invaded. And concludes with 'deſiring them that they would yet conſider, 'and not ſuffer ill Mens Deſigns to hinder 'this Seſſion from a happy Concluſion.

But after this, the Tranſactions in this Affair proceeding with ſtill more vehemency and oppoſition, his Majeſty thought fit to prorogue the Parliament to the 13th of October; at which time they met again, but, it ſeems, the old Conteſts were not forgot; for on the 19th of November, I find among the Votes in the Houſe of Commons, 'That whereas this Houſe hath 'been inform'd of ſeveral Appeals depending 'before the Houſe of Lords from Courts of 'Equity, to the great violation of the Rights 'and Liberties of the Commons of England, it 'is this day reſolved and declared, that who-'ever ſhall ſollicite, plead, or proſecute any 'Appeal againſt any Commoner of England, 'from any Court of Equity, before the Houſe of 'Lords, ſhall be deemed and taken to be a 'Betrayer of the Rights and Liberties of the 'Commons of England, and ſhall be proceeded 'againſt accordingly. This Order was fix'd up in the Lobby, and upon the Gates of Weſtminſter-hall, and the two Serjeants-Inns, the four Inns of Court, and all the Inns of Chancery; and the next day they order'd Dr. Shirley to be taken into Cuſtody. Hereupon the King was pleaſed, on the 22d of November, to prorogue

the Parliament to the 15th of February come Twelve-month. At the ſame time paſſing one publick Act, entituled, An Act for the better and more eaſie rebuilding the Town of Northampton; [Which ſaid Town had been by a lamentable Fire, happening on the 20th of September before, almoſt wholly reduc'd to Aſhes, very little being left ſtanding, except ſome of the outward Buildings.]

A Treaty of Peace between France and Holland and the other Confederates, being now ſet on foot, by the Mediation of our King and the King of Sweden, and Nimeguen being at laſt agreed on for the place of Congreſs, the Lord John Berkeley, Sir William Temple, and Sir Leoline Jenkins repair'd thither about the middle of December, as Plenipotentiaries on the part of our King; but the Treaty laſted near three years before a Concluſion.

On the 19th of December his Majeſty, having created S. Heneage Finch a Baron of this Kingdom by the Title of Lord Finch Baron of Daventry, was pleaſed alſo to change his Title of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, into that of Lord High Chancellor of England.

Publick Coffee-houſes were at this time cenſur'd as places of reſort for idle and diſaffected perſons, where divers falſe, malicious, and ſcandalous Reports are deviſed and ſpread abroad, to the defamation of the Government, and to the diſturbance of the Peace and Quiet of the Realm. Hereupon the King thought fit, by his Proclamation, dated the 29th of December, to put down and ſuppreſs the ſaid Coffee-houſes, and command, that after the 10th day of Jan. next no Coffee-houſe be kept in England and Wales, under the Penalty of 5 l. per month, inflicted by the Statute of 15 Car. 2. ca. 11. S. 15, on ſuch as ſell Coffee, &c. without License. But the time, upon humble Petition, was inlarged to the 24th of June, by another Proclamation, dated Jan. 8. the Keepers of ſuch Houſes taking the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and entring into a Recognizance of 500 l. Condition'd not to ſuffer Libels, &c. to be read or divulg'd in their Houſes, or otherwiſe to inform ſome Juſtice of the Peace thereof.

On the 7th day of January was iſſued forth a Proclamation for the better diſcovery of ſeditious Libellers, wherein a Reward of 50 l. was promis'd for ſuch diſcovery.

This year the King enter'd into Capitulations and Articles of Peace with the Ottoman Empire.

1676. On the 26th of May 1676, about four in the Morning, broke out a moſt lamentable Fire in the Burrough of Southwark, which continued with much Violence all that day, and part of the night following, before it could be ſtop'd; it conſumed about 600 Houſes; and the great Church of St. Mary Overies was in ſuch danger, that it was ſaved with Difficulty.

The 3d of October a ſtrict Order of Council was made againſt any of his Majeſty's Subjects repairing to Maſs, or Sermons at the Queen's Chapel at Somerſet-houſe, except ſuch as are her domeſtick Servants; nor to the Chapels or Houſes of Foreign Ambaſſadors, Agents, and Miniſters.

On the 15th of February the two Houſes of Parliament met according to their prorogation from the 22d of November 1675. In the beginning of March the Houſe of Commons repreſented to the King, in an Addreſs, That the Minds of his Majeſty's People are much diſquieted with the manifeſt Danger ariſing to theſe Kingdoms by the Growth and Power of the French King, by his Acquiſitions in the Spaniſh Netherlands, in the preſervation whereof, they humbly conceive, the Intereſt of His Majeſty, and the Safety of his People are highly concern'd; and therefore beſeech the King to take the ſame into his Care, and ſtrengthen himſelf with ſtricter Alliances, &c. The King anſwer'd, That he was of Opinion with the two Houſes of Parliament, and that he will uſe all means for the conſervation of Flanders that can conſiſt with the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom.

This year a Peace was concluded with Tripoli.

On the 16th of April the King came to the Houſe of Lords, and paſs'd ten publick Bills, 1677. ſome of which were, An Act for raiſing the Sum of 584978 l. 2 s. 2 d. ob. for the ſpeedy building of 30 Ships of War. An Act for the better Obſervation of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday. [By which Act it is provided, That no perſon ſhall be arreſted on that day in any Civil Action, nor any Action brought againſt any Hundred, for a Robbery committed on that day.] An Act for prevention of Frauds and Perjuries; [By which it is enacted, That no Deviſe of Lands ſhall be valid, unleſs the Will be atteſted by three or more Witneſſes; that Contracts and Agreements be in Writing, &c. with ſeveral other new Proviſions.] An Act for taking away the Writ de Heretico comburendo. An Act for Erecting a Judicature to determine Differences touching Houſes burnt and demoliſh'd by the late dreadful Fire in Southwark. After the paſſing theſe Acts, the two Houſes adjourn'd to the 21ſt of the following May; at which time the Parliaments met again: And the Houſe of Commons continuing mindful of their former Addreſſes, to oppoſe the growing Power of France, reſolv'd on the 23d of May, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, that he would be pleaſed to enter into a League Offenſive and Defenſive, with the States-General of the United Provinces, and to make ſuch other Alliances with ſuch other Confederates as his Majeſty ſhall think fit, againſt the Growth and Power of the French King, for preſervation of the Netherlands. And ſuch Addreſs being accordingly preſented, his Majeſty return'd for Anſwer, May 28. 'That they have in ſome parts of their Addreſs, entrenched on ſo undoubted a Right 'of the Crown, that he is confident, it will 'appear in no Age, that the Prerogative of 'making Peace and War hath been ſo dangerouſly invaded; That they do not con'tent themſelves with deſiring him to enter 'into ſuch Leagues as may be for the ſafety 'of the Kingdom, but they ſay what ſort of 'Leagues they muſt be, and with whom; 'that ſhould he ſuffer this Fundamental Po'wer of Peace, and War, to be ſo far invaded, 1677. 'as to have the manner and Circumſtances of 'Leagues to be preſcribed him by Parliament, 'no Prince or State would any longer believe, 'that the Sovereignty of England reſts in the 'Crown; wherefore they may reſt aſſured that 'no Condition ſhall make him depart from, 'or leſſen ſo eſſential a Part of the Monarchy: 'and he is willing to believe ſo well of this 'Houſe of Commons, that he is confident the ill 'Conſequences are not intended by them: Theſe 'are the Reaſons, why he can by no means 'approve of their Addreſs; yet, tho' they have 'declined to grant him that Supply, which is 'ſo neceſſary to the Ends of it, he will ſtill ap- 'ply himſelf by all the means he can, to let 'the World ſee his Care both for the Secu- 'rity and Satisfaction of his People. After this the two Houſes were adjorn'd to the 16th of July, and from thence to the 3d of December. Before which day the King was pleaſed to Publiſh by Proclamation, that the Parliament ſhould be adjorn'd from thence to the 4th of April following. But when both Houſes met on the 3d of December, in order to adjorn themſelves accordingly, they received a Meſſage from the King, that tho' he intended they ſhould adjorn to April, he hath now weighty Reaſons to meet them ſooner, and therefore order'd their adjornment but to the 15th of January; and then by another Meſſage on the 15th a further adjornment to the 28th of the ſame Month.

Here we ought to look back a little, to remember an Act of great Juſtice and Reputation to the Memory of this King. It has been already obſerved, that in the year 1671. His Majeſty fonnd himſelf neceſſitated to ſtop, or poſtpone Payments out of his Exchequer; and not being enabled ſince that time, to pay off thoſe Debts which he had borrowed of Sir Robert Viner, and ſeveral other Eminent Goldſmiths, and through their hands, of almoſt an infinite Number of his Subjects, ſome of whom lay under great Difficulties (almoſt to their utter Ruine) he was this year pleaſed, by his Letters-Patents, dated 30th day of April in the 29th year of his Reign, to grant to the ſaid Reſpective Goldſmiths, their Heirs and Aſſigns (and to ſuch of their Creditors, as ſhall take Aſſignments) an Annual Sum or Payment out of the Exchequer, anſwerable in value yearly to the Intereſt of their reſpective Debts, at the Rate of 6*l. per Cent per Ann.* And Charged it on the hereditary Part of the Exciſe. This gave great Satisfaction, and had done more, if the Payments had been continued, as the King intended.

Nor was his Majeſty unmindful of Preſerving Flanders, and making Alliances to that Purpoſe. He apply'd himſelf therefore this Summer, to the Raiſing of Forces, and in a ſhort time had a brave Army on Foot, ready to be tranſported.

Alſo this Summer a Match was concluded between the Prince of Orange, and the Lady Mary eldeſt Daughter to the Duke of York. The ſaid Prince landing at Harwich on the 9th of October, Accompanyed with a great many Perſons of the Chiefeſt Quality in Holland: The Marriage was on Sunday the 4th of November (his own, and his Mothers Birthday) privately celebrated at St. James's, by the Biſhop of London, in the Preſence of his Majeſty, who gave the Bride, their Royal Highneſſes, and ſome of the Chief Nobility. This was Accompanyed with mighty Rejoycing all over the three Kingdoms. So alſo in Holland.

Three days after this Marriage, her Royal Highneſs the Dutcheſs of York, was happily brought to bed of a Son, who was the next day Baptized by the Name of Charles, the King, and the Prince of Orange, being Godfathers. He had the Title of Duke of Cambridge, but lived no longer than the 12th of December, and then dyed ſuddenly, about a 11 of the clock in the Morning.

On the 28th of January 167⅞. The Parliament met; the King in his Speech to both Houſes acquainted them. 'That for their ſa- 'tisfaction he had made ſuch Alliances with 'Holland as are for the preſervation of Flan- 'ders, and which cannot fail of that end, un- 'leſs prevented by the want of due Aſſiſtances 'to ſupport thoſe Alliances, or by the ſmall 'regard the Spaniards themſelves muſt have to 'their own Preſervation; That he cannot ſuſ- 'pect the want of aſſiſtance by reaſon of their 'repeated Engagements; that a War, which 'muſt be the neceſſary conſequence of thoſe 'Alliances, ought neither to be Proſecuted by 'halves, nor want ſuch aſſurances of perſeve- 'rance as may give him encouragement to per- 'ſue it; that He had uſed all means poſſible 'by a Mediation to have procured an Honou- 'rable and ſafe Peace, knowing how prefera- 'ble ſuch a Peace would have been to any War; 'that this Kingdom muſt neceſſarily own the 'vaſt benefits it has received by Peace, whilſt 'its Neighbours only have yet ſmarted by the 'War; but finding a Peace no longer to be 'hoped for by fair means, it ſhall not be his 'fault if it be not obtain'd by force; that for 'this reaſon he has recall'd his Troops out of 'France, and conſider'd that we cannot have 'leſs Forces on our part than 90 Sail of Ca- 'pital Ships, and 30 or 40 Thouſand Land- 'men; that he is contented that ſuch Monys 'as ſhall be given to theſe uſes, be appropri- 'ated as ſtrictly as they can deſire; that he 'hath directed ſuch larger dimenſions for the 'Building the New Ships as will coſt him a- 'bove 100000*l.* more than the Act allows; 'that for the repairing the Old Fleet and buy- 'ing Stores, &c. he hath expended a great 'deal more than 200000*l.* He hath born the 'charge of a Rebellion in Virginia, and a New 'War with Algiers; that he ſtands engaged 'to the Prince of Orange for his Neece's Portion; 'that he cannot be able to maintain his con- 'ſtant neceſſary Eſtabliſhments without the 'New Impoſition on Wines be continued; that 'to remove all ſorts of Jealouſies he hath Mar- 'ried his Neece to the Prince of Orange, thereby 'giving full aſſurances never to ſuffer that Prin- 'ces Intereſts to be ruin'd, if aſſiſted as he 'ought to be, to preſerve them; that he ex- 'pects from them a plentiful ſupply ſuitable 'to ſuch great occaſions; and that theſe con- 'ſiderations being of the greateſt Importance 'that ever concern'd the Kingdom, he would 'therefore 1678.

1678. 'therefore have them enter immediately upon 'them without ſuffering any other buſineſs 'whatſoever to divert 'em. The Houſe of Commons on the 30th of January, the Anniverſary Faſt, Voted 70000 l. for a ſolemn Burial of his late Majeſty King Charles I. and to erect a Monument for the ſaid Prince of Glorious Memory, the ſaid Sum to be rais'd by a Two Months Tax, to begin at the expiration of the preſent Tax for Building Ships. This, tho' in truth, an Affair to which the Nation has ſtood obliged this 29 Years, yet being never mention'd till yeſterday, (when firſt moved in the Houſe of Commons by the Lord O Brian, Eldeſt Son to the Earl of Tumond, and whoſe Son lately had Marry'd my Lord Treaſurers Daughter) ſeem'd ſurprizing.

The next Day being the 31ſt of January, the Houſe of Commons in return to the Kings Speech, preſented their Addreſs to His Majeſty at White hall, containing, 'Thanks for 'his care expreſt for the preſervation and En'couragement of the Proteſtant Religion in con'cluding a Marriage between his Neece and the 'Prince of Orange; beſeech him not to admit 'of any Treaty of Peace whereby the French 'King ſhall be left in poſſeſſion of any greater 'Dominion or power than is left him by the 'Pyrenean Treaty; that both on our parts and 'the parts of the Confederates, no Ship nor 'Veſſel may be admitted to come out of any 'Port of France, but that the Ships and Men be 'ſeized and the Goods deſtroy'd; that he would 'pleaſe to provide that none of the parties who 'ſhall joyn in this Alliance and Confederacy a'gainſt France, depart from the ſaid Alliance, till 'the ſaid King be reduced to the ſaid Treaty; 'that neither we nor the Confederates admit any 'Trade with France, or ſuffer any Goods to 'be Imported from thence on pain of Forfei'ture; that His Majeſty in making ſuch Con'federacies as neceſſary for attaining theſe ends, 'ſhall never doubt of the affections of the Peo'ple: Laſtly they renew their former proteſtati'ons and engagements to perſevere in the pro'ſecution of the ſaid War, and when he ſhall 'be pleas'd to Impart ſuch Alliances and Confe'deracies to them in Parliament, they ſhall be will'ing to give ſuch ready aſſiſtances upon all occa'ſions as may bring the War to a happy conclu'ſion.

To this Addreſs the King return'd the following Anſwer in Writing, which was read in the Houſe of Commons the 4th of February. 'That he was not a little ſurpriz'd to 'find ſo much inſerted there of what ſhould 'not be, and ſo little of what ſhould; that 'his Speech was to both Houſes joyntly, and 'the return ought to be from both; That in 'the Addreſs of the 20th of May laſt, they did 'invite him to a League offenſive and defen'ſive with Holland againſt the French King, 'and for the preſerving the Spaniſh Netherlands, 'and upon his Declaration of ſuch Alliances 'aſſured ſuch ſpeedy aſſiſtances as may fully 'Anſwer the occaſion; that he hath made 'ſuch Alliances, yet finds no return but the 'Old promiſes upon new Conditions, and ſo 'He may be uſed to Eternity, ſhould he ſeem 'ſatisfied with ſuch proceedings; that on the '28th of May laſt, he told you how highly he 'was offended at the great Invaſion of his 'Prerogative, yet you take no notice of it, 'but add to your former ill conduct new Invaſions; you deſire him to oblige his Confe'derates never to conſent to a Peace till the 'moſt Chriſtian King be reduced to the Pyre'nean Treaty, a Determination ſitting only 'for God Almighty, ſince none but He 'can tell the terms of Peace, who knows the 'event of War; You deſire him not to ſuffer 'a Ship of theirs to come from France under pain 'of Confiſcation, not excepting Alliet, Prince, 'or Ambaſſadors (if any among them); that 'he does not believe any Aſſembly of Men 'ever gave ſo great and publick a provocation 'to the whole World without ſo much as 'conſidering to provide one Ship, Regiment, 'or penny towards juſtifying it; that however 'if by your aſſiſtance he may be put into 'Arms ſufficient for ſuch a Work, He will 'not be weary till Chriſtendom be reſtored to 'ſuch a Peace, that it ſhall not be in the power 'of any one Prince to diſturb it; that the 'Rights of making and managing War and 'Peace are in His Majeſty; and if you think 'he will depart from any part of that Right, 'you are miſtaken; the Reins of Government 'are in his hands, and he hath the ſame care 'to preſerve them there, as to preſerve his 'own Perſon; he keeps both for his Peoples 'protection and ſafety; and that if this Houſe 'will encourage His Majeſty to go further 'in Alliances, you muſt conſider of raiſing 'ſpeedy ſupplies; for from the conſideration of 'thoſe he muſt take his meaſures.

And now the Earl of Shaftsbury releas'd from his Confinement in the Tower, where he had been cloſe Priſoner ever ſince laſt Spring, and reſtored to his place in Parliament, having firſt made his Submiſſion at the Lords Bar, the next day ſate in the Houſe of Lords.

On the 27th. The City was not a little Alarm'd with the French Kings taking of Ghent, and the great danger of ſeveral other places of note in Flanders.

About a Fortnight after, amongſt other Bills, there paſs'd An Act for raiſing Money by a Poll, to enable His Majeſty to enter into an actual War againſt the French King. And alſo an Addreſs was agreed upon to be preſented to his Majeſty from a Committee of the whole Houſe, humbly to adviſe His Majeſty, 'That for the ſa'tisfying the Minds of his good Subjects, who 'are much diſquieted with the Apprehenſions 'of the Dangers ariſing from the growth and 'power of the French King, and for the en'couragement of the Princes and States confe'derated againſt him, that his Majeſty would 'be graciouſly pleas'd to proclaim, and enter 'into an actual War againſt the ſaid French 'King: And that this Houſe will ſtand by and 'aſſiſt his Majeſty with ſuch Supplies as ſhall 'be neceſſary for the carrying on ſo Royal an 'Undertaking. And becauſe his Majeſty's En'deavours, by way of Mediation, have not pro'duc'd the deſir'd Effects, that therefore he 'would preſently diſmiſs the French Ambaſſa'dors,

'dors, and recall his from France and Nime-

Wedneſday 27th of March, the Parliament was Adjourn'd by the Kings Order.

During the Interval a ſtrict Faſt is kept on Wedneſday the 10th of April in London, and the Wedneſday Fornight following through England, to implore Gods Bleſſing upon His Majeſty and his Kingdoms, and for the averting of Gods Judgments.

Monday the 29th of April the Houſes met again, the King and Lords in their Robes; My Lord Chancellor in a long Speech recited all the Addreſſes that they had made in relation to a War with France, what the King had already done in purſuance of the ſame, in joyning in an effectual League with the Confederates to that end, and how ready the King was to purſue their deſires, but that now he diſcovered the Dutch were entring upon a Treaty of Peace with the French King, and that without his conſent or privity, and therefore His Majeſty demands the advice of his Houſes how to proceed.

On Monday the 6th of May, the King returned a ſhort Anſwer to an Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons, voted on the ſaid laſt* Saturday, which contain'd their humble Advice, that he would forthwith enter into the preſent Alliance with the Confederates, and an Actual War with France, &c. To which, this Anſwer was read by one of the Secretaries of State, viz.

C. R.

HIS Majeſty having been acquainted with the Votes of the 4th Inſtant, is very much ſurpriz'd both with the Matter and Manner of them: but if His Majeſty had Exceptions to neither, yet His Majeſty having asked the Advice of both the Houſes, doth not think fit to give any Anſwer to any thing of that nature, till he hath a concurrent Advice of both Houſes.

Among which mentioned Votes of the 4th Inſtant, beſide the Advice aboveſaid, this was paſs'd by a Majority of 16 Voices, 'That the 'late Leagues made with the States-General of 'the United Provinces are not purſuant to the 'Addreſſes of this Houſe, nor conſiſtent with 'the Good and Safety of the Kingdom.

On Saturday the 11th of May the Commons preſented another Addreſs to the King, containing their humble Thanks to His Majeſty, for demanding their Advice: That accordingly they gave it; They beſeech him to communicate to them his Reſolutions thereupon: And whereas they conceive that the Inconveniencies and Dangers which the Kingdom now lies under, might totally, or in a great meaſure have been prevented, in caſe his Majeſty had accepted of the Advice by them given in their Addreſſes of the 26th of May laſt, and the 31. of January; That therefore he would pleaſe to remove thoſe Counſellors that adviſed him to give thoſe Anſwers which he did to the ſaid Addreſſes; That he would pleaſe to accept of this Petition in good part, as proceeding from Perſons heartily devoted to him, &c. In fine, That he would pleaſe to remove the Duke of Lauderdale from his Preſence and Councils. 1678.

Which being read, the King immediately returned Anſwer in theſe few words only: That he was much ſurprized at the Extravagancy of their Addreſs, and unwilling at preſent to give it ſuch a due Anſwer as it deſerves.

On the Monday following the King paſs'd ſeveral private Bills, and then cauſed the Parliament to be prorogued till Thurſday come ſevenight, being the 23d of this Inſtant May.

On the aforemention'd Thurſday the 23d of May, the Parliament met again, and the Houſe of Commons being ſent for by the Black Rod to attend his Majeſty in the Houſe of Lords, the King deliver'd his pleaſure to this effect: 'That he is reſolv'd, as far as he is able, to 'ſave Flanders, either by a War or Peace, 'which way he ſees moſt conducing; either 'ways he thinks it convenient to keep up his 'Army, and Navy at Sea, for ſome time, till a 'Peace be concluded, but leaves it to them to 'conſider of Supplies for their continuance or 'disbanding; and in either caſe not to diſcou-'rage ſo many worthy and gallant Gentle-'men, who have offer'd their Lives and Ser-'vice to their Country, and that in purſuit of 'the Parliament's Advice and Reſolution: That a 'Branch of his Revenue is now expiring, ano-'ther part of it is cut off by a Clauſe in the 'Poll-Bill; That he has borrow'd 200000 l. 'upon the Exciſe at their requeſt, of all which 'they are to conſider; That he hath no In-'tentions but of good to them and his people, 'nor ever ſhall; Deſires they will not drive 'him into Extremities, which muſt end ill both 'for them and him, and (which is worſt of all) 'for the Nation; deſires to prevent all Diſor-'ders and Miſchiefs that may befal by our diſ-'agreement; but in caſe any do, leaves it to 'God Almighty to judge who is the occaſion of 'it: In fine, That he will not for the future 'ſuffer the Courſe and Method of paſſing Laws 'to be chang'd, by tacking together ſeveral 'Matters in one Bill.

This was immediately follow'd by a long but excellent Speech of my Lord Chancellor, enlarging to the like purpoſe, and concluding with ſtrong perſwaſions to a compoſure of all Diſguſts.

Monday, May 27. Reſolved in the Houſe of Commons, That the Houſe taking into conſideration the ſtate of his Majeſty's Affairs, and the great Charge and Burthen that his Majeſty and the Nation lies under by the Army now in being, are humbly of opinion, That if his Majeſty pleaſe to think fit to enter into the War againſt the French King, this Houſe is, and always will be ready to ſupport and aſſiſt him in that War; but if otherwiſe, That they will proceed to the Conſideration of providing for the ſpeedy diſbanding of the Army. The Houſe further order'd, That the Members of this Houſe who are of his Majeſty's privy Council, do acquaint the King with theſe Votes, and pray his Majeſty's Anſwer.

1670. To this the King returned an Answer, which was read in the Houſe of Commons the next day; it contained, 'That the French King 'hath made ſuch Offers of a Ceſſation till the '27th of July, as his Majeſty doth not only 'believe will be accepted, but will end in a 'General Peace; yet ſince that is not certain, 'he does not think it prudent to diſmiſs either 'Fleet or Army before that time, nor doth he 'think it will add much to the charge, in re'gard the raiſing Money, and paying them off, 'would take up that time, were they to be 'disbanded as ſpeedily as poſſibly: In the mean 'time he deſires Money for their ſubſiſtence, 'that as hitherto they have been the moſt or'derly Army that ever came together, they may 'be encourag'd to continue ſo; and concludes 'with reminding the Houſe of the 200000 l. 'formerly mention'd in his Speech, which he 'wants for his Houſhold.

The next day of ſitting, being Thurſday the 30th of May, the Commons vote unanimouſly, That all Forces rais'd ſince the 29th of September laſt (except thoſe tranſported to Foreign Plantations) be forthwith paid off and disband'ed, and that they conſider of a Supply for that purpoſe.

The laſt of May, being the firſt day of Trinity Term, Sir William Scroggs, at that time Puiſne Judge, in the Common Pleas, took his place in the Kings-Bench, as Lord Chief Juſtice of England, on the removal of Sir Richard Rainsford, who reſigned a few days before; and was ſucceeded in the Common-Pleas by Baron Bartu, and Serjeant Bramſton promoted to his place in the Exchequer.

June 4th the Commons vote 200000 l. to be raiſed by a Monthly Tax, in ſix Months, after the Land-Tax now in being be expired; with a Clauſe, That this be for the disbanding of the Army, by the end of this preſent June. The next day they voted the King 200000 l. more, towards the defraying the Expences of the Fleet. Soon after which, the King ſent them a Meſſage by one of the Secretaries of State, containing, 'That his Mind was ſtill 'the ſame with what he deliver'd the 23d of 'May laſt, That the Army and Fleet ought to 'be kept up till the expected Peace be conclu'ded: He alſo recommended to their Conſide'ration, whether it were not diſhonourable for 'him to recal his Forces in Flanders from thoſe 'Towns which he had taken into his protecti'on, before they could provide themſelves of 'other Succours? Hereupon they extend the time (as to the Forces in Flanders) to the 27th of July.

The Tueſday following the King ſent for the Commons up to the Lords Houſe, and told 'em in a long Speech, 'That the ſeaſon requiring 'a Receſs by the middle of next Month at far'theſt, it is convenient that we part fairly, and 'with a perfect confidence of one another: 'Therefore he opens his Heart freely to them 'in ſome particulars of neareſt concern, more 'eſpecially as to the Peace of Spain and Hol'land, in which Peace his part will be not only 'that of a Mediator, but alſo to give his War'ranty in it: That Spain writes word, that un'leſs England bears the charge of maintaining 'Flanders, even after the Peace, they will not 'be in a Condition to ſupport it long; That 'to this end it is neceſſary not only to keep up 'our Navy at Sea, but to give the World 'ſome aſſurance of being well united at home; 'That tho' the Houſe of Commons may think 'ſuch a Peace as ill a Bargain as a War, becauſe 'it will coſt them Money, yet if they ſeriouſly 'conſider that otherwiſe Flanders had been loſt, 'perhaps by this time, he believes they will 'give much greater Sums than this will coſt, 'rather than the ſingle Town of Oſtend ſhould 'be in the French hands, and 40 of their Men 'of War in ſo good a Haven over againſt the 'River's Mouth; That we cannot but be plea'ſed to underſtand the Reputation we have 'gain'd abroad, by having in 40 days raiſed 'an Army of 30000 Men, and prepar'd a 'Navy of 90 Ships; Therefore if they de'ſire to keep up the Honour of the Crown at 'home, and look to the ſafety of the Balance 'of Affairs abroad, and purſue the War of 'Algiers; if they deſire he ſhould paſs any part 'of his Life in quiet, and all the reſt in confi'dence and kindneſs with them and other fu'ture Parliaments; if ſo, that they muſt find 'a way not only to ſettle for his Life his Re'venue as at Chriſtmas laſt, but alſo to add a 'new Fund of 300000 l. per annum, upon 'which he will paſs an Act to ſettle 50000 l. 'upon the Navy and Ordnance; and ſhall be 'alſo always ready to conſent to all ſuch Laws 'as they ſhall propoſe for the good of the Na'tion: Then he reminds 'em to enable him to 'keep his word with the Prince of Orange, in 'the payment of his Neice's Portion, which is '40000 l. the firſt payment being now due 'and demanded by him.

This Speech being ended, the Commons returned back, and Voted his Majeſty the Thanks of the Houſe for his gracious Expreſſions in his Speech.

Monday the 25th of July the Parliament was prorogued to the firſt of Auguſt, the King having then paſs'd the following Bills: 1. An Act for granting a Supply to His Majeſty of 619388 l. 11 s. 9 d. for Diſbanding the Army, and other Uſes therein mentioned. 2. An Act for granting an Additional Duty to his Majeſty upon Wines for Three Years. 3. An Act to enable Creditors to recover their Debts of the Executors and Adminiſtrators of Executors in their own wrong. 4. An Act for Burying in Woollen. 5. An Act for admeaſurement of Keels and Boats carrying Coals. 6. An Act for Reviving a former Act of the 13*th of this King*, ch. 2. for avoiding unneceſſary Suits and Delays, and for continuance of another Act of 22 & 23 Car. II. ch. 10. touching Inteſtates Eſtates. 7. An Act for further Relief and Diſcharge of poor Priſoners for Debt. 8. An Act touching Highways. 9. An Act for preſervation of Fiſhing in the River Severn.

But the Parliament continued under ſeveral Prorogations till the 21ſt of October.

And here it will not be amiſs to take a ſhort view of our Neighbors Affairs, eſpecially in relation to the Congreſs of Nimeguen, in order to the General Peace, in which we bore no ſmall part. The French King, notwithſtanding the the Ceſſation of Arms, ſtill endeavours to enlarge his Conqueſts in Flanders, and to poſſeſs himſelf of ſeveral ſtrong Towns. But to prevent him, the Prince of Orange had march'd his Army to the Relief of Mons, at this time block'd up by the French King's General, the Duke of Luxemburg. His Highneſs, accompanied with the Duke of Monmouth and Earl of Oſſory, advanc'd near the Enemy's Camp at St. Denys, making a fierce Attack, and after a briſk Diſpute, forced the French (though very advantageouſly poſted) to diſlodge, and poſſeſſing himſelf of their Ground, compell'd 'em to fly in great diſorder to their main Body. The Duke of Luxemburg, notwithſtanding he had upon the firſt approach (on preſumption that he lay encamp'd in a place which was impregnable) laugh'd at and derided the vain Attempt, as he imagin'd, of forcing his Camp, yet in ſpight of many Diſadvantages from an Army drawn ſo ſuddenly together, ſo haſty a March as that of the Dutch, and Poſts taken with ſo much Skill, and fortified with ſo much Induſtry by the French, as was believed, the Prince upon the 14th of Auguſt attack'd them with a Reſolution and Vigor that at firſt ſurpriz'd 'em, and after an obſtinate and bloody Fight ſo diſorder'd them, that tho' the Night prevented the End of the Action, yet it was generally concluded, that if he had been at liberty next day to purſue it with Seven or Eight Thouſand Engliſh that were ready to joyn his Army, he muſt in all appearance not only have reliev'd Mons, but made ſuch an impreſſion into France as had been often deſign'd, but never attempted ſince the War began. But the morning after the Battel, the Prince receiv'd from the States an Advice of the Peace having been ſign'd at Nimeguen; and thereupon immediately ſent a Deputy with the News of it to Monſieur Luxemburg. 'Tis certain, that the Prince could not have ended the War with greater Glory, nor with greater Spight, to ſee ſuch a mighty Occaſion arreſted out of his Hand by the ſudden and unexpected Signing of the Peace, which he had aſſur'd the States would not have conſented to without the Spaniards. Yet upon the certain News of it he return'd to the Hague, and left the States to purſue their own meaſures, our Court not only taking no part, but diſowning to have had any ſhare in the Peace between France and Holland.

However, the States having thus concluded a ſeparate Peace, and glad they were got out of a War that ruin'd their Trade, and drain'd their Money, did what lay in their power to promote a General Peace. And tho' the King of England was offer'd by ſeveral of the Allies to be Arbiter as well as Mediator in the preſent Differences, and was known by them all to have it in his power to enjoyn what Terms he pleas'd upon France, and balance the whole Treaty, yet choſe only to perform the Offices of a bare Mediation, and to avoid the Parties ſubmitting their Differences to his determination.

But now the Miniſters of the Confederates, eſpecially thoſe of Denmark and Brandenburg, employ'd their utmoſt Vigor to prevent the Spaniards agreeing to their part of the Peace, which the Dutch had accepted for them, ſaying, That what was left the Spaniards in Flanders by thoſe Terms, was indefenſible, and could only ſerve to exhauſt their Strength and Treaſure to no purpoſe; the Deſign of France herein being only to break this preſent Confederacy by the ſeparate Treatiſe, and ſo leave the Spaniards abandon'd by their Allies upon the next Invaſion. Nay, Holland remain'd yet doubtful, whether they ſhould ratify what their Ambaſſadors had done, till the Treaty with Spain ſhould be concluded; the Spaniards at the ſame time being irreſolute whether they ſhould accept the Peace mediated by the Dutch, and the Emperor being for carrying on the War; altho the French at that time retir'd with their Army from before Mons, and ſeem'd to perſue the Peace with great eagerneſs. 1678.

But whilſt there were ſeveral Wiſhes and Conjectures upon this Conjuncture, Mr. Hyde arriv'd at the Hague from the King of England, to acquaint the States how much he was ſurpriz'd at the News of their Ambaſſadors having Sign'd a particular Treaty with the France, without including Spain, and without any Guaranty given for the Evacuation of the Towns, within the time requiſite; as alſo complaining of the new Pretenſions the French had at the ſame time advanc'd; and that therefore for theſe Reaſons, he believed the late Treaty in July, between His Majeſty and the States ought to take effect, the Caſe being fallen out, againſt which that was provided, and both Parties being thereby obliged to enter joyntly into the War againſt France. That if the States would hereupon refuſe to ratify the Treaty their Miniſters had ſign'd at Nimeguen, His Majeſty offer'd immediately to declare War againſt France in all Points according to the ſaid Treaty.

All the while theſe Matters were in Motion at the Hague, the King's Forces were every day tranſporting in Flanders, as if the War were to be carried on with the greateſt Certainty and Vigour; which gave Encouragement to thoſe in Holland that diſliked the Peace, and rais'd ſuch confidence in the Spaniards, that they form'd all the Difficulties and Delays they could with the Confederate Miniſters at Nimeguen, for retarding the Treaty there between that Crown and France, upon ſecurity that Holland would not ratify theirs till that of Spain were agreed to; and that in the mean time they might be drawn into the War by the violent Diſpoſitions which now appear'd in England, as well as in the Confederates to continue it.

But France thought the Conjuncture too Important to let it hover long in ſuch Uncertainties, and therefore diſpatch'd an Expreſs to their Ambaſſadors, with power to remit all the Differences, which obſtructed the Concluſion of the Treaty between them and Spain, to the Arbitrage of the States themſelves.

This procedure gain'd ſomuch Confidence towards the States, and appear'd ſuch a Teſtimony of the French King's Sincerity in the late Advances he had made toward a Peace, that it had all the Effect deſign'd by it; and the 1678. Treaties between France and Spain, were sign'd by the 10th of September. Whereupon the Dutch Ratifications were exchang'd with the usual Form.

Denmark and Brandenburg were not yet come in; and the Emperor tho' inclin'd to a General Peace, yet seem'd unwilling to suffer the Terms of it to be impos'd on him.

But during this time, the French Troops made Incursions into the richest Parts of Flanders, and exacted so great Contributions, and made such Ravages where they were oppos'd, that the Spanish Netherlands were more ruin'd between the Signing of the Peace, and the Exchange of the Ratifications, than they had been in so much time during the whole Course of the War.

The great Calamities of the Subjects in Flanders began at length to quicken the Spaniards Pace; and the Embroilments of England, upon the Subject of the Plot, took up the Minds both of Court and Parliament, and gave 'em little leisure to think on Foreign Affairs.

After many fruitless Contests by the Imperial Ambassadors and others, the Spanish Ratifications at length arriv'd, and about the latter end of January 167$\frac{8}{9}$ all things were concluded, and prepar'd to be sign'd, which was effected about three days after.

The remaining part of the General Peace, viz. That of Denmark, Brandenburg, &c. was left to be made at the Mercy of France.

Thus Affairs abroad were left at present in a General Peace, and France, to persue what she could gain upon her Neighbours, by her pretensions of Dependencies, which she prosecuted in such rigorous Methods both against the Emperor and Spain, as render'd her Acquisitions after a Peace greater, at least in consequence, than what she had gain'd by the War; since not only great Tracts of Country, upon the Account of Dependencies, but Strasburg and Luxemburg fell as Sacrifices to her Ambition, without any Neighbouring Prince or State concerning themselves in their Relief.

And now let us return to England, where the Cloud seem'd to gather, and Contrary Winds presag'd such a Storm, as might endanger the Ship whatsoever hand were at Helm.

On Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, the 28th 29th and 30th of September and 1st of October 1678. the Privy-Council sate twice a Day, The business a Popish Plot discover'd by one Titus Oats, who had been educated at Cambridge, and admitted into Orders in the Church of England; but afterwards was (seemingly at least) reconcil'd to the Church of Rome, who going to St. Omers, was entred into the English College there, and afterwards being sent into Spain, ingratiated himself with the Jesuits and Priests in those Parts with a Design (as he alledg'd) to discover what they were Plotting against England: And returning about this time, inform'd the King of a Plot carrying on by the Jesuits and others of the Roman-Catholick Religion, against his Person and Life, the Protestant-Religion and the Government of the Kingdom. And to gain the better Credit, he nam'd divers Persons of Quality ingag'd in the Design; and what Instruments had been provided for his Assassination; affirming, That when he was once taken off, the remaining part of the Work was to be carried on by Arms, Foreign Assistance, and such other Expedients as they should judge necessary for the Success of their Enterprize. Hereupon several were examin'd and committed, viz. Sir George Wakeman, the Queen's Physician; Mr. Coleman, the Dutchess of York's Secretary; Mr. Langhorn, of the Inner-Temple; Thomas Whitebread, Provincial of the Jesuits in England, John Gaven, Anthony Turner, William Ireland, William Marshal, William Rumly, James Corker, Thomas Pickering, Jesuits, Popish Priests and Monks, with divers others.

This Discovery of a Plot opening every day more and more, the aforesaid Mr. Coleman and Mr. Langhorn were committed close Prisoners, with several others, their Studies search'd, their Papers seiz'd and sent to White-hall.

And for the better corroborating the said Oats's Testimony, there came in afterwards divers other Witnesses, viz. William Bedloe, formerly Servant to the Lord Bellasis, but afterwards imploy'd in carrying Letters beyond the Seas for the Jesuits; Stephen Dugdale, who had been Servant to the Lord Aston; one Smith, who had been a Romish Priest; Thomas Dangerfield, Miles Prance and several others.

On the appointed 21st of October, the Houses met: The Kings Speech contain'd these words only, concerning the Plot.——'I have been 'informed of a Design against my Person by 'Jesuites of which I shall forbear any Opi'nion, lest I may seem to say too much, or 'too little, but leave the matter to the Law —— The Chancellor on the same Head had these Expressions. —— 'And tho' His Majesty doth 'in no sort prejudg the Persons accused, yet 'the strict enquiry into this matter, hath been 'a means to Discover so many other unwar'rantable Practices of theirs, that His Majesty 'hath reason to look to 'em. The Examination of this Plot, and the concurrent Murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey employ'd the Commons so assiduously, that towards the beginning of this Session they sate whole Days, from Morning till late at Night. The Product was a Fast Voted; the minutes and Votes of the House of Commons forbid to be divulg'd; several Lords Committed, Bellasis, Arundel of Warder, Powis, Stafford, Petre, Castlemain, &c. Soon after this, came out a Proclamation, appointing a Fast through all England, on the 13th Day of November. Thursday the 31st of October, the House of Commons resolved, upon the Evidence that hath already appear'd to this House, this House is of Opinion, 'That 'there hath been and is an Execrable and 'Hellish Design contrived and carry'd on by Po'pish Recusants for Assassinating and Murther'ing the King, for Subverting the Government, 'and for destroying the Protstant Religion by 'Law Established.

The

The next day, in pursuance of an Address presented to the King by the Commons the Saturday before, came out a Proclamation, whereby all Papists, or such reputed, be banish'd ten miles from London and Westminster, to remove themselves by the 7th day of November, except Housholders, and they to take the Oaths or suffer the Penalties inflicted by Law. The same day the Commons in Parliament resolv'd, That an Address be made to the King, That the Trained-Bands of London, Westminster, and Surrey, be rais'd for preservation of his Majesty's Person, and the Parliament, during this Session.

On Monday the 4th of November came out an Order of the King in Council, proposing, That whoever can discover any Officer or Soldier in any of the King's Guards, Horse or Foot, who has taken the Oaths and Test, and since turn'd Papist, such Discoverer shall have 20*l.* for every man so discovered.

Monday the 4th of November it was moved in the House of Commons, That an Address be made to the King, to remove the Duke of York from his Presence and Councils; but the Debate was adjourn'd over to Friday following, at which time it being again moved, the Debate was again adjourn'd over to Thursday following. The next day, being Saturday the 9th of November, his Majesty went to the Lord's House in his Robes, and made a Speech to both Houses, wherein after he had return'd them his most hearty Thanks for their very great and extraordinary Care for preservation of his Person in this time of Danger, he told them, That he was as ready to joyn with them in all ways and means that may establish a firm Security to the Protestant Religion as their own Hearts can wish; and this not only during his Life, but in future Ages even to the end of the World: And therefore he is come to assure 'em, that whatsoever reasonable Bills they shall present to be pass'd into Laws to make 'em safe in the Reign of his Successor, so as they intend not to impeach the Right of Succession, nor the Descent of the Crown in the true Line; and also as they restrain not any Power or just Right of his Protestant Successor, such Bills shall find from him a ready Concurrence.

Monday the 18th of November, the House of Commons being inform'd, that Sir Joseph Williamson Secretary of State, had lately Countersigned several Commissions for Roman Recusant Officers, with a Non Obstante to the Oaths and Test, he was by the said House committed to the Tower. The next day the King sent for the Commons to attend him at the Banquetting-House, and told 'em, That tho' they Committed his Servant without acquainting him, yet he intends to be freer with them, and acquaint them with His Intentions to release his Secretary: which accordingly he did that day.

In the mean time Oats (the great Discoverer of the Plot) accuses the Queen; hereupon the King places a stricter Guard upon him than ever; but the Commons, Novemb. 29. order an Address to be made to his Majesty, That the said Oats be freed from his Restraint, attended by his own Servants, and that a competent Allowance be appointed for his Maintenance; and that the Queen, with all her Servants, and all Popish Recusants, or such suspected, be removed from Whitehall. 1678.

Saturday, Novemb. 30. the King had two Bills presented to him; one of which, viz. for Exclusion of all Popish Members to sit in either House of Parliament (with a Clause in favour of the Duke of York) he pass'd: The other, which was for raising a third part of the Militia, to be in constant Arms for a time, he refused; alledging, That that were to put the Militia out of his Power, which thing he would not do, no not for one hour: but if the Parliament will assist him with Money for that purpose, he will take care to raise such a part of the Militia, as shall secure the Peace of the Government, and his own Person.

On the 27th of November Mr. Coleman was arraigned and tryed at the aforesaid Bar, and condemned of High Treason. The Evidence was the aforemention'd Oats, and one Bedloe, and his own Letters; but the Tryal being in print, I shall take no farther notice of particulars. The King gave back all Mr. Coleman's Estate to his Wife and Children, and his Quarters to be buried.

Thursday, Decemb. 4th, the Commons Impeach'd the Lords Arundel of Warder, Bellasis, Powis, Petre, and Stafford, of Treason and other high Crimes and Misdemeanors, severally; which several Impeachments were carried up by five several Members of the House of Commons. Two days before the said Lords had been found guilty upon special Indictments to the same purpose by the Grand Jury of Middlesex, before special Commissioners sitting at Westminster; but now for some Reasons those Proceedings were waved, and it was thought more effectual to proceed by way of Impeachment before the House of Lords in Parliament.

Tuesday, December the 17th, Ireland, Pickering, and Graves were condemn'd of High Treason, as Conspirators in the Plot, but their Execution was respited for some time. At the same time Whitebread and Fenwick were arraign'd, but their Tryal put off till the 15th of January.

In the mean time the Parliament sit incessantly, without Adjournment these Holidays, but only for Christmas Eve and Christmas-Day; requiring a full appearance of all their Members not disabled, as well Lords as Commons; enjoyning all in Town not to depart under strict Penalties, and sending their Messengers for all absent in the Country.

But it pleas'd the King, on Monday the 30th of December, to prorogue both Houses till the 4th of February following.

During this Interval the Reports were various touching the next sitting; it being sometimes affirmed, that the Session was further prorogued till the 25. of February; then again, That the Parliament would certainly meet at the 4th of February, the day first appointed; till at last on the 24th day of January, the King was pleas'd to settle the variety of Rumor, and by his Proclamation then publish'd, absolutely to Dissolve this Parliament, promising however to issue out his Writs for a New one, by the 6th of March next following.

Thus

Thus ended this Parliament, having now been continued by ſeveral Prorogations and Adjournments 17 Years, 8 Months, and 17 days, being firſt called on the 8th day of May, Ann. Dom. 1661.

1679. In further proſecution of thoſe matters diſcover'd the laſt year, Green the Cuſhion-man at Somerſet-houſe Chappel, Berry the Queen's Porter there, and Hill Dr. Godden's Man, were on the 10th day of February tryed at the Kings Beneh Bar for the Murther of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey; which three being convicted chiefly on the Evidence of Miles Prance, a Goldſmith, were found guilty, and having on the next day received ſentence of Condemnation to be hang'd for the ſaid Murder, Green and Hill were executed accordingly at Tyburn, Feb. 21. but Berry was repriev'd for a week longer, all three denying the Fact in as poſitive terms as could be: the laſt dying a Proteſtant, of which Perſwaſion he had formerly been before he enter'd into the Queen's Service.

About this time Sir Joſeph Williamſon ſurrender'd his Office of Secretary of State, to the Earl of Sunderland.

On the 28th of February 1678, the King directed the following Letter to the Duke of York:

I Have already given you my Reſolves at large, why I think it fit that you ſhould abſent your ſelf for ſome time beyond the Seas; As I am truly ſorry for the Occaſion, ſo may you be ſure I ſhall never deſire it longer than it will be abſolutely neceſſary for your Good and my Service: In the mean time I think it proper to give it you under my Hand, that I expect this Compliance from you, and deſire it may be as ſoon as conveniently you can. You may eaſily believe with what Trouble I write this to you, there being nothing I am more ſenſible of than the conſtant Kindneſs you have ever had for me. I hope you are as juſt to me to be aſſured, that no Abſence, nor any thing elſe, can ever change me from being truly and kindly

Yours,

C. R.

And accordingly, in purſuance of his Majeſty's Pleaſure, within few days after this, the Duke, Dutcheſs, and Family left the Kingdom, and retired for a while to the Hague, and from thence to Bruſſels.

The Parliament, which had been called according to the King's Promiſe on the Diſſolution of the laſt, meet at the appointed ſixth day of March. The King's Speech contained, That in order to the uniting the Minds of his Subjects both to himſelf and to one another, he had excluded the Popiſh Lords from their Seats in Parliament; cauſed the Execution of ſeveral Men, both for the Plot and Murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey; diſbanded as much of the Army as he could get Money to do; Above all, That he hath commanded his Brother to abſent himſelf, that ſo all Colour may be taken from malicious Men, of pretending any influence of Popiſh Councils; That he propoſes by this means to ſee whether the Proteſtant Religion, and the Peace of the Kingdom be as truly aimed at by others, as they are really intended by him; if ſo, they (the Members of Parliament) will lay aſide all private Animoſities, and employ their time upon the great Concerns of the Nation; That he will not ceaſe to make further ſearch into the Plot and the Murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, for which he deſires the aſſiſtance of both Houſes; That he has order'd the Penal Laws to be executed againſt Papiſts; Deſires their Aſſiſtance in raiſing Supplies for diſbanding the Army, and paying off the Fleet; and that they would ſome way make up the loſs he has ſuſtain'd by the Prohibition of French Wines and Brandy, which turns only to his prejudice, and the great advantage of the French; That it is neceſſary to have a Fleet at Sea, ſince our Neighbours are making Naval Preparations; That a Conſtant Eſtabliſhment might be made for the Navy; And concludes with his earneſt Deſires to have this a Healing Parliament, aſſuring them to defend with his Life the Proteſtant Religion and the Laws of the Kingdom, and expects to be by them defended from the Calumny as well as Danger of thoſe worſt of Men, who endeavour to render both him and his Government odious to his People.

The Chancellor's Speech did enlarge on the former Heads, reminding the two Houſes, as to the Plot, not to over-do their Buſineſs, and that by being too far tranſported with the Fears of Popery, they do not neglect the Opportunities of making ſober and laſting Proviſions againſt it, which (ſays he) are the only Hopes of the Papiſts, thus to ſee our Zeal out-run our Diſcretion, and that we our ſelves ſhould become the unhappy occaſion of making our own Councils abortive. P. 12. P. 14.

After this the Commons draw up an Addreſs to the King for a Faſt, in which alſo the Lords concur; and a Faſt was appointed by Proclamation dated Mar. 28, to be obſerv'd throughout the Nation on the 11th of April following.

On the 15th of April the Earl of Danby, being under the Diſpleaſure of the Commons, render'd himſelf to the Uſher of the Black Rod, and was committed by the Houſe of Lords to the Tower.

On the 16th of April, four of the five Popiſh Lords in the Tower, who had been on the 9th Inſtant impeach'd, gave in their Anſwers in perſon, viz. Powis, Stafford, Petre, and Arundel; but the Lord Bellaſis, being diſabl'd by the Gout, had his Anſwer receiv'd in Writing.

On the 20th of April, the King was pleas'd to declare to his Privy Council his Pleaſure to diſſolve them, and to conſtitute a new one, which for the future ſhould conſiſt of the conſtant number of 30 Members, of which 15 to be be certain, viz. 1. The Archbishop of Canterbury. 2. Bishop of London. 3. Lord Chancellor. 4. One of the Chief Justices. 5. The Admiral. 6. Master of the Ordnance. 7. Treasurer. 8. Chancellor of the Exchequer. 9. Privy Seal. 10. Master of the Horse. 11. Lord Steward. 12. Lord Chamberlain of the Houshold. 13. Groom of the Stool. And the two Secretaries. The other 15 elective at the Kings pleasure, 10 out of the Nobility, and 5 Commoners. Besides these, such Princes of the Blood as shall be at Court; A Lord President, and a Secretary of Scotland, but these uncertain. And according to this new Model, so many of them as were in Court did the next morning, being April 21st, meet in the Council Chamber, and were there Sworn Privy-Councellors. The same day his Majesty was pleased to acquaint the two Houses with what he had done, and that He was resolved in all His weighty and important Affairs, next to his great Council in Parliament, to be advised by this Privy Council.

About this time it was that the Bishops of Ely, Gloucester, and Bath and Wells, were accused for Papists; but the Accusation quickly fell, it being discovered to be a malicious contrivance to blast their Reputation, and fix a Scandal on the whole Order.

On the 25th of April the Earl of Danby, and the Lord Bellasis appear'd in Person at the Bar of the Lords House; tho the Earl putting in his Plea, and the Lord Bellasis his Answer. The next day the Lords Stafford, Arundel, and Powis, appear'd at the same Bar, and having retracted their former Pleas to their Impeachments (which appeared insufficient to the House of Commons) put in their further Answers to the same.

After this, on the last day of April His Majesty was pleased to send for the Commons, to attend Him in the House of Lords, and acquaint 'em by the mouth of the Lord Chancellor, 'That he was ready to agree to any 'Laws to secure Religion, so the Discent of 'the Crown in the Right Line be not defeated, 'and therefore he is willing that a Provision 'be made, First to distinguish a Papist from a 'Protestant Successor, then to limit the Author'rity of the First in these particulars, viz. that 'all Church preferment may be confer'd on 'Pious and Learned Protestants; That there 'may not want a Parliament on the Kings 'Death, but that the Parliament then in being, 'or the last that sate, should at such time 'reassemble without any new Summons or 'Election; That during the Reign of any 'Popish Successor, no Privy Counciller, no 'Judge at the Common Law, or in Chancery, shall be put in, or displaced but by Au'thority of Parliament; That none but Pro'testants be Justices of Peace; so also for 'Lord Lieutenants, Deputy Leiutenants and 'Officers in the Navy, not to be put in or re'moved but by Authority of Parliament; 'concluding that it is hard to invent any o'ther restraint to be put on a Popish Succes'sor; yet if any thing else can occur to the 'Wisdom of the Parliament whereby to se'cure Religion, and Liberty, without defeat- 1679.
'ing the Right of Succession it self, that His 'Majesty is most ready to consent to it.

After the Consideration of this Speech had been Adjorn'd over from time to time; 'It 'was at last Resolved on the 11th of May 'in the House of Commons in defence of 'the Kings Person and the Protestant Reli'gion, that they will stand by His Majesty 'with their Lives and Fortunes; and that if 'His Majesty should come by any violent 'Death (which God forbid) that they will 'revenge it to the utmost upon the Papists. And according to this Vote they drew up an Address on the 14th, with this varation in the form of Words, viz. 'We shall be ready 'to Revenge upon the Papists, any violence of'fered [by them] to your Sacred Majesty.

Further then this they took no notice of the Kings Resolution expresst in the said Speech; but contrary to that Clause which related to the Succession, on the 15th of May, they brought in a Bill to Disable the Duke of York to Inherit the Imperial Crown of England, which being Read the first time on the said 15th of May, was on the 21st read again and Commited to a Committee of the whole House; yet the House divided on the Question. Yeas 207. Noes 128. But the Parliament being soon after Prorogued, it proceeded no further, at that time.

On the 6th of May it was ordered in the House of Lords, that Saturday next be appointed for the Earl of Danby's Plea to be argued, and that the five Lords in the Tower be tryed this Day Sennight: With which Orders they acquainted the Commons the next Day, and that their Lordships had appointed an Address to be made to His Majesty to appoint a Lord Steward for the said Tryals. The Commons well satisfied with these proceedings, desire that a Committee of both Houses may be nominated to consider of the most proper ways and methods of proceeding upon Impeachments, according to the usage of Parliaments. But the Lords refused to agree to the Proposal as inconformable to the Rules and Orders of proceedings of their House, which is and ever must be render in matters relating to their Judicature. Upon this Answer the Commons resolve (May 9.) That no Commoner whatsoever presume to maintain the validity of the Pardon pleaded by the Earl of Danby, without the leave of this House first had; and that the Persons so doing shall be acounted Betrayers of the Liberties of the Commons of England. After this it seems that the Lords did recede from their former resolution, for on the 11th of May, they acquainted the Commons by Message, That they had appointed a Committee consisting of Twelve Lords, to joyn with a Committee of the House of Commons to consider of propositions and circumstances in relation to the aforesaid Tryals.

Which joint Committee of both Houses meeting, they disagreed about the Bishops being present at the Tryals. For the Lords having resolved in their House, That the Lords Spiritual have right to stay in Court in Capital 1679. pital Cases till the Court proceed to the Vote of Guilty or Not Guilty: Hereupon the Commons resolved on the other side to insist upon it, that the Lords Spiritual ought not to have any Vote in any Proceedings upon Impeachments against the Lords in the Tower. The two Houses seeming to differ on this point, the Bishops thought to find out a Medium, and on the 16th of May, desired leave of the House of Lords, that they might withdraw themselves from the Tryals of the said Impeached Lords, with the Liberty of entring their usual Protestations.

But this did not satisfie the House of Commons; who on the 24th of May Resolve that they cannot proceed to the Tryal of the Five Lords before Judgment be given on the Earl of Danby's Pardon, and in the point of the Bishops Voting in Capital Offences. For which they drew up Reasons, and the 26th of May delivered the same to the Lords at a Conference: which being very large, and in print, I shall here omit.

And in this posture did the Publick Transactions in Parliament appear on the 27th day of May, at which time it pleas'd His Majesty to Prorogue both Houses until the 14th day of August next.

About this time the King was pleased to remove Sir John Robinson from being Lieutenant of the Tower, and confer the Place on Captain Cheek.

The Troubles in Scotland, which broke out in this Month, gave occasion of much discourse, and no little alarm in England. They begun in the Barbarous Murder of Dr. Sharp Archbishop of St. Andrews, on the 3d of May, as he was travelling from Edenburgh to his own Residency. But the Assassins stop not at Murder, for soon after this they gather into a Body in the Western parts of Scotland, and fall into open Rebellion and Treason; on the 29th, a Party of the Rebles well mounted and armed, came to Rugland, proclaim the Covenant, and burnt the following Acts of Parliament, viz. 'The Act concerning the Kings Supremacy. The Rescissory Act (by which all the Mock-Laws, made in the times of the late Anarchy, were repeal'd.) 'The Act for establishing 'Episcopacy: And the Act appointing the 'Anniversary of the 29th of May. They also publisht an Insolent Declaration full of Treason; their Army increased daily to such a considerable number, that the King Commissioned the Duke of Monmouth as Generalissimo to suppress the Insurrection, which not long after, with the assistance of the Loyal Gentry and Heretors of that Nation, he hid in one Battle; killing some, and taking several Hundreds of Prisoners; of which some few being hang'd, especially those who were more immediately concern'd in the Archbishops Murder, the rest were Transported.

But to return to London. On the 13th of June, Thomas White, alias Whitebread, Provincial of the Jesuits in England, William Harcourt, John Fenwick, John Gaven, and Anthony Turner, all Jesuits, were Tryed at the Old-Baily, and found Guilty of High Treason as Conspirators in the late Plot; The next Day Richard Langhorn Esq; a Barister of the Inner-Temple, was Tryed at the same Bar for the same Crime, and being also found Guilty, all six had Sentence of Condemnation, and were accordingly Executed, the five Jesuits on Fryday the 20th of June, and Mr. Langhorn on the 14th of July following; All departing this Life with the greatest Protestations of Innocence, as to the Crimes Objected, as could be possibly expressed.

But now arrives the 10th of July, on which Day the King was pleas'd to Dissolve the present Parliament by Proclamation, with a Declaration, of His Intention to call another on the 17th of October following.

On the 18th of July Sir George Wakeman Baronet, the Queens Physician, William Marshal, William Rumley, and James Corker, Benedictin Monks, were Tryed for High Treason relating to the late Plot; the Evidence, Oates, Bedloe, and others; But the Jury found 'em not Guilty, and they were discharged.

In August, the King fell dangerously ill at Windsor, upon the Intelligence of which his Royal Highness came over Post to his Majesty; But it pleas'd God that the King recovering His Health, to the great Joy of the Nation; the Lord Mayor of London, with the Court of Aldermen, and a Train of 30 Coaches, and about 100 Horsemen, went on Monday the 15th of September to Windsor to Congratulate his Majesty's Recovery. On the Wednesday following the King, attended by his Royal Highness and the whole Court, return'd to White-hall; that Night by the Lord Mayors express Order there were Bonfires throughout the whole City for his Majesty's return, as well to his former Health, as place of Residency. But it seems the Duke of Monmouth having contracted the Kings Displeasure, on some account or other, not commonly known, His Majesty was pleas'd to take from him his Commission of Captain General, and for a time expel him the Kingdom; soon after this the said Duke went over to Utrecht, and at the same time his Royal Highness return'd to Brussels; But this last, it seems, without designs of any long stay there, for on Sunday Night the 12th of October, his said Royal Highness, the Dutchess, and Family, arrived at St. James's to the surprize of some, and Joy of others.

The King having call'd a New Parliament, as he had formerly promised on the Dissolution of the last, to meet on the 17th of October, He was now further pleas'd to Prorogue it from the time appointed, to the 26th of January following.

Much discourse there was at this time, and many Narratives came out daily concerning the Discovery of a New Plot which the Papists (as was said) had contrived to lay on the Presbyterians. The chief Discoverer was one Dangerfield alias Willoughby; Several were accused, and laid up as Conspirators; among whom, the Countess of Powis, Mrs Celier, Sir Robert Peyton, and Mr. Gadbury.

On

On Thursday the 27th of November, the Duke of Monmouth arrived in the night time at London, at whose return the Citizens expreſs'd a mighty Joy by Bonfires, Fireworks, and Ringing of Bells all the next day, and moſt part of the night.

In the mean time his Royal Highneſs, with his Dutcheſs and Daughter, attended with a Guard and Retinue ſuitable to their Quality, made a Journey into Scotland; where being arriv'd, the Duke was at Edenborough on the 4th of December, receiv'd and complemented by the Privy Council of that Kingdom, with abundance of Reſpect and Honour; the Lord Chancellor made a Speech in the name of all the Council, to which his Royal Highneſs anſwer'd in very affectionate terms, expreſſing his great ſatisfaction at the Civilities he had receiv'd ſince his arrival in that Kingdom; and declaring his readineſs to promote the Honour and Service of the King, and the Intereſts of the Scottiſh Nation.

About this time great Endeavours were uſed to procure a multitude of Hands to Petitions which were framing in London, Weſtminſter, and ſeveral Counties, to be preſented to the King for the ſitting of the Parliament on the 26th day of January next, according to the laſt Prorogation; which manner of Petitioning being held unwarrantable and tumultuous, the King was pleaſed in Council, Decemb. 10. to order the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen to take care in their ſeveral ſtations of his Majeſty's Honour, and of the Peace and Safety of the City, and not to ſuffer ſuch Perſons that ſhould ſign ſuch Petitions, or go about to procure Hands to them, to go unpuniſh'd; but that they ſhould proceed againſt them, or cauſe them to be brought before the Council-board to be puniſh'd, according to a Reſolution of all the Judges of England, 2 Jac. (which may be ſeen, Cro. 2. part of Reports, fol. 37.) his Majeſty was further pleaſed to iſſue out his Proclamation dated the 12th of December, containing, 'That whereas he hath been inform'd 'that divers evil-diſpos'd Perſons endeavour in 'ſeveral parts of this Kingdom to frame Petitions to his Majeſty, for ſpecious ends and purpoſes relating to the Publick, and thereupon 'to collect and procure to the ſame the Hands 'and Subſcriptions of multitudes of his Majeſty's Subjects; which proceedings being contrary to the common and known Laws of this 'Land, and tending to promote Diſcontents 'among the People, and to raiſe Sedition and 'Rebellion, his Majeſty doth therefore ſtrictly 'Charge and Command all and every his loving Subjects, of what Rank or Degree ſoever, that they preſume not to agitate or 'promote any ſuch Subſcriptions, nor in any 'ways joyn in any petition of that manner to 'be preferred to his Majeſty, upon peril of 'the utmoſt rigour of the Law that may be inflicted for the ſame.

At the ſame time his Majeſty iſſued out another Proclamation, declaring his Reſolution to prorogue the Parliament from the 26th of Jan. to the 11th of Nov. next.

Notwithſtanding the ſcope of theſe two Proclamations, the buſineſs of Petitioning went forwards; ſeveral were perfected and delivered not long after, one from London, ſubſcrib'd with many Thouſands of Hands, others from York, Eſſex, Surrey, and Wiltſhire; all which the King receiv'd but coldly, and, as appeared afterwards, ineffectually; for on the 26th of January, being the day to which the Parliament was prorogued, his Majeſty was pleaſed to make a ſhort Speech to both Houſes, containing, 'That when he declar'd in Council his Intention of putting off the Parliament to a time 'ſo remote as November, it was not without 'mature Conſideration; That he cannot be 'perſwaded from any thing that has happen'd 'ſince (in reference to Affairs within the Kingdom) to alter or repent of that Reſolution; 'That notwithſtanding, conſidering the preſent danger which threatens ſome of our 'Neighbours and Allies, he thinks fit to appoint 'a day for their meeting again in April; yet 'the Diſtractions and Jealouſies at home are of 'ſuch a nature, and ſo heightned and improv'd 'by the Malice and Induſtry of ill men, that 'he is unalterably of opinion, that a longer 'Interval of Parliament will be abſolutely neceſſary for compoſing and quieting of Mens 'Minds; in order to which, he is afraid the 'moſt proper Remedies would prove ineffectual 'without the aſſiſtance of ſome further time; 'He reſolves therefore, that on the ſaid meeting in April there ſhall be a further Prorogation, 'unleſs the Condition of our Allies abroad do 'then require our immediate aſſiſtance.

Hereupon he commanded the Lord Chancellor to prorogue the Parliament to the 15th of April.

In the beginning of Hilary Term, Sir Thomas Gaſcoigne, a Yorkſhire Knight of 85 years of age, was arraign'd at the King's Bench Bar in Weſtminſter-Hall, upon an Information of High-Treaſon, in conſpiring the Death of the King, and the Subverſion of the Government. He was afterwards brought to his Tryal at the ſame Bar; the Jury were all York-ſhire Gentlemen, the Fore-man, Sir Thomas Hodſon; the chief Evidence againſt him one Bathon, who had formerly been Baily of his Colepits, and one Mowbray, who had alſo belonged to his Family; but their Teſtimony, it ſeems, not being of that weight or credibility with the Jury as ſome expected, they brought in their Verdict Not Guilty; whereupon the Priſoner was immediately diſcharged.

On the 31ſt of January, 1679, the Duke acquainted the Lords of the Privy-Council at Edinburg, 'That he had received a Letter from 'the King, calling him very ſpeedily to Court; 'That though he did very chearfully obey his 'Majeſty's Commands, and went with much 'Joy to attend him, yet he could not part from 'their Lordſhips ſo ſoon without a great deal of 'Reluctancy and Trouble, having both at his 'Reception, and during the ſhort time of his 'Abode there, met with all poſſible demonſtrations of Civility and Kindneſs, both from the 'Nobility, Gentry, and from the Repreſenta-

1689. 'tives of the ſeveral Bodies of the Nation, particularly from the Council, of which he had 'ſo juſt a reſentment, that he could not in all 'his Life forget them, and ſhould not fail upon all occaſions to meet their great Kindneſs 'and Affection ſhewn him, with all the ſervice 'he was capable to do them; That he would 'acquaint his Majeſty that he had in Scotland 'a brave and loyal Nobility and Gentry, a regular Privy Council, and the Judicatures fill'd 'with able perſons well affected to his Majeſty's 'Service and Intereſt; That he had obſerv'd 'the diſaffected Party were nothing ſo conſiderable as their Friends in England ſtudied induſtriouſly to repreſent them to be. He then 'recommended to the Council the ſetling of 'the Differences between ſeveral Gentlemen of 'the Highlands, whom he had always obſerv'd 'to be firm to his Majeſty's Intereſt. The Lord Chancellor, in the name of the Council, acknowledg'd the great Happineſs they had had in his Preſence, Conduct, and Advice, and declared how much devoted they all were to the Service of his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs; and that they could not expreſs the great Grief that they had to part ſo ſoon with him, to whoſe Counſel and Preſence they owe ſo many Advantages.

After this the Duke, Dutcheſs, and all their Retinue, began their Voyage by Sea for London, where he arrived at the Court-privy-Stairs on the 24th of February. There arrived at the ſame time, from the Privy Council of Scotland, a Letter full of Loyal Expreſſions to the King's Service, with abundance of Recommendation and Proteſtations for the Duke's Intereſt. Two days after his arrival his Royal Highneſs was attended by the Lord Mayor, Court of Aldermen, Recorder, and Common Council of the City of London; at which time the Recorder having in all their Names congratulated his ſafe arrival, they all kiſs'd the Hands both of the Duke and Dutcheſs.

On the 11th of February his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Council, That he had granted his Secretary Coventry leave to reſign his place of Secretary of State; That his intention was to continue him however of his Council; And that he had made choice of Sir Lionel Jenkins to ſucceed him in the place of Secretary, who was accordingly ſworn of his Privy Council that day, and took his place at the Board.

On the ninth of March the King iſſued out a Proclamation againſt ſuch, who under a vain pretence of Honour, take upon them to be the Revengers of their private Quarrels in Duels and ſingle Combat, which ought not to be upon any pretence or provocation whatſoever, ſtrictly charging and commanding all his loving Subjects, of what quality ſoever, that they do not, either by themſelves or others, by Meſſage, Word, Writing, or other ways, Challenge, or cauſe to be Challeng'd, any perſon or perſons, to fight in Combat or ſingle Duel, nor Carry, Accept, or Conceal any ſuch Challenge or Appointment, nor actually fight any ſuch Duel, or as a Second or otherwiſe accompany or be aſſiſtant therein; declaring further, That he will not grant his Pardon to any perſon whatſoever, that ſhall fight or be any way aiding or concerned in ſuch Duel, where any perſon ſhall be ſlain or dye of his Wounds receiv'd therein, but will leave all ſuch perſons to the utmoſt rigour and ſeverity of the Laws; And that he will not ſuffer or endure any perſon or perſons to be or remain at Court who ſhall preſume to intercede for any perſon or perſons offending againſt this Proclamation, ſtraitly charging and commanding, by the ſaid Proclamation, all perſons whatſoever, who ſhall receive or know of any Challenge ſent or deliver'd as aforeſaid, forthwith to give notice thereof to ſome of the Privy Council, or ſome Juſtice of Peace near the place, upon pain of his higheſt Diſpleaſure, and being left to the ſtricteſt Rigour and Severity of the Law.

On the 15th of April, being the day to which the Parliament was formerly prorogued, the King then abſent at Newmarket, my Lord Chancellor, by Commiſſion under the Great Seal, prorogued it further to the 17th of May following, the Duke of York being preſent in the Houſe. On the 17th of May it was further prorogued till the firſt of July.

And now it was that thoſe Counties which had been lately ſo active in promoting Petitions for the ſitting of the Parliament began to recant. The City of Weſtminſter was the firſt, whoſe Grand Jury, by their publick and formal Act, at their Seſſions after Eaſter, diſown'd the ſaid Action of promoting Petitions, and charg'd it on certain Factious perſons unknown to them. After this, follow'd the like Addreſſes from the Counties of Surrey, Eſſex, Middleſex, and Norfolk, which laſt mention'd County of Norfolk had this further Acknowledgment in their Meſſage, viz. Their humble Thanks to his Majeſty for recalling the Duke from Flanders.

About this time it was, that a falſe and dangerous Rumour flew abroad, and was ſpread about the Town, concerning a Black Box reported to be found, wherein was ſaid to be contain'd a Writing importing a Marriage or Contract between his Majeſty and the Duke of Monmouth's Mother; which Report coming to the King's Ear, he was pleas'd to ſummon the Council to meet extraordinarily on the 26th of April, in which he declar'd the ſaid Report to be altogether falſe, and that he thought himſelf oblig'd in Honour and Conſcience to have the matter throughly examin'd and ſearched into: In order whereunto Sir Gilbert Gerard (who was rumour'd to have ſeen ſome ſuch Writing) being call'd in, was examin'd in Council (his Royal Highneſs, and all the Judges of the Courts at Weſtminſter being preſent) touching the truth of what was reported, to which he anſwer'd upon Oath, 'That he 'never had any ſuch Writing committed to his 'Cuſtody, nor did he know of any ſuch thing, 'or had ever ſeen any ſuch Writing. To all which he alſo ſubſcribed his Name. His Majeſty declaring, he reſolved to uſe all means poſſible to find out the Author of this Report. And accordingly a Committee of Council did fit for a while afterwards, to ſift into the Buſineſs.

On the fifth of May, all the Judges of England, having been demanded their Opinions, made their Report in Council, and declar'd for Law, 'That his Majeſty may pro-'hibit the printing and publiſhing of all News-'books and Pamphlets of News whatſoever not 'licens'd by his Majeſty's Authority, as mani-'feſtly tending to the breach of the Peace, and 'diſturbance of the Kingdom: And accordingly the King iſſued out his Proclamation to ſuppreſs 'em, May 12.

On Friday the 21ſt of May was brought to the Kings-Bench Bar, by Habeas Corpus, William Viſcount Stafford, who much complaining of his long Imprisonment, was informed by the Court, 'That all the Judges had reſolved up-'on mature Conſideration, that he being im-'peach'd of Treaſon in Parliament, he could 'not be tryed out of Parliament; and for the 'ſame reaſon alſo it was out of the power of 'this Court to Bail him; That he and the other 'Lords in the Tower were not within the be-'nefit of the late Act touching Habeas Corpus's; 'That the Court was ſorry they could not re-'lieve him; and that there was no way for 'him to come to his Tryal, but by the ſitting 'of the Parliament.

The 29th of May, being the ſolemn Anniverſary for the King's Birth and Reſtoration, paſs'd this year with the uſual Church-Service, and the Joy of Bells, but without any Bonfires at night, all Bonfires, not only on this, but any other day whatſoever, having been forbid (by order of the Privy-Council, April 7.) without Licence firſt obtain'd from the Council or other Magiſtrates: Such Bonfires as of late having been obſerved the occaſions of tumult and dangerous Opportunities of Sedition.

On the firſt day of Trinity-Term Mrs. Celier was try'd for High-Treaſon, at the Kings-Bench Bar, the Indictment run in the uſual form as againſt the reſt of the Plotters; but the chief (and indeed only) Evidence againſt her Thomas Dangerfield, being prov'd by Records then produc'd ſo great and infamous a Criminal, his Teſtimony was refus'd by the Court to be admitted, and chiefly in regard he ſtood outlaw'd of Felony, and Felony not being expreſt in his Pardon, ſhe was therefore found Not Guilty, and Dangerfield himſelf committed to Cuſtody till he could find Bail to reverſe the Outlawry, to anſwer the Felony, and for his good Behaviour: But within a few days after the ſaid Dangerfield producing a Newgate Pardon, whereby all Felonies were Pardoned, and his Name being found therein, he was diſcharg'd.

And now it was that His Majeſty, in purſuance to what he had done in April, and to remove all Pretences of the Diſaffected in the point of Succeſſion, publiſh'd his Declaration, proteſting on the Word of a King, and the Faith of a Chriſtian, That he was never married to Mrs. Barlow, alias Waters, the Duke of Monmouth's Mother, nor to any other Woman beſides the now Queen. Which Declaration was on the 15th of June in this Trinity Term, regiſter'd on Record in the High Court of Chancery, all the great Lords of the Privy Council who were preſent when his Majeſty declared and ſigned the ſame, atteſting the Action upon their Corporal Oaths in open Court. The Lord Chancellor declaring at the ſame time, That this Declaration is not enrolled here to receive any augmentation of Repute or Force from this Court, for it cannot receive more than it hath already, but only to be preſerved here as in a Repoſitory or Regiſtry; and he doubts not but it will alſo find a more Noble Regiſtry than this, that is, the Hearts of all the Loyal Subjects of the Nation. 1680.

On the firſt of July, being the day to which the Parliament had been formerly prorogued, it was further prorogued, by Commiſſion, to the 22d of the ſame Month, the Duke of York being preſent in the Houſe, and from thence to the 23d of Auguſt.

On the 23d of Auguſt, being the day to which the Parliament had been prorogued, the Houſes met, and were further prorogued to the 21ſt of October following, the King promiſing that they ſhould ſit then, and publiſhing his Proclamation to that purpoſe.

And now comes on the long-expected 21ſt day of October, and with it the firſt Seſſion of this Parliament, the day before which the Duke and Dutcheſs of York began their Journey for Scotland by Sea; the King accompanying them as low as Woolwich, and there Dining with them on Shipboard.

On the 21ſt the King's Speech contain'd, That he had during this long Prorogation made Alliances with Holland and Spain; That he deſir'd Money of them for the Relief of Tangier, which had already exhauſted his Purſe; That he would not have them meddle with the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Right Line, but proceed in the Diſcovery of the Plot, and to the Tryals of the Lords, &c. After this (the Chancellor making no ſet Speech) the Commons return'd to their own Houſe, and unanimouſly choſe for their Speaker Mr. Williams of Grays-Inn, Recorder of Cheſter.

On the 30th of October the King publiſh'd a Proclamation, promiſing his Pardon to all that within two Months ſhall come in and make any further Diſcovery of the Plot. And this was done upon an Addreſs of Parliament.

In the mean time the Commons, not ſatisfied in puniſhing their own Members who had appear'd againſt Petitioning for the Parliament's ſitting, they take notice of others who were without their Walls, and among the reſt Sir George Jeffreys becomes the Object of their Diſpleaſure; who being Recorder of London, the King's Serjeant at Law, and Chief Juſtice of Cheſter, is for the Crime above ſpecified, on the 13th of November, Voted a Betrayer of the Rights of the Subject, and an Addreſs order'd to be made to his Majeſty to remove him from all publick Offices. At the ſame time it was order'd, That a Committee enquire into all ſuch perſons as have been adviſing or promoting the late Proclamation, ſtiled, A Proclamation againſt Tumultuous Petitioning.

1680. But about the ſame time a matter of much greater concern was thus mannaged. On the 11th of November, was paſt in the Houſe of Commons a Bill entituled, 'An Act for ſecu-'ring the Proteſtant Religion, by diſabling 'James Duke of York to Inherit the Imperial 'Crown of England, and Ireland, and the Ter-'ritories thereunto belonging. Which Bill was on the 15th carryed up to the Lords Houſe by my Lord Ruſſel, attended by almoſt all the Commons. They being departed it was read once, and being put to the Vote, whether it ſhould be read a ſecond time it was carryed in the Affirmative, by two Voices. On the ſecond reading it was debated till 11 a Clock at night (the King being preſent all the while) and then thrown out of the Houſe by a Majority of about 30 Votes; in which Majority were all the Biſhops then preſent, which were 14.

Soon after, William Lord Viſcount Stafford, one of the 5 Popiſh Lords in the Tower, was brought to his Tryal on an Impeachment of High Treaſon. The Tryal began in Weſtminſter Hall on Tueſday the 30th of November, being the next day after the Term ended. Which Impeachment, and Evidence upon the ſame, was managed by a Committee of the Commons. The Tryal laſted for a Whole Week: The Evidence againſt him were Oates, Turberville, and Dugdale; Of the Lords who ſate upon the Tryal (the Lord Chancellor being Lord High Steward) 31 procounced him not Guilty, and 55 Guilty. And accordingly Judgment was pronounced againſt him on Wedneſday the 7th of December. But his Execution was reſpited till Wedneſday 29th of Decem. on which day he was Beheaded on Tower-Hill, proteſting with his laſt breath his Innocency as to thoſe Crimes of which he ſtood Condemn'd.

During theſe Tranſactions a Comet with a moſt Prodigious Stream of light appear'd in the Weſt; the Star from which the Blaze proceeded was but ſmall, and when firſt diſcover'd, appeared not much above the Horizon; but every night afterwards it appear'd higher and higher in the beginning of the Night, and conſequently ſetting later and later, its Luſtre and Magnitude alſo decaying.

An Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons was preſented to his Majeſty on the 21ſt of December, in anſwer to his Speech of the 15th, wherein he demanded, once more, Supplies of Mony for the defence of Tangier. The effect of the ſaid Addreſs, was to deny (in as modeſt Terms as could be) all Supplies of Mony for that purpoſe; unleſs his Majeſty would be pleas'd to paſs a Bill to Seclude the Duke of York from Inheriting the Crown, and to enable the Proteſtants of this Nation to Aſſociate themſelves for the ſecurity of the Proteſtant Religion, the Defence of the King and Kingdoms.

On the 4th of January his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſend his Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons, in Anſwer to their Addreſs of December, 21ſt above mention'd, in which Meſſage, He let them know, 'That he had re-'ceived their Addreſs with all the diſpoſition 'they could wiſh to comply with their reaſo-'nable Deſires; but upon peruſal of it, he 'was ſorry to ſee their thoughts ſo wholly fixt 'on the Bill of Excluſion, as to determine 'That all other remedies for the Suppreſſing of 'Popery will be ineffectual; That his Majeſty 'is confirm'd in his Opinion againſt that Bill, by 'the Judgment of the Houſe of Lords who re-'jected it; that he thinks there remains nothing 'more for him to ſay in Anſwer to the aforeſaid 'Addreſs, than to recommend to this Houſe, the 'Conſideration of all other means for the pre-'ſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, to which they 'have no reaſon to doubt his concurrence, when-'ſoever they ſhall be preſented to him in a Par-'liament any way; and in concluſion, again, He 'urges them to the preſervation of Tangier.

On the Friday following, being the 7th of January, the Houſe entred upon the Conſideration of the ſaid Meſſage, and reſolve, as the Opinion of the Houſe, 'That there is no 'ſecurity or ſafety for the Proteſtant Religion, 'the Kings Life, or the well conſtituted and 'eſtabliſht Government of this Kingdom 'without paſſing a Bill for diſabling James 'Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crown 'of England, and Ireland, and the Dominions 'and Territories thereunto belonging; and that 'to rely upon any other means or remedies 'without ſuch a Bill, is not only inſufficient, but 'dangerous: That till ſuch a Bill be paſt, this 'Houſe cannot give any Supply to his Majeſty 'without danger to his Majeſties Perſon, Ex-'tream hazard of the Proteſtant Religion, and un-'faithfulneſs to thoſe by whom this Houſe is 'intruſted: That all Perſons who adviſed his 'Majeſty in his laſt Meſſage to this Houſe to 'inſiſt upon an Opinion againſt the Bill for Ex-'cluding the Duke of York, have given Pernici-'ous Council to his Majeſty, and are Promoters 'of Popery, and Enemies to the King and King-'dom: And as ſuch they name George Earl of Hallifax, Henry Marquiſs of Worceſter, Henry Earl of Clarendon, againſt which, as alſo againſt Lewis Earl of Feverſham, and Laurence Hide Eſq; they Vote an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty to remove them from all Offices of Honour and Profit, and from his Majeſties Councils and Preſence for ever. They further Vote and Reſolve, the ſame day, 'That 'whoſoever ſhall hereafter Lend or cauſe to 'be Lent by way of advance, any Mony 'upon the Branches of the Kings Revenue 'ariſing by Cuſtoms, Exciſe, or Hearth Mony, 'ſhall be adjudg'd to hinder the ſitting of 'Parliaments, and ſhall be reſponſible for the 'ſame in Parliament.

On the Monday following, being the 10th of January, the King was pleas'd to determin this Seſſion, by Proroguing the Parliament to the 20th day of January then next following; at the ſame time paſſing only Two Publick Bills, viz. One about Iriſh Cattle, and One about Burying in Woollen. The Houſe of Commons were it ſeems, aware of this Prorogation, and therefore that very morning the firſt thing they did, after they were ſate, and before the Uſher of the Black Rod came in, in, they Reſolved, 'That whoſoever adviſed 'His Majeſty to Prorogue this Parliament, to 'any other purpoſe than in Order to the paſ- 'ſing of a Bill for the Excluſion of James 'Duke of York, is a Betrayer of the King, 'the Proteſtant Religion, and of the Kingdom 'of England, a Promoter of the French Intereſt, 'and a Penſioner to France.

On the 13th of January a Court of Common Council, being Aſſembled in London, they ordered to be drawn up, and Preſented to the King a Petition, ſetting forth, 'That 'whereas, the Parliament had convicted one 'of the 5 Popiſh Lords in the Tower, and 'were about to convict the other 4 of 'High Treaſon; That they had Impeacht 'the Chief Juſtice Scroggs, and were about 'to Impeach other Judges, and all this in 'order to the preſervation of his Majeſties 'Life, the Proteſtant Religion, and Government, 'That they were much ſurprized to ſee the 'Parliament Prorogued in the height of their 'buſineſs; That their only hopes were that 'this was done only in order to bring ſuch 'Affairs about again as were neceſſary to 'the Settling the Nation: They therefore 'pray'd that his Majeſty would be pleas'd to 'let the Parliament ſit at the day appointed, 'and ſo to continue till they had effected the 'great Affairs before them. To this effect were the Words of their Petition, which was further ordered to be delivered that night, or as ſoon as may be, by the Lord Mayor, attended with the new Recorder George Treby Eſq; and certain Members of the Court of Aldermen, and Common Council. But before the ſaid 20th day of January arrived, the King was pleaſed by his Proclamation bearing date at White hall, January 18th to diſſolve this Parliament, and intimate his Royal pleaſure and intentions to call another to ſit on the 21ſt of March following, at Oxford.

Not long after this, viz. on the 25th of January, the Earl of Eſſex, and other Lords Preſented to the King a Petition, ſetting forth, 'That whereas the Nation and his Majeſties 'Perſon were in imminent danger from the 'Papiſts, unto which no ſtop or remedy 'could be provided unleſs by a Parliament; 'That ſeveral Parliaments being call'd and aſ- 'ſembled, they were prorogued and diſſolved 'before any ſufficient order could be taken 'therein, &c. That his Majeſty had been pre- 'vailed with to call another at Oxford, where 'neither Lords or Commons can be in ſafety, 'but will be dayly expoſed to the Swords of 'the Papiſts and their adherents, the liberty of 'ſpeaking thereby deſtroyed, and the validi- 'ty of their Acts and proceedings left diſputa- 'ble, the ſtraightneſs of the place unfit for 'ſuch a Concourſe of perſons as now follows 'every Parliament, and the Witneſſes which 'are neceſſary to give Evidence upon the Com- 'mons Impeachment unable to bear the char- 'ges of ſuch a Journey, and unwilling to truſt 'themſelves under the Protection of a Parli- 'ament, that is it ſelf evidently under the Po- 'wer of Guards and Souldiers; They there- 'fore pray that the Parliament may ſit at 'Weſtminſter.

And now City and Country were buſie in the Election of Members to ſerve in the next Parliament to be holden at Oxford. For the moſt part, the old Members were choſen again. I ſhall give a ſhort account of what happen'd at London on this occaſion. The Election for that City was perform'd at Guild-hall, on Fryday the fourth of February, and the Choice which the Common Hall fix'd upon, were Sir Robert Clayton, Sir Thomas Player, Thomas Pilkington, and William Love, Eſquires: To which four, as ſoon as the Election was over, a Paper was preſented in the Name of the Citizens of London then aſſembl'd in Common Hall, containing a return of their moſt hearty Thanks for their faithful and unwearied Endeavours, in the two laſt Parliaments, to ſearch into and diſcover the depth of the Plot, to preſerve his Majeſty's Royal Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and the well eſtabliſh'd Government of this Realm, to ſecure the meeting and ſitting of frequent Parliaments, to aſſert our undoubted Rights of Petitioning, and to puniſh ſuch who would have betray'd thoſe Rights, to promote the long wiſh'd-for Union of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, to Repeal the 35 El. and the Corporation Act, and more eſpecially for their Endeavours in promoting the Bill of Excluſion of James Duke of York. In fine, they conclude, that being confidently aſſured that they (the ſaid Members for the City) will never conſent to the granting any Mony-ſupply, till they have effectually ſecur'd us againſt Popery and Arbitrary Power, they reſolve, by God's aſſiſtance, to ſtand by their ſaid Members with their Lives and Fortunes. 1681.

After this, another Paper was preſented from the ſaid Citizens, to the two Sheriffs, requeſting them, in the Name of all the ſaid Citizens then aſſembl'd in Common Hall to return their grateful acknowledgment to the Earl of Eſſex, and by him to the reſt of the Lords, who preſented the late Petition and Advice to his Majeſty.

In like manner were the former Members of Parliament again choſen in moſt places; and in many, ſuch Papers of Addreſs preſented to them, in their reſpective Countries, as had been done by the Commonalty of London to their Members. Alſo (contrary to the old Cuſtoms of the Members treating the Country where they ſtood) now the Country in moſt places treated them, or at leaſt every man bore his own Charges.

About a Week before the Seſſion, the King left London, and removed to Oxford, appointing certain Companies of Foot, and Troops of Horſe to keep Garriſon in the Meuſe during his abſence. Many Members of the Houſe of Commons, eſpecially thoſe of London, went to Oxford, accompanied or attended with the Ceremonious Cavalcade of a numerous Train of Friends.

On the 14th of March the King and Queen enter'd Oxford, received and preſented by the Mayor and Body of that City at the Eaſt Gate, and from thence attended with Acclamations and all ſort of Demonſtrations of Joy to Chriſt-Church; the next day the Body of the Univerſity 1681. ſity waited on Their Majeſties, and received the Honour to kiſs Their Hands, preſenting at the ſame time to the King a large Oxford Bible, and to the Queen the Cuts belonging to the Hiſtory and Antiquities of the Univerſity, both richly bound.

The 21ſt of March being now arriv'd, and the Members of both Houſes of Parliament aſſembled at Oxford, according to the King's Writs of Summons, the Lords ſate in the Gallery at the Schools, and the Commons in the Convocation Houſe.

His Majeſty's Speech at the opening of the Seſſions contained, That the unwarrantable Proceedings of the laſt Houſe of Commons were the occaſion of the Diſſolution of the laſt Parliament; That as he will never uſe Arbitrary Government himſelf, ſo he is reſolved never to ſuffer it in others; That whoſoever ſhall calmly conſider the Proceedings in the laſt Parliament, may perhaps more wonder at his Patience ſo long, than that he grew weary at laſt; That it is as much his Intereſt and care as theirs to preſerve the Liberty of the Subject, becauſe the Crown can never be ſafe when that is in Danger; That neither Liberty nor Property can ſubſiſt long, when the juſt Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown are invaded, or the Honour of the Government brought low and into diſreputation; That he hath call'd this Parliament ſo ſoon, to ſhew that no Irregularities in Parliaments ſhall make him out of Love with them; That the juſt care they ought to have of Religion ought not to be ſo manag'd and improv'd into unneceſſary Fears, as to be made a pretence for changing the Foundation of the Government; That he hopes the Example of the ill ſucceſs of former Heats will diſpoſe them to a better Temper; That they would not lay ſo much weight upon any one Expedient againſt Popery, as to determine all other are ineffectual; That they ought to remember, that without the Safety and Dignity of the Monarchy, neither Religion nor Property can be preſerved; That he cannot depart from what he had formerly ſo often declar'd touching the Succeſſion, but to remove all reaſonable Fears that may ariſe from the poſſibility of a Popiſh Succeſſor's coming to the Crown, if means can be found out; that in ſuch a Caſe the Adminiſtration of the Government may remain in Proteſtant Hands, he ſhall be ready to hearken to any ſuch Expedient by which the Religion may be preſerv'd and the Monarchy not deſtroy'd; that therefore they would provide for Religion and Government together with regard to one another, becauſe they ſupport one another, and that they would make the known Eſtabliſh'd Laws of the Land, the Rules and Meaſures of all their Votes, becauſe he is reſolv'd they ſhall be his.

After this Speech the Commons return'd to their Houſe, and choſe for their Speaker William Williams Eſq; who had managed that Office in the laſt Parliament; who being the next day preſented, made a Speech to the King, and claim'd by humble Addreſs (as his Words were) The Ancient Rights of the Commons.

Nothing of extraordinary note paſſed till Saturday the 26th of March, on which day it was that the Houſe of Commons were inform'd that the Lords had refuſed to proceed upon the Impeachment of the Commons againſt Edward Fitz Harris, for High Treaſon, but had directed that he ſhould be proceeded againſt at the Common Law; hereupon they Vote, That this Refuſal of the Lords to proceed in Parliament upon ſuch Impeachment, is a denial of Juſtice, and a violation of the Conſtitutions of Parliaments, an Obſtruction to the further Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, and of great danger to his Majeſty's Perſon and the Proteſtant Religion: And further they reſolve, That for any inferiour Court to proceed againſt Edward Fitz-Harris, or any other perſon lying under an Impeachment in Parliament for the ſame Crimes for which he or they ſtand impeached, is an high breach of the Privilege of Parliament.

On the Monday following the Bill againſt the Duke of York was read the firſt time, and order'd a ſecond Reading: When on a ſudden the King ſends for the Commons up to the Houſe of Lords, and tells them, That he perceiv'd Heats betwixt the Lords and them, and therefore he had order'd the Chancellor to Diſſolve the preſent Parliament; which he accordingly did immediately.

The ſame day the King left Oxford, and came to Windſor that night; the next morning by Eight a Clook, to Whitehall.

Not long after this, his Majeſty was pleaſed to publiſh in Print a Declaration to all his loving Subjects, in which he ſet forth the Reaſons which induc'd him to Diſſolve his two laſt Parliaments, his reaſonable Deſires which he had propoſed to 'em, with their unwarrantable proceedings in return; declaring however, that he is not yet out of love with Parliaments, but that he will frequently adviſe with them as his great Council, which he hopes e're long to find in a better Temper. Much to this purpoſe were the Contents of that Declaration, which by his Majeſty's Order in Council was appointed to be read in all Churches and Chapels.

In Eaſter-Term, Fitz Harris was arraign'd at the King's-Bench Bar, on the laſt day of April; he was thrice bid to hold up his Hand, inſiſting upon the Impeachment in Parliament, but at laſt he held up his Hand, and heard his Indictment read; which was for High Treaſon, expreſs'd in a certain Writing call'd The True Engliſhman, full of moſt horrid Expreſſions againſt the King, as if he were a Conſpirator in the Plot, and exciting the Nation to riſe as one Man againſt him, &c. To which Indictment he put into Court a Dilatory Plea againſt the Juriſdiction, alledging, that he being impeach'd by the Commons in Parliament, he cannot be Tryed here, but this Plea not being under Council's Hand, was refus'd to be receiv'd; however, the Court gave him time to conſider whether he would ſtand by ſuch a Plea, and in regard it might be fatal unto him in caſe it ſhould be overruled; and aſſigned him for Council, Sir Francis Winnington, Mr. Williams, Mr. Pollexfen, and Mr. Wallop, (as he deſir'd) to argue the ſaid point of Judicature next

Wedneſday,

Wednesday, if he perſiſted in ſuch Plea. On the ſaid Wednesday, being the 4th of May, the Priſoner was again brought to the Bar, attended with his Council; at which time the King's Attorney Sir Robert Sawyer enter'd a Demurrer to the Priſoner's Plea, and inſiſted chiefly on the manifeſt defect of form, in regard the Plea ran, that the ſaid Fitz-Harris was impeach'd at the late Parliament at Oxford, de Alia proditione, but does not ſay of what ſort or manner of Treaſon, nor ſets forth the Impeachment at large, which a Plea ought to do, when it is to the Juriſdiction. After this, the Council of the Priſoner join'd in Demurrer, but upon their earneſt motion (tho' oppoſed by the Attorney-General) time was given them to next Saturday Morning to maintain the ſaid Plea by Argument, if they can. At which time it was argued largely by Williams, Wennington, Wallop and Pollexfen, for the Priſoner, and by the Attorney General, the Sollicitor, Serjeant Jeoffreys and Sir Francis Withens for the King; the King's Council, and alſo the Court, declaring, That they medled not at all with the Privilege of the Houſe of Commons, or Juriſdiction of the Lords in Parliament, which was not in the point, but only as to the form of the Plea. After all the Debate, which laſted from eight till after twelve that day, the Lord Chief Juſtice declar'd, That the Court would take a convenient time to conſider before they gave their Judgment.

On the Wednesday following, being the 11th of May, the Priſoner being again brought to the Bar by the Lieutenant of the Tower, my Lord Chief Juſtice, in the name of the whole Court, gave Judgment, and declar'd, That he and his Brothers had conſider'd of the Plea, That they had alſo conſulted with others of the Judges, and that himſelf, Juſtice Jones, and Juſtice Raymond were of opinion, that the Plea was inſufficient (Dolbin doubting) the Plea was therefore overruled, and the Priſoner order'd to plead over; and accordingly he pleaded Not Guilty, and alledging, That a material Evidence on his part was now in Holland, his Tryal was put off till the 9th of June.

During all this Eaſter-Term, and many Months after, many Loyal Addreſſes flowed to the King from all parts of England.

On the 8th of June, in Trinity Term, was Dr. Oliver Plunket tryed for High Treaſon at the Kings-Bench Bar; the Evidence againſt him were all profeſs'd Papiſts, (as ſaid) and came out of Ireland: the chief matters ſworn againſt him, That he was made Primate of Ireland by the Pope at the King of France's recommendation: That upon that account he having engaged to do that King all the Service he could, he had actually Levied among his Popiſh Clergy great Sums of Money, therewith to introduce the French Dominion into that Kingdom, and exterminate the Proteſtants. Upon this Evidence he was found Guilty.

The next day being Thurſday the ninth of June, Fitz-Harris was tryed at the ſame Bar for High Treaſon, the chief Evidence againſt him were Everard, and Sir William Waller; the Jury upon the Evidence brought him in Guilty of High Treaſon.

Preſently after this Tryal Mrs. Fitz-Harris the Priſoner's Wife, and her Maid, accuſed my Lord Howard of Eſcrick of the Contrivance of that Treaſonable Libel of which her Huſband was convicted; upon which Accuſation the ſaid Lord was committed to the Tower on Sunday Morning, June 12. 1681

On the Wednesday following, being the 15th of June, Plunket and Fitz Harris were ſeverally brought to the Kings-Bench Bar, and receiv'd Judgment of Condemnation, as in caſes of High Treaſon.

On Friday the firſt of July, Dr. Oliver Plunket the Popiſh Primate of Ireland, and Edward Fitz-Harris, were both executed at Tyburn for the ſeveral Treaſons of which they were ſeverally Try'd and Condemn'd the laſt Term. Plunket in a long Speech declar'd his Innocency, forgave his Enemies, and pray'd for the King, Queen, and Duke of York. But Fitz-Harris ſaid very little, the ſubſtance of what he had to ſay or diſcover being by him deliver'd to Dr. Hawkins. Miniſter of the Tower, for his Wife.

About this time ſeveral were committed to the Tower for High Treaſon, namely, Rouſe, Hayns, White, and one Colledge, commonly call'd The Proteſtant Joyner. Alſo on July 2. the Earl of Shaftsbury was before the Council at Whitehall (to which the King came from Windſor that day on purpoſe) accuſed of High Treaſon, and for the ſame committed to the Tower, and his Papers ſeiz'd.

At the Seſſions at the Old Baily, which follow'd ſoon after, the Earl of Shaftsbury and the Lord Howard mov'd to be Bail'd, but they were anſwer'd by the unanimous Opinion of the Judges, That it was not in the power of that Court to Bail out of the Tower.

At the ſame Seſſions it was that a Bill of Indictment of High Treaſon was delivered to the Grand Jury of London, againſt Colledge, and they brought in the Bill Ignoramus. But another Bill being exhibited ſoon after, to the Grand Jury at the Aſſizes at Oxford, againſt the ſaid Colledge, (part of the Treaſonable Words and Matters being tranſacted there) the Bill was found there, on the ſame Evidence which was rejected at the Old Baily. And in Auguſt he was Tryed, Condemned, and Executed at Oxford.

On the 28th of July the Parliament ſate in Scotland, where his Royal Highneſs preſided as his Majeſty's High Commiſſioner. At the opening of the Seſſions the King's Letter was read, ſetting forth, 'That he had call'd them at that time 'to adviſe of ſuch things as may truly conduce 'to the Security and Intereſt of that Kingdom, 'and as an eminent Expreſſion of his Favour, 'he hath named his moſt dear and moſt entirely beloved Brother James Duke of Albany 'and York to be his Commiſſioner there, &c. After this the Duke made a Speech, 'Declaring 'the high eſteem he had of the great Honour 'and Happineſs the King had been pleaſed to 'do him, in making choice of him to ſerve 'as his Commiſſioner in that his ancient King-'dom, ſince it ſhews to all the World the Good-'neſs the King hath for him, and Confidence

'he

1681. 'he hath in him, and capacitates him not only to ſerve his Majeſty as becomes a Loyal 'Subject, but alſo to evince the real concern 'he hath for the Good of that Kingdom, and 'his readineſs to ſerve it, and improve its In'tereſt; That his Majeſty had commanded 'him to aſſure them, that he will inviolably 'maintain and protect the Proteſtant Religion, as 'by Law eſtabliſh'd in that Kingdom, and the 'Church Government by Archbiſhops and Bi'ſhops; That he will maintain and allow the 'Properties and Rights of his Subjects, accord'ing to the due courſe of Law, and that he 'doth expect that they will not be ſhort of the 'Loyalty of their Anceſtors, in vigorouſly aſ'ſerting and clearing his Royal Prerogative, 'and in declaring the Rights of his Crown in 'its natural and legal courſe of Deſcent, &c.

After this, the Duke entertain'd the whole Parliament at a Splendid and Royal Feaſt; the Lords by themſelves, and the Commons by themſelves, at ſeveral Tables.

On the firſt of Auguſt the Parliament returned a moſt Loyal and Dutiful Anſwer to his Majeſty's Letter. Alſo in purſuance and confirmation of their Loyal Affections, on the 14th of Auguſt, the Parliament paſs'd a Bill entituled, An Act acknowledging and Aſſerting the Right of Succeſſion to the Imperial Crown of Scotland; by which they recognize and declare, 'That the ſaid Crown is by Inherent Right, 'and the nature of the Monarchy, as well as 'by the fundamental and unalterable Law of 'the Realm, tranſmitted and devolved by Li'neal Succeſſion, according to proximity of 'Blood, and that no difference in Religion, no 'Law nor Act of Parliament can alter or di'vert the Right of Succeſſion and Lineal De'ſcent of the Crown to the neareſt and lawful 'Heirs, and therefore they declare it High 'Treaſon, by Writing, Speaking, or any other 'manner of way to endeavour the alteration, 'ſuſpenſion, or diverſion of the Right of Suc'ceſſion.

At the ſame time they paſs'd another Act ratifying all former Laws for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion.

On the 31ſt of Auguſt, Oates was by Order of Council expell'd from Whitehall, his Sallery taken off, and accuſed of Miſdemeanors.

Great numbers of poor French Proteſtants, about this time, flock'd over out of France, to whom our King was ſo gracious, as by Act of Council to declare his pleaſure, That all his Officers and Magiſtrates ſhould give 'em the ſame Countenance and Favour with his own Subjects; That he would take 'em into his protection; That he would grant 'em his Letters of Denization, forthwith upon their Requeſt; and, That he would intercede with the next Parliament, to obtain for them an Act of Naturallization. He alſo granted very ample Letters Patents, for collecting Moneys all over England for their relief, dated the 10th of September, this year.

This Summer the King was pleas'd to appoint under him certain Deputies, or Commiſſioners of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, to whom he delegated his power to diſpoſe of all ſuch Eccleſiaſtical Preferments which belong to his immediate Patronage. The Names of which Commiſſioners were, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of London, the Lord Rocheſter, Lord Halifax, Lord Hide, and Mr. Seymour.

At the Seſſions for London held at this time, one Roſe being charged with High Treaſon, and a Bill of Indictment exhibited to the Grand Jury attending for that City, againſt him, they found the Bill Ignoramus, after the ſame manner as had been formerly done in the caſe of College.

On the 24th of November all the Judges of England ſate with the Mayor and Aldermen, by ſpecial Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, at the Old Baily, and the Grand Jury being call'd and ſworn, of which Sir Samuel Barnardiſton Foreman, a Bill of Indictment of High Treaſon was deliver'd to them againſt the Earl of Shaftsbury; The Evidence were all examin'd in open Court, but the Jury return'd this Bill alſo Ignoramus, upon which the people gave a ſhout. The Witneſſes who gave Evidence againſt the ſaid Earl, were aſſaulted by the Rabble, and in ſuch Danger of their Lives, that the Sheriffs were neceſſitated to Guard them at Night as far as the Savoy, homewards. Several Bonfires were made that night in the City, at which ſeveral Riotous Actions were committed.

On the 28th of November, the laſt day of the Term, the Earl of Shaftsbury and Lord Howard, Priſoners in the Tower, were admitted to Bail in the King's Bench. By Order of Council to the Lord Mayor, and from him to the Officers of every Ward and Pariſh, all Bonfires and Bells Ringing were prohibited that Night.

The Act of Teſt which paſs'd in the Parliament in Scotland the laſt Seſſions, was the occaſion of ſeveral Diſcontents and Emotions amongſt ſome Parties there. The Act enjoyn'd a certain Oath or Engagement to be taken by all Officers in Church and State, and Graduates in their Univerſities, to maintain the Form of Government as now eſtabliſh'd; which Teſt tho' explain'd and qualified, was notwithſtanding ſo contrary to the ſenſe of ſome in that Kingdom, that ſeveral of their Miniſters refus'd it, and ſome of the Laity, among whom of greateſt note was Archibald Campbel Earl of Argile, who was about this time impeach'd of High Treaſon, and found Guilty. But being after his conviction kept for ſome time a Priſoner at Edenburough, he found means to make his Eſcape, after which his Arms were, with all publick Solemnity, reverſ'd and torn, and ſuch other marks of Diſhonour denounc'd againſt him, as in ſuchlike caſes are, by the Cuſtoms of Scotland.

The Proceedings of the Juſtices of Peace for the County of Middleſex, at their Seſſions at Hicks-Hall, before Hillary Term, were of note on divers accounts; Firſt, They order'd by their publick Act of Seſſions dated the 13th of Jan. That whereas the Conſtables and Church-wardens, &c. of every Pariſh and Precinct within the ſaid County, had been enjoyn'd laſt Seſſions to make a Return the firſt day of this, of the Names

Names of the Preachers in Conventicles, and the moſt conſiderable frequenters of the ſame within their ſeveral Limits, which Order not being obey'd, but contemn'd by ſome, it was therefore by the Juſtices then aſſembl'd, deſir'd that the Lord Biſhop of London will pleaſe to direct thoſe Officers which are under his Juriſdiction, to uſe their utmoſt diligence, that all ſuch perſons may be Excommunicated who commit Crimes deſerving that Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure, and that the ſaid Excommunications may be publiſh'd in the Pariſhes where the perſons live, that they may be taken notice of, and obvious to the Penalties that belong to perſons Excommunicate, viz. Not to be admitted for a Witneſs, or returned upon Juries, or capable to ſue for any Debt. And they further order'd at the ſaid Seſſions, that the Stat. 1 Eliz. and 3 Jac. be put in due execution, for the levying 1 s. per Sunday upon ſuch perſons who repair not to Divine Service and Sermons at their Pariſh, or ſome other publick Church.

Alſo there was another Act of the ſame Seſſions at Hicks-Hall, which bore Date the 18th of January, with which the Juſtices of Peace attended upon his Majeſty at Whitehall the ſame day. It contain'd, 'That they the 'ſaid Juſtices were ſenſible of their great Ho'nour and Happineſs, in being the firſt who 'return'd their humble and hearty Acknow'ledgment for his moſt gracious Declaration; 'which being follow'd by a multitude of Ad'dreſſes from all parts of the Kingdom, his 'Majeſty hath had a full Diſcovery of his Peo'ples Affections, &c.

To this purpoſe were ſeveral other Congratulations or Addreſſes to the King (ſome before, ſome after this of Middleſex) viz. from Norwich, from Hereford, from the Lieutenancy of London, &c.

In March his Royal Highneſs arrived out of Scotland, he landed at Yarmouth on the 10th; the next day, about ſix in the Evening, he arrived at Newmarket, where he was receiv'd by both their Majeſties with all the marks of Kindneſs and Affection.

The next day, being the 12th of March, the King was preſented at Newmarket with an Addreſs of Abhorrency from the Artillery Company in Briſtol.

About Eaſter certain perſons (to the number of many Hundreds, as reported) did deſign to meet at a publick Thankſgiving Sermon and Dinner, pretended, for God's wonderful Providence in delivering and protecting his Majeſty's perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and Engliſh Liberties, from the helliſh and frequent attempts of their Enemies the Papiſts, and Tickets of Invitation to this purpoſe were deliver'd abroad for a Meeting on Friday the 21ſt of April. Which Meeting was by ſpecial Order of his Majeſty in Council April the 19th prohibited and ſuppreſs'd, in regard the appointing of publick Faſts and Thankſgivings is a Matter of State, which belongs only to his Majeſty by his Prerogative, and therefore ſuch a Thankſgiving being appointed by the Subject, his Majeſty look'd upon the ſame as an inſolent Attempt in manifeſt derogation of his Right, and of dangerous conſequence. 1682.

On the 3d of May his Royal Highneſs left the Court at Windſor, in order to his Journey into Scotland, from thence to fetch hither the Dutcheſs, great with Child. He went by Sea in the Gloceſter Frigat, attended by ſeveral other Veſſels: In which Voyage the Duke's Ship ſtriking on the Lemon-ore Sands in Yarmouth Road, the Veſſel was loſt, with above 100 Men, but the Duke and ſeveral others of the greateſt Quality went off timely into a Yacht attending, and arrived ſafely in Scotland; where a little before had been an Inſurrection or Tumult of Apprentices at Edenborough, ſuppreſt by the Soldiers, not without Blood. About the ſame time another Tumult of Apprentices was begun at Dublin, but quickly ſuppreſs'd.

The enſuing Eaſter-Term yielded ſeveral paſſages of publick note in the Kings Bench Court at Weſtminſter: The Earl of Shaftsbury had brought his Action of Scandalum Magnatum againſt one Mr. Craddock, a Citizen and Mercer in Pater-Noſter-Row, for ſpeaking ſome words of the ſaid Earl, importing him to be a Traytor; which Action being laid in London, and the Defendant's Council ſhewing that there was no likelihood of a fair Tryal by a London Jury, by reaſon that the Earl was not only free of the City, but alſo of the Skinners Company, of which Sheriff Pilkinton was Maſter, and that therefore the Jury ought to ariſe out of ſome Neighbouring County; to which the Court enclined, and gave the Earl his choice of any County of England; but the Earl reply'd, That he had rather lay down his Action than admit it to be Tryed in any other County, in regard moſt of them had put Abhorrences upon him. Which poſitive Reſolution of his did confirm the Lord Chief Juſtice in his Opinion of the Earls confiding in a London Jury, and therefore order'd, That unleſs he would conſent to try it by a Country Jury, it ſhould not be tryed in London; whereupon the Earl diſcontinued his Action.

The like Rule was made ſoon after in the ſame Court, between the ſaid Earl and Mr. Graham Principal of Clifford's Inn, againſt whom his Lordſhip had brought an Action of Conſpiracy, he having been appointed by the King's Council to be Solliciter in the Indictment againſt the ſaid Earl at the Old Baily. The like Rule alſo in the Exchequer in Slingsby Bethel's Caſe.

On the 27th of May the Duke, Dutcheſs, and Lady Anne arrived at Whitehall, having been met there by the King and Queen, who came from Windſor that Morning, and were all entertain'd at Dinner that day at my Lord Arlington's at the end of St. James's Park. But the King return'd to Windſor that night.

The next day the King fell ill (occaſion'd as ſuppoſed by ſome Cold caught the day before) of which Indiſpoſition he recover'd again, upon breathing a Vein, in a few days, to the great Joy of his Subjects.

On Tueſday the 6th of June, Captain Ayres, the Pilot of the Gloceſter Frigat lately caſt away when the Duke ſail'd to Scotland, was tryed be-1682. fore Special Commiſſioners of Seamen, and being found Guilty of that grievous Loſs, was ſentenced by the ſaid Commiſſioners to perpetual Impriſonment, and accordingly was committed to the Marſhalſea. Vid. Stat. 13 Car. II. Ch. 9. Art. 25.

About this time it was that the Conventicles in London began to be diſturbed in good earneſt, and the Statute put in execution againſt them. On the 20th of June my Lord Mayor iſſued out his Orders to the Aldermen of all the Wards, to command the Conſtables of every Ward to be up on Sundays, and aſſiſt thoſe who ſhould put the ſaid Statute in execution againſt ſuch as ſhould reſiſt, as it ſeems ſome had done the Sunday before.

Againſt the 24th of June (the Cuſtomary Day for electing Sheriffs of London for the year enſuing) my Lord Mayor iſſued out his Summons to the ſeveral Companies to appear at Guildhall, on the ſaid 24th day of June, for the Confirmation of Mr. Dudly North, (whom his Lordſhip had choſen for one, according to Cuſtom at the Bridge-Houſe Feaſt) and for the choice of another Sheriff. At the day appointed a mighty concourſe of People aſſembled in Guildhall, before my Lord Mayor and Sheriffs ſitting in the Huſtings; there were two Parties appeared in competition, Mr. North and Mr. Box on the one Party, and Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois on the other; but in their polling ſome Difference ariſing, my Lord Mayor adjourn'd the Court by Proclamation to Nine a Clock June the 27th, and departed out of the Hall; notwithſtanding which Adjournment the two Sheriffs continued to poll on till night. The next day, being Sunday, admitted of no Buſineſs, but on Monday Morning my Lord Mayor, the Court of Aldermen, and the two Sheriffs were ſent for to appear before the King and Council, where the matter being fully examined, the two Sheriffs were ſent to the Tower; the Warrant for their Commitment being ſign'd by 24 Privy-Counſellors.

On Tueſday the 27th of June the Common Hall was again adjourn'd over to Wedneſday the 5th of July.

Friday the 30th of June the two Sheriffs above-mention'd were brought by Habeas Corpus to the Kings-Bench Bar, where they were admitted to be Bail'd by four Gentlemen of conſiderable Eſtate, themſelves in 2000 l. a-piece, and the Bail each in 1000 l. At the ſame time they pleaded Not Guilty to an Information for a Tumultuous and Riotous Aſſembly in holding the Common Hall above mention'd after it was adjourn'd and the Aſſembly diſcharg'd.

The Sheriffs being thus at liberty, met at the Common Hall on the 5th of July, and notwithſtanding that the Lord Mayor (being ſick) ſent Order by the Recorder to adjourn the Hall to the 7th following, yet the Sheriffs proceeded in the Election, and declared their Choice of Papillon and Dubois. On the 7th the Mayor and his Party met again at Guildhall, but ſome Diſputes ariſing concerning the laſt Adjournment, four Lawyers were ſent for to the Court of Aldermen to argue the validity of the thing, viz. Sir George Jeffreys and Mr. Saunders for the Mayor, and Mr. Pollexfen and Mr. Williams on the other ſide; but coming to no concluſion, the Court was adjourn'd further to that day ſevenight, being the 14th of July.

On the 13th of July the King was pleaſed to iſſue out an Order of Council in theſe words,

HIS Majeſty having been informed by the Lord Mayor, and divers of the Aldermen of London, that the Diſorders and Riots ariſen in the City upon the Day appointed for the Election of Sheriffs, have been chiefly occaſion'd by the Proceedings of the Common Hall in an irregular way, contrary to what hath been anciently accuſtomed; his Majeſty, by the Advice of his Council, hath thought fit, for the better keeping of the Peace of the City, to direct and hereby to require the Lord Mayor to maintain and preſerve entire the ancient Cuſtoms of the City, and for the better doing thereof, to take effectual Order, that at the Common Hall to be held to morrow all Proceedings be begun anew, and carried on in the uſual manner, as they ought to have been upon the 24th day of June laſt.

This was read the next day in the Common Hall, but oppoſed by the adverſe Party with Noiſe and Clamour, ſome crying out for the Statute 16 Car. I. ch. 10. to be read, wherein there is a Clauſe declaratory, That the Privy-Council have no Authority to examine, determine, or diſpoſe of the Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Goods and Chattels of any of the Subjects of this Kingdom. But this being thought not pertinent to this purpoſe, they proceeded; my Lord Mayor declaring in the firſt place Mr. North duly elected by him, and that he would poll for the other three, viz. Box, Papillon, and Dubois, and accordingly cauſed Books to be fitted with three Columns only. In the mean time the Sheriffs (with a Salvo Jure to their former Election of Midſummer day) went on apart, and polled for four Heads. The next day, being Saturday the 15th, my Lord Mayor declar'd Mr. Box duly elected by the majority of Voices in his Books, and therefore North and Box to be Sheriffs for next year. On the other hand the now Sheriffs declar'd Papillon and Dubois to have the majority in their Books: and ſo the Poll ended.

On the 27th of July the Court of Aldermen aſſembled, not without ſome apprehenſions of a Diſturbance. Two Companies were order'd to be up at the Exchange that day, and the Lieutenancy placed themſelves in the Gallery before the Room where the Aldermen ſate, to keep off the Multitude from preſſing in; a great great number were gathered into Guildhall, for an Answer to a Petition which they had formerly deliver'd to that Court, requiring, that Papillon and Dubois should be call'd forth to give Bond to serve for the two Sheriffs of next year. Some few of the chief of this Party being at last call'd in, my Lord Mayor caused the following Paper to be read to 'em, as his final Answer:

Gentlemen,

THIS Court hath Consider'd of your Petition, and will take care that such persons shall take the Office of Sheriffs upon them as are duly Elected, according to Law and the ancient Customs of this City; and in this and all other things this Court will endeavour to maintain the Rights and Privileges of the Chair, and of the whole City; and wherein ye think that we do otherwise, the Law must judge between us.

With this Answer the Lord Mayor commanded them in the King's Name to depart. And thus this matter rested at that time.

During this Long Vacation, Mr. Box, who had been chosen Sheriff to serve with Mr. North, did think fitting to Fine, rather than take upon him the Office. Hereupon the Lord Mayor at a Common Hall held the 19th of September, proposed the electing of another Sheriff in his place, which tho' much opposed by the adverse Party, crying, No North, No North, No Election, &c. yet the Lord Mayor went on in the Election, and by the majority of his Party Peter Rich Esq; a Lieutenant Colonel in Southwark, and twice a Burgess in Parliament for that Burrough, was chosen, and so declar'd; whereupon the Mayor dissolv'd the Court, and returned to his House.

On the 28th of September in the morning, Mr. Dudly North and Mr. Rich were, according to Custom, sworn Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, before the Lord Mayor in the Hustings. At which time, to prevent a Tumult, a Company of the City Train'd-Bands were drawn up in Guildhall. The 30th of September the said Sheriffs were presented by the Recorder in the Exchequer, and Sworn there, the old Sheriffs giving up their Office at the same time.

On the 5th of November (the 5th happening on a Sunday) the Rabble were so unruly after the Bonfires, that they gather'd together in a great number, at least 1500, crying, a Monmouth, and knocking down such as they suspected not to be of their own Gang; and committing many other riotous actions in Cheapside and thereabouts, till dispersed by my Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, assisted by some of the Train'd-Bands, who took several of the Riotors, and committed them, some to Newgate, some to the Counters. This occasion'd a strict Order of Council November 10. That no person whatsoever should presume to make any Bonfires, without Special Order so to do by the Magistrates. Which Order being vigilantly observ'd by the Justices of Middlesex, and my Lord Mayor, who with the Sheriffs rid up and down the Streets of London all Friday night the 17th of November. No Riotous Actions, nor Burning of the Pope was suffer'd that night, as usual some years past.

On the 24th of November the great Cause was tryed at the Kings-Bench Bar between his Royal Highness and the late Sheriff Pilkinton, for these words spoken of the Plantiff, viz. He fired the City, and now is come to cut our Throats. And the Words being proved by two Aldermen of London, the Jury found for the Plantiff, and gave 100000 l. Damages.

On the last day of the Term Pilkinton render'd himself, in discharge of his Bail, a Prisoner in Execution; into whose place of Alderman was elected Mr. Sheriff North.

On Wednesday the 29th of November dy'd at his House in St. James's Park the illustrious Prince, Rupert Prince Palatine of the Rhine, and Duke of Cumberland, &c. in the 63d year of his Age. After whose death his Majesty was pleased to confer the Constableship of Windsor-Castle on the right honourable the Earl of Arundel.

On Monday the 18th of December the right honourable Heneage Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Chancellor of England, departed this Life; into whose Office succeeded Sir Francis North, then Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas.

This year came into England two very extraordinary Ambassadors; one was from the Emperor of Fez and Morocco, his Name Hamet Ben Hamet Ben Haddu Ottar, a Man of great eminency in his own Country, as Report says: His business about setling a Peace with Tangier; much respected he was here, carress'd at Court, and at both the Universities, and he seemed to express no less esteem for our Nation. But at his return, upon what account I know not, he was reported to be receiv'd by his Master with disgrace. The other Ambassador was from the King of Bantham, or Surosoam, in the East Indies; his Business about the East India Trade.

This year the King concluded a Treaty of Peace and Commerce with Algiers.

In March ill News arriv'd from the East-Indies, importing the loss of the great Town of Bantham to the Dutch; who under colour of assisting the Rebel-prince of Bantham against the King his Father, came with Forces and seized upon the Town, turning out the English there, to the great damage of our English Factory. 1683.

On Thursday the 22th of March happen'd a sudden Fire at Newmarket, about eight in the Evening, which consumed a great part of that Town; but by the Providence of God came not on that side of the way where the King's Palace stood.

The Monday following the King, Queen, Duke and Dutchess returned to Whitehall, where the Court continued till Saturday the 14th of April, on which day his Majesty and his Royal Court departed to Windsor.

1683. On Tuesday the 24th of April, one Broom, Clerk of Skinners Hall, and Coroner of London, having a Latitat out of the Kings-Bench, in an Action upon the Case at the Suit of Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois, against my Lord Mayor, Sheriff North, and several Aldermen; the said Broom acquainting them with the Writ, they all submitted to his Arrest, and went with him as Prisoners to Skinners Hall, and there remain'd under his Custody till one a clock at night: In the mean time eight Companies of the Militia are raised by order of the Lieutenancy, and are posted all that Night in several parts of the City, to prevent any Tumults which might happen on so new a thing as the Arrest and Detainer of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London; a thing never heard of before in the Times of Peace. And it so happen'd that one Fletcher a Common Serjeant of the Poultry Counter, having an Action of Debt upon Bond of 400 l. against the said Broom, which Action had been enter'd the Week past, Arrests his person in Skinners Hall, and carries him forthwith to the Counter. Broom being thus gone, and no body left in Charge of my Lord Mayor and his fellow Prisoners, they demanded if there was any about the House that had any Orders to detain 'em any longer in that place; which being answer'd in the Negative, they all departed peaceably to their several Homes.

On Tuesday the 8th of May was tryed at Guildhall, before my Lord Chief Justice Saunders, the Riot committed last June at the Election of Sheriffs for London and Middlesex. And this was upon an Information exhibited in the Crown Office by Mr. Attorney-General, of which I made mention formerly. Upon Evidence 14 persons were found Guilty, viz. the then Sheriffs Pilkinton and Shute, the Lord Gray of Wark, Sir Thomas Player, Cornish, Bethel, Finks, Goodenough, Deagle, Jekel, Freeman, Wickham, Keys, and Swinock. On the last day but one of Trinity Term they were all Fined severally, as follows: Pilkinton 500 l. Shute 1000 Marks, Cornish the same sum, Lord Gray the same, Sir Thomas Player 500 marks, Bethel 1000 marks, Finks 300 marks, Deagle 400 marks, Freeman 300 marks, Goodenough 500 marks, Keys 100 marks, Wickham 100 marks, Swinnock 500 marks, and Jekel 200 marks.

On Wednesday the 6th of June was held a Common-Council at Guildhall in London, where all the treasonable and irregular Acts of that Court, in the times of Rebellion, were repeal'd, and a Bill past'd in the said Common Council for declaring and asserting the ancient Rights of the Chair; by which Bill my Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen were restor'd to their negative Voice, which had been taken away by an Act in the late Rebellious Times, and never question'd before that. Also it was at this Common Council declar'd and enacted, That my Lord Mayor has sufficient and lawful power of chusing one Sheriff. And accordingly my Lord Mayor did the next day declare his choice at the Bridge-House Feast, by drinking to Mr. Alderman Daniel, as one of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, for the year ensuing.

On the first Tuesday in Trinity Term, 1683, Judgment was given in the Court of Kings-Bench, in the Quo Warranto brought last Trinity Term against the City of London; the Pleadings were large on both sides. The chief Crimes on which this Writ was grounded were two: For exacting Tolls in their Markets illegally, and for framing and printing a scandalous Petition, wherein they charged the King with obstructing the Justice of the Nation, by proroguing the last Parliament. Whether these were sufficient causes of seizing their Liberties was argued pro and con by the Sollicitor-General and the Recorder last Hillary Term, and by the Attorney-General, and Mr. Pollexfen, last Term, very largely and elaborately: And now (my Lord Chief Justice Saunders being sick and absent) Justice Jones having concisely summed up all the Proceedings past, in a very pithy and solid Speech, gave Judgment, and declar'd it to be the unanimous Opinion of that Court, That the Liberties and Franchises of the City of London be seized into the King's Hands. After which he declar'd by the King's expres Order, That Judgment should not be enter'd till his Majesty's pleasure be further known.

Thursday the 14th of June was held a Common Council in London, at which Court the following Petition was order'd to be presented to the King at Windsor; it was entitul'd, The humble Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled; 'It acknowledg'd their hearty and 'unfeigned Sorrow for the misgovernment of 'that City of late years, which occasion'd a 'Quo Warranto to be brought against them and 'Judgment therein; That they are deeply 'sensible, and thankfully acknowledge the 'King's great Favour in not requiring Judg'ment to be immediately enter'd thereon: In 'this distressed condition they humbly cast 'themselves at his Royal Feet, imploring his 'Princely Compassion and Grace, begging Par'don for all Offences, with most solemn Pro'mises and Assurances of constant Loyalty and 'Obedience to His Majesty, his Heirs and Suc'cessors, and of a regular Administration of 'his Government in that City for the future; 'and humbly beg his Majesty's Commands and 'Directions. This Petition was carried and presented by the Lord Mayor, and several Aldermen and Citizens of London on Monday the 18th of June; after which my Lord Keeper, by the King's Command, declar'd, 'That for 'the sakes of so many of the present Magistrates 'and other eminent Citizens in London, who 'are of undoubted Loyalty and Affection to his 'Majesty's Service, his Majesty will shew the 'City all the Favour they can reasonably de'sire: In fine, That his Majesty requires their 'Submission to these Regulations, That no 'Lord Mayor, Sheriff, Recorder, Common 'Serjeant, Town-Clerk, or Coroner of Lon'don, or Steward of Southwark, shall be capa'ble of or admitted to the exercise of their re'spective Offices, before his Majesty shall have 'approved them under his own Sign manual; 'That his Majesty's disapproving the Mayor 'twice, he may if he please nominate a Lord 'Mayor himself; so also for Sheriffs: Never'theless, the Election of these Officers may be 'according to the ancient usage of the City,

'with

'with ſome ſmall Reſtrictions then ſpecified.

On Wedneſday the 20th of June was held a Court of Common Council again at Guildhall; the Queſtion being put, whether they ſhould aſſent and ſubmit to his Majeſty's Order of Regulation, as above expreſs'd, it was carried in the Affirmative by the majority of eighteen Voices.

Towards the end of this Trinity Term another Plot was diſcover'd, deſign'd to be carried on by ſome diſcontented perſons to the Government; the firſt Diſcoverer whereof was one Keeling, who gave a long and confuſed Narration thereof; and upon his examination impeach'd ſeveral perſons of mean Rank, but not a word all this while of any of the Nobility, or any Perſon of Quality; till ſome of the Evidence who were firſt and deepeſt involv'd, and now ſtrugling as it were for Life, the better to eaſe themſelves, threw the weight of the Plot chiefly on my Lord Ruſſel, the Earl of Eſſex, Colonel Sidney, Mr. Hambden, &c. As for the Duke of Monmouth, who was under the ſame Accuſation, he withdrew himſelf for a time, but a Proclamation following him at the Heel, he came in and ſurrender'd himſelf to Mr. Secretary Jenkins, where it was ſaid that he made a Confeſſion of the whole Conſpiracy; but without the leaſt deſign upon his Majeſty's Life, which he firmly denied to have ever thought of; and gave his Majeſty much greater light into many particulars of it, than he could poſſibly elſe have obtain'd. Upon which the King granted him his Pardon; which no ſooner was obtain'd, but he began to aſſert the Innocence of ſome that had ſuffer'd. This caus'd the King to remind the Duke of his late Promiſes, and demanded of him ſome ſuch ſatisfaction to the Nation in publick, as he had already given his Majeſty in private; which he ſeemed ready to comply with, and accordingly ſubſcrib'd a Letter of the ſame import with the Confeſſion he had made to the King. But finding what uſe ſome People made of his coming in, and fearing leſt ſome Opportunity might be taken from it by his Enemies, to blaſt his Reputation, and perhaps to bring him to give Evidence againſt others, which tho' his Majeſty often aſſur'd him to the contrary, yet he perſiſted in his Requeſt, That the Paper might be reſtor'd; which at laſt the King told him he would no longer keep, but withal baniſh'd him his preſence.

Mr. Weſt of the Temple was firſt apprehended, examin'd, and committed. And His Majeſty's Proclamation, dated the 23d of June, came out for the apprehenſion of others who had conſpired againſt the Lives of his moſt Sacred Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, viz. Colonel John Rumſey, Richard Rumbold Maſſter, Richard Nelthorp Eſq; Edward Wade Gent. Richard Goodenough Gent. Capt. Walcot, William Thompſon, James Burton, and William Hone; for the Diſcovery of any of which 100 l. was offer'd as a Reward to the Diſcoverer. Alſo another Proclamation came out not long after, dated the 28th of June, for the apprehending of James Duke of Monmouth, Ford Lord Gray, Sir Thomas Armſtrong Knight, and Robert Ferguſon, who were alſo fled; for the diſcovery of any of which 500 l. was offer'd as a Reward to the Diſcoverer. The Crimes alledged in the ſaid Proclamations are, For Trayterouſly conſpiring to compaſs the Death and Deſtruction of the King, and his deareſt Brother the Duke of York, to effect which they have held ſeveral Treaſonable Conſultations to Levy Men, and to make an Inſurrection in this Kingdom. 1683.

On the 2d of July the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, in a Body, waited on his Majeſty in the Banqueting-Houſe, and preſented him with their Addreſs of Congratulation, 'Importing 'their Thanks to Almighty God for bringing 'to light this impious and execrable Machina'tion, deſigned for the deſtruction of his Ma'jeſty's Royal Perſon, and of his deareſt Bro'ther James Duke of York, and for the de'ſtruction of his Majeſty's beſt Subjects, and 'to involve this and the future Generation in 'Confuſion, Blood, and Miſery, carried on 'by Conventiclers and Atheiſtical Perſons, &c. Which Addreſs being Graciouſly received by his Majeſty, they then waited on his Royal Highneſs, and made their complement to him on the ſame occaſion. After which almoſt innumerable Addreſſes on the ſame Subject flow'd from all parts of the Kingdom. At the ſame time alſo the Ambaſſadors and Miniſters of Foreign Princes congratulated his Majeſty in their Maſters Names for his happy Delivery from the deſigned Aſſaſſination. The King of France alſo publiſh'd in his Dominions an Edict or Proclamation for the apprehenſion of thoſe Four mention'd in our King's Proclamation of June the 28th, and propoſed 500 Piſtols for the Diſcovery of each.

On the 12th of July was tryed at the Old Baily the above-mention'd Captain Walcot, for this Conſpiracy, and upon Evidence was found Guilty of High Treaſon. The next day the Lord Ruſſel, eldeſt Son and Heir apparent to the Earl of Bedford, was Tryed for the ſame Treaſon, and upon Evidence given by the Lord Howard of Eſcrick, and others, was found Guilty. The ſame day alſo Hone and Rouſe were tryed and found Guilty of the ſame Crime. All which received Sentence of Death the next day from the Recorder, viz. the Lord Ruſſel by himſelf, and Walcot, Hone, and Rouſe together; but the Judgment was the ſame, to be Drawn, Hang'd, and Quarter'd. During the Tryal of the Lord Ruſſel, four Companies of the Guards were drawn into Lincoln's-Inn-Field, and there poſted all the day; two Companies of the Trained Bands in St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, and a Party of the Life-Guard waited at the Gates of the Old Baily, attending upon the Lord Howard.

In the mean time, viz. on Friday the 13th of July, about Nine of the Clock in the Morning, while my Lord Ruſſel was upon his Tryal, News was brought into the Court of the Old Baily, That the Earl of Eſſex being at this time a Priſoner in the Tower, on the account of this New Plot, had murder'd himſelf, by cutting his Throat with a Razor, thereby to prevent the Hand of publick Juſtice: which Fact was urg'd by ſome of the Council againſt my Lord, as a confirmation of the Plot and my 1683. Lord Ruſſel's Guilt. But to moſt people it ſeem'd little probable that he ſhould do Violence to himſelf, being a perſon of great Seriouſneſs and Piety; and that which encreas'd the Suſpicion of his not having had fair play, was, that he had been privy to the diſcovery of moſt of the ſecret Intrigues of the Popiſh Plot.

Lord

On Friday the 20th of July Three of the aforeſaid condemn'd perſons were executed at Tyburn, viz. Walcot, Hone, and Rouſe, according to the common Judgment in Treaſon, Drawn, Hang'd, and Quarter'd. But the Lord Ruſſel, by reaſon of his noble Birth, had the Favour from the King to have the common Judgment mitigated, and was on the day following, viz. Saturday the 21ſt of July, beheaded in Lincolns-Inn Fields. Ten Companies of the Guards, and a Troop of Horſe were drawn up in the Fields at that time, to ſecure the Peace againſt ſo vaſt a concourſe of people as appear'd there on that occaſion. The Lord Ruſſel was beheaded by three ſtroaks of the Executioner, at half an hour after Ten in the morning.

On the ſame day, the 21th of July, was aſſembled a Convocation of the Univerſity of Oxford, in their Convocation Houſe there; at which, in a ſolemn and formal manner they condemn'd 27 Propoſitions, as falſe, ſeditious, and impious, and moſt of them heretical and blaſphemous, infamous to Chriſtian Religion, and deſtructive of all Government, both in Church and State: Which wicked Propoſitions were collected out of ſeveral modern Authors, namely, Buchanan, Milton, Hobs, Goodwin, Baxter, Julian, Proteſtant Reconciler, &c. Which ſaid Books were at the ſame time order'd to be Burnt, and were Burnt in the Court of the Schools of the ſaid Univerſity.

On Saturday the 28th of July, being St. Anns Day, about Ten in the Evening, the Lady Ann ſecond Daughter to his Royal Highneſs, was married to Prince George, Brother to the King of Denmark, which Prince arrived at Whitehall the Thurſday ſevennight before. The Ceremony of the Marriage was perform'd by the Biſhop of London, in the preſence of the King, Queen, Duke, and Dutcheſs, with moſt of the great Perſonages of the Court. All that night and the next, the Bells proclaim'd the publick Joy. And preſently after they receiv'd the Congratulations of all the Ambaſſadors and publick Miniſters in Town. The like alſo from the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, in their Scarlet.

Soon after which was publiſh'd his Majeſty's Declaration to all his loving Subjects, dated the 28th of July, whereby was ſet forth a ſhort Narration of the Treaſonable Conſpiracy, as it hath been lately diſcover'd; for which happy Diſcovery his Majeſty appointed by the ſaid Declaration a ſolemn day of Thankſgiving to Almighty God, to be celebrated throughout the Kingdom, on Sunday the 9th day of September next; and that the ſaid Declaration be publickly read in all Churches, as well on Sunday the 2d day of September, as on the Day of Thankſgiving aforeſaid. The ſame Day of Thankſgiving was alſo appointed to be obſerv'd in Scotland, which was perform'd accordingly.

On Michaelmas Day, the uſual time for the Election of a new Lord Mayor, the Choice was Adjourn'd over for ſix days longer; but before that day came, the King being diſpleas'd at the Delays of the City in not ſigning the Particulars by their Common Council formerly yielded, relating to their Charter, cauſed the Attorney-General to enter Judgment of Seizure in the Quo Warranto, which was done on Thurſday the 4th of October; and thereupon his Majeſty gave Sir William Prichard his Commiſſion to execute the Office of Lord Mayor of London during Pleaſure; ſo alſo to the two new Sheriffs, Mr. Daniel and Mr. Daſhwood, all which were ſworn with the uſual Oaths. At the ſame time Mr. Jenner of the Inner Temple was Knighted by the Name of Sir Thomas Jenner, and made the King's Recorder of London, in the room of Sir George Treby diſplac'd.

On Sunday the 7th of October my Lord Mayor and the two Sheriffs appear'd at Guildhall Chapel as uſually, in their Gowns and Chains, but none of the Aldermen in their Gowns and Chains, only ſome of them attended in their ordinary Habits, Sixteen of them being made Juſtices of the Peace by the King's new Commiſſion, in which eight other Aldermen were left out, viz. Allin, Frederick, Lawrence, Clayton, Ward, Shorter, Gold, and Corniſh. But on Saturday the 13th of October the King ſent a new Commiſſion to the City, impowering the aboveſaid ſixteen Aldermen, together with eight new Aldermen, viz. Sir Benjamin Newland, Sir Benjamin Bathurſt, Sir John Buckworth, Samuel Daſhwood, (one of the preſent Sheriffs) Charles Duncomb, Jacob Lucy, Peter Paravicine, and Benjamin Thorogood, to act as Aldermen in their ſeveral Wards in the ſaid Commiſſion mention'd. And accordingly ſeveral of them attended on my Lord Mayor the day following at Guildhall Chapel, after the uſual form and manner, in Gowns and Chains, and the next week aſſembled in a Court of Aldermen, as formerly.

On the 5th of November ſeveral Tumults and Riotous Actions being committed by the Rabble in and about London; eſpecially upon the Sieur Citters, Ambaſſador from the United Provinces, by aſſaulting his Coach, and throwing into it ſeveral Squibs, Stones, and Firebrands, whereby his Lady, who was then with him, was dangerouſly wounded; and complaint hereof being made to the King in Council on the 7th of November, His Majeſty was pleaſed to order for the future, 'That no Perſon or Perſons whatſoever do preſume to throw any 'Squibs or other Fireworks in the Streets of 'London or Weſtminſter, or other place within 'the Weekly Bills of Mortality, nor aſſemble 'together for the making of Bonfires: And the 'Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Juſtices of Peace in 'their reſpective Limits, are required to take 'due care for the performance of the ſaid Order 'of Council.

On the 22th of November, 1685, this Michaelmas Term, Alderman Sidney Eſq; was arraign'd at the Kings-Bench Bar for High-Treaſon, being accus'd to be one of the Council of Six in the aforeſaid Plot, and for ſending a Meſſenger into Scotland, to invite them into Rebellion, and for writing a Treaſonable Libel found in his Cloſet.

The

The Lord Howard depos'd, That he was one of the Council of Six, and that he sent a Messenger into Scotland, to invite hither Melvin, Cockram, and the Campbels. And several other persons witnessed, That those persons were in Town about that time. Concerning the Libel, it was prov'd, that it was found in Colonel Sidney's Closet, and (as far as such a matter will bear) to be of his own Hand-writing. To which he answer'd, That the Papers, if they were his, might be written long since in answer to Filmer's, and for his own Diversion, not for Publication; denied he sent the Messengers, &c. But upon the Evidence was found Guilty; and on the 26th, being the Monday following, he was brought to the said Bar, and receiv'd Sentence of Death, as in cases of High Treason, and was Beheaded on Tower-Hill the 7th of December following.

On the last day of Michaelmas Term, six Prisoners, then in the Tower for High Treason, were Bail'd, viz. the Lord Brandon, Gerard Mr. Booth, Mr. Trenchard, Mr. Hamden Junior, Mr. Charleton, and Major Wildman, all which being accused for Conspirators in the late Plot, and but one Witness against them, they were Bail'd out in 2000 l. apiece; and 1000 l. their Sureties, except Mr. Hamden, against whom there being a Bill of Indictment for high Misdemeanours, he was bound in 10000 l. himself, and 5000 l. his Sureties.

Friday the 4th of January, the Lord Peters, who had lain a long time a Prisoner in the Tower on the account of Oates's Plot, without being brought to his Tryal, departed this Life in his said confinement.

This Year was remarkable abroad for the formidable and bloody Descent of the Turks into Hungary. The Mahometan Army consisting of 150000 fighting Men, Horse and Foot, came before Vienna on the 9th of July, Commanded by the Grand Visier in Person. The Emperor had retir'd two days before, and left the City under the Command of Count Starenberg, who defended it bravely, notwithstanding all the bloody Assaults and utmost Endeavours of the Enemy, till on the 12 of September the Siege was rais'd, in the heighth of the Defendant's Extremity, by the coming of the King of Poland; who having joyn'd with the Imperial Forces commanded by the Duke of Lorain, not only beat off and routed the Turkish Army, with vast Slaughter, and no less Booty, but pursuing his Blow, took from them the Fort of Barkan, and the City of Gran, (formerly call'd Strigonium) after it had been possess'd by the Turks 78 years. Which City had been formerly, before it was lost by the Christians, the Metropolitan City of Hungary. To the Glory of the English Nation, some of our Country-men were present at the Siege of Vienna, in defence of which they signaliz'd their Valour. In particular the Lord Lansdown, eldest Son of the Earl of Bath, whom for his extraordinary Merits the Emperor created a Count of the Sacred Empire, an Honour which the Ancestors of the Lord Arundel of Wardor had formerly attain'd in the defence of Strigonium.

One thing more renders this Year remarkable, which was partly domestick, and partly foreign. Tangier in Africa being possess'd by the Portugals, came to the Crown of England with Queen Catherine, and having cost our King since he had it vast Sums of Mony in defending it against the Moors, and also in making the greatest part of a Mole there, which not being found so feasible as expected, the Charges very great and certain, the expectation of any Advantage from thence very uncertain, His Majesty was pleased about the end of this last Summer to commission my Lord Dartmouth, attended with about 20 sail of Ships, to go and utterly to demolish the said Town, Castle, and Mole at Tangier, to choke up the Haven, and to bring off the Ordnance and English Inhabitants to England, sending the Foreigners to their several Countries, but first compounding with every man for his Ground, Estate, and Property in their several Houses; all which was accordingly done in about six months time.

The Bailing the Lords in the Tower had been often mov'd for, yet could never be obtain'd till now. The Earl of Danby's Case was argu'd Hilary Term, 1683, and on the last day of the Term, being February the 14th, the Judges in the Kings-Bench did severally give their Opinions and their Reasons for the same, concluding all in one Judgment, That his Lordship ought to be Bail'd; and accordingly Bail was taken.

The other Lords, viz. the Earl of Powis, the Lord Arundel of Wardor, and the Lord Bellasis, being within the same Reason, were admitted to the same Advantage; as also the Earl of Tyrone, who had lain Prisoner in the Gatehouse about the same space of time with those in the Tower.

The principal Lords were bound in a Recognizance of 10000 l. each, and their several Bail in 5000 l. each, upon Condition, that the above mention'd principal Lords do appear in the House of Lords the next Sessions of Parliament, and not depart without Leave of that Court.

On the same day Mr. John Hamden receiv'd Judgment. He had been accus'd and committed for High Treason in the late Conspiracy, but in regard there wanted the Circumstance of two Witnesses against him, which is necessary in all cases of that nature, he was indicted and tryed in the Kings-Bench Court this Term, and found Guilty of a high Trespass and Misdemeanor, in conspiring to levy War, &c. and now his Judgment was, That he should pay 40000 l. for a Fine to the King, and find Sureties for his good Behaviour during Life, and to be Committed till this be paid and done.

Acts of Hostility being fiercely pursued this Spring between the French and Spaniard, both by Sea and Land, His Majesty of Great Britain being concern'd on neither side, but at Amity with both, was pleas'd to command by his Proclamation dated at Newmarket, March the 12th, That the Peace should be kept inviolably on both sides, in all Roads, Creeks, and Ports of his Dominions, and that all his Commanders and Officers should oppose themselves against 1684. any that should assault any of the Ships of his Allies in any his Roads, Creeks, or places under his protection, &c.

On the 21st of April, James Holloway Merchant being outlaw'd in Treason, having been Indicted for the late Conspiracy and fled, was brought to the Kings-Bench Bar; where the Attorney-General declared to the Court, and the Court to him, That if he thought he could make himself appear Not Guilty, the King would wave his Attainder by Outlawry, and he might stand a Tryal by a Jury: But he declar'd, That he could not undertake to make himself appear Not Guilty, for he had confest his Guilt to the King: Whereupon a Rule of Court was made for his Execution on the 30th of the present April, on which day he was accordingly executed.

On Saturday the 10th of May, Titus Oates was arrested at the Amsterdam Coffee-house, in an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, at the Suit of his Royal Highness the Duke of York, for calling the said Duke Traytor. He was carried to Woodstreet-Compter, where he lay two days, and was then remov'd by Habeas Corpus to the Kings-Bench Prison. The next Term he let Judgment go by default, and on the last day of the Term a Writ of Enquiry of Damages was executed at the Kings-Bench Bar, where the Jury upon hearing the Evidence gave 100000 l. Damages.

About the beginning of May the King was pleased to revoke and determine the Commission (formerly granted to several Commissioners) for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of England, and to commit those Affairs to the care of his Royal Highness.

Also in this Month of May a Noble and most Elaborate Statue of his Majesty, in grey Marble, was erected on a curious Pedestal of the same, in the very middle or center of the Royal Exchange; the Garb and Habit was that of a Roman Cæsar; the Workman that cut it was Mr. Grinlin Gibbons. This was perform'd at the charge of the Hamborough Company, and cost 1500 l.

The Inscription on the Pedestal is,

Carolo II Cæsari Britannico,

Anno Sal. Humanæ
MDCLXXXIV.

On the 28th of May his Majesty was pleased to declare in Council at Hampton-Court, That he thought it fit, and for his Service, that his Royal Highness should be present at the Meetings of the Council.

And accordingly the Duke sate that day, and continued so to do.

On Wednesday the 11th of June Sir Thomas Armstrong was brought to London, and committed to Newgate, in order to his Execution, being outlaw'd in High Treason. He had been taken at Leyden in Holland, by Order of the States there, and immediately brought to Rotterdam, and Ship'd away for England. He was executed at Tyburn on the 20th of June, being a Friday.

On the 7th of July the City of Durham surrender'd their Charter into the Hands of their Prince the Bishop of Durham, soon after which surrender he granted them a new one, reserving to himself the Confirmation of their Mayor, Aldermen, and chief Officers, in like manner as the King had done before in other parts of this Kingdom, most Corporations having surrender'd and renew'd about this time.

On the first of October was made a Review or Muster of his Majesty's Land Forces on Putney-Heath, a most gallant military appearance. The Horse that day consisted of the Three Troops of Guards, and their Granadiers, with the Earl of Oxford's Regiment of Horse Guards, and the Lord Churchil's Regiment of Dragoons. The Foot were two Batalions form'd from the Royal Regiment of Guards and their Granadiers; one Batalion from the Coldstream Regiment of Guards and Granadiers; one Batalion from the Earl of Dunbarton's Regiment and their Granadiers, and one from the Admiral Regiment. The total of Horse and Foot which then rendezvouz'd were above 4000 advantagiously trained and well clad Men; all being that day commanded by the Earl of Craven. At which Review both their Majesties and Royal Highnesses were present, with great satisfaction.

About this time his Majesty was pleas'd to Dissolve the Commission formerly granted in the year 1681, to certain Commissioners, to dispose of Ecclesiastical Preferments belonging to the Crown.

Sir William Pritchard, late Lord Mayor of London, having this Summer brought his Action upon the Case against Mr. Papillon, for causing him to be Arrested in the time of his Mayoralty without any legal cause of Action (of which I made mention in the last year) the Cause was tryed before my Lord Chief Justice Jeffreys by Nisi Prius at Guildhall, on the 6th of November, and upon hearing of the Evidence, the Jury found for the Plaintiff, and gave him 10000 l. Damages.

About this time News arrived at London of the most barbarous Act in Scotland that has been heard of in many years. Some desperate Rebels there had in the Night-time affixed a most Villanous and Traitorous Paper unto several Crosses and Church-Doors in that Country, and therein declar'd War against the King (under the name of Charles Stuart) and publish'd their Resolutions to kill and destroy all those that serve and adhere to him; in pursuance whereof, they came on the 19th of November at Night (being about 36 Footmen, and 16 Horsemen) to an Inn call'd Swine-Abbey, 13 miles from Edenborough, and there barbarously murder'd two Gentlemen of his Majesty's Horse-Guards in their Beds, cutting and mangling their Bodies, and carrying away with them several pieces of their Flesh.

Also this Michaelmas Term, on the 13th of November, Titus Oates was in the Kings-Bench Court indicted for Perjury, in relation to Ireland's being in London at that time the said Oates Swore to at his Tryal; to which Indictment he pleading Not Guilty; the Tryal was appointed to be next Term. After this, at the Sessions in the Old Baily, December the 12th, he was again indicted upon another Indictment of Perjury, in relation to his being present at the Consult of the Jesuits at the White horse Tavern, and upon Not Guilty pleaded, this also was appointed to be Try'd in the Kings-Bench Court next Term; and the Indictment was remov'd thither.

The Roads being this Winter extreamly infested with Robbers, his Majesty was pleased, on the 19th of December, to Order in Council, and declare his Pleasure for redress, 'That all 'his Officers of Justice, and other his loving 'Subjects, do use their utmost Diligence and 'Endeavour for the apprehending all Robbers 'and Highway-men; and for the encouragement of such as shall apprehend any such 'Offender, it was further order'd, That such 'Person or Persons, who shall at any time, from 'the present till the 19th of December, 1685, 'and after that day, till his Majesty shall please 'to recall this Order, either by Proclamation or his Order in Council, apprehend any Robber or Highway-man, and cause him to be brought into Custody, shall within 15 days after his conviction have a Reward of 10 l. for every such Offender so apprehended and convicted; and all Sheriffs of the respective Counties where such Conviction shall be had, are by the said Order required, upon the Certificate of the Judge, or two or more Justices of the Peace, before whom such persons shall be convicted of such Apprehension and Conviction, to pay unto the Person or Persons who shall apprehend such Offenders the Reward aforesaid, within the time aforesaid, out of His Majesty's Moneys received by such Sheriff or Sheriffs in that County where such Conviction shall be, which shall be allow'd unto him or them upon his or their accounts in the Exchequer. And all Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, Justices of the Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, and other Officers and Persons whatsoever, were required to take notice of the said Order, and to be aiding and assisting in all things tending to the execution of the same, as they render his Majesty's displeasure, and upon pain of being proceeded against as contemners of his Majesty's Royal Authority. 1684

And now all things seem'd to be reduc'd to a quiet composure, with a general and easie submission to the Government, after so many years of Discontent and Troubles, when it pleased Almighty God to determine his Majesty's Life and Reign on the 6th of February, 1684.

Here, in Conformity to our Author's Method in former Reigns, the Reader may expect to find an Account of this King's Person, Age, and Conditions, of his Marriage and Issue, of his Death and Burial, of Casualties happening in his Reign, and of Famous Men that then appear'd in this Kingdom. Of all which briefly.

Of his Personage and Conditions.

KING Charles II. was tall, and well proportion'd; his Complexion black, but Manly and Majestical; a certain Goodness of Nature and noble Benignity appear'd in his Looks; his Mein had in it all the marks of a Royal Ayre, but nothing of a Tyrant; he had experienc'd many Hardships, and known the Severities of Fortune, yet was his Countenance seldom or never disturb'd, but, like a Prince, sedate and untroubl'd: He was a great Lover and Promoter of all Liberal and Useful Arts, in which himself had more than a superficial Knowledge. Most People now living in this Kingdom have been his Subjects, and do well remember both his Person and Reign, and I doubt not but all good Englishmen have, from the Informations of their own Conscience, a just and lively Idea of both.

Of his Marriage and Issue.

HE married Dona Katherina Infanta of Portugal, a most virtuous and pious Princess, who survived him; but he never had Issue by her, a Misfortune not his alone, but the whole Nation's. Natural Issue he had several, by divers Mistresses, whose Names I find thus express'd in an Author who pretends to much exactness, viz. By Mrs. Lucy Walters, alias Barlow, Athen. Oxon. par. 2. p. 828, 829.

low, James Scot, created Duke of Monmouth. By the Lady Boyle Viſcounteſs Shannon, Charlotte who married for her ſecond Husband William Son and Heir apparent of Robert Lord Paſton, afterwards Earl of Yarmouth. By Mrs. Katherine Pegge, Charles Fitz Charles, (commonly called Don Carlos) created Earl of Plimouth. By Barbara Counteſs of Caſtlemain, (afterwards created Dutcheſs of Cleaveland) Charles Fitz Roy, created Duke of Southampton; Henry Fitz Roy, created Duke of Grafton; George Fitz Roy, created Duke of Northumberland; and Charlotte, married to Sir Edward Henry Lee Earl of Litchfield. By Mrs. Ellen Gwin, Charles Beauclerc, created Duke of St. Albans; and another Son named James, who dy'd young. By Louiſa de Querouelle, a French Lady, created Dutcheſs of Portſmouth, Charles Lenos, created Duke of Richmond. By Mrs. Mary Davies, Mary Tudor, married to Edward Son and Heir apparent to Sir Francis Ratcliff Earl of Darwentwater.

Of his Death and Burial.

THE King had been, in his later years, ſurpriz'd with ſome Fits of an Apoplexy, from which tho' he had been recover'd by the uſe of proper means, yet it was much fear'd that at ſome time or other ſuch like Fits might be fatal. And ſo it proved. For on Monday the 2d of February 1684, he was ſeiz'd at his Palace of Whitehall with a violent Fit, between ſeven and eight in the morning, by which his Speech and Senſes were for ſome time taken from him; but upon the immediate application of fitting Remedies, he return'd to ſuch a condition as gave ſome hopes of his recovery, till Wedneſday night, at which time the Diſeaſe returning upon him with greater Violence, he prepar'd for Death in a moſt pious and Chriſtian manner, and ſaid ſeveral things to his Queen, and to his Royal Brother the then Duke of York, in the moſt tender Expreſſions imaginable, having his Senſes entire, and his Speech perfect, till about an hour before his departure, which was between eleven and twelve on Friday Morning, the 6th day of February, in the 55th year of his Age, and the beginning of the 37th of his Reign. His Body was open'd and embalm'd, and alſo his Head open'd, in the preſence of the moſt eminent Phyſicians and Chyrurgeons about London. On the 14th of February, about Ten a clock in the Night, his Funeral was privately perform'd. The Solemnity proceeded from the Painted Chamber at Weſtminſter to the Abbey Church there. His Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark was the Chief Mourner (his Train born up by the Lord Cornbury). The Supporters to the Chief Mourner were the Dukes of Somerſet and Beaufort, wearing their Collars of the Order (as all the other Knights of the Garter then preſent did). The Aſſiſtants to the Chief Mourner ſixteen Earls. One of the Kings of Arms carried the Crown and Cuſhion. At the entrance into the Church, the Dean and Prebends, attended by the Quire, met the Body (which was carried under a Velvet Canopy born by Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, ſix Earls ſupporting the Pall). Thus they proceeded to King Henry the Seventh's Chapel, where it was interr'd in a Vault under the Eaſt end of the South Iſle. The Office of Burial was perform'd by Dr. Sprat Dean of Weſtminſter, and Biſhop of Rocheſter. Service being ended, and the Officers of his Houſhold having broken their Staves, the Royal Style was proclaim'd by another of the Kings of Arms, according to Cuſtom.

Of Remarkable Caſualties in his Reign.

OF the great Plague in the Year 1665, and the dreadful Fire at London in the following Year, I have already given a particular account in the courſe of the Hiſtory. Of leſſer Accidents, ſuch as extraordinary Heats or Colds, Rains, Snows, Hails, or Droughts, or ſuch Extremities of Weather, I think them not proper Remarks of Hiſtory; ſo alſo for Meteors, for tho' they are much talk'd of when they happen, yet they are ſoon forgotten, and not thought worth remembring, being in a few years time ſucceeded by ſomething of the ſame kind, and ſo no longer admired. I ſhall mention only one, which in all its circumſtances, has not, perhaps, been parallel'd in many Ages; I mean the Great Froſt in the year 1683. It began about the middle of December, and laſted without any conſiderable intermiſſion till the 5th of February; during which time the Thames was frozen over with a ſolid and contiguous Ice in all places above the Bridge, Booths built thereon, Thouſands of People continually walking over, and ſliding. About the 9th of January Coaches drove over at Somerſet-houſe, and at the Temple. On the 23d of January, being the firſt day of Hillary Term, Lawyers and others, who had Affairs at Weſtminſter, went over the Ice from the Temple to Weſtminſter-hall, and back again, as familiarly as on the Land; ſome walk'd, and ſome went in Coaches, which carried People between the Temple-Stairs and Weſtminſter for the ſame Fare as by Land, and ply'd at thoſe two places (tho' not in ſo great numbers) as the Watermen do in Summer. Abundance of Booths were erected croſs between the Temple and Southwark, in which place an abſolute Fair was held for above a fortnight, of almoſt all ſorts of Trades; and Printing Preſſes erected both for Letters and Pictures; a Bull baited, a Fox hunted, and a whole Ox roaſted on the Ice over againſt Whitehall. Nor was this Froſt thus wonderful only above the Bridge, but Booths were erected, and People paſs'd over on the Ice frequently in divers places below Bridge.

Bridge; and the Sea it ſelf frozen for ſome miles from the Shore on the Coaſts of England, France, and Holland; inſomuch that for above a fortnight no Packet-Boat, or any other Veſſel of Intelligence, could either come out of thoſe parts, or go from hence.

Of Eminent MEN in his Reign.

I Think I may ſay, not untruly, That never any Reign produc'd in this Kingdom more Eminent Men in all Sciences and Profeſſions, than did that of King Charles II. The Mechanicks, and all curious Arts, were improved to that Perfection which the laſt Age never knew; and this is to be aſcrib'd partly to the Peace and Plenty which the Nation enjoy'd under his Government, and much to his Countenance and Encouragement: For, beſides the Royal Society, which he incorporated, for the advancement of Experimental Philoſophy, (of which Eſtabliſhment there is an Account in print, curiouſly and largely writ) he endow'd a Mathematical School in Chriſt's Hoſpital in London, wherein the moſt pregnant Boys of that Houſe are taught the Mathematicks, ſuch parts eſpecially that tend to Navigation, for with this School was deſigned a Nurſery. He alſo built and furniſh'd at Greenwich a curious Obſervatory for the making of ſuch Diſcoveries in Aſtronomy, as may be for publick Benefit. But ſhould I go about to recite the Names of all thoſe worthy perſons who ſignaliz'd themſelves in his time both in the Arts of War and Peace, the Liſt would be almoſt infinite; and ſhould I name ſome, and omit others, who perhaps think themſelves, or are eſteem'd by their Friends and Favourers, of equal Merit, I ſhould diſpleaſe more than I oblige. Let it ſuffice, moſt of thoſe deſerving perſons are ſtill living, and their Names are ſufficiently known.

WORKS of PIETY in his Time.

I Cannot enumerate all the Alms-houſes and Hoſpitals of inferiour Note. I ſhall therefore mention but a few Inſtances of this nature out of a great number.

In his time Dr. Gilbert Sheldon Archbiſhop of Canterbury, built from the Ground that noble and beautiful Structure at Oxford, call'd the Theatre, for the uſe of that Univerſity at the Act time, and for ſuch publick Aſſemblies as were not proper and convenient to be held in St. Mary's Church, as formerly. This Building was finiſh'd and deliver'd into the poſſeſſion of the Univerſity with great Solemnity, on the 9th of July 1669.

Of Works of Piety relating to the King himſelf, I ſhall here name only two: He eſtabliſh'd by his Charter, dated July 1. 1678, a Corporation for relief of poor Widows and Children of Clergy-men, in conſideration of the great Sufferings of many of the Clergy of England, for their Loyalty; which Corporation was to have a Preſident, Vice-Preſident, Three Treaſurers, and Forty two Aſſiſtants, Members of the ſame, who by the name of The Governors of the Charity for Relief of Poor Widows and Children of Clergy-men, ſhould have perpetual Succeſſion, might ſue and be ſued, and made capable to purchaſe and have Lands, &c. not exceeding the yearly Value of 2000 l. per ann. &c. This King alſo begun, and almoſt finiſh'd in his time, that Magnificent and Royal Structure at Chelſey, call'd The College or Hoſpital, erected upon a piece of Ground deſign'd by K. James the Firſt for a College of Divines to defend the Reformation of the Church of England againſt all Oppoſers; which Ground afterwards eſcheating to the Crown, K. Charles the Second began here the largeſt and moſt illuſtrious Hoſpital that England ever ſaw, for the ſupport of maimed and ſuperannuated Soldiers. The number of the Penſioners is 476, beſides the Officers of the Houſe, Matrons, Laundrers, &c. Theſe have all moſt neat Lodgings, and plentiful Dyet, with all Conveniencies to make the remainder of their Life eaſie. For the Government of this Royal Foundation there are appointed theſe Officers; a Governor, a Lieutenant-Governor, two Chaplains, a Phyſician, a Secretary, &c. To defray the vaſt Expences there is 12000 l. per ann. paid out of the Poundage of the Army, beſides one day's Pay of each Officer and of each Common Soldier once every year. In the middle of the great Court of this Royal Foundation is erected on a Marble Peideſtal a moſt curious Statue in Braſs of the Founder King Charles the Second.
